David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to his Department of their attendance. [73025]

Jim Fitzpatrick: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has written to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Energy Distribution

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he (a) has had and (b) plans to have with energy distribution network operators on levels of investment in such networks. [74804]

Malcolm Wicks: I recently met the Energy Networks Association and a number of network operators were present. Discussion covered a range of topics, including the issue of investment in energy networks. Levels of investment are agreed between the Regulator (Ofgem) and the network businesses. These are called price controls and last for a period of five years. The most recent price control commenced in April 2004. Ofgem has to allow the networks sufficient revenue to ensure that they can meet licence conditions which include the requirement to run safe and efficient networks.

Energy Review

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent progress has been made with the energy review. [76028]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government published a consultation document on 23 January this year. The consultation document—"Our Energy Challenge, Securing clean and affordable energy for the long term"—invited responses on the important energy policy issues facing the country to be considered in the current Energy Review.

Some 5,300 responses were received from members of the public, business, academia, NGOs and others. We are assessing the enormous amount of evidence received in response to the Energy Review consultation and the review will report in the summer.

Foreign Travel

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on foreign travel by his Department in each of the last eight years. [76060]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The total amount spent on foreign travel by the DTI in each of the last eight years was:

	Amount (£)
1999-2000	5,291,063
2001-01	5,470,024
2001-02	4,912,785
2002-03	5,583,825
2003-04	4,260,257
2004-05	5,483,903
2005-06	5,601,629

Gaming Machines

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many gaming machines manufactured in the UK were exported in each year since 2001. [77153]

Margaret Hodge: Information is not available in the form requested.

The following data give the total value of UK exports of coin or disc-operated games, other than bowling alley equipment.

2002	126.5
2003	126.7

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73968]

Jim Fitzpatrick: To my knowledge, there have been no illegal immigrants discovered to be employed by the Department since 2001.

Light Fittings (Hazardous Substances)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice he has issued to electrical (a) retailers and (b) wholesalers on the sale of existing stocks of non-electrical light fittings in advance of the Restriction of the Use of Certain Hazardous Substances in Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations 2005, S.I. 2005, No. 2748, coming into force on 1 July 2006. [76243]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI published Government Guidance Notes on the impact of these regulations in October 2005, following their issue in draft for public consultation in July 2004.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the European Commission on the implementation of the Restriction of the Use of Certain Hazardous Substances in Electrical and Electronic Equipment Regulations 2005, S.I. 2005, No. 2748, in respect of non-electrical components of light fittings; and if he will make a statement. [76244]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has not received any representations from the European Commission on these regulations.

Littlecombe/Dursley Hydroscheme

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what grounds the South West Regional Development Authority and its developer have withdrawn the hydroscheme from the Littlecombe/Dursley site. [73984]

Margaret Hodge: The Littlecombe site at Dursley is the subject of a development agreement between the South West of England Regional Development Agency (South West RDA) and St. Modwen (the developer). The agreement requires the developer to carry out a whole series of activities in order to obtain planning permission for the regeneration scheme and deliver that scheme on the ground, either directly or through third parties (mostly residential developers). Agreement has to be reached with South West RDA on key issues.

Among other matters, St. Modwen are required to investigate and, where appropriate, incorporate various sustainability measures in their designs. In particular they are intending to reduce the CO_2 impact of the scheme by 30 per cent. through the use of renewable energy sources. The scope for micro hydro-electric power generation (HEP) was considered by the developer in this context.

These investigations showed that the HEP scheme would not be economical—it would only produce enough electricity for two houses. In addition, the Environment Agency had concerns over the impact of the scheme and was not supportive. The South West RDA agreed with St. Modwen that HEP would not be pursued.

St. Modwen anticipate biomass district heating, ground heat loops and photovoltaic cells being incorporated into the scheme in order to achieve a 30 per cent. CO_2 reduction.

Myalgic Encephalopathy/Encephalomyelitis

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into genetic abnormalities in white blood cells of myalgic encephalopathy and encephalomyelitis sufferers; and if he will make a statement. [74418]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department supports medical and clinical research through the Medical Research Council (MRC), which welcomes high quality proposals in these areas.

The MRC is not currently supporting any research specifically into genetic abnormalities in the white blood cells of sufferers from either myalgic encephalopathy or encephalomyelitis.

Northern Way Initiative

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what role his Department plays in the delivery of the Northern Way initiative. [74038]

Margaret Hodge: DTI is represented on the Northern Way Strategic Policy Group which is responsible for policy development and stakeholder engagement.

The Northern Way is also identified as a key delivery vehicle for the Regional Economic Performance Public Service Agreement (REPPSA) to which DTI is a joint signatory with HM Treasury and the Department for Communities and Local Government.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what planning permission would be required to build new nuclear power stations on existing sites in (a) England and Wales and (b) Scotland. [74599]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Any new proposal over 50 MW in England and Wales would require consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 and "deemed" planning permission under section 90 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. For Scotland, similar powers are exercised by Scottish Ministers.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research his Department has undertaken into the likely effects on coastally located licensed nuclear sites of (a) coastal erosion and (b) inundation due to sea-level rise. [75369]

Malcolm Wicks: The Office of Science and Technology (OST) has conducted a major study on the future of flooding and coastal erosion as part of the Foresight Programme, http://www.foresight.gov.uk/Previous_Projects/Flood_and_Coastal Defence/index.html.

Operators of nuclear sites such as British Nuclear Group and British Energy are responsible for flood defences and for protecting the site against coastal erosion. Nearly all of the sites are situated on the coast and rest behind sea defences, which are maintained to a very high standard. Reviews are made periodically to monitor long-term protection, and regional shoreline management plans have been developed on behalf of the coastal authorities.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs the Department estimates will be created as a result of the decommissioning of and clean-up operations for Wylfa nuclear power station; and if he will make a statement. [75609]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) has responsibility for the decommissioning and clean-up of the UK's historic nuclear legacy—including the Magnox nuclear power station at Wylfa.

The current NDA expectation is that Wylfa will close at the end of 2010. Wylfa's plans for decommissioning and clean-up are still in preparation and job requirements have not yet been finalised. But in preparation for the defuelling and decommissioning phase of care and maintenance the NDA have prepared indicative numbers (derived from Wylfa's current plans) which indicate that at the end of operations, job numbers (both staff and subcontractors) will be about 700 by 2010, reducing to 160 by 2024. In so far as is practicable, the NDA will seek to ensure that employees who wish to stay with a site through to its next phase are able to remain in employment and receive appropriate support, development and retraining. Subcontractors currently providing site support are expected to continue to do so during the defuelling and decommissioning phases. On this basis, to be significant new opportunities for employment are unlikely.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which (a) nuclear power stations and (b) nuclear waste storage sites his Department assesses to be at risk from (i) sea-level rise, (ii) coastal erosion, (iii) seawater inundation and (iv) storm surges in the next (A) 10, (B) 20 and (C) 50 years; and if he will make a statement. [75614]

Malcolm Wicks: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) license all nuclear power stations under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965. Flood risks, which are enhanced by coastal erosion, are one category of external hazards that HSE require to be addressed in safety cases for nuclear plants.

Safety cases are prepared by the plant operator. They are routinely reviewed through the Periodic Safety Review (PSR) Process, which allows for recent and future extrapolations to be reviewed. They are scrutinised and then reviewed periodically (at intervals not greater than 10 years) by HSE. This provides an opportunity to ensure that operators are updating their predictions. The cost of HSE reviewing safety cases is recovered from the industry.

The Office of Science and Technology (OST) has conducted a major study for the Foresight programme on the future of coastal erosion:

http://www. foresight. gov.uk/Previous_Projects/Flood_and_Coastal_Defence/index.html

The study looked ahead into the next 30-100 years and considered the future risks from flooding and costal erosion. Future predicted erosion rates were found to be location specific, and are likely to be extremely variable.

The following coastal defence work is taking place, or is proposed, in the proximity of nuclear power plants:

At Berkley, Gloucestershire, a proposed sea wall repair will provide protection for 25 years. At Dungeness, Kent, a beach-feeding programme is routinely undertaken to protect the foreshore and is likely to be maintained until at least 2011 (when Dungeness B is expected to end). Long term management options for the area adjacent to the power station are under consideration.

At Hartlepool, a proposal to extend a marine cycling facility navigation channel may require that the coastal defences of the power station be reinforced. Discussions with the developer are underway.

At Sizewell B, Suffolk, the frontage of the adjacent Minsmere Bird Reserve is not secure and long tern management options are being considered.

The UK Atomic Energy Authority and British Energy have confirmed that there are no foreseeable risks to their nuclear power station or nuclear storage sites from sea-level rises, coastal erosion, seawater inundation and storm surges.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment has been made of the effects of future possible (a) sea-level rise and (b) coastal erosion at (i) existing and (ii) potential nuclear sites; and if he will make a statement. [75615]

Malcolm Wicks: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) license all nuclear power stations under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965. Flood risks, which are enhanced by coastal erosion, are one category of external hazards that HSE require to be addressed in safety cases for nuclear plants.

The UK Atomic Energy Authority and British Energy have confirmed that there are no foreseeable risks to their nuclear power station or nuclear storage sites from sea-level rises, coastal erosion, seawater inundation and storm surges.

As regards potential nuclear sites, the role of civil nuclear power including safety, cost, decommissioning and waste, is being considered as part of the Energy Review alongside other options to ensure the UK remains on track to meet its medium and long-term energy policy goals. The Energy Review will report in the summer.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what incidents at nuclear power installations in the United Kingdom have been reported to Ministers by the Health and Safety Executive since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [75524]

Malcolm Wicks: There have been 57 incidents at nuclear power stations since 1997, which met the ministerial reporting criteria. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) publish details of these incidents in their quarterly statements.

Quarterly statements of nuclear incidents at nuclear installations from 1 October 2000 are available on the HSE website at:

http://www.hse.gov.uk/nuclear/quarterly-stat/index.htm

Hard copies of quarterly statements from 1 January 1997 and September 2000 have been placed in the Library of the House.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the parliamentary ombudsman have been (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by his Department since 1997. [76264]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There have been no occasions since 1997 when the recommendations of a report from the parliamentary ombudsman were rejected or partly rejected by the Department.

Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75234]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I refer the hon. Member to a technical note by HM Treasury which was placed in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90W, following an oral statement by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury. Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual departments, they are estimated for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in Table 1 of the technical note.

Post Offices

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices there are in Scotland; and how many there were in each of the last eight years. [76916]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Post Office Ltd have provided the following figures relating to the numbers of post offices branches in Scotland since 1998:

1999	2,026
2000	1,999

Period: end March	Number of post office branches
2001	1,933
2002	1,907
2003	1,887
2005	1,712
2006	1,688

Information relating to post office branches for each parliamentary constituency is placed in the Library of the House on an annual basis.

Restriction of Hazardous Substances Directive

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of the Restriction of Hazardous Substances Directive on the use of lead-free solder within the model railway hobby industry; and if he will make a statement. [75338]

Malcolm Wicks: The RoHS Directive has no effect on the use of lead-free solder within the model railway hobby industry.

Royal Commission on the Press

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list recommendations from the Royal Commission on the Press which were (a) accepted, (b) implemented in legislation and (c) rejected; and if he will make a statement. [71981]

Margaret Hodge: This information is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Sickness Absence

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff in his Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73024]

Mr. Darling: The DTI's records are as follows:

Number of staff (DTI HQ, including SBS and UKTI)

Spells of absence of less than five days	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
5 or more	199	155	139
4	152	144	134
3	287	232	207
2	508	489	435

Small Business Research Initiative

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the written statement of 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 121WS, on the Small Business Research Initiative, what definition of research is used for the purposes of the initiative; how many of the contracts relate to science-based research; and if he will list the contracts awarded and their values. [75335]

Margaret Hodge: My right hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Alun Michael) set out the definition of Research and Development (R and D) in guidelines placed in the Library of the House on 16 February 2006. The guidelines on the Meaning of R and D for Tax Purposes (issued by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on 5 March 2004 for the purposes of section 837A Income and Corporation Taxes 1988) apply. In addition, however, policy studies and R and D directed towards the humanities and social studies will also be included.

As my right hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth said in response to the hon. Member for North Norfolk (Norman Lamb) on 16 November 2005, Official Report, column 1341W, the Government are taking steps to improve disclosure of Small Business Research Initiative performance by Departments. However, this will be at an aggregate level and on an annual basis. Information about individual contracts is a matter for the individual Departments concerned.

Uranium

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the security of future uranium supplies. [75897]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Crosby (Mrs. Curtis-Thomas) on 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 268W.

Vehicle Sharing

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what incentives his Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73027]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department's buildings are predominately in city centre locations. It therefore does not offer any specific incentives to share vehicles when travelling to and from work but instead actively encourages the use of public transport. Such incentives include interest-free loans for the purchase of season tickets and a scheme to encourage the use of bicycles to travel to work.

PRIME MINISTER

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) letters and (b) postcards he has received from (i) members of the public, (ii) hon. Members and (iii) Members of the House of Lords about abortion; how many and what percentage (A) support and (B) oppose abortion; and if he will make a statement. [75636]

The Prime Minister: Since 1 January 2006 my office has received appropriately 6,000 representations about this issue. Given the volume of correspondence I receive, with thousands of letters each week covering a broad spectrum of issues, my office records letters by subject rather than by the view expressed.

Chequers (Official Appointments)

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister with which individuals, other than officials, hon. Members and staff, he had a scheduled official appointment at Chequers, other than at official dinners, between 1 July 2003 and 31 December 2003. [76311]

The Prime Minister: My officials and I have meetings with a wide range of organisations and individuals on a wide range of subjects. Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75092]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes, my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. McFadden) today.

Intelligence and Security Committee

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Prime Minister whether positive vetting is conducted (a) prior to him inviting hon. Members and Peers to serve on the Intelligence and Security Committee and (b) after he has extended an invitation to hon. Members and Peers. [76371]

The Prime Minister: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to comment on security matters.

Official Residences

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will list the official residences occupied by Members of the Government; whether each is open to the public; and what restrictions apply to public access in each case; [73880]

(2) if he will make it his policy to increase opportunities for members of the public to view the interior of Dorneywood; and if he will make a statement; [73909]

(3) if he will make arrangements for the public to view (a) Chequers, (b) Chevening and (c) Dorneywood at times and on dates that do not inconvenience the Ministers who have use of the properties; and if he will make a statement. [77039]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers I gave the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Chris Huhne) on 13 July 2005, Official Report, column 1074W and the hon. Member for Shipley (Philip Davies) on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2394W.

Since then, my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby South (Margaret Beckett) has moved jobs, but remains in her official residences. My right hon. Friend the Member for Ashfield (Geoff Hoon) has also moved jobs and, as has already been announced, will be vacating his Government-owned residence shortly.

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has announced his personal decision that he no longer wishes to have the use of Dorneywood.

There is no public access to Chequers for security reasons. There is no right of public access to the houses at Chevening and Dorneywood. The garden at Chevening is on occasion opened to the public for charitable events (this is a matter for the Trustees). The garden at Dorneywood is opened to the public under the National Gardens Scheme at various times during the year.

Surveillance Commissioner

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister what factors underlay his decision to appoint Sir Charles Mantell as a Surveillance Commissioner. [76281]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the press notice issued by my Office, a copy of which is available on the Number 10 website. A copy has also been placed in the Library of the House.

Witness Statements

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Prime Minister what sanctions are available under (a) the Ministerial Code and (b) the Civil Service Code against someone who, when providing a witness statement in support of an application to the High Court by a Secretary of State, (i) withholds information which is material to the Court's consideration of the application and (ii) includes in his statement information which he knows to be false or misleading. [76307]

The Prime Minister: Section 1 of the Ministerial Code sets out the process for handling alleged breaches of the Ministerial Code. Departmental staff handbooks will set out the procedures for handling alleged breaches of the Civil Service Code.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Parliamentary Calendar

25. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Leader of the House what plans he has to review the parliamentary calendar. [76117]

Nigel Griffiths: My right hon. Friend remains open to representations on issues relating to the parliamentary calendar.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bone: To ask the Leader of the House what steps he is taking to improve the speed and accuracy of answers to written parliamentary questions. [76115]

Mr. Straw: All Ministers fully understand the requirement for timeliness and accuracy in providing answers to written questions. I have discussed at Cabinet with my ministerial colleagues the importance we attach to proper accountability to Parliament. My Office helps to ensure that the standards are adhered to and Mr. Speaker knows my own commitment to this.

At the same time, the House must accept that there has been an ever-increasing number of written questions being tabled. Not all perhaps are tabled with the full involvement of the Member in whose name they are tabled and some perhaps may be inspired by outside pressure to be seen to be tabling a high number. This inevitably places the system under pressure.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Bovine TB

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research his Department has undertaken regarding methods of badger culling; and if he will make a statement. [75583]

Mr. Bradshaw: My Department undertook a desk study of possible culling methods and identified shooting, snaring and gassing as the methods most worthy of further investigation. This research is currently under way. A full report will be published when the work is completed.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Home Secretary regarding the issuing of licences for authorising badger culling. [75584]

Mr. Bradshaw: This issue has not been discussed with the Home Secretary.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when his Department expects to make its response to the public consultation on bovine tuberculosis and badger culling. [75585]

Mr. Bradshaw: At this stage we cannot give an indication on the specific timing of a response to the consultation or a decision.

However, given the seriousness of the disease situation we aim to proceed as quickly as possible while giving the issue the thorough consideration it requires.

The decision is not a simple one. We are taking into account all the evidence, including the science.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department has a preferred method of culling badgers. [75586]

Mr. Bradshaw: No decisions have yet been made on whether or not it is appropriate to cull badgers in order to prevent the spread of bTB, nor by what method if a cull was considered appropriate.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will visit Shrewsbury constituency to meet a farmer who has had a recent outbreak of bovine tuberculosis to discuss the Government's plans to help farmers fight this disease. [74759]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra Ministers receive many invitations to visit individual farmers around the country to discuss their circumstances. Unfortunately, it is not possible to accept all of them. However, Ministers and officials meet regularly with organisations representing farmers and cattle keepers to discuss a variety of important matters, including bovine TB.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been made by his Department of the (a) movements, (b) relocation and (c) displacement of protected species, with particular reference to badgers, resulting from work by transport infrastructure companies required for (i) health and safety, (ii) environmental and (iii) other reasons; and whether badgers relocated in such circumstances are routinely tested for bovine tuberculosis. [74984]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Defra issues licences to allow the interference with badger setts to prevent serious damage to property, and to permit agricultural, forestry or drainage operations. The majority of licences involve interference to exclude badgers from part or all of a sett, sometimes followed by sett destruction. Very few licences for translocation of badgers are granted. Some licensed activities include maintenance works undertaken by transport infrastructure companies.

Badgers typically have more than one sett which they use in their territory. Thus there is no reason to believe that the closure, or partial closure, of a sett would necessarily cause badgers to move outside their normal range. My Department has commissioned a study which involves looking at badger movements when licensed sett interference is carried out in urban situations. However it is too early to draw any conclusions from this work which is currently under way.

Defra's wildlife management advisers ensure that a proportion of licences is assessed through monitoring. The method, timing and amount of monitoring will vary depending upon a number of factors such as the species, site or activities being licensed. Defra aims to monitor around 30 per cent. of badger licences. A proportion of these will be targeted towards sensitive or complex cases such as those involving translocation or cases that have attracted a high level of public attention. The results of monitoring are recorded and if a breach of licence conditions has been identified Defra will consider an appropriate course of enforcement action.

English Nature issues licences to permit the disturbance of badgers and destruction of setts during the course of development activities, which would include some activities associated with the maintenance of transport infrastructure. English Nature does not license the translocation of animals in these cases—it licenses disturbance to setts, and where setts are to be lost as a result of the activity the licence allows animals to be excluded from the sett before it is destroyed. Where no suitable alternative setts are available nearby for the badgers to move to, an artificial sett must be constructed within the animals' existing territory, before they are excluded from their existing sett. No significant movement of badgers is likely to result from these activities.

In the very few cases where Defra has licensed the translocation of badgers to another part of the country, it has been a condition of the licence that all badgers caught must be tested for bTB.

Brixham Fish Market

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding his Department will make available for the development of the Brixham Fish Market and Employment Space Development. [75514]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 June 2006]: Torbay council has submitted an application for part funding of this project under the terms of the Financial Instrument for Fisheries Guidance scheme. My officials are currently assessing this application in accordance with normal procedures and expect to make a decision shortly.

Dairy Farmers

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to help dairy farmers to cope with changes in milk prices. [74761]

Barry Gardiner: Price negotiations are a private commercial matter in which Government cannot get involved, provided competition rules are respected. Milk prices are subject to change on a regular basis, and farmers understand that they fluctuate throughout the year as a result of supply and demand. However, the underlying price of milk is expected to fall as a result of CAP reform. Through the Dairy Premium, farmers were partially compensated for these price reductions.

The Government do recognise that the dairy industry is facing a number of challenges, not least because of farm-gate prices. Although the Dairy Supply Chain Forum does not discuss milk prices, it provides information to help the dairy industry make informed decisions about its future in a world with much freer trade and lower prices. It has also welcomed the moves in the industry towards more transparent milk contracts.

Dangerous Dogs Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the operation of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act. [75632]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are no plans to review the Dangerous Dogs Act. The police consider that the 1991 Act is a useful tool in dealing with dangerous dogs. Most dog owners are aware that as a result of this legislation there can be serious legal consequences if they fail to keep their dog under control.

The Department receives various representations and holds regular discussions with our partners on the operation of the Act.

Departmental Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of the budget for his Department remained unspent in the last financial year. [70541]

Barry Gardiner: The provisional outturn currently shows that £24 million of the total departmental budget of £6,043 million for 2005-06 was unspent at the end of the last financial year.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75106]

Barry Gardiner: Defra encourages the use of public transport and cycling as an alternative to car use for business as well as personal travel. In order to help staff carry out their normal commutes to work in a sustainable way, Defra offers advances of salary for season ticket purchase (repayable in equal monthly instalments within the life of the season ticket). Advances for purchase of a bicycle are also available.

Environmental Liability Directive

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the scope of the Environmental Liability Directive, without extension of its scope in implementing legislation, is (a) wider and (b) narrower than the (i) Environmental Protection Act 1990: Part I Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations (England and Wales) 2000 and Environmental Protection Act 1990: Part II, (ii) Water Resources Act 1991, (iii) Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, as amended by the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 and (iv) Environmental Protection Act 1990: Part IIA. [74281]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The question is a difficult one to respond to meaningfully. The referenced domestic legislation and the ELD are not directly or entirely comparable. The ELD, unlike the Pollution Prevention and Control or Waste legislation, is not a regulatory regime—there are no initial compliance costs; it imposes costs only when a business causes significant environmental damage. The legislation dealing with EU and domestic biodiversity provides a much more limited framework for liability for remediation than the ELD. The contaminated land (part IIA, Environmental Protection Act 1990) regime has some overlapping features with the ELD and can deal with current damage, but it is largely concerned with historic damage, which is outside the scope of the ELD.

Fallen Livestock

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the sites in (a) England, (b) Wales and (c) Scotland which are licensed to incinerate fallen livestock. [75396]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra licenses facilities to incinerate animal carcases under the Animal By-Products Regulations (ABPR). I will write to the hon. Member with a list of APBR-approved sites and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Farmers

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of farmers who have left the agricultural sector in each of the last 10 years. [74501]

Barry Gardiner: Figures from the Agricultural and Horticultural Survey indicate labour on agricultural holdings in June each year. These figures therefore show net change only in the number of farmers.

Number of farmers in England

1996	—	—	207,807

(a) Figures prior to 2000 are for main holdings only. Figures from 2000 onwards include all holdings. A minor holding has to meet all of the following conditions:
(i) the total area less than six hectares
(ii) the labour requirement is estimated to be less than 100 standard person days
(iii) there is no regular full-time farmer or worker
(iv) the glasshouse area is less than 100 square metres
(v) the occupier does not farm another holding.
(b) Number of farmers includes partners, directors and spouses (if working on the holding). Part-time and full-time split not available for 1996 and 1997.
(c) Estimates have been made for non-respondents.

Flood Defences

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of London's flood defences in protecting South East London. [75821]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency is the main operating authority for flood risk management in England. The tidal defences that currently protect South East London and most of the Thames Estuary are of a very high standard, and an estimated £200 million will be spent on their maintenance and operation until 2021. The Agency is also developing a long-term management plan for the Thames Estuary to tackle flood risks until 2100.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the evidential basis was for the recent alterations to the published flood risk maps for Willington, Derbyshire; what representations the Environment Agency received from (a) owners of the former Willington power station site and (b) their representatives prior to the changes being made; what account was taken of (i) the Trent Fluvial Strategy studies and (ii) planning proposals for the area when the changes were being prepared; and whether the changes have been reflected in the system for the communication to village residents of risk to their properties. [75970]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency had discussions with consultants acting on behalf of the developer about Willington power station from June 2004 until February 2006. The consultants were required to address flood risk issues in a comprehensive Flood Risk Assessment (FRA) of the site.

The findings of the consultants' FRA work were in line with the recommendations of the Trent Fluvial Strategy, which was published by the Environment Agency in March 2005.

The FRA was submitted as part of the outline planning application and was considered during our assessment of the proposals. The FRA considered all sources of risk to the site in question.

The changes have been reflected in the way in which the Environment Agency have communicated with the residents of Willington over risk to their properties.

Funding

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding has been allocated to Gloucestershire in each of the last five years for re-training of farmers; and what proportion of the funding came from funds allocated for foot and mouth recovery. [75042]

Mr. Bradshaw: The principal mechanism for funding the re-training of farmers is the Vocational Training Scheme (VTS), set up as part of the England Rural Development Programme and administered by DEFRA's Rural Development Service. Under this scheme, applications are accepted from either training organisers, or eligible individuals.

A small amount of funding (£6,713 in 2005 and 2006) has been awarded to individual Gloucestershire farmers, for training in plumbing, LGV driving and technical farming skills. However, the vast majority of VTS funding has been awarded to projects that operate on a wider geographical area, either focusing on general business skills, diversification opportunities, or skills development related to specific farming activities, in order to maximise returns.

Examples of the training available to Gloucestershire farmers are shown in the following table:

Project holder	Nature of project	Amount funded (£)
South West of England Land Based Colleges (SWELBC)	Region-wide programme, jointly managed by Hartpury College, Gloucestershire, and Duchy College, Cornwall. Training in business and technical skills.	746,091
UK Dairy Academy	Raising technical and business performance of dairy farmers.	349,511
Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester	Market training for the agricultural industry.	14,737
Abacus Organic Services	Various organic farming courses.	150,754
Cotswold Machinery Ring Ltd./7Y	Training for members on business development, marketing, environment and biodiversity, IT.	243,198
Alpaca Education and Training Centre	Courses on all aspects of alpaca farming.	106,538
TAG/Stonegate	Benchmarking for egg production businesses.	35,218
Rural Business Skills Ltd.	Marketing for profit.	32,071
Kite Consulting	Waitrose Select Farm Group Benchmarking Project.	45,619
Organic Milk Suppliers Co-operative (OMSCo)	Raising standards of organic milk production in the South West.	148,500
Business Link Devon and Cornwall	South West Rural Enterprise Gateway—training to improve farmers' occupational skills and competence.	212,500

Vocational Training Scheme funds are separate from those allocated for foot and mouth recovery.

Fungaflor Formulation Application

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when his Department will reach a decision on the Fungaflor formulation application; and if he will make a statement. [73577]

Ian Pearson: The Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD) is responsible for authorising uses of pesticide products.

PSD received an application, for the product Fungaflor in 2002. However, this application was rejected because it did not contain sufficient information to allow PSD to conduct a risk assessment demonstrating an acceptable risk to humans and the environment.

Since that application a new company has taken on ownership of the product Fungaflor. This company submitted a new application to PSD on 1 June 2006. This has now been considered and PSD issued an approval for Fungaflor on 6 June.

Health and Safety

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how he plans to implement the Registration, Evaluation, Authorisation and Restriction of Chemicals legislation; and if he will take steps to ensure that there is no removal of the current legislative protection for the health and safety of the UK work force as a consequence of the implementation of that legislation; [75058]

(2) what consultation he plans to undertake with the Health and Safety Executive on the (a) implementation and (b) administration of the Registration, Evaluation, Authorisation and Restriction of Chemicals regulations. [75059]

Ian Pearson: We are currently discussing the implementation of the Registration, Evaluation, Authorisation and Restriction of Chemicals (REACH) legislation and a range of related issues with the agencies involved in the regulation of chemicals and with the devolved Administrations. The Health and Safety Executive is fully involved in this process and continues to work closely with Defra, in particular providing support on areas that are relevant to occupational health. REACH will not affect existing health and safety legislation.

One of the more important implementation aspects will be the appointment of a UK competent authority for REACH later this year. The competent authority will work closely with existing enforcement bodies, including the Health and Safety Executive and the Environment Agency.

Live Fish

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) volume of and (b) income derived from trade in live fish was in each year since 2000 between the UK and (i) Northern Ireland, (ii) Guernsey, (iii) Spain, (iv) Italy, (v) Sweden and (vi) Denmark. [75872]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 June 2006]: Information is not available on the value of trade in live fish between the mainland parts of the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland and Guernsey. Information on the value of trade between the UK and the other countries requested is given in the table.

Mobile Phones

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the environmental impact of disposing of mobile phones; [75558]

(2) what measures are being taken to encourage the (a) recycling and (b) safe disposal of mobile phones; and if he will make a statement. [75560]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 31W.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of mobile phones disposed of in England in each of the last five years. [75559]

Mr. Bradshaw: This Department does not collect information on the recycling or reuse of mobile phones. However, the mobile phone industry estimates that 18 million handsets are replaced every year and that in 2003 and 2004, about 5 million handsets were taken by mobile phone recycling and refurbishment companies in the UK. The industry estimates that about 60 per cent. of these were refurbished and the remaining 40 per cent. were sent for materials recycling.

Northern Way Initiative

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role his Department plays in the delivery of the Northern Way initiative. [74039]

Barry Gardiner: The Northern Way is a pan-regional growth strategy being taken forward by the three northern Regional Development Agencies and their partners. Its work has potential to play an important role in delivering Government's Regional Economic Performance PSA. The Department for Communities and Local Government co-ordinates Government involvement with the Northern Way. The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs works with the Northern Way where its activities relate to our responsibilities.

Parliamentary Questions

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he will answer written parliamentary questions 66755 and 66756 on single farm payments, tabled by the hon. Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale on 25 April. [74544]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Answers to these questions were provided on 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 163W.

Performance Targets

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which of his Department's customer performance targets are being missed, on the basis of the latest available information; and if he will make a statement. [71693]

Barry Gardiner: The Department provides regular performance updates against its outstanding public service agreement targets through its annual Departmental Report and its Autumn Performance Report published in spring/summer and autumn respectively. The 2005 versions, which are the most recently published, are available in the Library of the House and online at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/deprep/default.htm

A short summary of progress against our 2004 Spending Review targets can be found in Appendix 4 of the 2005 Autumn Performance Report, with more detailed information available in Chapter 2.

The Department also gives regular updates on its performance via HM Treasury's website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/performance/DEFRA.cfm

Defra's 2006 Departmental Report is due for publication in spring 2006.

Recycling

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the average cost per ton of recycling (a) wood, (b) glass, (c) plastics, (d) paper, (e) cardboard and (f) metal in each London borough in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [75540]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra does not gather information on individual recycling schemes or the costs of recycling waste material. These will vary depending on a number of factors, including the collection method used by a local authority, the materials collected and the market for recycled materials.

River Severn

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what studies his Department has evaluated investigating the potential for a build-up of contaminated water in the Severn Estuary up-stream of a proposed barrage scheme; and if he will make a statement. [75606]

Ian Pearson: The environmental implications of a Severn Barrage, including water quality implications, were considered in detail during the 1980s as part of tripartite studies funded by the then Department of Energy, Central Electricity Generating Board and Severn Tidal Power Group. These studies are reported in "Energy paper 57: The Severn Barrage Project: General Studies (ISBN 0 11 412952 5) HMSO 1989" and associated reports, which can be found at:

http://www.tsoshop.co.uk/bookstore.asp?FO=1159966&Action=Book&ProductID=0114129525&From=SearchResults

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the sources of radioactive (a) wastewater discharged into and (b) runoff into the River Severn; and if he will make a statement. [75608]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency lists the organisations that are currently authorised under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993 to make disposals, either directly or indirectly, to the River Severn or its estuary on its website at:

http://maps.environment-agency.gov.uk/wiyby/wiybyController?extraClause=PROCESS_NAME~'RADIOACTIVE%20SUBSTANCES'

Rural and Agricultural Shows

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which rural and agricultural shows will be attended by Ministers from his Department up to 31 August. [76363]

Barry Gardiner: Defra will have a corporate presence at the following rural and agricultural shows up to 31 August. We will be attending additional shows beyond this date.

14-15 June: Cereals 2006 in Lincolnshire

28-29 June: The Royal Norfolk Show

2-5 July: The Royal Show, at Stoneleigh, Warwickshire

11-13 July: The Great Yorkshire Show

26 July: Fruit Focus, East Malling, Kent

28-30 July: CLA Game Fair, Romsey, Hampshire

All five Ministers will be attending the Royal Show between 2-4 July.

With regards to the other shows on this list, we are currently putting plans in place to ensure that where possible Ministers attend, based on relevance to their individual portfolios and availability.

Additionally, Ministers may of course choose to attend further shows where there is not a corporate presence. For example, Lord Rooker attended the Royal Cornwall Show on 9 June.

Rural Payments Agency

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of systems for paying farm subsidies to farmers in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales, (c) European Union states and (d) England. [71541]

Barry Gardiner: Such assessments are rarely productive as the systems and processes adopted by each paying agency in the UK and across the EU will have been tailored to the specific circumstances of the territory that it serves.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much his Department's legal bills have been (a) in each year since 2001 and (b) in relation to the Rural Payments Agency; and if he will make a statement. [74072]

Barry Gardiner: Legal costs incurred by this Department and the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) over the past five financial years are as follows:

DEFRA

2001-02	6.31
2002-03	9.07
2003-04	11
2004-05	10.58
2005-06	11.80

Rural Payments Agency

	£000
2001-02	704
2002-03	370
2003-04	430
2005-06	315

Both sets of figures relate to running costs. However, the DEFRA figures also include payments to counsel, legal contractors and costs relating to claims and arbitration in respect of foot and mouth disease (FMD) cases that were directly attributed to the Department's Legal Directorate. Other FMD legal related costs and costs in respect of commercial contracts, estates, etc. are held elsewhere in the Department and it would not be possible to draw this information together without incurring disproportionate cost.

Sheep Dip

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to allow the reintroduction of cypermethrin as a sheep dip. [76069]

Mr. Bradshaw: Before we can consider the reintroduction of the Marketing Authorisations for cypermethrin sheep dip products, the Veterinary Medicines Directorate needs to receive and assess further information on the environmental risks presented by their use and how these can be managed. The Marketing Authorisation Holders have been asked to provide such information. Additionally, the VMD and Environment Agency have jointly commissioned an R&D project on environmental exposure to cypermethrin released to the farmyard. In particular, this will consider the impact of recently dipped animals crossing watercourses in order to enable VMD to provide more advice to farmers on how long such animals need to be kept away from watercourses. The results of this part of the project should be available by the end of the summer.

When all of this information has been received we will be able to begin to consider the reintroduction of the cypermethrin sheep dip Marketing Authorisations in conjunction with interested stakeholder groups.

Single Farm Payment

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the performance target is of the Rural Payments Agency for the time taken from receipt of an application for a claim form for the 2006-07 Single Payments Scheme to the despatch of the form to the applicant; and if he will make a statement on the progress being made by the agency towards meeting that target. [68862]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency does not have a formal performance target for the despatch of application forms as the vast majority are sent automatically to previous applicants. However, where a request is received the estimated turnaround time is 24 hours. Application forms were also available at RPA sites and could be downloaded from the RPA website.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had on compensation for farmers' creditors in relation to delayed single farm payments. [68902]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The discussions that the Department has had with representatives of the banks and the agricultural supply trade have focused on the payment timetable for the 2005 Single Payment Scheme. Over £1.3 billion, representing 88 per cent. of the total value of those payments, has now been disbursed and the Rural Payments Agency remains focused on paying the outstanding sums as soon as possible for the benefit of all concerned.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the long-term plan is for the payment of the single farm payment. [68955]

Barry Gardiner: We are determined that the right lessons are learned from our experience this year with the Single Payment Scheme, first to prepare for the undoubted challenges that will exist in the delivery of the 2006 scheme, and second to move to a more stable position for the 2007 scheme year. Our subsequent plans will be guided by the outcome of the fundamental review of the Rural Payments Agency that my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby, South announced in her written statement of 16 March 2006, Official Report, column104WS.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what help is given to farmers to help with problems in filling in single farm payment forms. [68956]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has used a variety of methods to help farmers complete their 2006 Single Payment Scheme (SPS) application form. These measures include:

Pre-populating application forms with as much information as possible to limit the amount of information farmers have to complete by hand.

The 2006 SPS Handbook, which was sent to all farmers along with their application form, which contained section-by-section guidance on how to complete the application form.

The Customer Service Centre (CSC) has been available for callers to contact them with queries via telephone, e-mail or letter. Owing to customer demand, during the peak period, the CSC increased its opening hours.

An annotated application form with text boxes was sent to all potential claimants and was also posted on the RPA website to help guide claimants.

A Q&A is being constantly updated and added to on the RPA website, clarifying some of the queries raised by customers when trying to complete their SPS form.

An advertising campaign has been used in the farming press, to remind customers of the most important parts of the form to complete and also point out the most common errors being made.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many complaints have been received from farmers in the East Riding of Yorkshire regarding the single farm payment scheme; and if he will make a statement. [69319]

Barry Gardiner: Ministers and officials at the Rural Payments Agency have apologised for the delay in making payments under the Single Payment Scheme. As of 25 May over 94,000 claimants to the scheme had received £1.32 billion, representing 88 per cent. of projected payments. As the scheme is administered on a national basis the RPA does not hold statistics in respect of farmers in the East Riding.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the estimated cost to date to the industry is of delays in payment of single farm payments. [69561]

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the cost to farmers per month in interest payments caused by delays in single farm payments; and for what reason guidelines on set aside have (a) been changed and (b) been changed at this stage of the scheme. [70343]

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the (a) total debt and (b) interest on that debt accrued by farmers as a result of the delay in single farm payments in England, broken down by county. [71513]

Barry Gardiner: The EU regulatory window for payments under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS) is 1 December 2005 to 30 June 2006. The cost to the agricultural industry of these payments being made in one month rather than another depends on individual farmers' circumstances and the use to which the payments are put.

In light of the situation explained by my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby, South in her written statement of 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 104WS, various managerial and procedural changes have been introduced during the past few months in order to increase the flow of SPS payments. These have contributed to the position where over £1.3 billion, representing 89 per cent. of the total value of such payments, has now been disbursed.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that the single farm payment for 2006 is paid on time. [73540]

Barry Gardiner: The payment window for the 2006 single payment scheme opens on 1 December 2006 and runs until 30 June 2007.

The Rural Payments Agency is working hard to ensure that payments are made as soon as possible within this time frame. Staff have already started basic validation checks on a proportion of the 2006 application forms.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on the impact of the late payment of claims under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme on the competitiveness of English agricultural businesses with their counterparts in other EU countries. [66705]

Barry Gardiner: The timing of payments under the decoupled Single Payment Scheme (SPS) only affects the competitiveness of agricultural businesses to the extent that SPS claimants treat those payments as though they remain coupled to production. Discussions within Government and with stakeholders has highlighted widespread recognition of the potential benefits to the English agricultural industry, relative to its counterparts in most other EU member states, that were provided by the decisions made by my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby, South (Margaret Beckett) to introduce the SPS at the earliest possible date and not to take up any of the options to retain coupled EU direct payments.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what grounds she has given to the EU for the basis for the extension in the timescale for single farm payments. [68652]

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are being taken by his Department to facilitate payments due under the Single Payment Scheme by extending the permitted time frame; and if he will make a statement. [69564]

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's application to the European Commission to delay the payment of single farm moneys to English farmers. [71834]

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions his Department has had with the European Commission on extending the window for single farm payments beyond 30th June. [74772]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 5 June 2006]: While the intention has been, and remains, for the Rural Payments Agency to make outstanding payments under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme as soon as possible, it has always been the case that some payments may be made after the end of the EU payment window on 30 June. In those cases, the claimant will still be paid in full, but EU funding of those payments could be reduced. With that in mind and to safeguard the interests of UK taxpayers, a request was made to the European Commission in April to extend the payment window. Subsequent discussions with the European Commission suggest that a formal extension is unlikely, but those discussions will continue, focused on the EU rules governing the funding of payments made after the end of the payment window.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate his Department has made of when all single farm payments for this year will have been completed. [72492]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 22 May 2006]: The RPA has not provided a timetable for the completion of outstanding payments, although it is endeavouring to make payment to all 2005 single payment scheme applicants by 30 June.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures he is taking (a) to ensure that outstanding applications under the Single Farm Payment Scheme are processed as a matter of urgency and (b) to improve efficiency in handling payments under the scheme. [76032]

Barry Gardiner: As of 5 June the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has paid just under £1.33 billion to nearly 96,000 customers, representing 89 per cent. of projected expenditure to 80 per cent. of eligible claimants. RPA's top priority is to pay those claims worth more than €1,000 that have not yet received any payment. The majority of these cases have been allocated to an individual member of staff to resolve any outstanding validation issues and proceed to payment as soon as possible. In a number of cases, this will require the discussion of outstanding validation issues with the claimant.

RPA is reviewing its approach to handling claims to 2006, building on lessons learned in processing 2005 scheme claims.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of single farm payments remain outstanding in (a) Hereford constituency, (b) Herefordshire and (c) England. [76217]

Barry Gardiner: The total number of single payment scheme customers is now approximately 120,000. As at 6 June 2006, 20 per cent. (24,000) customers had not received either a full or partial payment.

Details of payments made in England up to 30 June 2006, including by constituency and county, will be published in due course.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the merits of raising the threshold for single farm payment minimum acreage to one hectare; and if he will make a statement. [73469]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Under EU legislation governing the single payment scheme (SPS), member states may set a minimum area for the establishment of SPS entitlements, which cannot be higher than 0.3ha. Following discussions between the Department and the devolved administrations, the UK made maximum use of this flexibility in adopting a minimum area of 0.3ha. The establishment of entitlements is, with very limited exemptions, a one-off exercise undertaken in the year the SPS is introduced. In the UK, this was 2005. Even if it were possible, therefore, for the UK to now set a higher minimum area, it would have little, if any, practical effect going forward.

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department plans to introduce a threshold below which single farm payments are deemed negligible; and if he will make a statement. [73471]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 25 May 2006]: Under EU legislation governing the single payment scheme (SPS), member states may set a minimum payment figure of 100 euros. That provision is not currently used in the UK, but is among the issues that will be considered further in preparation for the introduction of the 2007 scheme.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the costs of installing the computer system which processes the Single Payment Scheme. [74070]

Barry Gardiner: The overall cost of the Accenture contract is £53.8 million. This includes not only the development of the core SPS processing system but also a Rural Land Register, Customer Register, Customer Service (Call) Centre and Document Management Unit.

Slaughter Premiums

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many EU countries pay a slaughter premium for calves. [75361]

Mr. Bradshaw: Six member states currently pay slaughter premium on calves: Austria, Belgium (part only), France, Netherlands, Portugal and Spain.

Tagging (Sheep)

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the (a) reliability and (b) cost-effectiveness of electronic tagging for sheep. [75362]

Mr. Bradshaw: An extensive pilot trial took place in 2004-05 to evaluate the use of electronic identification devices (EIDs) and electronic data transfer (EDT) under English sheep farming conditions. The aim of the trial was to identify issues surrounding the practical application, roll-out and implementation of EID on sheep farms in different parts of the country, in livestock markets and in slaughterhouses. Results from the trial are available on the Defra website: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tracing/sheep/eid/index.htm.

These results will be submitted to the European Commission to inform their forthcoming report on EID. A regulatory impact assessment for the implementation of electronic identification of sheep and goats in England is also being prepared.

Transport Resources and Waste Facilities

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent conclusions relating to the setting up of fewer, larger sustainable transport resources and waste facilities. [76074]

Mr. Bradshaw: The recent consultation on the review of England's Waste Strategy put forward proposals for the future of waste policy. These included policies with various environmental impacts, for example, on the quality of local environments and transport.

The consultation closed on 9 May 2006. All responses are being carefully considered during the development of a revised waste strategy, which is due to be published later this year.

The procurement of waste services by local authorities is key to delivery, and it is clear that further facilities will be required in order to deal with the commercial and industrial wastes diverted from landfill or requiring treatment to meet landfill controls. The recently created Waste Infrastructure Development Programme will consider how to encourage local authorities to allow, where appropriate, for larger facilities that can serve the non-municipal sector and provide recycling collection services for businesses.

Viral Haemorrhagic Septicaemia

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what contingency plans his Department has put in place to deal with outbreaks of viral haemorrhagic septicaemia in live fish in the UK; [75871]

(2) what assessment he has made of the (a) causes and (b) sources of viral haemorrhagic septicaemia in farmed trout in the UK; [75873]

(3) what discussions his Department has had with key stakeholders on compensating fish farmers for the compulsory slaughter of stock in the event of an outbreak of (a) viral haemorrhagic septicaemia and (b) other fatal diseases amongst farmed fish. [75875]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 8 June 2006]: On 26 May, Viral Haemorrhagic Septicaemia (VHS) was confirmed in samples of fish taken from a trout farm in the River Ouse catchment area of North Yorkshire. VHS is a notifiable disease and the Department has a contingency plan in place for dealing with outbreaks of VHS and other serious fish diseases.

In line with these arrangements, Fish Health Inspectors from the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS), under Defra's direction, immediately formed a National Control Centre (NCC) to co-ordinate action to manage the outbreak with other partners, including the Environment Agency. The NCC is based at the CEFAS laboratory in Weymouth.

[redacted] from the affected farm were slaughtered humanely with full co-operation from the farm owners. The fish have been disposed of in accordance with animal by-products legislation.

Defra has placed restrictions on the movement of fish into and out of the Ouse catchment area, and specifically on all farms in that area.

The cause of the VHS outbreak has not been identified, but extensive epidemiological investigations are underway to try and determine the source. A comprehensive sampling programme is also taking place, targeting fish farms and wild sites in the Ouse catchment as well as other possible contacts. Results are expected within the next 14 days. No further disease cases have been identified by recent sampling and inspections.

Stakeholders make regular representations to the Department about compensating fish farmers for the compulsory slaughter of stock due to an outbreak of a serious fish disease. We have made it clear that it is not our policy to make compensation available in these circumstances. However, EU legislation does allow fish from an infected site to be on-grown for marketing, provided they do not display any clinical signs of disease.

VHS has no implications for human health. The VHS virus cannot grow or replicate at human body temperatures.

Warden Bay Defence Scheme

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the

(a) tender documents and (b) construction timetable for the Warden Bay defence scheme will be made public. [75874]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 8 June 2006]: Defra has overall policy responsibility for flood and coastal erosion risk management in England, funds most of the Environment Agency's flood management activities and provides grant aid on a project by project basis to the other flood and coastal defence operating authorities (local authorities and internal drainage boards) to support their investment in capital improvement projects. Defra does not build defences, nor direct the authorities on which specific projects to undertake. The works programme to manage risk is driven by the operating authorities.

The Warden Bay project is being promoted by Swale borough council and details of the tender process and construction timetable are matters for them. A scheme was approved for grant aid by Defra in July 2005 for start of construction in 2007-08, based on the council's assessment of costs at that time.

Waste Incineration Directive

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which EU member states have designated tallow as a waste product under the Waste Incineration Directive. [73485]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 5 June 2006]: For the purposes of the Waste Incineration Directive (WID), "waste" means any solid or liquid waste as defined in Article 1(a) of the Waste Framework Directive (WFD). Whether or not a substance is "waste" within the meaning of Article 1(a) of the WFD is a matter that must be determined on the facts of the case and the interpretation of the law is a matter for the courts.

In addition the EU Animal By-Products Regulation (ABPR) ((EC) No. 1774/2002) requires a range of animal by-products, and substances derived from them (for example, tallow), to be disposed of as waste. Where the method of disposal is incineration or co-incineration (that is, use as a fuel), the ABPR requires it to be carried out in compliance with the WID. The ABPR is directly applicable in all EU member states.

We understand that other member states are at various stages in discussing the implications of the regulations on burning tallow in their own countries. However, in response to representations by the UK Government, the European Commission has set up a study to help establish whether such controls are proportionate and necessary to the protection of the environment. The study is expected to report by the autumn, and the Government are pressing the Commission for the study to be completed as soon as possible.

Waste Management

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government plan to take to deal with litter over the next five years. [75573]

Mr. Bradshaw: A number of improvements to existing legislation dealing with litter were made under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act 2005, including the introduction of greater powers for local authorities in issuing fixed penalty notices and litter clearing notices. This was complemented by new guidance on the legislation and revision of the statutory "Code of Practice on Litter and Refuse".

Improving the toolkit of powers and guidance available to local authorities will help them tackle local environmental quality issues more effectively. In addition, ENCAMS (Environmental Campaigns), which is grant-funded by DEFRA, runs the "Keep Britain Tidy" campaign and carries out a number of public awareness campaigns aimed at changing behaviour. Recent campaigns have focused on youth littering and smoking-related litter.

In addition to increasing the range and flexibility of enforcement options for local authorities, work is being taken forward on improving the provision of skills in relation to street cleansing and related services. A Local Environmental Management training and skills framework is being developed which will ensure that specific, tailored training and qualifications are available to the industry from operational level to senior management and play a key role in enabling local authorities to increase the effectiveness of their litter clearance, as well as other services they provide.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what controls exist to regulate the practice of disposing of waste in landfill sites. [75575]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations 2002 (as amended) regulate the disposal of waste in landfill sites. The Regulations transpose the requirements of the Landfill Directive, reducing the negative effects of landfilling on the environment and any resultant risk to human health. A copy of the 2002 Regulations (SI No. 1559) and its subsequent amendment Regulations (SI Nos.1375 and 1640) can be obtained from the Office of Public Sector Information at http://www.opsi.gov.uk/.

Water Shortages/Supplies

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance he has issued to the water companies on the categories of public sector vehicles to be exempt from the provisions of any hosepipe ban. [74454]

Ian Pearson: Hosepipe bans are imposed by water companies using the powers available to them under section 76 of the Water Industry Act 1991. In line with the definitions within the Act, these powers will apply to private motor cars but exclude public service vehicles and goods vehicles. No additional guidance has been given.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with Thames Water on the seeking of a drought order by the company; and if he will make a statement. [74781]

Ian Pearson: I met with representatives of Thames Water on 25 May to discuss a range of water issues, including the company's water resource position in light of the Environment Agency's report "Drought prospects 2006—spring update".

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the projected change in mains water usage over the next (a) five, (b) 10 and (c) 20 years. [75375]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency is the statutory body with a duty to manage water resources in England and Wales. As part of the agency's management role, it has both national and regional water resource strategies which set out the pressures over the next 25 years. Information about these strategies is available on the Environment Agency's website: www.environment-agency.gov.uk.

Water companies have statutory duties to maintain adequate supplies of water. They have 25-year water resource plans which complement the agency strategies and seek to reconcile supply with anticipated demand. This forward planning framework exists to take account of factors such as the water supply and disposal infrastructure required to service significant new housing developments and the implications of climate change.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans are in place in (a) London and (b) England to provide (i) bottled and (ii) other sources of water to (A) schools, (B) hospitals, (C) nursing homes and (D) elderly and disabled people during a water shortage or drought; and if he will make a statement. [75700]

Ian Pearson: Any projected shortage in supply this year will be addressed through the relevant water company's drought plan. These plans set out how the company will continue to meet its duties to supply adequate quantities of wholesome water during drought periods with as little recourse as possible to drought orders and permits.

No water company is expecting to rely on bottled water supplies, which would require authorisation under an emergency drought order. Water companies would deploy their existing emergency plans to provide alternative supplies of water to customers in vulnerable sectors in the event of emergency drought order measures being put in place.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Line of Route (Saturday Opening)

26. Martin Linton: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, what progress has been made in implementing the Modernisation Committee's recommendation for Saturday opening of the Line of Route. [76118]

Nick Harvey: Further studies of the practicalities of implementing this recommendation are being carried out by the Visitor Route Steering Group with a view to presenting detailed proposals to the Administration Committee later this year. If the proposals are in due course approved by the authorities of both Houses, Saturday opening could start from the autumn of 2007.

Access to Parliament (Young People)

27. Ian Lucas: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, what steps the Commission plans to take to improve access to Parliament for young people. [76119]

Nick Harvey: A planned expansion of the Educational Visits Programme is under way, with the aim of increasing the annual number of students involved from 8,000 to 25,000 over the next two years. The Parliamentary Education Unit (PEU) now has the use of a room in 1 Parliament Street for educational visits as well as the MacMillan Room, and consideration is being given to how the House might make more effective provision for school students with special educational needs. Plans are also in place to improve the provision of specific educational content for young people who visit the House through routes other than the educational programme, including the summer opening and tours organised by individual Members. The development of new content for the educational website www.explore-parliament.uk continues.

In the longer term, plans for a Parliamentary Visitor and Information Centre, currently being considered by the Administration Committee in conjunction with the House of Lords Information Committee, would aim to provide purpose-built facilities for educational visits as part of a major improvement to Parliament's engagement with the public.

Postage Costs

Mr. Dismore: To ask the honourable Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to his answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 967W, on postage costs, if the Commission will issue guidance to House departments that second class mail should be routinely used for non-urgent items; and if he will make a statement. [74392]

Nick Harvey: All departments of the House are reminding their staff that second class mail should be routinely used for non-urgent items and monitoring of mail issued from House departments began from 1 April 2006. Results from the first quarter of the present financial year will identify those areas where further savings can be made. E-mail is used where possible to save on postage costs.

WORK AND PENSIONS

National Insurance Numbers (Illegal Immigrants)

17. Mr. Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received on the allocation of national insurance numbers to illegal workers; and if he will make a statement. [76109]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan) today, at column 516.

Benefits

18. Chris Mole: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress is being made in improving processing times for housing benefit claims. [76110]

Mr. Plaskitt: My Department is working closely with local authorities, and as a result the average time taken to process new housing benefit and council tax benefit claims has been cut by over two weeks. There have been further improvements in the first three quarters of 2005-06, with the national average improving to 36 days.

We continue to target the poorest performing local authorities and as a result this is where we are seeing the most significant improvements.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the take-up rate of council tax benefit was in each year since 1996-97; and how many pensioners (a) were entitled to and (b) received council tax benefit in each such year. [70300]

Mr. Plaskitt: The latest available estimates for council tax benefit take-up is in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take Up in 2003/2004", a copy of which is in the Library.

Estimates of the number of pensioners entitled to council tax benefit in each year and the number of pensioner households in receipt of council tax benefit in May each year are in the following tables. As the information in the different tables is not on a consistent basis, they should not be used in conjunction to derive an estimate of the take-up of council tax benefit.

	Number of pensioners entitled to CTB in each year
1996-97	3,370,000 to 3,920,000
1997-98	3,240,000 to 3,790,000
1998-99	3,500,000 to 3,800,000
1999-2000	3,520,000 to 3,870,000
2000-01	3,460,000 to 3,800,000
2001-02	3,770,000 to 4,130,000
2002-03	3,810,000 to 4,170,000
2003-04	4,060,000 to 4,460,000

Notes:
1. Estimates of the numbers entitled are given as ranges in order to account for possible biases inherent in estimates from data that is less than perfect. They also take account of the effects of sampling variation.
2. Estimates cover all those aged 60 and over in the private household population of Great Britain. The data source is the Family Resources Survey.
3. For the purposes of this analysis, the unit of analysis is the benefit unit. This is either a single person aged at least 60 years old or, if a couple, both will be termed pensioners if one is aged at least 60 years old. This is consistent with the definition used in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-up" publications.
4. Estimates have been rounded to the nearest 10 thousand.
5. Comparing estimates over time is not straightforward. Our estimates allow for biases which can change from year to year; but we cannot be sure of the extent or effects of changes. Therefore, any analysis of changes over time should be made with caution.

Council tax benefit recipients aged 60 and over: Great Britain

As at May each year	Number
1996	2,717,000
1997	2,646,000
1998	2,614,000

2000	2,419,000
2001	2,403,000
2002	2,362,000
2003	2,357,000

Notes:
1. The figures are based on a 1 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
2. The data refers to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
3. Caseloads have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
4. Figures for any non-responding authorities have been estimated.
5. Housing benefit figures exclude any extended payment cases.
6. Council tax benefit totals exclude any second adult rebate cases.
7. "Aged 60 and over" is defined as benefit units where the claimant and/or partner are aged 60 and over. Therefore figures will contain some claimants aged under 60 where there is a partner aged over 60 years.

Pathways-to-work Pilots

19. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to publish a full cost-benefit analysis in relation to Pathways-to-Work pilots. [76111]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We intend to publish a cost-benefit analysis of Pathways next year. This analysis will be based on new and repeat customers in the first seven Path-ways areas.

However, Pathways to Work is an acknowledged success story. For the fourth quarter in a row, the number of people claiming incapacity benefits has shown a significant year-on-year fall-down 61,000 to stand at 2.71 million.

Financial Assistance Scheme

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether there are mechanisms in place to ensure that eligible people who are close to retirement are supported efficiently through the financial assistance scheme. [76108]

James Purnell: We have said we need to do more to ensure that eligible members who reach 65, the payment age for the financial assistance scheme, are paid as quickly as possible. That is why we are reviewing the administration of the scheme. The review will look at what we need to do to provide the best administration and management support. It will also consider how we can ensure the most cost-efficient operation and examine a full range of options for the appropriate organisational location of the operations. It will report before the summer recess.

New Deal

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much and what proportion of the new deal training budget was spent on those aged (a) 25 and under, (b) 26 to 40, (c) 40 to 55 and (d) 55 and over in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05 and (iii) 2005-06; and what his forecasts are for spending on these categories for the next two years. [66150]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on new deal training spend is not collected by the specified age ranges.

Information on new deal training spend is only available for: the new deal for young people (NDYP) full time education and training (FTET) option; the new deal 25 plus (ND25 plus) employment and training opportunities (ETO); training undertaken during the ND25 plus intensive activity period (IAP); and expenditure on the new deal 50 plus training grant.

Forecast expenditure for the next two years is only available by total new deal spend, not broken down by specific training elements.

The available information is in the following table.

New deal training spend

New deal for young people[2]	30	36	29
New deal 25 plus[3]	29	26	—
New deal 50 plus training grant[4]	1	0	0

[1] Data for 2005-06 are forecast expenditure and are not available for the ND25 ETO and those who have undertaken training during the ND25 plus IAP.
[2] Expenditure is for people aged 18-24 who have participated on the NDYP FTET Option.
[3] Information is for people aged 25 and over who have participated on the ND25 plus ETO and for those who have undertaken training during the ND25 plus IAP.
[4] Information is for people aged 50 and over who have claimed the new deal 50 plus training grant. Once in work, new deal 50 plus customers can claim a training grant of up to £1,200 for training and development related to the job, and a further £300 for life-long learning.

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest million and will be shown as nil if spend is less than half a million.
2. Figures exclude: allowances paid to participants; some ancillary costs associated with new deal 25 plus such as child care and travel costs; the cost of training provided as part of the private sector led new deals and the cost of training provided as part of the other NDYP options eg training provided through the environmental task force or voluntary sector options.

Average Income Statistics

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average income was for (a) the lowest earning 40 per cent. and (b) the highest earning 40 per cent. of the population in (i) Swindon and (ii) England in (A) 1997 and (B) 2005. [69136]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The data source does not allow us to provide robust income estimates below regional level.

Information is presented in the following tables for England as a whole and the South West region in particular. This is consistent with the latest publication of the "Households Below Average Income 1994-95 to 2004-05".

Money values for the median of the bottom 40 per cent. of income distribution in average 2004-05 prices: England and South West

	1996-97 to 1998-99	£ per week equivalised 2002-03 to 2004-05
Before housing costs
England	186	222
South West	187	229
After housing costs
England	135	177
South West	137	185

Money values for the median of the top 40 per cent. of income distribution in average 2004-05 prices: England and South West

	£ per week equivalised
	1996-97 to 1998-99	2002-03 to 2004-05
Before housing costs
England	483	550
South West	453	517
After housing costs
England	410	489
South West	385	465

Notes:
1. Figures are provided using a three-year moving averages, as single-year estimates do not provide a robust guide to year-on-year changes. Hence, figures are not consistent with previously published single-year estimates and there may be differences in changes over time.
2. Figures refer to income not earnings.

Benefit Helplines

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff on average answered calls on each of the benefit helplines run by his Department in each month, in each of the last seven years. [64501]

Mrs. McGuire: For most DWP helplines, data are not collected in the format requested. The helplines that can provide data are in the following tables.

Data figures are WTE (whole time equivalent) staff answering calls

Benefits Simplification Unit

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people work in the Benefits Simplification Unit, broken down by civil service grade; [73248]

(2) how many people have worked in the Benefits Simplification Unit in each year since it was introduced; [73249]

(3) what targets have been set for the Benefits Simplification Unit; [73250]

(4) when the Benefits Simplification Unit will report to Ministers; and whether this information will be made public. [73251]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Benefits Simplification Unit was set up in December 2005. When fully staffed, the unit will have five full-time staff (one SEO and four HEOs) with additional input from a senior civil servant (Grade 5) and a Grade 7.

The unit's role is to act as a catalyst in driving forward simplification across the benefits system, and as a first step published "Simplification: Guide to Best Practice" on 4 May 2006. Copies have been placed in the Library. The unit is now working to raise awareness of the simplification agenda across DWP and to embed best practice, so that the need to move towards a simpler, more transparent system is at the heart of future benefit design and delivery.

The unit reports regularly to Ministers and progress will be reported on annually in the departmental report.

Child Support Agency

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date the Child Support Agency will bring the case of Ms L. Leech of Great Northern Road, Dunstable, to court. [71923]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the right hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, on what date the Child Support Agency will bring the case of Ms L. Leech of Great Northern Road Dunstable to court.

As details about individual cases are confidential I have written to you separately about this case.

Departmental Credit Cards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what facility is available for senior civil servants in his Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [72866]

Mrs. McGuire: A facility is available to my senior civil servants and some other specified staff to use a credit card acquired by the Department from one of the major UK banks. The cards are issued to named individuals, they are not transferable and are not interchangeable between cardholders or other colleagues.

The cards are authorised for use to cover immediate expenses when time prevents the purchase of travel and other similar services, for official purposes, through the Department's normal purchasing arrangements.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effects of staff reductions in his Department and its agencies on performance in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [35707]

Mrs. McGuire: The departmental report, published in June 2005, set out an initial assessment of the progress made against the efficiency challenge and delivery of the Department's SR2004 public service agreement targets. The autumn performance report, published on 15 December 2005, provided an update on delivery of these public service agreement targets, in the context of the efficiency agenda. Copies are available in the Library.

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff are employed by his Department in each departmental region; and how many staff he expects to be employed by his Department in each such region in (a) 2007 and (b) 2008. [68752]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on the number of staff employed by the Department for Work and Pensions as at 31 March 2006 by each Government office region is set out in the following table.

Data on the total number of staff expected to be employed in the Department at 31 March 2007 and 31 March 2008 are not available by Government office region as detailed plans are currently being developed.

1. Figures are point in time at dates stated and comply with Office for National Statistics definitions.
2. Figures are FTE and include temporary staff.
3. Planned figures are rounded to nearest 50 FTE and are subject to change.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the reporting of the effectiveness of his Department's spending on staff learning and development. [72253]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department has introduced an effective learning and development evaluation strategy across all business areas. Our strategy and processes are linked to maintaining the Investors in People accreditation. Each business area has identified its priorities for learning investment and these are formally evaluated to measure the efficiency of the learning that has taken place. All departmental expenditure on learning and development is collated centrally and is reviewed on a quarterly basis.

Jobcentres (Race Relations)

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance has been given to jobcentres, including Jobcentre Plus Partnerships, on the restricting of references to a geographical area to meet the requirements of race relations legislation. [64824]

Margaret Hodge: I have been asked to reply.

The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what guidance has been given to jobcentres including Jobcentre Plus Partnerships on the restricting of references to a geographical area to meet the requirements of race relations legislation. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus guidance states that employers are permitted to set out requirements in job advertisements, such as the arrangement of transport from an allocated location to take employees to and from a place of work. Where an employer wishes to state that potential applicants must reside in a particular town or city this cannot be accepted, as it may exclude some groups of people.

Jobcentre Plus must ensure that it meets its obligations under equal opportunities legislation. Where Jobcentre Plus staff have concerns that an employer is placing restrictions that may exclude potential applicants, they advise the employer of this and suggest alternative wording.

Overnight Stays

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions (a) civil servants in his Department and (b) special advisers have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [68989]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions cannot provide the information on the star rating of accommodation used by civil servants and special advisers as it is the cost of the hotel and not the star rating which will have influenced the choice of the hotel.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [68990]

Mrs. McGuire: Total costs for overnight accommodation are as follows:

Financial year	UK accommodation costs	Foreign accommodation costs
2003-04	12,143,283.41	97,567.64
2005-06	10,762,515.58	141,214.36

Unfortunately, we are unable to provide information relating to specific countries of travel as this is not collected by the supplier. The totals given in the table include all travellers within DWP including special advisers. Unfortunately, we are unable to identify separate costs relating to individual groups of travellers.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department. [68991]

Mrs. McGuire: All staff within the Department for Work and Pensions currently benefit from a 5.45 per cent. discount for hotel bookings when made through the Department's hotel accommodation supplier in relation to official business. All bookings made for special advisers share the same discounts.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [68998]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. Under the terms of the Ministerial Code on Travel by Ministers, when travelling on official business Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Since 1999, the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. This information includes accommodation costs. Copies are available in the Library.

Parental Support

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the potential cost savings which would result from reducing the level of income support for women aged over 25 years pregnant with their first child to the level of income support for pregnant women with their first child aged 18 to 24 years. [75430]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information needed to make such an estimate is not available.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make it his policy to retain the Post Office card account beyond 2010 as an option for those who wish to continue using it; and if he will make a statement. [63316]

Mr. Plaskitt: No.

The Post Office card account will be funded by the Government until 2010 as always planned. Every customer who currently collects their benefits from the Post Office will still be able to do so if they wish—around 25 different bank accounts can be accessed at Post Office branches now, and we hope that there could be more in the future.

We are working with Post Office Ltd. to develop a joint strategy to move customers from the Post Office card account with the best interests of our joint customers in mind. Post Office Ltd. has already introduced one new savings account, and is developing other savings and banking products, which are likely to be more attractive to many of their customers than the current Post Office card account.

TREASURY

Birth Rates

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the latest birth rate per 1,000 women was to those aged (a) 19, (b) 18, (c) 17, (d) 16, (e) 15, (f) 14 and (g) under 14 years in the UK; and what forecast he has made for each of the next 20 years. [75628]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As the National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your question about the latest birth rate per 1,000 women to those aged (a) 19, (b) 18, (c) 17, (d) 16, (e) 15, (f) 14 and (g) under 14 years in the UK; and what forecast has been made for each of the next 20 years. (75628)

Birth rates by age for females aged under 20 are shown in Table 1. Figures relate to births that occurred in 2005. The birth rates are provisional, as they are calculated using the 2004-based population projections for 2005.

Because of the relatively small numbers of births to girls aged 14 and under, ONS only routinely reports birth rates for the age-group '15 and under'. In 2005, there were 1,092 births to girls aged 15, 210 births to girls aged 14, and 26 births to girls aged under 14.

Table 1: Births per 1,000 females at each single year of age below age 20,[1] United Kingdom, 2005

Age	Births per 1,000 females
18	39.2
17	25.3
16	10.4
15 and under	3.5

[1] Provisional

Assumptions about future birth rates are made as part of the national population projections. Birth rate assumptions for females are shown in Table 2, by single year of age for those aged 16 to 19 and for those aged 15 and under. Figures are for each year, from mid-2004 to mid-2005 (the first year of the projection), and for the next 20 years.

Census

Ms Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department will include a question identifying sexuality in the next census. [75967]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking if the Office for National Statistics will include a question identifying sexuality in the next Census. (75967)

There are concerns about the quality and usefulness of the data that can be collected with a self-completion questionnaire such as is used in the Census. ONS recognise the strong user demand for information on sexual orientation and the need for information to be collected however.

Confirmation of the questions that are to be included in the 2011 Census will follow the consultation and testing programme, and formal approval is given by Parliament in 2010. A White Paper setting out the Government's proposals is scheduled to be published in autumn 2008.

Constituency Visits

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the constituencies he visited between 5 May 2005 and 5 May 2006. [75699]

Mr. Gordon Brown: As part of my official duties, I have made a number of visits to the regions and nations of the United Kingdom and will be continuing to do so over the coming months.

Crack Cocaine Deaths

Mark Tami: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many deaths resulted from the use of crack cocaine in each of the last five years, broken down by age. [75565]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many deaths resulted from the use of crack cocaine in each of the last five years, broken down by age. (75565)

Available figures relate to deaths where the underlying cause was drug poisoning, not the total number where use of crack cocaine was a contributory factor. ONS routinely carries out special monitoring of deaths from drug-related poisoning and publishes a combined figure for deaths mentioning cocaine on the death certificate. It is not possible to provide separate figures on deaths related to crack cocaine and cocaine from routine mortality data, as it is not possible to separately identify crack cocaine from other forms of cocaine at post mortem and other evidence to distinguish the form of cocaine taken is rarely provided at death certification.

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004. The following table shows the number of deaths where the underlying cause of death was drug-related poisoning and cocaine was mentioned on the death certificate in England and Wales for the calendar years 2000 to 2004.

Family Statistics

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families there were in each region in England and Wales with (a) one child, (b) two children, (c) three children, (d) four children, (e) five children, (f) six to eight children, (g) eight to 10 children and (h) more than 10 children in each year since 1997. [75627]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your request for how many families there were in each region in England and Wales with (a) one child, (b) two children, (c) three children, (d) four children, (e) five children, (f) six to eight children, (g) eight to 10 children and (h) more than 10 children in each year since 1997. (75627)

Reliable estimates of larger families at regional level are only available from the census. The attached table shows the number of families in the 2001 Census by number of dependent children (this excludes children aged over 18 and those who are aged 16-18 who were married or were not in full-time education). As there were few families with more than 10 dependent children (59 in all of England and Wales) these figures cannot be released by region for reasons of confidentiality.

Foreign Travel

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on foreign travel by his Department in each of the last eight years. [76067]

John Healey: I refer to the answer I gave on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2272W to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess). In 2005-06, the cost of foreign travel, including subsistence, for the Treasury was £1,741,000. All travel is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the "Ministerial Code", the "Civil Service Management Code" and the "Code of Conduct for Special Advisers".

HMRC Staff

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many HM Revenue and Customs officers are employed (a) at ports and airports and (b) elsewhere. [75677]

Dawn Primarolo: At 1 April 2006, the number of full-time equivalent HM Revenue and Customs staff officially based within dock or airport areas was approximately 4,090 and 88,798 were officially based elsewhere. Most staff who are employed at ports and airports are part of the detection directorate. Some 4,500 of them are employed on frontline operational duties at ports and airports, although many of them will not be based at those locations. Other HM

Revenue and Customs staff will also attend airports and ports as part of their official duties.

Home Insulation (Pensioners)

Steve Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his pre-Budget statement of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 613W, by what means pensioners not in receipt of pension credit can gain access to financial assistance with the costs of home insulation; how much he has allocated to this scheme; who is responsible for administering the scheme; how many pensioners have so far taken up this entitlement; and if he will make a statement. [69612]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

In the pre-Budget announcement of 5 December 2005, the Chancellor announced a significant financial boost to help tackle the issue of fuel poverty in the UK. As part of this announcement, the Chancellor pledged £300 towards the cost of a new central heating system for any pensioner household not eligible for Warm Front assistance. Detailed arrangements for the delivery of this element of the Scheme, which will be delivered by the Warm Front Scheme Manager Eaga Partnership, are being finalised ready for implementation this summer.

While these payments will only support the provision of central heating, a range of assistance is also available for homeowners wishing to insulate their homes. Information is available from Energy Efficiency Advice Centres or via the Energy Saving Trust Website at: http://www.est.org.uk/

Household Incomes

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average gross disposable household income was in (a) the UK and (b) each region and county in each year since 2001. [75485]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Gross Disposable Household Income (GDHI) for the UK and each region and county in each year since 2001. (75485)

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) produce estimates for GDHI in Nomenclature of Units for Territorial Statistics (NUTS) regions. Estimates are not produced separately at the county level. GDHI figures up to and including 2004 (the latest year for which estimates are available) were published in May 2006. Estimates for UK and NUTS1, 2 and 3 GDHI can be accessed in table 3.1 through the following link: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_economy/Results_Tables_Values.xls

Housing Expenditure

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the percentage of disposable income spent on housing by each income decile for each year from 1995 to 2005; and if he will make a statement. [75913]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the latest estimate is of the percentage of disposable income spent on housing by each income decile, for each year from 1995 to 2005. (75913)

Estimates of expenditure on housing are based on the Expenditure and Food Survey (EPS), an annual sample survey of approximately 6,000 to 7,000 households in the UK. Family Spending, the annual report on the EPS, recently introduced a more comprehensive treatment of housing expenditure, and for this reason comparable figures are only available from 2002/03 onwards.

The table below shows the percentage of disposable household income spent on housing for each gross income decile group since 2002/03. All housing expenditure is included: rent; mortgage payments; costs associated with second dwellings; charges such as council tax and water charges; costs associated with moving house; maintenance and repair; alterations and improvements; and household insurance.

Housing expenditure as a proportion of disposable income is highest for households in the bottom decile. The bottom decile in particular does contain some households whose total expenditure including that on housing, greatly exceeds their income. Some of these households have, or report, very little income (for example, self-employed people starting a business or someone who has just been made redundant). These households may finance their expenditure by drawing on their savings, borrowing, or other kinds of receipts which are not treated as regular income in the EPS e.g. inheritance and severance payments.

A more detailed breakdown of housing expenditure by income decile is available in Table 2.3 on page 14 of Family Spending 2004/05, albeit expressed as average weekly household expenditures, rather than as proportions of disposable income. Family Spending is available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk=961&Pos=14&ColRank=1&Rank=272.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on how many occasions since 1 June 2005 he met the General Secretary of (a) the Trades Union Congress, (b) UNISON, (c) the GMB, (d) Amicus and (e) the Transport and General Workers Union; [76313]

(2) how many times he has met (a) the Head of the Sustainable Development Commission, (b) the Government Chief Scientist, (c) the Executive Director of Friends of the Earth, (d) the Chief Executive of the World Wildlife Fund (UK) and (e) the Executive Director of Greenpeace in the last 12 months; [76814]

(3) how many times he has met (a) the Chairman of the British Medical Association, (b) the General Secretary of the Royal College of Nursing, (c) the Chief Executive of the NHS Confederation and (d) the Chief Executive of the King's Fund in the last 12 months; [76815]

(4) how many times he has met the (a) Metropolitan Police Commissioner, (b) Director-General of the Serious Organised Crime Agency, (c) Assistant Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police for Specialist Operations, (d) Director General of the Security Service (MI5), (e) Chief of the Secret Intelligence Service (MI6), (f) Chief of the Defence Staff, (g) First Sea Lord and Chief of the Naval Staff, (h) Chief of the General Staff and (i) Chief of the Air Staff in the last 12 months. [76816]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials have meetings with a wide range of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Missing Trader Fraud

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of missing trader fraud for each quarter since 1997 (a) in cash terms and (b) cost adjusted for inflation. [75931]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC's latest annual estimates of total MTIC fraud were published in "Measuring Indirect Tax Losses-2005", which is available from the House of Commons Library. A quarterly breakdown of these estimates is shown in Table 1, along with the corresponding constant price time series based on 1999 Q1 prices.

Measuring the size of MTIC fraud is inherently difficult. Therefore, the figures are presented as a range.

Due to lags in data becoming available, the annual estimate for 2005-06 cannot be published until PBR 2006. The associated quarterly figures will not be available until this time as their release could compromise the pre-announced publication.

[1] The complexities of the methodology used to estimate MTIC fraud are such that there will be minor discrepancies between these quarterly figures and the published annual estimates.

Pensions

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the detailed assumptions underlying the estimate of future expenditure on public service pension benefits set out in table 5.1 of the long-term public finance report of December 2005. [44830]

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumptions underlay the estimate of future expenditure on public service pension benefits contained in table 5.1 of the long-term public finance report of December 2005. [54516]

Mr. Timms: The projections of payments by unfunded public service pension schemes published in the long-term public finance report were based on work done for the Treasury by the Government

Actuary's Department, using assumptions which so far as possible are in key respects consistent with those used in other work on valuation of scheme liabilities. I am placing a technical note explaining the key actuarial assumptions to which the results are materially sensitive, in the House of Commons Library.

The pension projections are, of course, also sensitive to the key economic assumptions made by the Treasury underlying the long-term public finance report and these are explained in the report itself.

Planning Gain Supplement

Tim Farron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department plans to exempt developers of affordable housing from the Planning Gain Supplement. [76666]

John Healey: The Government's consultation on the proposed Planning Gain Supplement (PGS) ended on 27 February 2006. In Chapter 4 of the document, the Government specifically consulted on the scope, including, exemptions. The Government are now analysing responses received, and will make further announcements by the end of the year.

Population Statistics

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the population was of (a) Milton Keynes and (b) England and Wales in each year between 1995 and 2005. [75411]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question about what the population was of (a) Milton Keynes and (b) England and Wales in each year between 1995 and 2005. (75411)

The data for mid-1995 to mid-2004 are shown in the attached table. Data for mid-2005 are not yet available; population estimates for mid-2005 will be published on 24 August 2006.

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) single parent households with children under the age of 16 years and (b) single-person households there were in Houghton and Washington, East constituency in each of the last 15 years; and what estimate he has made of the number of cohabiting couples living in Houghton and Washington, East constituency in each of the last 15 years. [76332]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for the following figures for the Houghton and Washington East Constituency in each of the last 15 years: the number of single parent households with children under the age of 16 years, the number of single-person households and the number of cohabiting couples. (76332)

Estimates of these figures are not produced on an annual basis for local areas. Available figures are from the censuses of 1991 and 2001. These are shown in the table below.

Numbers of (1) lone parent households with dependent children aged under 16, (2) one person households and (3) cohabiting couples in households: Houghton and Washington East, 1991 and 2001

1. Lone-parent households with dependent children aged under 16	1,734	2,574
2. One-person households	8,193	10,025
3. Cohabiting couple households	[1]782	3,347

[1] In 1991 responses to relationship questions were only processed for approximately 10% of the population. The figure in this table has been grossed up by a factor of 10.16 to account for this.

Private Medical Schemes

Peter Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent changes have been made to the taxation of payments by companies to former employees in respect of private medical schemes; what the estimated tax yield is resulting from these changes; and what estimate has been made of the additional burden of extra taxation on individual taxpayers as a result of the changes. [76374]

Ed Balls: From 6 April 2006, legislation, introduced in the Finance Act 2004 as part of pension simplification, made changes to the taxation of retirement benefits that are provided by employer financed retirement benefit schemes (EFRBS). An arrangement under which an employer pays private medical insurance premiums for a former employee after they have retired qualifies as an EFRBS.

The changes ensure that both cash and non-cash retirement benefits paid from EFRBS to pensioners are taxable as employment income. Before 6 April 2006, it was possible to avoid paying tax on such retirement benefits by paying them solely in non-cash form.

A Regulatory Impact Assessment ("Regulatory Impact Assessment for Simplifying the taxation of pensions—Update") was published on 22 March 2006. This sets out the Government's assessment of the impact of pension simplification and is available at www.hmrc.gov.uk/ria/ria-pensions-simplification.pdf. The Government estimate that pensions tax simplification will have an overall cost to the Exchequer building up to £250 million per year.

Tax Credits

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what procedures his Department has in place to adjust the level of tax credits payable to recipients who are required to repay overpayments; [75517]

(2) whether a family repaying over-paid tax credits can have their 2006 tax credits withheld to contribute to repayment of earlier over-payments; [76877]

(3) what measures are in place to ensure that families repaying over-paid tax credits do not experience hardship; and whether repayments are adapted for individual circumstances. [76879]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Custom's Code of Practice 26 "What happens if we have paid you too much tax credit?" explains how overpayments are recovered and what happens if claimants have difficulty repaying an overpayment.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his latest estimate is of the tax credit take-up rates for each year since 2003-04; and if he will make a statement; [75785]

(2) what his latest estimate is of the number of people entitled to but not receiving all forms of tax credits. [75825]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of take-up rates for child and working tax credits in 2003-04 are given on the HMRC website at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-take-up.htm. Tax credit take-up rates reached an unprecedented level in their first year of operation. Some 79 per cent. of eligible families with children claimed child tax credit in 2003-04, while for those earning under £10,000 a year, take-up was 93 per cent. Take-up for low income working families with children is higher than for any previous system of in-work support.

Teenage Pregnancies

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many girls under the age of 16 years (a) became pregnant and (b) gave birth in the Lewes constituency in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. [76280]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mogul, dated 12 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many girls under the age of 16 years (a) became pregnant and (b) gave birth in the Lewes constituency in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. I am replying in her absence. (76280)

Numbers of conceptions and livebirths in Lewes county district for the years 1995-2004 are shown in the table below. Figures for 2004 are provisional.

Information on conceptions is routinely published for local authorities and strategic health authorities. Figures cannot be provided by Parliamentary Constituency because of the risk of disclosing individual's information due to small differences with local authority boundaries.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) does not publish figures by single year of age below the age of 16 by either local or health authority and also does not release figures for individual years because of the risk of disclosing individual's information.

The total number of births to girls aged under 16 in each year is too small to be released because of the risk of disclosing individual's information. Therefore total number of births in the 10 year period (1995-2004) is given in the table. Figures cannot be broken down by single year of age, for the same reason.

Birth figures cannot be provided for Lewes Parliamentary Constituency for the same reason as provided for conceptions.

1995-2004[1]

Lewes CD	Number
Number of conceptions	93
Number of livebirths	17

[1] Conceptions for 2004 are provisional.

Thrombo-embolism Deaths

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many women died of thrombo-embolism in each year since 1990. [75623]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 12 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary Question asking how many women died of thrombo-embolism in each year since 1990. (75623)

It is not possible to tabulate mortality data that exactly fits the cause of death category requested. The Office for National Statistics routinely publishes mortality data by underlying cause of death, using the International Classification of Diseases, in Mortality Statistics: Cause, Series DH2 which can be found on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Product.asp?vlnk=618.

You should be able to find the conditions you are interested in from the tables in these volumes.

Clarification of the question stated that you were interested in 'pulmonary induced abortions.' The Confidential Inquiry into Maternal and Child Health (CEMACH) collects information on all maternal deaths (deaths during pregnancy or up to one year after pregnancy) in the UK and publishes these data every three years. In the period 2000-2002 there were five maternal deaths following termination of pregnancy notified to the inquiry. Further information can be accessed via the CEMACH website at: http://www.cemach.org.uk/publications.htm.

Travel Perks

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total annual revenue from taxation was from season tickets and travel passes provided by employers to their staff in each of the last five years. [76333]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

2012 Olympics

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the cost over-runs of the 2012 Olympics will be funded; and if she will make a statement. [75837]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 8 June 2006]: We are keen to control costs and are continually pressing for value for money. Our response to any net increases in cost will be considered in the light of the cost review, taking into account the circumstances at the time and the 2003 Memorandum of Understanding with the Mayor.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in which constituencies the 2012 Roadshow is planned to stop. [75960]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The Department set out in a Press Notice of 9 May (available on the DCMS website www.culture.gov.uk) the list of towns and cities the 2012 Roadshow was intended to visit. Detailed plans for the Roadshow are currently being finalised and will be made public, but until these plans are finalised it is not possible to give a definitive list of the constituencies in which the Roadshow will stop.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport why the 2012 Roadshow is not planned to stop in (a) Kent and (b) Essex. [75961]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The 2012 Roadshow will visit every region of England, as well as Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, spending at least a day in each, and schedules are being developed in partnership with regional and national representatives. Owing to time constraints it is simply not possible for the Roadshow to visit every county in the UK.

As part of the day in the east of England region, the Roadshow will visit Weald Country Park in Essex on 13 July, as set out in the Press Notice released by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport and the London Organising Committee (LOCOG) on 9 May. A stop at Weald Country Park, the venue for the mountain biking at the 2012 Games, has always been an integral part of plans for the Roadshow.

As part of the day in the south-east region, the Roadshow will visit Eton Dorney, a 2012 venue and Stoke Mandeville, the birthplace of the Paralympic movement, as well as Brighton and Milton Keynes.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 640W, on the 2012 Olympics, if she will break down by individual project the planned expenditure on (a) Olympic venues and infrastructure and (b) infrastructure works planned and budgeted as part of the general regeneration of the Lower Lea Valley. [75962]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The review of the cost of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games is still ongoing. Any revised estimates will be reported only when they have been agreed.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2006, Official Report, column 1792W, on the London Olympics, what inflation rates were applied to each element of the 2012 Olympics infrastructure budget. [75963]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The inflation rate applied to venue costs was 3.5 per cent. per annum from 2003-06 and 6.5 per cent. per annum from 2006 onwards. The inflation rate applied to other infrastructure costs was 5 per cent. per annum.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what additional funding will be available to meet the commitments to mass participation sport made during the 2012 Olympic bid. [75964]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 8 June 2006]: Funding will be available as part of the Government's overall drive to strengthen community sport and drive up participation levels in sport across the UK.

Over £1 billion is being invested in grassroots sport through Exchequer and Lottery funding over this spending review period. For example, the Government are committing £34.5 million over the next two years to the National Sports Foundation to fund a range of projects to benefit grassroots sport, and we will be encouraging the private sector to match this funding.

We are also putting more than £1.5 billion into transforming PE and school sport in the five years leading up to 2008, to encourage children and young people to be more active.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what provision has been made for planting during and leading up to the London Olympics to ensure the provision of sustainable green sites. [75676]

Mr. Caborn: The Government are committed to ensuring not only that we deliver the most successful games, but also that they are environmentally, economically and socially sustainable. Sustainable landscaping and planting for the Olympic Park is an important issue, both in terms of hosting the games and for the longer term legacy.

The Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA), recently set up by my Department to deliver the venues and infrastructure for the games, has responsibility for the design and delivery of the Olympic Park, including its landscaping and planting, and recognises that the park will need extensive landscaping to create a sustainable redevelopment of the local environment. The ODA has recently employed park-wide designers to work on an overall design concept for the park, including landscaping and planting.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what costs were incurred by her Department in relation to the 2012 Olympic bid. [75829]

Tessa Jowell: The Department spent £9.3 million from a budget of £10 million on London 2012 Ltd., the company established to take forward the bid, and spent a further £4.6 million from its £5 million bid support budget on supporting the bid including feasibility studies and master planning.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps will be taken to improve hotel and tourist facilities outside London in the run-up to the 2012 Olympic Games. [75830]

Mr. Woodward: The consistent high quality of hotel and tourism facilities in the English regions, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland will be vital to the success of the tourism industry in making the most of the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games, and of their legacy.

My Department, in partnership with VisitBritain and Visit London, will shortly be consulting on the DCMS Tourism 2012 Strategy. The tourism accommodation grading schemes across the UK will be prominent in that consultation, as will the quality of the wider destination welcome.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the potential benefits to non-London tourist centres of the 2012 Olympics. [75831]

Mr. Woodward: The economic benefits to the tourism sector of hosting the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games are projected at between £1.4 billion and £2 billion nationally. Although London's visitor economy will account for a significant proportion of that total, substantial benefits are expected across the country—not least because 50 per cent. of inbound tourists to London visit other parts of the UK during their stays.

My Department's forthcoming consultation on the DCMS Tourism 2012 Strategy will seek views on maximising the benefits of hosting the games for the English regions, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the percentage of hotel rooms planned to be available in London by the time of the 2012 Olympics which will be of an inspected standard. [76027]

Mr. Woodward: Consistent high quality in the standards of visitor accommodation in London and the rest of the country will be important to the success of the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games, and to the tourism industry's making the most of their legacy. The percentage of hotel rooms in the capital which are currently subject to inspection under the grading schemes operated by VisitBritain and the Automobile Association is not available to my Department. However, it is generally accepted in the industry that the London percentage is significantly less than the average of 53 per cent. in membership of quality schemes across Great Britain.

My Department will shortly be consulting on the DCMS 2012 Tourism Strategy, in partnership with VisitBritain and Visit London. Product quality, in London and the rest of Britain, will be prominent in that consultation.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list those (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 and for which her Department has policy responsibility which remain in force. [68847]

Advertising Standards

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure that the Advertising Standards Authority fulfils its duty to ban advertisements containing (a) knives and (b) other weapons. [76174]

Mr. Woodward: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport supports the Advertising Standards Authority's role (ASA) as the independent regulator of advertising content. There is not a ban on the depiction of all knives and weapons in advertising, although the Advertising Codes require that advertisements are responsible and do not condone violence. All advertisments are considered on a case-by-case basis, taking into account the medium used, the product being advertised, the likely audience and whether a threat of violence is being depicted or condoned. The ASA will continue to take action against irresponsible advertisements.

Care Homes (TV Licences)

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will direct the Television Licensing Authority to exempt residents of short-stay respite care homes from the requirement for individual television licences. [76447]

Mr. Woodward: The BBC, as television licensing authority, is responsible for administering the licensing system and determining licensing requirements in individual cases. The Secretary of State has no power to direct the BBC, or its agent TV Licensing, on the licensing requirements in individual cases or classes of case.

As part of BBC Charter Review, the Government have looked carefully at the existing concessionary arrangements, with a special focus on the Accommodation for Residential Care scheme. As indicated in the White Paper published in March this year, the scheme gives rise to a number of apparent anomalies to which there is no simple solution. However, it helps a significant number of very vulnerable individuals. We therefore have no plans to amend the scheme.

Commonwealth Institute Building

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the future of the Commonwealth Institute Building. [75824]

Mr. Lammy: The Government recognise the importance of the Commonwealth Institute's work to support educational programmes to benefit young people in all 53 Commonwealth countries, and understand that the building is no longer appropriate for that work. It would be inappropriate for me to comment further on this matter while discussions are still to be concluded.

Croquet

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her policy is on promoting the sport of croquet; and if she will make a statement. [75753]

Mr. Caborn: Croquet is a sport recognised by Sport England, the Government's lead body on promoting grassroots sport, but it is not a priority or development sport that can seek direct funding through a "Whole Sport" plan. However, individual croquet clubs are eligible to apply for funding from Sport England's lottery community programmes, although no funding has been awarded since 1998.

Croquet continues to be promoted through its national governing body, the Croquet Association.

Digital Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent assessment she has made of access to the digital signal in Coventry South. [75801]

Mr. Woodward: The vast majority of households in the West Midlands can receive digital TV services via digital satellite, terrestrial or cable. Digital terrestrial television (via an aerial) is available to 74 per cent. of households. Overall take-up of digital television in the West Midlands is 66 per cent.

After switchover, which takes place in the Central region in 2011, UK digital terrestrial television coverage will match the current analogue coverage of 98.5 per cent.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many homes in Northern Ireland (a) are unable and (b) she expects to be unable after analogue switch-off in 2012 to receive digital television services. [76530]

Mr. Woodward: The vast majority of households in Northern Ireland can receive digital TV services via digital satellite, terrestrial or cable. Currently, digital terrestrial television (via an aerial) is available to 58 per cent. of households. Overall take-up of digital television in Northern Ireland is 53 per cent..

After switchover, which takes place in the Northern Ireland region in 2012, UK digital terrestrial television coverage will match the current analogue coverage of 98.5 per cent.

School Sports

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 859W, on school sports, how much has been awarded to (a) Sport England, (b) the Youth Sports Trust, (c) the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority and (d) other partners charged with delivering the National School Sports Strategy over the three years 2003-04 to 2005-06; and if she will list the projects included. Sports Facilities (Shropshire)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will congratulate Shrewsbury borough council on its new sports facility in Sundorne, Shrewsbury. [74760]

Mr. Caborn: I am delighted that the extra investment that the Government are making in community sports facilities and the Government's creation of new, community-focused bodies like the Football Foundation and the Big Lottery Fund have enabled the people of Shrewsbury to benefit from this impressive new Sports Village.

Survey Databases

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department keeps a database of people questioned in surveys. [76219]

Mr. Lammy: No database is kept by the Department of people questioned in surveys. Where data are kept, all cases are anonymised.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total cost of Taking Part: The National Survey of Culture, Leisure and Sport will be in 2006-07. [76229]

Mr. Lammy: The estimated total cost of Taking Part: The National Survey of Culture, Leisure and Sport in 2006-07 is £2.7 million.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much her Department spent on surveys in each year since 1997. [76231]

Mr. Lammy: Surveys have been defined as quantitative surveys of members of the public for which the Department has provided funding.

Using this definition and based on the information available at this time, the following table shows the amount spent by the Department on surveys in each year since 1997.

1998-99	30,000
1999-2000	30,000
2000-01	48,000
2001-02	145,000
2002-03	66,000
2003-04	30,000
2004-05	162,000
2005-06	1,528,000
2006-07[2]	2,740,000

[1] Rounded to the nearest £1,000.
[2] Includes estimated committed funds not yet spent.

Until the launch of Taking Part: The National Survey of Culture, Leisure and Sport in 2005, several of our non-departmental public bodies commissioned their own surveys. Taking Part is a collaborative, cross-sectoral survey which can replace the need for our partner bodies to undertake their own surveys. Therefore it is improving our understanding of cross-sectoral issues, it is a more authoritative source as the sample size can be increased compared to previous, sector-specific surveys and costs overall can be reduced.

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department has shared information collected from Government-funded surveys with other organisations since 1997. [76232]

Mr. Lammy: Based on the information available at this time, findings from all quantitative surveys of the public have been released publicly, as part of either a statistical release or a press notice.

Television Audio Description

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to increase availability of access to television audio description among blind and partially-sighted people; and if she will increase the television audio description targets to 20 per cent. [75426]

Mr. Woodward: The Government are committed to extending access to broadcasting services for those who are blind and partially-sighted. In relation to digital switchover, special provision will be made to help registered blind viewers to receive audio description services. My Department is currently considering with the RNIB how we might provide help for households where one person is partially-sighted.

The Department has no plans to increase audio description targets at present. However, we shall want to take account of the results of Ofcom's current review of its statutory code on Television Access Services, in which it has proposed that it would be better to review the statutory target for audio description when it is clearer how many potential beneficiaries will use it.

Tourism

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which 10 tourist attractions in (a) Essex, (b) Hertfordshire and (c) the Metropolitan Police area of London and City of London Police area attracted the largest number of visitors in each of the last two years for which figures are available. [75653]

Mr. Woodward: My Department does not maintain central records of visitors to tourist attractions. However, VisitBritain carries out periodical surveys of regional attractions as part of its work to support and promote tourism across Britain. Estimated visitor numbers for the 10 most popular attractions in these areas for 2003 and 2004 were as follows:

(a) Essex

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the nations and territories whose flags will be displayed in Horse Guards Parade and the surrounding area for Trooping the Colour 2006. [76830]

Mr. Lammy: For Trooping the Colour the flags of the Commonwealth nations including the Union Flag are flown along Horse Guards Road. Union Flags are also flown along the Mall and outside Buckingham Palace around the Queen Victoria Memorial. The Union Flag is also flown on Horse Guards Building and on Government Buildings. White Ensigns are also flown from Admiralty Arch.

Flags flown along Horse Guards Road are as follows:

United Kingdom

Victoria and Albert Museum

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent discussions she has had with HM Revenue and Customs on its decision to tax cafe and shop discounts for the Friends of the Victoria and Albert Museum as a benefit in kind; and if she will make a statement. [75896]

Mr. Lammy: I have had no discussions with HM Revenue and Customs on this issue. Changes to the benefits offered to the Friends of the Victoria and Albert Museum (V&A) were made by the Friends organisation itself in response to the findings of an internal tax review and on the advice of an independent tax expert. Under Gift Aid rules, which apply to all charities, the Friends of the V&A is not permitted to give benefits worth more than 25 per cent. of their subscription cost to each member. The Friends scheme has made some changes to the benefits that it offers to its members to ensure it remains within this threshold.

Whole Sport Plan

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much money has been allocated to the Whole Sport Plan; how much has been spent; and whether any money from within that budget is allocated to (a) the 2012 Olympics and (b) related purposes. [73619]

Mr. Caborn: Sport England's total Whole Sport Plan budget, which covers the four years 2005-09, is £165.7 million. This is split between 34 priority and development sports. A proportion of the budget is also currently used to fund a further 12 sports, albeit at lower levels than priority and development sports. This element of funding is currently under review.

Of the above, £158.5 million has been committed[1] so far.

There is no amount within the budget allocated specifically to 2012 Olympics or related purposes. However, Whole Sport Plan investment is a key part of Sport England's overall drive to strengthen grassroots and community sport as part of achieving a lasting 2012 legacy.

[1] Figures expressed as "committed" rather than "spent" are more stable and provide a truer expression of the amount of budget still available to be allocated.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

African Countries (Medical Sector)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to build and strengthen the capacity of the medical sector within African countries, with particular reference to measures to retain health workers. [75674]

Hilary Benn: Strengthening health services in Africa is a DFID priority and we have contributed over £650 million to this since 2000. At Gleneagles in 2005, the UK pushed for a G8 commitment to strengthening African health systems and addressing the human resources for health crisis. Providing long-term predictable financing for expanding basic health services will be a priority for 2006 and beyond.

DFID is tackling both "push" and "pull" incentives for health worker migration. In the UK, DFID has worked closely with the Department of Health to prevent the targeting of developing countries in the international recruitment of health care professionals.

A list of countries has been agreed from which the NHS does not actively recruit—including all sub-Saharan African countries. In addition, the Department of Health has brokered a groundbreaking agreement for this code to apply to major players in the UK independent health care sector.

But health worker shortages go beyond migration and international recruitment. There is also migration within countries from rural to urban areas and between countries in Africa, and health professionals also move into non-health careers.

In Africa, DFID has responded to health worker shortages through our support for health systems development. This will help countries deal with the "push" factors within their health systems such as poor pay, housing, training and career progression, job satisfaction and availability of equipment and drugs. For example, in Malawi, where the shortage of health workers is particularly severe, we have provided £100 million support to the health sector of which £55 million is earmarked for the Emergency Human Resources Programme.

DFID is also continuing to work with the Department of Health to further develop the NHS Links programme and the Tropical Health Education Trust (THET) programme of support to health workers from less developed countries practising in the UK.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to help African governments abolish healthcare fees; and what recent assessment he has made of whether the targets agreed at the G8 summit in 2005 will be met. [75685]

Mr. Thomas: DFID strongly supports the removal of official user fees for health, along with other barriers to the poor accessing health services, where governments choose to do so. For example, the UK has committed £14.5 million over five years to the Government of Zambia to support abolition of health user fees in public health facilities. In addition to our ongoing health sector reform programmes, we continue to look for opportunities to support similar policies to remove barriers to the poor accessing care.

DFID publishes a monthly update to the "Gleneagles Implementation Plan for Africa", which set out the milestones to be reached this year as a step towards delivery of the Gleneagles commitments. Copies of the updated plan are placed monthly in the Libraries of both Houses. DFID also published a detailed report in March this year on the "Implementation of the Commission for Africa recommendations and G8 Gleneagles' commitment on poverty". Both the Plan and the report can be accessed from DFID's website (www.dfid.gov.uk).

At an international level, there will be a statement at the G8 St Petersburg summit on 15-17 July 2006 on progress made in delivery of the Gleneagles' commitments on Africa.

At Gleneagles, the G8 agreed that the existing Africa Partnership Forum (APF) should be strengthened to monitor commitments made by Africa, the G8 and other development partners. An APF support unit is being established and is due to publish its first progress report in October 2006.

Biodiversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to him comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74399]

Mr. Thomas: Under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006, all public bodies have a duty to have regard to the conservation of biodiversity in the exercising of their functions. There is no statutory obligation on Departments to monitor the extent to which public bodies comply with this duty. However, we understand that DEFRA is working with a wide range of partners to develop guidance for public bodies to support the implementation of this duty and will involve all relevant Departments in the development of guidance.

DFID has no public bodies which report to it which are likely to be affected by the Act.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73941]

Mr. Thomas: Under Section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, Ministers and Government Departments have a duty to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity. This has been replaced by a similar provision under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act which comes into effect on the 1 October 2006. There is no statutory duty to monitor compliance with this duty. However, DFID is committed to the biodiversity targets set out in the Framework for Sustainable Development and has taken a number of measures to benefit biodiversity (this target only applies to our East Kilbride office). These include:

An audit of the site by the Scottish Wildlife Trust (SWT)

Biodiversity Delivery and Action plans (available on our external website).

The action plan is based on recommendations by the SWT in their audit report.

Environmental clauses form part of the facilities management contract which includes grounds maintenance.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74354]

Mr. Thomas: There are seven staff in DFID's Press Office. Information on staff ethnic origin is voluntary. We do hold information on the ethnicity of staff in the Private Office. However, there are fewer than five ethnic minority staff in the Press Office and where the figures are less than five, it is normal practice not to divulge the number of staff in a particular category on grounds of confidentiality.

Colombia

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support his Department provides for civil society and non-governmental organisations in Colombia; and if he will make a statement. [73491]

Mr. Thomas: Through the Civil Society Challenge Fund (CSCF), DFID is supporting four international NGOs who are working with civil society and NGO partners in Colombia:

i. War on Want (£214,000 over three years) is working with the Central Union of Workers in Cali in the promotion of workers and human rights in the Southwest of Colombia. The aim is to increase trade union and social organisations' capacity to defend the human rights of their constituency and to improve the Colombian Government's willingness to implement signed human rights conventions.

ii. Concern International (£322,000 over three years) with its partner the Social Pastoral of the Archdiocese of Ibague are helping marginalised groups in the district of Tolima to demand and secure their constitutional rights, including access to clean water, adequate sanitation, health care and to education.

iii. Y Care International (£46,000 over three years) with Colombian Christian Youth Associations and Youth movements are working to equip 1,200 marginalised and disadvantaged young people in Colombia with the skills, confidence and knowledge to effectively participate in local, municipal and national policy-making; implement local development and advocacy initiatives that address the needs of the most vulnerable children, young people and victims of conflict; and promote cultural heritage through participation in dance, music, drama and arts performance groups.

iv. Opportunity International UK (£343,000 over three years) is working in the district of Narino, on the border with Ecuador, to support Internally Displaced Peoples own efforts towards achieving reintegration and self-sufficiency through income and employment generation, combining the efficient delivery of financial services with social interventions such as leadership development. This initiative will serve approximately 2,100 poor micro entrepreneurs in the district of Narino.

DFID is also providing an additional £7 million a year under Partnership Programme Agreements with six international NGOs for their work in Latin America and the Caribbean. These include CAFOD, Christian Aid, Oxfam and WWF, whose work in Colombia with local partners will benefit from these additional funds.

Country Engagement Plans

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department plans to publish its country engagement plans locally. [74835]

Mr. Thomas: Country and Regional Assistance Plans are public documents. Printed copies are actively distributed to stakeholders, both in the UK and in-country, and they are available to all on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov.uk

Plans are translated into local language for specific in-country distribution when appropriate. Recent examples of such plans include:

Country/region	Language(s)
Southern Africa	French and Portuguese
Rwanda	French and Kinya-rwandan
Central Asia and South Caucasus	Russian
Iraq	Arabic
China	Mandarin

Summary and 'Plain English' versions have also been produced. These include a summary version of the Regional Plan for Latin America and a version of the Assistance Plan for Palestinians, which was awarded a Crystal Mark for Plain English. DFID Nepal produced a standard plan for key decision-makers along with one in cartoon strip format for audiences not comfortable with the written word. Whilst in Nigeria, DFID used a weblog as part of its consultation process and promoted the final Country Assistance Plan through the media in-country.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress has been made in reducing the numbers of Congolese living in poverty. [74833]

Hilary Benn: Assessing progress against the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) is very difficult owing to the lack to reliable data. The most recent social sector statistics data comes from a survey undertaken in 2001, which covered the third of the country under Government control at the time. DFID is supporting the Ministry of Plan's Demographic and Health Survey in 2006 to start addressing this lack of accurate data. The United Nation's Development Programme's human development report for 2005, based on the 2001 survey, reports most recent statistics on the MDGs in the DRC as follows:

	Years	Percentage	Live Births
Life expectancy	43	—	—
Children under 5 underweight for age	—	31	—
1 year olds immunised against measles	—	54	—
Births attended by skilled health personnel	—	61	—
Population undernourished	—	71	—
Percentage of population with access to improved water source	—	46	—
Percentage of population with access to improved sanitation	—	29	—
Infant mortality rate	—	—	129/1,000

	Years	Percentage	Live Births
Under 5 mortality rate	—	—	205/1,000
Maternal mortality rate	—	—	990/100,000
HIV infection rate	—	5.4	—
Net primary enrolment	—	54	—

[1] 29 per cent. in rural areas.

The situation has worsened for much of the population since 1990—as a result of civil war, large scale population displacement and the weakness of the state. It has been estimated that an additional 3.5 million people have died as a result of the war, either as direct victims of the conflict or from associated increased levels of disease and malnutrition.

DFID's engagement in the DRC has increased rapidly over recent years in recognition of the enormous humanitarian and development needs in the country. Having spent £5.6 million in 2001-02, we have £62 million available this financial year. Our current transition programme follows the following themes:

1. Security and the Rule of Law

Support for the disarmament, demobilisation and re-integration of ex-combatants through the Multi-Country Demobilisation and Re-integration Programme (MDRP), support to army integration, reform of the police and justice sector, and local level peacebuilding and dialogue initiatives through non-governmental organisations (NGOs).

2. Functioning State

This includes support for the transition institutions (such as the Parliament, Electoral Commission and High Media Authority), the establishment of a professional and impartial media sector, and preparation for elections. The UK is the largest bilateral donor to the electoral process in the DRC.

3. Reconstruction

Support for infrastructure within the Government's reconstruction plan, especially transport links; the development of a poverty reduction strategy paper (PRSP); support to the social sectors (health, education and water) largely through NGOs; and the fight against HIV/AIDS through the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and NGOs.

4. Natural Resources and Enhanced Revenue Generation

We have funded research by Global Witness into the current state of natural resources management in the DRC. We are supporting the implementation of the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) in the DRC and developing our plans for further support for effective and transparent natural resource extraction and the re-establishment of border control systems.

5. Humanitarian

Around half of our programme is spent on humanitarian interventions either through UN agencies or NGOs, to address the complex and chronic humanitarian emergency that has faced the people of the DRC since the war. Our funding is principally channelled to the UN's Action Plan for the DRC through its pooled donor funding mechanism.

Departmental Expenditure

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from his Department in each of the last five years. [71770]

Mr. Thomas: Tables below detail the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from the Department for International Development (DFID) in each of the last five years. The figures do not include grants to NGO's.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75097]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not yet have individual staff performance ratings for 2005, as a new process and reporting year has recently been implemented. DFID figures for the three years prior to 2005 were as follows:

	Unsatisfactory performance	Percentage of total staff
2004	8	0.3

Ethiopia/Eritrea

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his assessment is of the effectiveness of financial support given by his Department to Ethiopia. [75328]

Hilary Benn: The financial support given by the UK to Ethiopia is being used effectively to reduce poverty. Since 2000 we have seen real signs of progress towards the Millennium Development Goals.

There has been a significant improvement in access to education. The primary school enrolment rate has risen from 37 per cent. to 74 per cent. of school age children and the adult literacy rate has increased from 26 per cent. of the population aged 15 and above, to 38 per cent. between 2000 and 2004.

Health indicators are also improving. The percentage of children under five who are underweight fell from 47 per cent. to 38 per cent. between 2000 and 2005. The infant mortality rate fell from 95 to 77 per 1,000 live births and the under five mortality rate fell from 141 to 123 per 1,000 over the same period. Childhood immunisation rates have also improved. For example, between 1996 and 2004 the proportion of children immunised against measles increased from 39 per cent. to 59 per cent. The proportion of the population with access to safe water increased from 19 per cent. in 2000 to 36 per cent. in 2004.

The Productive Safety Nets Programme delivered cash and/or food to approximately 4.9 million targeted beneficiaries last year, and represents a major step in improving the livelihoods of the poorest people.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department takes into account the amount spent by the Ethiopian Government on arms when deciding levels of aid given to Ethiopia. [75347]

Hilary Benn: Decisions on DFID's aid allocations to Ethiopia take account of the level of poverty in the country, the likely effectiveness of aid in reducing poverty, and the amount of aid which Ethiopia receives from other donors.

The Ethiopian Government have reduced the proportion of their budget spent on defence from 10.4 per cent. in 1999-2000 to 2.9 per cent. in 2005-06. The Government have maintained their defence budget in constant cash terms in spite of rising aid flows.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what UK bilateral aid to (a) Ethiopia and (b) Eritrea has been in each of the last three years; and what the planned figure is for the next three years. [74601]

Hilary Benn: UK bilateral aid to Ethiopia, excluding debt relief, was £43,308,019 in 2003-04. In 2004-05 it was £62,363,567. Final figures for 2005-06 are not yet available but are expected to be of the same order as the 2004-05 figure. In addition, DFID funding via the EC is estimated at £10.3 million and £11.3 million for 2003 and 2004 respectively, the latest years for which there are published figures. The planned figure for 2006-07 is £90 million and for 2007-08 is £130 million. I have just announced a new £94 million Protection of Basic Services grant over the next two years for financing local services such as village clinics, primary schools and water points. The World Bank is also contributing $215 million (£118 million).

UK bilateral aid to Eritrea, excluding debt relief, was £2,368,613 in 2003-04. In 2004-05 it was £1,310,157. Final figures for 2005-06 are not yet available but are expected to be about double the 2004-05 figure. In addition, DFID funding via the EC is estimated at £1.7 million and £1.1 million for 2003 and 2004 respectively, the latest years for which there are published figures. The planned figure for 2006-07 is £3.8 million and for 2007-08 it is £4.8 million.

Budget figures beyond financial year 2007-08 are not yet available.

HIV/AIDS

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department is committing to the G8 summit goals relating to the provision of treatment for HIV/AIDS. [75675]

Mr. Thomas: The UK has committed itself to spending £1.5 billion between 2005-06 and 2007-08 to support activities to tackle the spread of HIV and AIDS. This will be used for activities which support the expansion of comprehensive HIV prevention programmes, treatment, care and support with the aim of fulfilling the Gleneagles commitment to universal access by 2010. We are working with the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), which is leading the global effort of other donors, multilateral agencies, civil society and the private sector to ensure that additional resources are committed to support our efforts to achieve universal access.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to ensure the promotion of preventative strategies for HIV/AIDS. [75680]

Mr. Thomas: The UK is playing a substantial leadership role in AIDS, and a key part of this is promoting access to HIV prevention strategies as well as to AIDS treatment and care. For example, the UK used its European Union (EU) presidency to work with the European Commission and with member states to agree a common EU position on HIV prevention—the EU statement on HIV prevention for an AIDS-free generation. The EU statement advises on the importance of comprehensive, rights and evidence-based approaches to HIV prevention. This year the UK has worked hard to ensure that this advice is reflected in the outcome of the AIDS United Nations General Assembly high-level meeting and we continue to press for such recognition in other key fora, including the forthcoming G8 meetings.

DFID provides support so that national governments in poor countries can develop and implement the policies and strategies that are necessary to ensure that the people who need them have access to comprehensive HIV prevention programmes, information, services and supplies including those for the promotion of sexual and reproductive health.

The UK has committed £1.5 billion to AIDS work over the period 2005-2008.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what conditions are attached to the funding his Department gives to African countries for the treatment of HIV/AIDS to ensure that the funding is directed towards the appropriate agencies and treatments. [75681]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's policy on 'Partnerships for Poverty Reduction: Rethinking Conditionally' (launched in March 2005) is that we will not make aid conditional on specific policy decisions. However, we believe that an effective aid partnership should be based on a shared commitment to three objectives: reducing poverty and achieving the millennium development goals; respecting human rights and other international obligations; and strengthening financial management and accountability, to reduce the risk of funds being misused through weak administration or corruption. We will consider reducing or interrupting aid if partner Governments deviate significantly from any of these objectives.

In supporting HIV and AIDS programmes in Africa, DFID uses a range of different funding channels to help ensure that resources are directed towards appropriate agencies and treatments. In countries with sound poverty reduction plans and public financial management, we can put poverty reduction budget support directly into a Government's treasury. We can also earmark funding for specific Government sector budgets. And we also fund projects, especially when it is not possible to work through Government budgets. In all cases, DFID officials work closely with Governments and civil society to help ensure that policy and programme choices are appropriate. We also monitor the progress and impact of programmes that we fund and take lessons into account when making future decisions.

In addition, DFID is currently undertaking an assessment of mechanisms for channelling DFID funding to the point of care for orphans and children made vulnerable by HIV (OVCs).

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to encourage the development of new generic versions of drugs for the treatment of HIV/AIDS. [75682]

Mr. Thomas: The United Kingdom (UK) is committed to increasing access to medicines in developing countries, including the development of new generic drugs for HIV/AIDS. To this end we are working with Governments, international organisations, pharmaceutical companies, academia and private foundations. There have been some important successes over the last few years such as the doubling of UK funding to the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and malaria to £100 million in 2006-07 and £100 million in 2007-08, resulting in long-term policy and financial signals to ensure a sustainable supply of key drugs. In addition, the UK has increased its direct funding for research to develop vaccines and medicines for diseases disproportionately affecting the poor, in particular through the financing of Product Development Partnerships (PDPs).

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's strategy is for ensuring that the Gleneagles G8 summit goals in relation to rapid expansion of treatment for HIV/AIDS are achieved; and if he will make a statement. [75684]

Mr. Thomas: The UK's strategy for tackling the HIV and AIDS epidemic in the developing world is set out in the Government's strategy 'Taking Action'. We have also worked closely with the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS), with other Governments and multilateral agencies and through the Global Steering Committee on Scaling Up Towards Universal Access (which DFID co-chaired with UNAIDS) to set out the priorities for action in order to achieve the Gleneagles commitment to achieve universal access to prevention, treatment and care by 2010. These priorities were reflected in the Political Declaration agreed at the United Nations General Assembly on AIDS (2 June 2006), which provides a political blueprint for achieving universal access.

The UK played an active role in negotiations. It set out commitments for countries to develop, by the end of 2006, ambitious national plans to scale up towards universal access by 2010 to comprehensive HIV prevention programmes, treatment, care and support, with interim targets for 2008; to provide $20-23 billion annually by 2010 for AIDS responses; to put in place comprehensive prevention strategies; to promote the rights and reduce the vulnerability of sex workers, men who have sex with men, children, women, adolescent girls and drug users; to intensify efforts to develop new technology especially microbicides and vaccines; to ensure that no credible, sustainable national plan goes unfunded; to reaffirm the importance of countries employing the flexibilities within Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights Agreement (TRIPS) to protect public health; and to strengthen countries' capacities to do so.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures his Department is taking to encourage the pharmaceutical industry to develop paediatric drugs for children with HIV in the developing world. [75686]

Mr. Thomas: The United Kingdom (UK) is committed to increasing access to medicines in developing countries, including the development of paediatric drugs for children with HIV. To this end, DFID is working with Governments, international organisations, pharmaceutical companies, academia and private foundations. For example, the launch of the UK Government policy document 'Increasing peoples access to medicines in developing countries: a framework for good practice in pharmaceutical industry' in March 2005, encourages pharmaceutical companies to reduce prices of existing formulations, develop new products, provide voluntary licences to others to develop paediatric formulations and produce fixed dose combinations.

More recently, the UK has agreed to support the French initiative on setting up an international drugs purchase facility (IDPF). We expect this to have a positive impact on stimulating the pharmaceutical industry to develop paediatric drugs.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the likelihood of the Gleneagles G8 summit target of ensuring universal access to HIV treatment being achieved by 2010. [75687]

Mr. Thomas: The United Nations General Assembly met from 31 May to 2 June to discuss progress on the 2001 Declaration of Commitment on AIDS, which sets out the international community's commitment to halt and reverse the spread of HIV and AIDS. The UN Secretary-General presented to this meeting an assessment of progress which underlines the challenge that we face in meeting the Gleneagles commitment to provide universal access to prevention, treatment and care by 2010. The Secretary- General's report shows that only 9 per cent. of HIV-infected pregnant women are currently on anti-retrovirals, and that only 20 per cent. of people with advanced HIV are on anti-retrovirals. While this shows the scale of outstanding need, it is noteworthy that since 2001 the number of Africans on treatment has risen eight-fold. A full copy of the report can be found on the Joint United Nations Programme for HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) website at: http://daccessods.un.org/access.nsf/Get?Open&DS=A/60/736&Lang=E.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether his Department is supporting campaigns and projects to educate communities about human trafficking in (a) Moldova, (b) Albania and (c) China. [74997]

Mr. Thomas: In China, DFID is providing £3.075 million in support of an International Labour Organisation (ILO) project which helps to reduce the vulnerability of girls and young women to trafficking. The project covers activities in Anhui, Henan and Hunan provinces, from which girls and young women are trafficked, and in Guangdong and Jiangsu provinces which receive them. The project is being implemented over four years. It started in May 2004.

DFID is not supporting such campaigns or projects in Albania. Until 2000, DFID contributed to the funding of a centre in Vlora for trafficked women and girls returned to Albania. The centre aims to educate young women about the risk of becoming victims of trafficking. In 2003, DFID contributed to the purchase of equipment for a centre in Tirana, managed by the Institute of Migration (IoM), that seeks to give employment to returned female victims of trafficking.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) is providing 238,000 through the IoM, to foster safe migration and prevent human trafficking. The project aims to build the capacity of the state infrastructure in Albania to provide information to potential migrants, vulnerable groups at risk of human trafficking, the media, government officials, non-government organisations (NGOs) and the general public. The project includes a national telephone hotline to provide information on legal migration, and enable members of the public to report people-trafficking to the authorities.

In 2005, the FCO provided £500,000 for work by the IoM with returned Albanian migrants, many of whom have been trafficked. By assisting their re-integration, the project aims to reduce the risk of repeat trafficking.

In Moldova, the IoM manages an extensive, nationwide programme on trafficking which has included a feature film, TV, radio and public service announcements, established Migration Information Centres, organised seminars for local authorities, and produced hotline promotional stickers and other information material distributed at Moldovan border crossings. In partnership with the Moldovan Migration Department, IoM launched in 2004 a website and mobile information centre that distributed information on legal migration and the dangers of trafficking. Other information and education activities on trafficking in Moldova are provided by the NGO La Strada, including seminars, educational materials, a resource centre and a hot line. La Strada has received support from the FCO.

DFID's bilateral programmes, and support to multilateral agencies, aim to reduce poverty and some of the root causes leading to human trafficking. This includes creating economic opportunities, promoting pro-poor sustainable growth, conflict resolution and improving governance and the institutional environment for poverty reduction.

Palestinian Territories

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of whether British aid is reaching humanitarian projects in the Palestinian Territories to ensure the (a) electricity, (b) water, (c) food, (d) health and (e) educational needs of the Palestinian people are met. [75581]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government are concerned to support the basic needs of the Palestinian people. Until the Hamas-led Government renounce violence, recognise Israel's right to exist and accept previous agreements and obligations we cannot provide aid to the Palestinian Cabinet or its ministries. However, there are other ways to help Palestinians directly and we are doing all that we can to assist.

Since the Hamas Government came to power, the largest component of our assistance has been a £15 million contribution through the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA). UNRWA provides health, education, housing, food and jobs to approximately 40 per cent. of Palestinians who are registered refugees. This aid is getting through to people who need it most.

In addition, DFID is working closely with the European Commission and others to develop a temporary international mechanism to provide direct assistance to the Palestinian people. This will include those who are not registered as refugees and therefore do not receive help through UNRWA. Our hope is that such a mechanism will be established as soon as possible.

Public Transport (Incentives)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75096]

Mr. Thomas: DFID provides interest-free loans to staff for the purchase of travel season tickets. This is the only direct incentive we provide to staff, although we also publicise public transport alternatives, engage with local authorities on the provision of public transport around our East Kilbride office, and monitor and report on trends in our Green Transport Plans.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the World Food Programme support to Sudan; how much of that aid is funded; and which regions of the country (a) are and (b) will be receiving World Food Programme supplies. [76023]

Hilary Benn: The World Food Programme (WFP) emergency operation in Sudan, which I discussed with Jim Morris of the WFP on 8 June, is the largest in the world. The UK has provided £49 million to the Common Humanitarian Fund (CHF) this year, of which the WFP has been the largest recipient. We are also supporting the WFP in the development of its five-year strategic plan for Sudan, and have provided the WFP with £5 million for road projects in the south.

Only 49.5 per cent. of the WFP's 2006 budget has been funded to date. As a result, the WFP was forced earlier in the year to halve food rations to Darfur temporarily, though ration levels elsewhere have been maintained. Recent additional support from two key food aid donors (the EU and the US), and a contribution of 20,000 tonnes of Sorghum from the Government of Sudan, have since enabled the WFP to increase the ration level in Darfur to 84 per cent. Reinstatement of full ration may be possible by October, though this is still not certain.

This year, the WFP is providing over 730,000 MT of food aid to approximately 6.1 million people across Sudan. Of those, 2.7 million are in Darfur, 2 million are in the south, 1 million in the three states of South Kordofan, Abyei and Blue Nile, around 250,000 in eastern Sudan, and smaller numbers in other parts of the country.

Traditional Knowledge

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the Government's policy is on the (a) maintenance and (b) extraction of value from the exploitation of traditional knowledge for indigenous communities in developing countries. [74559]

Mr. Thomas: In its 2003 response to the report from the Commission on Intellectual Property Rights the UK Government broadly endorsed the analysis provided by the Commission on traditional knowledge (TK). In particular, the UK Government recognised the important part that traditional knowledge plays in the livelihood of many poor communities in developing countries, and thus the need to protect it.

As a signatory of the UN Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD) the UK has agreed to "respect, preserve and maintain knowledge, innovations and practices of indigenous and local communities ... and encourage the equitable sharing of the benefits arising from the utilisation of such knowledge, innovations and practice".

Discussions as to how best these objectives can be achieved are ongoing in the CBD and in the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO) Inter-Governmental-Committee on Traditional Knowledge, Folklore and Genetic Resources (IGC) and the UK is committed to achieving agreement on an international system which achieves these objectives.

The UK Patent Office is working with other members of the World Intellectual Property Organisation (WIPO) on the development of appropriate TK databases which patent examiners can consult when dealing with patent applications involving TK. This will reduce the risk of patents being granted wrongly on existing TK.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Engagements

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will list her engagements for 25 May 2006. [75827]

Hilary Armstrong: I had various engagements on 25 May 2006 including Cabinet meetings with ministerial colleagues and meetings with officials and external stakeholders.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the Parliamentary Ombudsman have been (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by her Department since 1997. [76261]

Hilary Armstrong: Since 1997 the Cabinet Office has declined to give full effect on three occasions to recommendations made by the Parliamentary Ombudsman in relation to the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

The ombudsman's report on these three cases is available in the Library and can also be accessed online at:

www.ombudsman.org.uk/improving-services/selected-cases/AOI/index.html

Public Transport (Incentives)

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what incentives are available to encourage members of her staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75110]

Mr. McFadden: The vast majority of Cabinet Office employees are located in central London and travel to and from work by public transport.

Permanent staff (including staff on loan to the Cabinet Office) may apply for an advance to purchase a train or bus season ticket and/or a bicycle for travel to and from work. This advance is an interest-free loan and payment is recovered from the individual's salary in up to 12 monthly deductions.

The Cabinet Office will be encouraging more sustainable travel (business and travel to and from work) among its employees depending on the nature and circumstances of particular sites, but it will not include financial incentives for participation. For example, the Cabinet Office's Environmental Policy is currently being revised and the travel policy section is being strengthened to this effect. It will also encourage employees to car share where public transport is not reasonably accessible travelling to and from work.

Further initiatives will be considered as part of any Government-wide publicity campaigns on travelling more sustainably and the Cabinet Office's membership of the Civil Service Travel Group (CSTG). The CSTG aims to improve travel sustainability across the entire civil service by developing and delivering on action plans for each Department.

TRANSPORT

A13 Junction, Sadlers Farm, Essex

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to approve the upgrade to the A13 junction at Sadlers Farm, Essex; and if he will make a statement. [76131]

Dr. Ladyman: We are carefully considering Essex county council's major scheme business case for the Thames Gateway A13/A130 Sadlers Farm Junction scheme alongside the advice received from the eastern region on the priority it attaches to this and other schemes in the region within the indicative funding allocation for major transport schemes announced last July. We hope to respond to Essex on its business case and to make an announcement before the summer recess.

Airbus 380

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1945W, on Airbus 380, whether public expenditure was incurred for seats on the Heathrow Express for ministerial and civil servants going to the event. [76819]

Gillian Merron: The Department incurred costs of £27 for return seats on the Heathrow Express for civil servants going to the event.

BAE 146 Aircraft

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether beryllium is used (a) in the manufacture and (b) as parts in the Honeywell ALF-(i) 502 and (ii) 507 engine used on the British Aerospace BAE 146 aircraft. [75743]

Gillian Merron: Both these engines are manufactured in the United States and are US type-certificated products. The US Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and the engine manufacturer, Honeywell, have confirmed to the Civil Aviation Authority that there was no beryllium used within the parts that are of original Honeywell design. The FAA and Honeywell also advised that the only of beryllium likely to be in the type certified engine would be trace quantities possibly in aluminium castings or in some components designed and manufactured by sub-contractors.

CAA Funding

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria were used in determining Government policy on the funding of the Civil Aviation Authority; and if he will make a statement. [75742]

Gillian Merron: It has been the policy of successive Governments that the aviation industry should be independently regulated, by the Civil Aviation Authority, and that the costs of regulation should be borne by the industry and not by the taxpayer.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what revenue has been earned by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency from the provision of motorists' details in each of the last three financial years. [75515]

Dr. Ladyman: The following figures provided represent the costs recovered by DVLA for providing vehicle and driver information, based on the marginal cost of providing the data and charged to those requesting the activity.

	Costs recovered for motorists details (£000)
2003-04	4,854
2005-06 (Provisional outturn)	6,364

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost has been of the Driver Vehicle and Licensing Agency Diversity Unit since its establishment; and if he will make a statement. [76315]

Dr. Ladyman: The following figures are the total expenditure incurred by DVLA's Diversity Unit since its start in August 2004.

2005-06 (Provisional outturn)	276,000

The agency's Diversity Unit is responsible for setting, agreeing and implementing the agency's diversity policies and the action plans to ensure compliance with the public sector duties in diversity legislation such as the Race Relations (Amendment) and Disability Discrimination Acts. It focuses attention within the agency on ensuring that all staff and customers can access and use agency facilities and services, and meet its business aims for road safety. The Diversity Unit was formed in August 2004 from the basis of the agency's equal opportunities team, which had been in existence for more than 10 years.

First Great Western Trains (Timetabling)

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the implications of First Great Western Train's timetabling proposals for December 2006 for commuters travelling from Bridgend to Port Talbot, Neath and Swansea. [75607]

Derek Twigg: First Great Western's proposed timetable for December 2006 will provide an extra service from Bridgend to Swansea at around 8.15 am, arriving before 9.00 am. In the return direction in the evening, the timetable shows an hourly pattern of FGW services up to 8.30 pm (there being currently no train at 7.30 pm).

Government Vehicles

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average level of emissions in grams of carbon per kilometre was of the Government's car fleet in the last period for which figures are available. [76277]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA) provides transport for Ministers and senior officials in line with the Prime Minister's guidance Travel by Ministers.

In 2004-05, the last period for which figures are available, the average carbon dioxide emission from the GCDA's car fleet was 232.03 grams per kilometre. Figures for 2005-06 will become available later in the summer.

Highways Agency

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints by the general public concerning the Highways Agency have been received in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [75918]

Dr. Ladyman: Figures for written complaints by the general public to the Highways Agency are only available from 2000 following the installation of a new computerised correspondence recording system late in 1999. Figures for oral complaints to the Highways Agency's information line are only available from 2001 due to changes in recording systems.

The figures are:

	Written complaints	Oral complaints
2006 (January to May)	443	2,428
2005	1,406	3,527
2004	1,358	2,478
2003	1,500	3,128
2002	1,843	3,458
2001	2,622	3,037
2000	3,727	n/a

Jet Engine Oils

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what animal studies have been carried out on whether exposure to pyrolised synthetic jet engine oils (a) dermally and (b) via inhalation produces (i) chronic neurotoxicity and (ii) brain cell death; [75739]

(2) what studies from overseas he has examined on the effects of contaminated air problems on the British Aerospace BAE 146 aircraft; [75740]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effect of exposure to pyrolised synthetic jet engine oils (a) dermally and (b) via inhalation on commercial aircraft on (i) adults, (ii) children and (iii) pregnant passengers. [75741]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not want anyone travelling by air to be at risk to their health. We have commissioned the independent Committee on Toxicity (COT) to conduct a comprehensive evidence review of any such health risks in cabin air. The COT has received evidence from a wide range of sources, including BALPA. Some of this evidence has come from overseas. The formal COT meeting will be held in public on 11 July. We await the outcome of the COT process, and the Department will be guided by the COT conclusions and recommendations when they are ready.

M4 (Junction 11)

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department expects to make a decision on funding for M4 junction 11 improvements. [76959]

Dr. Ladyman: We are currently considering advice from the south-east region on the priority it attaches to this and other major transport schemes in the south-east within the regional funding allocations announced last July. We hope to announce our response to the region's advice before the summer recess.

Rail Vehicles

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is on altering the system of procurement of new rail vehicles to reduce peaks and troughs in demand. [73609]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The Department for Transport recognises the challenges faced by manufacturers and suppliers in responding to peaks and troughs in demand for new rolling stock and is committed to working with the industry to plan ahead more effectively.

Railways

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) incidents of objects thrown at or dropped on moving railway vehicles, (b) derailments, (c) incidents of livestock wandering on to the track, (d) collisions between moving railway vehicles and (e) suicides of (i) males and (ii) females, broken down by age group, were recorded on the C2C Rail Ltd line between London Fenchurch Street and Southend Central in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [72180]

Derek Twigg: The British Transport Police (BTP) have provided the following information:

(a) The number of crimes recorded by the BTP for stone throwing (no damage) and damage to rolling stock by stone throwing on the railway route between London Fenchurch Street and Southend Central is shown as follows:

Financial year	Number of crimes
2002-03	26
2003-04	51
2004-05	75
2005-06	61

(b) The BTP have recorded no incidents of derailments on this specific route.

(c) The number of incidents recorded by the BTP where livestock have wandered on to tracks is shown in the table as follows:

2002-03	3
2003-04	1
2005-06	2

(d) The BTP have no records of collisions between moving railway vehicles during the last five financial years on this route.

(e) The number of fatalities recorded by the BTP on the route during the financial years between 1 April 2003 and 31 March 2006 is shown as follows:

2003-04
20 to 30	2	0
80 to 90	1	0
2004-05
20 to 30	1	0
2005-06
20 to 30	0	1

Data prior to April 2003 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Roads

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect of road schemes approved through the targeted programme of improvements and local transport plans on reduction of carbon dioxide emissions. [75930]

Dr. Ladyman: The carbon dioxide impacts of road schemes approved through the targeted programme of improvements and local transport plans form part of the Department's normal approval processes for major transport schemes. The impact of road schemes in the Highways Agency targeted programme of improvements, consistent with the Future of Transport White Paper, is estimated to be around an additional 0.1 million tonnes of carbon (MtC), a tenth of the carbon savings expected in 2010 from the Renewable Transport Fuel Obligation. The overall implications for carbon dioxide emissions of local transport plans have not been modelled, but LTPs are subject to individual Strategic Environmental Assessments which carefully consider these impacts.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Best Value Surveys

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent representations her Department has received on the carrying out of Best Value surveys. [75907]

Mr. Woolas: The Department conducted a consultation exercise on the 2006-07 Best Value User Satisfaction surveys between 14 December 2005 and 6 February 2006. 199 responses from 241 organisations were received (some organisations chose to respond in consortia). A feedback document analysing responses to the consultation paper will be published shortly. In addition, we have subsequently received correspondence on this subject from three local authorities and two MPs.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the different types of methodology available to carry out Best Value surveys. [75908]

Mr. Woolas: The Department has commissioned three pieces of research concerning the methodology applied in the Best Value Performance Indicator (BVPI) user satisfaction surveys.

The first, published in 2002, was conducted by the Office for National Statistics and reviewed local authorities' experience of the 2000-01 surveys, including the different methodologies applied.

The second, carried out by Ipsos MORI, which reported in March 2003, concerned the development of questions for the Best Value general and benefits surveys, piloting those surveys, and advising on guidance for the surveys.

The third was conducted by BMG and concerned the development of new sections of questions for the 2006-07 BVPI surveys (we anticipate the publication of this work in the autumn of 2006). The new questions formed part of the recent consultation of local authorities on the BVPI surveys.

In addition to this work, following the 2003-04 surveys, 'in-house' analysis concerning the impact of methodology on response rate, using data supplied by local authorities, has been conducted. These analyses also considered factors such as deprivation and ethnicity. This work found no evidence of a significant difference in response rate between postal and face-to-face methods even after allowing for context and respondent group.

Black/Asian Staff

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in her Department's press office. [74366]

Angela E. Smith: Twenty people are employed as press officers in the Department's Directorate of Communications. All information on ethnicity is provided voluntarily by individuals and is confidential. Only four members of the press office have provided information on ethnicity and therefore details cannot be provided in order to preserve confidentiality.

Chief Rents

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the number of freehold properties in Greater Manchester subject to chief rents; and if she will make a statement. [73137]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many applications have been made to the Government Office for the North West for the redemption of chief rents on freehold domestic properties for each of the past five years; and how many such applications were successful. [73138]

Yvette Cooper: In the period 1 January 2000 to 31 December 2005 the unit received a total of 2,575 applications for redemption. Of these, 29 are still under consideration; 738 were redeemed and 1,808 were not redeemed.

Applicants may withdraw their application at any time in which case the rentcharge is not redeemed. Of the 1,808 applications which were not redeemed, 525 were considered to be Estate Rentcharges which are incapable of redemption under the terms of the Rentcharges Act 1977.

In conjunction with the Department, the Rentcharge Unit reviewed and revised its own guidelines for determining estate rentcharges in October 2005 resulting in more applications being redeemed.

Correspondence

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Windsor of 7 February 2006 about D. Ashworth. [76314]

Angela E. Smith: A reply was sent to the hon. Member on 8 June 2006.

Council House Sales

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, pursuant to the answer of 17 March 2006, Official Report, column 2583W, on council house sales, what measures her Department takes to ensure local authorities use the 25 per cent. of retained capital receipts from the sale of council housing under the right-to-buy scheme on capital rather than revenue programmes. [73459]

Yvette Cooper: The only ways in which local authorities may use their capital receipts are set out in regulation 23 of the Local Authorities (Capital Finance and Accounting) (England) Regulations 2003 (S.I. 2003/3146, as amended). Receipts retained from sales of council housing may be used for capital expenditure but not normally for revenue expenditure.

Council Minutes

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what limitations are placed on the publication in (a) local newspapers and (b) other media of council minutes relating to meetings held in public. [75461]

Mr. Woolas: The minutes of council meetings relating to all non-confidential matters may be released for publication. Statute sets out the categories of matters that a local authority may decide to treat as confidential.

Departmental Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will estimate the pension liability of her Department over the next 30 years. [75239]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is available in the technical Note issued by HM Treasury which was placed in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006 following an oral statement in Parliament by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury, Columns 388-390. Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual Departments; they are estimated for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in Table 1 of the technical Note.

Deprivation Indicators (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authority wards in the Peterborough city council area are in the top 30 per cent. of wards in England by multiple deprivation indicators; and if she will make a statement. [76624]

Mr. Woolas: The Indices of Deprivation 2004 (ID 2004) were constructed at Super Output Area (SOA) level rather than ward level to overcome problems associated with frequently changing ward boundaries and lack of consistency in population size. SOAs are a better measure as they are consistent in size and overtime, and they allow better identification of small pockets of deprivation. There are 32,482 SOAs in England, each with an average population of 1,500 people.

The ID 2004 ranks areas according to their level of deprivation, relative to other areas in the country. Peterborough City has 42 per cent. of its 104 SOAs among the 30 per cent. most deprived SOAs in England. The following table lists these SOAS and identifies the wards in which they are located. There are three wards (Central, East and North) in which all the SOAs fall within the 30 per cent. most deprived in the country.

Energy Performance of Buildings Directive

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will publish her Department's latest response to the European Commission setting out a timetable for implementation of the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive. [74436]

Yvette Cooper: The European Commission has been notified that implementation of the technical requirements of the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive is through an amendment of the Building Regulations. These measures came into effect on 6 April 2006. A copy of the Statutory Instrument and Transposition Note that sets out how these regulations implement the directive has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament.

There is a three-year derogation period, to apply fully the requirements in the directive for energy certificates and plant inspections. I expect to make a further announcement and to notify the European Commission soon about implementation of these procedural requirements.

Government Office for London

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the expenditure on (a) staffing and (b) office and other overheads of the Government Office for London was in each of the last 10 years. [76252]

	Pay costs	Non-pay/ accommodation costs	Total
1998-99	10.3	5. 7	16.0

[1] Budget

Hedges (North Somerset)

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many orders have been made to remove hedges in North Somerset under the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003. [73982]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Under the Anti-social Behaviour Act, local authorities may require remedial works to hedges but not their removal.

Home Information Packs

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the likely impact of home information packs on the housing market; and if she will make a statement. [72425]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have worked with Her Majesty's Treasury, the Cabinet Office, the Department for Food and Rural Affairs and the Department for Trade and Industry on different aspects of the Home Information Packs (HIPs). The purpose of HIPs is to increase the efficiency of the housing market.

Hotel Tax

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent representations she has received from the tourist industry in (a) Southend-on-Sea, (b) Essex and (c) England about a possible tax on hotel rooms; and if she will make a statement. [75654]

Mr. Woolas: I have received 16 representations from, or on behalf of, the tourist industry about the possibility of a tourist tax in England. Of these, one originated in Essex, but none from Southend-on-Sea.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if her Department will undertake a review, drawing on international research and experience, of the effect of a hotel, tourist or bed tax; and if she will make a statement. [75655]

Mr. Woolas: My Department does not have any plans to undertake such a review. Sir Michael Lyons is carrying out an independent inquiry to make recommendations for the reform of council tax, and to analyse the options for shifting the balance of funding, including the potential for other possible local taxes and charges. He will submit his final report and recommendations at the end of 2006. The Government will not take any decisions on changes to local government finance until they have had the chance to consider and reflect on Sir Michael's report.

Housing

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to increase the supply of affordable housing in West Suffolk. [72634]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have allocated a significant increase in funding for the East of England for 2006-08, much of which will be invested in new affordable housing. In West Suffolk, the Regional Housing Board for the East of England has allocated just over £5.5 million over 2006-08, which is expected to deliver 214 new affordable units, via the Housing Corporation's National Affordable Housing Programme.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will consider introducing a performance-related incentive scheme for the provision of affordable housing units by local authorities. [72718]

Yvette Cooper: Local targets for affordable housing provision are set by local authorities, based on their assessment of local housing need. The Government are considering a range of options for increasing the supply of new affordable housing.

Index of Multiple Deprivation

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on the present composition of the Index of Multiple Deprivation. [70305]

Mr. Woolas: The Index of Multiple Deprivation 2004 (IMD 2004) combines a number of indicators, chosen to cover a range of economic, social and housing issues into a single deprivation score for each lower layer super output area (SOA) (there are 32,482 SOAs in England), and are relative measurements between SOAs.

The Index is based on "super output area" level data and is made up of seven domains of deprivation. These are:

Income
Employment deprivation
Health and Disability deprivation
Education, skills and training deprivation Barriers to Housing and Services Crime
Living Environment

Each of these domains is made up of a number of indicators, which best reflect the different dimensions of deprivation. The Index is based on 37 indicators in total. The indicators and domains are weighted and brought together to form the IMD 2004.

Local Government

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has for a public consultation on the future of local government; and if she will make a statement. [72589]

Mr. Woolas: Under the banner of local:vision, a debate with local government and other stakeholders began in July 2004 to determine what the future role and functions of local government should be. This debate continues and feedback from all stakeholders is welcomed. The debate will be drawn together in the form of a White Paper later this year.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what (a) underlying factors were taken into consideration and (b) criteria the Government used to conclude that transitional protections on the Local Government Pension Scheme should expire 10 years after the announcements of policy changes were made. [75324]

Mr. Woolas: The regulatory impact assessment (RIA) to accompany the Local Government Pension Scheme (Amendment) Regulations 2006 (SI 2007/966), was made available in the House on 30 March. It sets out both the underlying factors and the criteria considered in providing the transitional protections in the regulations. A copy of the RIA is available in "What's New" at: www.xoq83.dial.pipex.com

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what consultations her Department is undertaking on local government reorganisation. [71494]

Mr. Woolas: We have been engaged in a wide-ranging debate about local governance, including the future of two-tier arrangements in the shire areas and will finalise our position at about the same time as the publication of the proposed White Paper later in the year.

Public Transport (Incentives)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what incentives are available to encourage members of her staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75108]

Angela E. Smith: The Department offers interest-free loans to enable staff to buy season tickets for use on public transport.

Regional Government

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library copies of the budgets for 2005-06 that the Government Offices for the regions have received from English regional chambers. [70719]

Yvette Cooper: I have arranged for the copies of each regional assembly's 2005-06 business plans to be placed in the Library of the House.

Water Supplies

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department has taken to ensure that sufficient mains water will be available in the Thames Gateway; and whether long distance waterpipes have been considered to ensure the availability of sufficient mains water. [75374]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

Water companies have statutory duties with regard to water supply, and each company has a water resources plan looking ahead for the next 25 years. These plans show how they will reconcile water supply with projected demand.

A good deal of water is already transferred within water companies' areas of operation to give individual companies greater flexibility to meet local shortages. Longer distance links between water companies also exist. The Environment Agency, in consultation with Ofwat, is able to propose to a water company that it enters into a bulk supply agreement with another water company, where it is necessary to secure the proper use of water resources.

The concept of a national water grid was discussed at the Secretary of State's meeting on 1 June with representatives of water companies and the water industry regulators. It was rejected by all those present on the grounds of its disproportionate and unjustifiable cost, both for the environment and for water bills, compared with the benefits such a grid could deliver.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Bowel Cancer

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the detected rate of bowel cancer was in Northern Ireland in (a) 1995 and (b) 2005. [76321]

Paul Goggins: The following table details the number of incidences of bowel cancer (ICD-10 C18 to C21) in selected years. Information for 2005 is not yet available.

Incidence of colorectal cancer in 1993, 1995 and 2003
Incidence	925	983	995
Crude incidence rate[1]	56.6	59.6	58.4
Age standardised incidence rate (to 2003 NI population)[1]
Lower[2]	57.3	59.8	—
Rate	61.2	63.8	58.4
Upper[2]	65.2	67.8	—

[1] Rates are per 100,000 of the population.
[2] The upper and lower intervals provide a range within which the true rate might lie once the age structure of the population in the earlier years has been taken into account.

This information has been provided by the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry and is the most up-to-date currently available.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) temporary and (b) casual staff are employed by the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency; what proportion this figure represents of all staff employed; and if he will make a statement. [76460]

Mr. Hanson: As at 7 June 2006, there are 17 temporary administrative assistants employed by the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency. This represents 0.87 per cent. of the work force.

Four of these staff provide child support services to Northern Ireland, 11 provide child support services to Great Britain and two provide support to their colleagues who work in front line operations.

No other temporary or casual staff are employed by the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency.

Civil Service Uniform

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will review the neutrality of civil service uniform insignia used in Northern Ireland; and if he will seek the advice of the Equality Commission on the matter. [66401]

Mr. Hanson: The design of the uniform worn by security guards and certain other staff has been reviewed as the need has arisen to replace parts of the uniform, and some changes have been made. The aim has been to modernise the uniform and to make it less formal, particularly in response to the improved security situation and the greater access by the public to areas such as the Stormont Estate and Hillsborough Castle. There are plans to look at other aspects of their uniform, including insignia, and in line with normal NICS practice this would involve consultation with the Equality Commission.

Any private sector security staff working in buildings which are part of the Workplace 2010 project will not be required to wear NICS uniforms.

Correspondence

Lady Hermon. To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will answer the letter from the hon. Member for North Down of 24 March on the impact of the restorative justice scheme. [75199]

Mr. Hanson: A response to the hon. Member was issued on 6 June 2006.

Departmental Christmas Cards

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost was to each Government Department in the Province of sending Christmas cards in each of the last five years. [74633]

Mr. Hanson: The costs incurred by the 11 Departments of the NI Administration and the Northern Ireland Office on the purchase and distribution of Christmas cards in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2006 are set out in the following table.

Emission Testing

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) pre-testing and (b) other research has been carried out on the proposed diesel emission test to be introduced in Northern Ireland. [56394]

David Cairns: The Driver Vehicle Testing Agency's equipment was purchased in 2001 as part of a PFI contract for all MOT testing equipment. Prior to finalising this contract, extensive research and trials were conducted to ensure the equipment could meet the needs of the agency and conduct a quality test fully compliant with legislation. This equipment is the same as that currently used in Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland.

Following procurement, further trials of the diesel test equipment took place in Cookstown DVTA test centre, and from this time Larne DVTA centre has offered the diesel emission test to customers on a voluntary basis.

DVTA is heavily committed to research and development, and liaises with many testing organisations worldwide to ensure best practice testing is being maintained in Northern Ireland. These experiences and advice received from other organisations that have been conducting this test for many years served to inform DVTA's research on this matter.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received on the new diesel emissions test to be introduced into Northern Ireland. [56395]

David Cairns: No representations have been received on the new diesel emissions test introduced by the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency (DVTA) on 1 March 2006.

However, DVTA has held meetings with representative bodies from the motor industry, including the Freight Transport Association, the Road Haulage Association and the Retail Motor Industry Federation. These meetings included demonstrations of the testing process and a chance for the industry to ask questions about the test and be given more information.

Healthcare-acquired Infections

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaths from healthcare-acquired infections there were within each health trust in the Province in each month of the last three years. [74667]

Mr. Hanson: It is not possible to give reliable figures on the number of deaths involving hospital-acquired infections from routinely collected mortality data, as information on whether the infection was acquired in hospital or elsewhere may not be available to the doctor certifying the death.

Mileage Allowance

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he intends to bring the mileage allowance paid to members of the Northern Ireland Assembly into line with that paid to hon. Members of this House. [75006]

Mr. Hain: This matter is currently under consideration and I hope to make an announcement shortly. I will write to the hon. Member informing him of the outcome and will arrange for a copy of my letter to be placed in the Library of the House and sent to the Speaker of the Assembly.

Public Servants

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the change in (a) numbers and (b) percentages of those employees classified as (i) Protestants, (ii) Roman Catholics and (iii) non-determined in the (A) Equality Commission for Northern Ireland, (B) Northern Ireland Housing Executive, (C) Child Support Agency in Northern Ireland and (D) general service grades of the Northern Ireland Civil Service between 1999 and 2006. [75948]

Mr. Hanson: Information on the perceived community background of staff in the specified organisations is set out in the following table. The figures are given at 1 January 1999 and 2006 (except for the Equality Commission which only came into being on 1 October 1999) and include permanent staff but exclude those on career breaks.

Royal National Lifeboat Institution

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assistance from public funds was provided for the work of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution in Northern Ireland during 2005. [76326]

Mr. Hanson: No support has been provided by the Government to RNLI in Northern Ireland during 2005.

Sexual Offences (Young Persons)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Public Prosecution Service is taking to develop a protocol with (a) child protection agencies, (b) voluntary treatment providers and (c) the police regarding young people in treatment programmes following the commission of sexual offences; and if he will make a statement. [5526]

Mr. Hanson: The PPS has advised that it has commenced a series of meetings with representatives from PSNI, NSPCC, Barnardos and social services to deal with issues regarding young people in treatment programmes following the commission by them of sexual offences. Additionally, at present, it is open to those responsible for treatment programmes for young people who have committed sexual offences and who are undergoing treatment to provide information through the police to the PPS in relation to the treatment being provided and to the young person being treated, which information may be relevant to the PPS in reaching decisions as to prosecution, or no prosecution, as the case may be.

Sinn Fein Fundraising

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has made representations to the US Administration about the current restrictions on fundraising that have been imposed on Sinn Fein politicians visiting the United States; and if he will make a statement. [76747]

Mr. Hain: The issuing of visas and the imposition of any requirements are matters for the US Administration.

Water Service

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by the Department for Regional Development's Water Service; how many will be employed by the proposed Gov-Co; what measures are planned to facilitate staff transfers within the civil service for water service employees; and what relocation packages are planned for water service employees wishing to relocate to Belfast to work for the proposed Gov-Co. [75587]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Water Service (Mrs. Katharine Bryan) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Katharine Bryan, dated 8 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about the number of people employed by Water Service, how many will be employed by the proposed Gov-Co, what measures are planned to facilitate staff transfers within the Civil Service for Water Service employees, and what relocation packages are planned for Water Service employees wishing to relocate to Belfast to work for the proposed Gov-Co. (75587). I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Water Service.

At 30 April 2006, 920 non-Industrial and 876 industrial whole time equivalent staff were employed by Water Service. Detailed planning for the achievement of efficiencies in 2007 and beyond is proceeding but the level of efficiency required of Northern Ireland Water Ltd has not yet been finalised. It is not therefore possible, at this stage, to give definitive numbers but a further reduction in numbers is planned.

As part of a wider staff migration programme, Water Service is currently working closely with the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) to facilitate the transfer back to the NICS of the optimum number of staff as the business will allow. Since March 2005, Water Service has facilitated a total of 93 transfer requests which have resulted in staff moving back to the wider NICS and there is a commitment to continue the progress made to date.

At this point in time it is not envisaged that a significant number of staff will be required to relocate to Belfast in advance of the creation of GOCO. However, staff who are required to relocate to Belfast, or to any other location across Northern Ireland, will be entitled to the full range of relocation packages, including excess fares allowance or removal expenses, inline with the provisions of the NICS Staff Handbook.

Workplace 2010 Strategy

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what implications he expects the implementation of the Workplace 2010 Strategy to have for messengers and night security staff employed by each Department of the Northern Ireland administration. [75425]

Mr. Hanson: The Government are currently considering the Workplace 2010 contract. Final decisions will not be taken until bid proposals from potential partners have been fully evaluated. A key consideration for Government in reaching conclusions on the services to be provided by any private sector partner will be the safeguarding of terms and conditions of employment in the event of any staff transfers.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Arts Foundation Courses

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many students in England are undertaking an arts foundation course; [74815]

(2) which higher education institutions in England offer a degree course in art and design and do not require a successful completion of an art foundation course as a condition of entry. [74816]

Bill Rammell: The latest available information shows that in English higher education institutions in 2004-05, there were 300 students enrolled on foundation courses which led to a degree course in Creative Arts and Design. Comparable information for further education colleges is not held centrally.

Information on the precise entry requirements for specific degree courses is not held centrally. The Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) provides a list of entry requirements for the art and design courses listed on their website at www.ucas.ac.uk. This includes some degree courses which require a foundation course for entry, although in the main the entry requirements are shown in terms of the UCAS tariff points score rather than specific qualifications.

Autistic Spectrum Disorders

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many under 16-year-olds with autistic spectrum disorders were not in full-time education in each parliamentary constituency in England in the last 12 months for which figures are available; [75852]

(2) what percentage of children with autistic spectrum disorders attending mainstream schools receive full-time support in each parliamentary constituency in England; [75853]

(3) how many children with autistic spectrum disorders attend (a) special and (b) mainstream secondary schools in each parliamentary constituency in England. [75854]

Mr. Dhanda: Since 2004, the Department for Education and Skills has collected data on pupils by type of special educational needs (SEN) as part of the annual school census. A table showing pupils with SEN supported at 'School Action Plus' or with a statement of SEN where autistic spectrum disorder is recorded as their primary need has been placed in the Library.

There are a range of factors which may affect the data recorded, including:

local interpretation of definitions;

classification of children with multiple needs; and differences in diagnoses between education and health professionals.

The Department does not collect data on the number of children with particular types of SEN who are not in school full-time. All children of compulsory school age are expected to receive full-time education suitable to (a) their age, ability and aptitude and (b) any special educational needs they may have, either by regular attendance at school or otherwise.

Some children may not be receiving full-time education, for example children who are out of school because of illness or children who have been excluded and not yet placed. Children with autistic spectrum disorders, who are attending school, should have additional specialist support provided according to their needs.

City Academies

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the capital cost is (a) of each city academy and (b) expected to be of each academy for which there is a firm financial commitment; how many pupils are (i) at each existing academy and (ii) planned to be at each academy for which there is a firm financial commitment; and what the age range of the pupils is in each case. [75548]

Jim Knight: The information requested is given in the following tables. The average cost of post-16 places is higher than for pre-16 ones. The average cost of a completed academy with 1,300 pupils and a sixth form in a high-cost inner-city area has been £25 to £30 million. The average cost of a new secondary school of this size and location has similarly been £25 to £30 million. The average cost per pupil of new build voluntary aided schools which the Department is currently funding is £23,886. The average cost per pupil in an academy is £23,370.

Departmental Contracts

James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many contracts his Department holds with (a) Capita plc. and (b) its subsidiaries which still have a potential duration of five years or more. [75267]

Bill Rammell: A complete answer to this question could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. I can tell the hon. Gentleman, however, that the Department holds the following Capita contracts with a potential duration of five or more years:

Teachers' Pensions Administration from 2003 to 2010

Connexions Card from 2002 to 2008

National Strategies 2005 to 2010

Disability Awareness

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will (a) include disability awareness within the school curriculum and (b) take steps to encourage disability awareness in out of school hours activities; and if he will make a statement. [76373]

Jim Knight: Through the personal, social and health education (PSHE) framework, pupils are taught to identify and respect the differences between people, including disability. Pupils are taught about the effects of all types of stereotyping and discrimination, how to challenge them assertively and ways of working co-operatively with a range of people who are different from themselves. Through citizenship education pupils are taught about legal and human rights and responsibilities. They will learn how the law and concept of human rights underpin society and affect the relationship between the state and the individual.

We have also committed significant funding up to 2008 to support all schools in providing access to a range of extended services and activities. We have set out a core offer of extended services that we want all children to be able to access through schools by 2010. We have provided guidance to schools, local authorities and other providers which makes clear that children with disabilities and special educational needs must be able to access all the services

Education Finance

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was allocated to the devolved formula capital grant in each year since 2004-05, broken down by local education authority. [76162]

Jim Knight: The allocation of the Devolved Formula Capital (DFC) grant in each year since 2004-05, broken down by local authority, also including grant to Voluntary-Aided schools, is set out in the following table. From 2006-07, a separate ICT budget has been merged with the existing DFC budget.

A full description of DFC funding can be obtained by following the link

Education Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will take steps to allow young people in full-time education to receive the education maintenance allowance while carrying out voluntary work. [75870]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 8 June 2006]: Young people in full-time education receive EMA when they have attended all the sessions for which they are required, and will not receive a weekly payment if they fail to attend. EMA is based on a "something for something" approach. Therefore, the general principle is that if the activity, for example volunteering, forms part of the young person's learning agreement EMA may be paid, if not; EMA will not be paid.

Free Tuition

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what initial assessment he has made of the impact of the level 2 entitlement for free tuition as announced in the White Paper, "21st Century Skills" and if he will make a statement. [75965]

Phil Hope: During 2004/05 the level 2 entitlement was trialled in the north east and south east regions. The Learning and Skills Development Agency, on behalf of the Learning and Skills Council (LSC), produced an early report in January 2005 entitled, 'An early assessment of the impact of the Level 2 offer.' In March 2006 the Adult Learning Inspectorate completed a short report entitled, 'Evaluation of the Level 2 entitlement.' Both documents have been used to help shape the national LSC's communication strategy with the regions prior to the national availability of the entitlement from September 2006.

Information and Communication Technology

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what aspects of information and communications technology the personalised learning review group will examine as part of its work; whether the review group will look at mobile and other wireless technology; and if he will make a statement. [76123]

Phil Hope: The Teaching and Learning in 2020 Review will consider the potential of all aspects of ICT to facilitate personalised learning including, for example, its impact on teaching and learning strategies, on access to learning, on communication with parents and on schools' use of data. The Review Group will draw on a wide range of evidence and examples of best practice, including submissions commissioned from experts in this field.

Lecturers' Dispute

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he has taken to ensure that students' (a) graduations and (b) immediate job prospects are not affected by the industrial dispute between lecturers and universities; and if he will make a statement. [76213]

Bill Rammell: Although this dispute was between universities and trade unions, I have kept closely in touch with both sides throughout its progress and consistently urged that the dispute be urgently resolved and the impact on students lifted.

I welcome the agreement reached between the HE employers and unions, on pay, and the immediate suspension of the University and College Union's industrial action. This is good news for staff and students alike. I expect that institutions and staff will work hard to ensure that all students get their marks and the opportunity to graduate in good time. The employers and UCU have agreed to work together to ensure a quick return to normal business. I can assure you that we will continue to monitor closely the situation with regard to any residual effects of the dispute.

Parental Contact

Mr. Osten: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will bring forward amendments to the Children Act 1989 to make it a requirement that there is a presumption of equal contact between separating parents. [74847]

Mr. Dhanda: Currently, there are no plans to bring forward such amendments. The Government do not believe that a legal presumption of equal contact would be in the best interests of most children. The most appropriate arrangements for contact between children and their separated parents will depend on a variety of issues particular to their individual circumstances. Where equal contact arrangements appear to be in the best interests of a child, whether agreed between the parents or determined by a court, they are already able to be, and should continue to be, put in place.

School Milk

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what advice he has issued to schools and local education authorities about the availability of milk to pupils in school. [76394]

Jim Knight: The new nutritional standards in schools, announced on 19 May 2006, stipulate that only semi-skimmed and skimmed milk should be made available in schools. Local authorities are not obliged to provide milk, but where they do so they must provide it free of charge to pupils entitled to receive a free school lunch. The School Food Trust will publish guidance on the new standards in late June.

The Rural Payments Agency, a Defra executive agency, is responsible for the administration of the EU school milk subsidy scheme in Britain. It provides advice online, in response to individual requests and via its helpline to those schools and local authorities which choose to participate in the scheme. This advice covers how to apply for the payment of subsidy on milk.

Secondary Schools (Wellingborough)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of children of secondary school age who live in Wellingborough and do not go to a Wellingborough secondary school. [75300]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been provided in the following table.

Wellingborough local authority district

	Number/percentage
Number of resident secondary age pupils	4,595
Number of resident secondary age[1] pupils attending schools outside of Wellingborough	627
Percentage of resident secondary age[1] pupils attending schools outside of Wellingborough	13.6

[1] Includes pupils aged 11 to15.

Source:
School Census January 2006 (provisional).

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many notifications Northamptonshire county council had received of children of secondary school age who do not have a school place in (a) Northamptonshire and (b) Wellingborough on 26 May. [75303]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for Northamptonshire county council. Following the hon. Member's point of order on Thursday 26 May after the Department's oral question session, I wrote to him concerning this matter and copies of the letter have been placed in the House Library.

Serious Case Reviews

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many serious case reviews for children have been carried out; and what guidance his Department issues on (a) the scrutiny of the full review of the review and (b) the single agency contributions to the review by elected representatives on the relevant social services authority. [68695]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 9 May 2006]: The Child Protection database, maintained by the Commission for Social Care Inspection, indicates that 78 cases from 2003-04 were the subject of a Serious Case Review (SCR), while 82 cases from 2004-05 were the subject of a SCR. The data for 2005-2006 are not yet complete.

Guidance on these issues is contained in 'Working Together to Safeguard Children', which includes guidance on the role and functions of local safeguarding children boards (LSCBs). One of the core functions of LSCBs is to undertake SCRs. Chapter 8 of 'Working Together' sets out how and when SCRs should be undertaken. This includes specifying how the relevant services should undertake separate management reviews, and how the LSCB should commission an overview report which brings together and analyses the findings. 'Working Together' states that the LSCB should consider carefully who might have an interest in reviews, for example, elected and appointed members of authorities, and what information should be made available to each of these interests, considering a number of factors including the need to maintain confidentiality in respect of personal information, and the accountability of public services. In all cases there is a public executive summary.

'Working Together' also states that LSCBs should have clear work programmes, including measurable objectives, and budgets. This will enable LSCBs' work to be scrutinised by local authorities, other local partners and key stakeholders as well as by the inspectorates. Elected members' role, through their membership of governance bodies such as the cabinet of the local authority or a scrutiny committee or a governance board, is to hold their organisation and its officers to account for their contribution to the effective functioning of the LSCB. The lead member for children's services within the local authority will have a particular focus on how the local authority is fulfilling its responsibilities to safeguard and promote the welfare of children and will hold the director of children services to account for the work of the LSCB.

Student Fees

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students are availing themselves of the arrangements that permit them to take a gap year in 2005-06 and be exempt from variable fees from 2006-07. [74821]

Bill Rammell: Information from the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) shows that, of the 301,798 students from England who obtained a place on a full-time undergraduate course in 2005, 25,171 (or 8.3 per cent.) opted to defer entry to 2006. This is a similar proportion to the previous year, when 23,006 (or 8.3 per cent.) out of 277,079 students deferred entry from 2004 to 2005.

Student Finance

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total cost of collecting university tuition fees from students in the London borough of Havering has been in each year since they were introduced. [75448]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is not centrally available.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was raised through tuition fees from students in the London borough of Havering in (a) 1998, (b) 1999, (c) 2000, (d) 2001 and (e) 2002. [75449]

Bill Rammell: Students on full-time undergraduate courses and their families are expected to make a contribution towards the cost of their tuition based on household income. Students from lower income backgrounds are wholly or partially exempt from paying tuition fees.

The amount of private contributions to tuition fees by students from the London borough of Havering in academic years 1999/2000 to 2002/03, and also 2003/04 to 2004/05, is given in the table.

Contribution from students paying all or part of their tuition fees

Academic year	£ million
1999/2000	0.6
2000/01	1.1
2001/02	1.3
2002/03	1.4
2003/04	1.5
2004/05	1.7

Source:
Student Loans Company (SLC)

Data in the answer cover the period from 1999/2000 to 2004/05. Contributions towards tuition fees of up to £1,000 were introduced in academic year 1998/99 but, as that year was treated as a transitional year, data are not available on the same basis as subsequent years.

Academic years 1999/2000 and 2000/01 contain two and three cohorts respectively of students subject to the new student support scheme.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students from the London borough of Havering are exempt from tuition fees. [75450]

Bill Rammell: The number of students from the London borough of Havering making no contribution to their tuition fees in 2004/05 was 910[1].

Students on full-time undergraduate courses and their families are expected to make a contribution towards the cost of their tuition based on household income. Students from lower income backgrounds are wholly or partially exempt from paying tuition fees.

[1] Rounded to the nearest 10 students.

Young People in the Workplace

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will discuss with representatives of the insurance industry problems experienced by young people accessing the workplace (a) as apprentices, (b) as young workers under 18 and (c) on work experience from school and college in relation to (i) obtaining insurance and (ii) the level of premiums required, with particular reference to small businesses and sole traders. [75986]

Phil Hope: In March 2004 my officials discussed with the Association of British Insurers insurance issues related to school-age work experience. The ABI confirmed the continuation of the long-standing convention by which school students on placement are considered to be covered by the employers' liability policy, as if they were employees. Generally, insurers make no charge for this insurance, provided they are notified of the placement in advance or have a longer-term agreement that the employer will regularly offer work experience. There should not therefore be premiums to pay which might act as a barrier to the employer's involvement. This is also the case when employers take on apprentices. Further discussions on these questions would be welcome.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment he has made of the impact of child protection policies on the work experience of young people and young apprentices employed by small businesses. [75987]

Phil Hope: In December 2004 the Department produced supplementary guidance for people organising work experience which reassured organisers, and through them, schools and employers, about the effective implementation of new requirements designed to ensure the protection of vulnerable young people.

We have no evidence to indicate that work experience placement offers, including those linked to the Young Apprenticeship Programme, have been reduced overall through any impact of child protection policies. Working with the Sector Skills Councils, we have provided advice and support to employers involved in work experience, including the Young Apprenticeship Programme, and we plan further efforts to reassure them about the availability of support on this and other issues which might concern them.

Pupils on work experience and young apprentices are aged 14 to 16 and do not have employed status except for insurance purposes.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what Government help is available to train young workers to NVQ Level 2. [75988]

Phil Hope: Apprenticeships are the main programme for young employed people seeking vocational qualifications at Level 2 and Level 3. Other opportunities are also being developed, including a pilot programme that started in April this year aimed at encouraging 16 to 18-year-olds in jobs without training to gain a Level 2 qualification, whether academic or vocational. For those over 19 and without either basic skills or a first Level 2 qualification we have put in place the Train to Gain service to deliver high-quality flexible qualifications in the workplace.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the incident in Helmand province, Afghanistan on 17 May. [74852]

Mr. Ingram: On 17 May, the Musa Qaleh District Centre in Northern Helmand was attacked by an estimated 150 insurgents. Afghan National Police (ANP) successfully responded to the incident and the insurgents fled further North towards the town of Tisney. The ANP pursued the insurgents, suffering 13 fatalities and approximately ten wounded; UK forces provided medical support to the injured ANP. It is thought that up to 50 insurgents were killed by the Afghan forces, 10 were wounded and some equipment (including a 4x4 vehicle) was seized.

UK forces, along with the ANP and Afghan National Army, have since established a presence in Musa Qualeh to prevent insurgents from returning there, and to help establish the rule of law and aid reconstruction efforts. This has been well received by the local population.

Armed Forces Pension Scheme

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the rate of employee contribution is to the Armed Forces Pension Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [75761]

Mr. Watson: The Armed Forces Pension Scheme (AFPS) is a non-contributory pension scheme; therefore there are no employee contributions. However, the independent Armed Forces Pay Review Body (AFPRB), when making recommendations about armed forces pay, takes into account the comparative value of the AFPS. At the moment the AFPRB assess the AFPS to be 7 per cent. more valuable than comparator schemes.

Bearskins

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bearskins have been purchased by the armed forces in each of the last five years; at what cost; and from which country they were sourced. [76167]

Mr. Ingram: The number of bearskin caps purchased for the Guards Regiments in each of the last five years are as follows:

Bearskin caps procured in the last Five years

	Number
2001	63
2002	179
2003	90
2004	111
2005	51
Total	494

The average cost of a bearskin cap is £650 each.

The bearskins used are provided by licensed fur traders under the jurisdiction of the Canadian authorities.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to use synthetic materials instead of animal fur in the construction of bearskins. [76168]

Mr. Ingram: There have been a number of contracts let with commercial companies to develop a synthetic replacement for bearskins. There has been a trial of caps made from material provided by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA). Problems were identified with these caps which included unsatisfactory performance in typical wet weather conditions. Nonetheless we are continuing to work with PETA to find an alternative, and all parties concerned with the trials are taking the search for an alternative to bearskins very seriously.

If an alternative is sourced and found to be fit for purpose, replacement of bearskins will be considered. This has already happened in a number of cases as, for example, with the "busby cap" used by the Royal Horse Artillery.

Correspondence

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Minister of State for Veterans will reply to the letters of 3 March and 27 April from the right hon. Member for West Derbyshire on the civil defence memorial at the National Memorial Arboretum. [75434]

Mr. Watson: As notified on 24 May 2006, this correspondence was transferred to the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, and the Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, my hon. Friend the Member for Tottenham (Mr. Lammy), subsequently replied on 5 June 2006.

Departmental Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75276]

Mr. Watson: I refer the hon. Member to the technical note which was placed in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90W, following an oral statement made by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury.

As pension liabilities are not estimated for individual Departments, but by the pension scheme, no separate figure is shown for the pension liabilities in respect of Ministry of Defence civil servants.

Gurkhas

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much compensation for discriminatory pension provision has been paid to Gurkha servicemen who retired prior to 1 July 1997; and how much he expects to be paid in total. [75840]

Mr. Watson: None. There is no discrimination.

Hercules C130J/C130K

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the Hercules C130J and C130K fleet have been fitted with explosive suppressant foam; and when the rest of the fleet are expected to be fitted with it. [75860]

Mr. Ingram: A programme is currently under way to fit some of our Hercules aircraft with explosion suppressant foam (ESF). I am not prepared to disclose how many or which models of aircraft are being fitted, as this might prejudice the operational security of our armed forces. Any decisions on fitting ESF to the rest of the Hercules fleet will take into account the time it will take to fit, the remaining service life of the aircraft, and any impact on operations, as well as cost.

Imber (Roads Access)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many days the roads to Imber have been open for visitors in the last 12 months. [76532]

Mr. Watson: In the last 12 months the roads to Imber were open for 41 days during the following periods:

5 to 21 August 2005

9 to 11 September 2005

17 December 2005 to 2 January 2006

14 to 17 April 2006.

Military Vehicles

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) Combat Engineer Tractors, (b) Tank Bridge Transporters, (c) Medium Wheeled Tractors, (d) Foden recovery vehicles and (e) M3 amphibious bridging vehicles are (i) in service and (ii) operationally deployable; [71914]

(2) how many (a) Truck Utility Medium, (b) Pinzgauer 716M Truck Utility Heavy Duty, (c) Truck Utility Light, (d) Heavy Equipment Transporter and (e) BV206 vehicles are (i) in service and (ii) operationally deployable. [71913]

Mr. Ingram: The following table details the numbers of vehicles currently in service and operationally deployable as at 1 June 2006:

Equipment	Total fleet size[1]	Operationally deployable[2]
Combat Engineer Tractor (CET)	73	47
Tank Bridge Transporter (TBT)	45	37
Medium Wheeled Tractor (MWT)	94	943
Foden Recovery Vehicles	320	318
M3 Amphibious Bridging	38	20
Truck Utility Light (TUL)	2,460	2,366
Truck Utility (Medium) (TUM)	9,184	8,993
Truck Utility Medium (Heavy Duty) (TUM HD) (all variants—Pinzgauer)	1,118	883
Heavy Equipment Transporter (HET)	89	893
BV206 Vehicles	421	361

[1] Includes vehicles that are undergoing planned programmed repair and modification, being used for training, with the Design Authority for trials and testing or in storage.
[2] Includes vehicles that are undergoing repairs at Unit level and undergoing Bowman conversion.
[3] Under the terms of these private finance initiative contracts, the supplier is contracted to maintain agreed availability levels.

At any one time a number of the deployable fleet will be undergoing minor repairs in situ at the unit, and a proportion may be involved in scheduled upgrade programmes, for example Bowman conversion. The number of vehicles available for immediate deployment therefore fluctuates continuously. If a unit drops below a pre-determined number of deployable vehicles, due to vehicles requiring repair beyond the capability of the unit and its supporting battalion, a replacement vehicle is provided.

Pensions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73093]

Mr. Watson: The civilian staff within the Ministry of Defence as members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS), Teachers' Pensions Scheme, NHS Pensions, UKAEA Principal Non Industrial Superannuation Scheme or Parliamentary Scheme, can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Additional Voluntary Contributions Schemes (AVCS), money purchase arrangements, or by buying added years of service in their pension scheme. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement—the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of civilian staff in the Department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at April 2006 are shown in the table.

	Number	Percentage
AVCS	1,121	1.4
Added years	1,309	1.6
Partnership	28	0.03

Note:
Figures exclude trading fund agencies

Reservists

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of how many reservists in the armed forces have lost their jobs due to participating in active service; and if he will make a statement. [74822]

Mr. Watson: Under section 1 of the Reserve Forces (Safeguard of Employment) Act 1985, an employer is required to take back into his employment former employees who have completed full-time service. Of all those mobilised to support operations in Iraq, Afghanistan, the Balkans and Sierra Leone and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, we are aware of only 28 reservists who have made applications for reinstatement to their civilian jobs under the 1985 Act (eight of which have progressed to Reinstatement Committee hearing). In addition, we are aware that one reservist has lost his job because he was due to report for mobilisation.

Tritium Stocks

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stocks of tritium the UK holds; and if he will make a statement. [75613]

Des Browne: I am withholding the information requested because it relates to national security and defence in the UK.

Venezuela

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the oil used by the Royal Navy was sourced from Venezuela in the last period for which figures are available. [74978]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence purchases fuels and lubricants under contract arrangements with major suppliers or brokers and does not source fuel directly from Venezuela; information on the sources used by commercial suppliers is not held by the Department.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Conference on Disarmament

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the UK (a) priorities for and (b) assessment of the 2006 Conference on Disarmament. [75139]

Margaret Beckett: The UK is fully committed to progress in multilateral disarmament forums, in particular in the Conference on Disarmament (CD). As we have said on many occasions, our priority is the start of negotiations on a fissile material cut-off treaty (FMCT), without pre-conditions, which we view as the next logical step towards achieving the goals of nuclear disarmament and the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons. In this regard, the UK fully supports the US initiative in tabling a draft FMCT text on 18 May. We hope that all CD member states are able to accept the very broad mandate proposed and agree to open negotiations towards a treaty without delay.

The UK believes that the CD sessions held so far this year have seen some of the most constructive dialogue in recent years. We were pleased that so many states participated actively in the recent thematic debate on FMCT and we hope that this level of engagement continues.

Departmental Finance

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Accounts Payable Module in Prism is closing promptly in all cases; and if she will make a statement. [75957]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The Accounts Payable (AP) module in Prism experienced various problems which prevented prompt closure for the months of December, January, February and March. These problems were identified and corrected. Changes have been made to Prism, and to our procedures, which came fully into effect at the end of March. We are now able to detect the errors which caused the problems within the month, enabling them to be corrected before the month-end. The AP module has closed promptly for April and May.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what delays there are relating to (a) the input and processing of invoices and (b) late payment of invoices; and in which missions. [75958]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 8 June 2006]: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only by contacting each individual post, which would incur disproportionate cost.

G8 Summit

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's priorities are for the forthcoming G8 summit in St. Petersburg; and if she will make a statement. [75143]

Margaret Beckett: The UK is working with the Russian presidency through their chosen priorities of energy security, infectious diseases and education to deliver a successful St. Petersburg summit. The UK is also working with G8 partners at all levels to ensure that previous G8 work on Africa and climate change is taken forward.

International Nuclear Fuel Bank

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the proposals to create an international nuclear fuel bank; what steps her Department is taking to explore such proposals; and if she will make a statement. [75142]

Margaret Beckett: The UK fully supports the introduction of a reliable supply of fuel cycle services and is co-operating with the US and other partners to develop workable ideas. The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) has the competence to administer such a mechanism and the US will soon submit a joint proposal to them, supported by the UK, to take this work forward. We believe that, in case of market disruption, the Agency could broker a new fuel supply agreement between a state and an alternate supplier. Suppliers, and their Governments, could give an undertaking to provide a back-up if relevant non-proliferation criteria were met. As a last resort, the Agency could make supplies available from a multilateral reserve of uranium, contributed by states with spare material. We look forward to engaging in further discussions and consultations on these issues at the IAEA in Vienna.

Iran

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) she and (b) officials in her Department have had recent discussions with representatives of UK banks regarding their business with Iran; and if she will make a statement. [73715]

Margaret Beckett: I have not had any recent discussions with representatives of UK banks regarding their business with Iran. Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials have regular routine discussions with those UK banks interested in Iran, just as we have with other businesses with the same interest.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list those (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 and for which her Department has policy responsibility which remain in force. [70392]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has policy responsibility for the following Acts (or parts thereof) which remain in force and which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006. Some of the Acts contain provisions which appear to be spent. A definitive list of all the parts of Acts in the relevant period for which the Department has responsibility could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Middle East

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her (a) middle eastern and (b) gulf counterparts regarding future regional security arrangements in the gulf; with which countries these discussions took place; and if she will make a statement. [75068]

Margaret Beckett: I have had no recent discussions on regional security arrangements in the gulf with my middle eastern and gulf counterparts.

Palestine

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Israeli Government regarding (a) the killing of a Palestinian girl and the injuring of 12 of her relatives when Israeli shells hit their home in the Gaza Strip on 10 April 2006 and (b) the reduction by the Israeli army of the artillery margin of safety in which shells can be fired near civilian areas from 300 to 100 metres. [75582]

Dr. Howells: The Government have made repeated representations to the Government of Israel to exercise restraint in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. We have expressed our concern over the shelling of the Gaza Strip and over targeted killings.

We have also regularly stressed, in our contacts with the Israeli Government, the need for their operations to be in line with international law.

Jim Sheridan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on contact with Hamas; and how this policy is applied in multilateral forums. [76203]

Dr. Howells: The Government have a policy of non-contact with Hamas, in line with our EU and Quartet partners. In order to work towards our national and regional priorities, we will continue to attend a number of international fora to which we normally contribute, and whose work we value, regardless of Hamas attendance. Ministers and officials will, however, avoid all bilateral contact with Hamas at these events, in line with our policy of non-contact.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of suspension of aid to the Palestinian authority on the living standards of the Palestinian population. [76392]

Dr. Howells: The Government continues to monitor the humanitarian and security situation in the Occupied Territories closely.

Together with our Quartet partners, other donors and international financial institutions, we are looking at ways to provide direct support to the Palestinian people through the establishment of the Temporary International Mechanism. This will be discussed at the General Affairs and External Relations Council today, as well as at the European Council next week.

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will issue travel warnings for British citizens travelling in the Palestinian territories to take account of recent deaths of British citizens in the territories. [76393]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) regularly updates its travel advice in light of recent events. In addition, our consulate general in Jerusalem has recently set up a system whereby residents and visitors in the Palestinian territories can register for text message updates. We currently advise against all travel to the Gaza Strip and all but essential travel to the West Bank. This information can also be found on the FCO website at:

http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket%2FXcelerate%2FShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029390590&a=KCountryAdvice&aid=1013618385504.

Rwandan War Criminals

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on her policy on the extradition of suspected Rwandan war criminals. [75478]

Dr. Howells: There is no general extradition arrangement between the UK and Rwanda. There is, however, provision within the Extradition Act 2003 for Ministers to consider whether the UK might enter into special arrangements where no other extradition arrangement exists. In addition, there is an appropriate legislative basis to ensure that the UK could surrender any individual indicted by the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda if they were found to be in the UK.

It is UK policy to give due consideration to any such request of an individual for extradition or surrender in light of these arrangements.

The Government are committed to a policy of no safe haven for those who commit genocide, war crimes or crimes against humanity.

Turkey

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent analysis her

Department has made of the Turkish Government's progress in protecting human rights. [75950]

Mr. Hoon [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The European Commission's 2005 Report states that Turkey sufficiently fulfils the Copenhagen political criteria but calls for continued reform, including on freedom of expression, freedom of religion and torture. The Government fully endorse this assessment. Human rights organisations report decreasing levels of torture and ill treatment by security forces so far this year, although there was a temporary rise in allegations during violent demonstrations in March/April 2006. We look forward to the Commission's 2006 Report, expected in the autumn.

UK Passport Holders

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK passport holders live in (a) Bangladesh, (b) Pakistan, (c) Nigeria and (d) Ghana. [76351]

Dr. Howells: We estimate that:

approximately 10,000 British nationals live permanently in Bangladesh and hold a British passport; approximately 16,000 British nationals live permanently in Nigeria and hold a British passport; approximately 35,000 British nationals live permanently in Pakistan and hold a British passport; approximately 6,500 British nationals live permanently in Ghana and hold a British passport.

These figures are based on passport issues at our high commissions in Dhaka, Islamabad and Accra and our deputy high commission in Lagos respectively. The actual figures for Bangladesh and Pakistan however could be as high as 100,000 and 80,000 respectively, as many Bangladeshis and Pakistanis are dual nationals who obtain a passport in the UK but live for a large part of the year in Bangladesh or Pakistan.

UN Development Fund for Women

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her Department's position is on the future role of the United Nations Development Fund for Women in the context of United Nations reform. [75330]

Mr. Thomas: The UK has been the largest contributor to United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM)'s core resources in recent years. We are fully committed to the principles of gender equality and women's empowerment and to providing support for the UN's work on these issues. UNIFEM and other UN agencies recognise that in order to advance better outcomes for women and girls, the UN's work needs to be better organised, more joined up and more effective. The Secretary-General has asked the current high level panel on UN systems-wide coherence to assess how this can be achieved. The UK will consider the recommendations of this review in deciding how best we can continue to support the UN system's vital work on gender and women's empowerment.

United Arab Emirates

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the United Arab Emirates on discrimination on grounds of colour against UK citizens visiting the United Arab Emirates; and if she will make a statement. [76005]

Dr. Howells: The Government take any allegations of racial discrimination against British citizens seriously. For reasons of confidentiality we cannot give details of specific consular cases in the United Arab Emirates (UAE). However, our embassy in Abu Dhabi has followed up complaints of discrimination on behalf of British nationals with the UAE Department of Immigration, police and Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Visas

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer to question 73626, how many complaints have been received relating to UK embassy visa sections in (a) Romania, (b) India, (c) Pakistan, (d) Federation of Russia, (e) Bulgaria, (f) Saudi Arabia and (g) Kenya. [75934]

Dr. Howells: The number of complaints relating to visa sections over the last five years are as follows. UKvisas has only recorded complaints received in the United Kingdom separately since March 2006 so these figures are only included for this year.

Romania	4	[1] —	—	—	2	5
India	[2] 9	[2] 7	[2] 10	54	32	41

[2] Figures for deputy high commissions in Mumbai, Kolkata and Chennai only. No data available for these years for the high commission in New Delhi.
[3] Information not available for visa sections in Pakistan. Formal procedures are now in place at our high commission in Islamabad and deputy high commission in Karachi to record all complaints.
[4] Complaints received in the UK only.
[5] Figures for the Consulate-General in Jeddah only. No data available for these years for the embassy in Riyadh.

HEALTH

Ambulance Services (Burnley)

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of ambulances deployed from Burnley Ambulance Station have had a paramedic on board in each month of the last five years. [74758]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not collected centrally.

Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action has been taken by her Department in response to the recommendations from the Select Committee on the Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill [Lords]; and if she will make a statement. [75533]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Select Committee on the Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill was set up to consider the previous draft of Lord Joffe's Private Member's Bill and made its recommendations in that context. The Bill involves issues of conscience and the Government's stance is to remain neutral and to listen to the debate.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the World Health Organisation on the outbreak of A/H5N1 in a family cluster in Kubu Sembelang, North Sumatra. [75438]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Departmental officials are in regular contact with the World Health Organisation regarding outbreaks of avian flu impacting on human populations. Pandemic flu planning was a topic for discussion at the World Health Assembly held on 22 to 27 May during which time there were a number of contacts between officials and the Secretariat about the development of the outbreak in Northern Sumatra.

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which Minister in her Department is responsible for monitoring her Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if she will make a statement. [73943]

Caroline Flint: Under Section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, Ministers and Government Departments have a duty to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity. This has been replaced by a similar provision under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act which comes into effect on the 1 October 2006. There is no statutory duty to monitor compliance with this duty.

The conservation of biological diversity falls under part H of the framework for sustainable development on the Government estate. The Department does not manage any land and its potential impacts on biodiversity are not significant. Nevertheless, our indoor plant management contractors are required to follow best practice to preserve biodiversity.

Bowel Cancer

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times the bowel cancer treatment working group has met during the past 12 months. [76242]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The bowel cancer treatment working group, a sub-group of the bowel cancer advisory group, has not met in the last 12 months. It last met on 22 March 2005.

Chlamydia

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which primary care trusts use the (a) nucleic acid amplification test and (b) enzyme immunoassay test for chlamydia. [73997]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 5 June 2006]: This information is not collected centrally.

In September 2003, the Department recognised that the need to switch to the superior nucleic acid amplification test (NAATs) for chlamydia testing and screening should be treated as a priority. At the same time, the chief medical officer wrote to all chief executives of strategic health authorities (SHAs) confirming this.

£7 million pump-priming money was invested in 2004-05 to ensure that all major laboratories in each region of England use the most effective technology. We have invested £80 million in the national chlamydia screening programme. One of the conditions is that all tests are undertaken using NAATs.

This is a clinical governance issue and we have stressed to the national health service how important it is to use this method of testing.

Choose and Book

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding her Department has allocated for 2006-07 for incentives for general practitioners to use the Choose and Book system. [75309]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Revisions to the general medical service (GMS) contract from 1 April 2006-07 include a reward for general practitioner practices, through a directed enhanced service (DES), for utilisation of the choose and book service and for delivering choice to patients.

The full value of the DES is 96 pence per registered patient. There are approximately 53.3 million registered patients in England. Assuming that every practice in England meets the full requirements of both components of the DES, the value of the DES in 2006-07 could be just over £50 million, which is funded as a relatively small part of the growth in overall resource allocations to primary care trusts.

Colo-rectal Cancer

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cost-benefit analysis her Department has undertaken of the use of non-invasive laparoscopic surgery techniques for the treatment of colorectal cancer; and if she will make a statement. [76245]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has commissioned a research project to consider the costs and benefits of current services for bowel cancer, including laparoscopic surgery, and to identify areas where improvements might be achievable. This research is being conducted by York health economics consortium and the School of Health and Related Research at Sheffield University and is due to report in the autumn.

In addition, on 24 March, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published provisional new advice on the use of laparoscopic colorectal surgery. It recommends laparoscopic (including laparoscopically assisted) resection as an alternative to open resection for patients with colorectal cancer who are considered suitable for surgery. NICE's final advice on this technique is due to be published in September 2006.

Departmental officials have also carried out a review of existing evidence on the costs and benefits of laparoscopic surgery in the treatment of colorectal cancer and considered whether there is a need for further research in this area. It was concluded that, given the York/Sheffield project and the work being carried out by NICE, no further work was required at this time. This decision was endorsed by the bowel cancer advisory group chaired by the national cancer director.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many laparoscopic surgery procedures for colorectal cancer were carried out in each year since 2003-04. [76246]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The total number of laparoscopic surgery procedures for colorectal cancer carried out each year since 2003-04 is shown in the table. These figures do not represent the total number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.

Laparoscopic surgery procedures for colorectal cancer

	Number
2003-04	38,840
2004-05	39,889

Community First Responders

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the responsibilities are of community first responders in (a) Staffordshire and (b) the rest of England. [75023]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Community responders are volunteers from the local community and often include members of St John Ambulance, Red Cross and other individuals with a clinical background. First responders are individuals working for the fire and police services, who also respond to ambulance 999 calls while on duty. In all cases, responders are deployed by a national health service ambulance trust to appropriate 999 calls.

Community and first responders in England make themselves available to respond to appropriate 999 calls at the request of a NHS ambulance trust and to provide aid to the patient while the ambulance response is en route, having been dispatched at around the same time as the ambulance vehicle. Calls are usually those where life is in immediate danger such as cardiac arrest. Responders are trained in basic life support and have equipment such as defibrillators.

Their precise roles and responsibilities are a matter for the host ambulance trust.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether community first responders will be retained in Staffordshire with their current roles and responsibilities. [75024]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We would expect the new trusts to maintain current community responder schemes. Their precise roles and responsibilities are a matter for the host ambulance trust.

Contractor Costs

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent guidance she has issued to NHS trusts on reducing contractor costs; [R] [76683]

(2) how many NHS trusts requested contractors to reduce the price of contracts which had already been let in 2005-06. [R] [76822]

Andy Burnham: The Department is determined to secure best value from NHS expenditure. A key area is the nearly £15 billion the national health service spends on goods and services. No recent formal guidance has been issued to the NHS on reducing costs with contractors.

The information requested on the number of NHS trusts requesting contractors to reduce the price of contracts already let in 2005-06 is not collected centrally.

Correspondence

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Eddisbury of 18 April 2006 concerning Neil Russell of PJ Care. [75136]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Unfortunately, we have no record of receiving a letter from the hon. Member. His office has supplied us with a copy and we will reply to it as quickly as possible.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the managing director of the strategic health authority covering West Worcestershire will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 2 May. [76240]

Ms Rosie Winterton: West Midlands South Strategic Health Authority reports that Cynthia Bower, Interim Chief Executive, is currently preparing a reply, which will be sent in due course.

Cosmetic Surgery/Laser Eye Surgery

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance her Department provides to private health providers in respect of after-care treatment following (a) laser eye surgery and (b) cosmetic surgery; [75550]

(2) how many people experienced complications following (a) laser eye surgery and (b) cosmetic surgery in each of the last five years; [75551]

(3) how many individuals sought NHS treatment following complications with (a) laser eye surgery and (b) cosmetic surgery carried out by private health providers in each of the last five years; and at what estimated cost to the NHS in each year; [75552]

(4) what estimate she has made of the number of individuals having laser eye correction surgery in England on the NHS in each of the last five years. [75594]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not provide guidance to private health care establishments as cosmetic surgery and laser eye surgery takes place within the independent sector. However, the Private and Voluntary Healthcare Regulations 2001 and the associated national minimum standards ensure that all aspects of the treatment and services provided by cosmetic surgery and laser eye surgery providers are safe and quality assured, and establishments are inspected by the Healthcare Commission.

Providers must comply with regulations and there are national minimum standards—core standards that cover general issues that apply to all types of private care, and service specific standards that relate to the use of class 4 lasers used in laser eye surgery. These national minimum standards are published by the Secretary of State for Health under section 23 (1) of the Care Standards Act 2000. The standards refer to appropriate patient selection and specific instructions to patient relatives and community services if appropriate. Post-operative information must be provided for patients specific to each procedure undertaken in a day surgical unit.

Information about complications and patients who have sought national health service treatment following complications with cosmetic surgery or laser eye surgery is not collected by the Department.

Dentistry

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) dentists and (b) dental practices in the East Hull and West Hull primary care trust areas have (i) signed and (ii) not signed the new NHS dental contract. [73404]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level.

Departmental Operating Framework

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when strategic health authorities expressed support for the Department of Health's operating framework for 2006-07. [76088]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The Department developed the operating framework 2006-07 in close collaboration with a range of stakeholders including strategic health authorities.

Disability Equipment (Internet Sales)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will require the internet industry to ensure that sales of disability equipment on the internet comply with the medical device regulations. [76791]

Andy Burnham: Any medical device placed on the United Kingdom market should be CE marked by the manufacturer in compliance with the Medical Devices Regulations 2002. Any instances of non-compliance would be investigated and resolved by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency on behalf of the Secretary of State whether the device is sold over the internet or by more traditional means.

District Nurses

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many district nurse contacts there have been in each year since 1997. [74051]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The available information had been published in "NHS district nursing: summary information for 2003-04", and is shown in the following table. In order to reduce the burden of bureaucracy on front line staff the Department stopped collecting the number of face-to-face contacts in 2000. The Department collected information on initial and first contacts until 2004.

General Practitioner Retainer Schemes

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals are on general practitioner retainer schemes. [74705]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As 30 September 2005, 642 individuals were on the general practitioner retainer scheme.

Haemophilia

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answers of 5 June to Questions 73258, 73259 and 73260, on people with haemophilia, if she will publish the Department's consideration and decision with regard to the Macfarlane Trust's submission. [76443]

Caroline Flint: There has been no further development since my last reply.

Herceptin

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will meet Shropshire Primary Care Trust to discuss the provision of Herceptin to those with early stage breast cancer in Shropshire. [74755]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for individual clinicians, in discussion with a patient, to decide whether or not it is suitable to prescribe a specific drug. Primary care trusts (PCTs) may need to be involved to decide whether to support the clinician's decision and supply the drug at the national health service's expense. PCTs need to take a range of factors into account, including local factors, when considering the funding of drugs and other treatments.

The Department is aware that Shropshire county PCT has recently revised its policy on individual patient requests for drugs and is currently reviewing the cases of women who have recently been refused funding for Herceptin in line with this. This is a matter for the local health community and the Secretary of State has no plans to meet the PCT to discuss it.

Kidney Dialysis

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals in (a) London and (b) England provide kidney dialysis treatment. [73553]

Ms Rosie Winterton: According to figures held by the United Kingdom Renal Registry, there are 54 adult renal units in England, of which eight are in London, and 10 paediatric renal units in England, of which two are in London.

The vast majority of adult units will have satellite dialysis facilities attached to them enabling many patients to dialyse closer to home and minimise travel times. These are looked after by consultants based at a main adult renal unit. Some, although not all, of these are based at hospitals. However, figures for these are not collected centrally.

Medical and Dental Education Levy

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of whether the Medical and Dental Education Levy and multi-professional education and training funding will be sufficient to allow all postgraduate deaneries to fulfil their obligation to provide full study leave funding without consequent reductions in posts or other areas of activity. [73843]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Allocations to strategic health authorities, which will include money for education and training, will be issued shortly. It is for strategic health authorities, working closely with their postgraduate deaneries, to determine exactly how their budgets will be used to meet local needs, priorities and contractual commitments.

Medical Centre (Festival Park, North Staffordshire)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received concerning the decision not to proceed with the proposed out-of-hours medical centre at Festival Park, North Staffordshire; what costs the NHS incurred in relation to the plans; and whether a procedure for not proceeding was included in the contract with Prima 200 Ltd. [75021]

Ms Rosie Winterton: To date the Department has received one letter about the decision not to proceed with the proposed out-of-hours medical centre at Festival Park.

It is for the local health community to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

The Shropshire and Staffordshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA) reports that the national health service has incurred abortive costs of £650,000 in the financial year 2005-06 for the out-of-hours scheme.

The SHA also reports that the strategic partnering agreement with Prima 200 Limited (Ltd) includes clauses on what happens if a project does not go ahead. Negotiations with Prima 200 Ltd took place within the terms of this agreement.

Mental Health

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will bring forward amendments to the Mental Health Act 1983 aimed at strengthening protection against possible racial bias in the way the Act operates. [73389]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are currently undertaking a race equality impact assessment on the proposed amendments to the Mental Health Act 1983. We will consider what action may be required in light of any findings from the assessment.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the mental health establishments visited by her and her ministerial team since 1 May 2005; and what the date was of the visit in each case. [69387]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Secretary of State and her ministerial team have visited a total of 12 mental health establishments since 1 May; details and dates as follows:

The Fermoy Unit, Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Kings Lynn, Norfolk (31 May 2005)

Holmhurst Day Centre, Southwark Community Health Team, London (21 July 2005)

Barking and Dagenham Primary Care Trust (PCT) and North East London Mental Health Trust (5 September 2005)

Hollins Park Hospital, Mental Health Advocacy Service, Warrington (30 March 2006)

East London and City Mental Health Trust (1 March 2006)

Humber Mental Health NHS Teaching Trust (4 April 2006).

Merton and Sutton Better Healthcare Closer to Home Programme

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to respond to the Merton and Sutton Better Healthcare Closer to Home Programme steering group's review of her instructions to build the critical care hospital on the St. Helier site. [76310]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has received the response from the local national health service and is currently considering the situation.

Ministerial Cars (Fuel Costs)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the fuel costs were for ministerial cars used by her Department in each of the last five years. [67123]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Minister of State for Transport, my hon. Friend the Member for South Thanet (Dr. Ladyman) on 27 April 2006, Official Report, column 1226W.

NHS Direct

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if NHS Direct will give priority to employing disabled nurses when deciding who should be made redundant; [76354]

(2) what external efficiency targets have not been met by NHS Direct in (a) Scunthorpe and (b) Chester; [76355]

(3) pursuant to the consultation document on the future of NHS Direct, how the NHS Direct site in (a) York and (b) Southport was assessed as being expensive to maintain from an information and communications technology infrastructure perspective; [76356]

(4) against which Department of Trade and Industry contact centres NHS Direct contact centres have been compared; and what the most recent user satisfaction rating of each was; [76357]

(5) what complaints NHS Direct has received from staff about the quality of accommodation. [76358]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not centrally held. It may be available from the Chairman of NHS Direct Special Health Authority.

NHS Strategic Tracing Service

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress her Department is making on the replacement of the NHS Strategic Tracing Service; when replacement will be completed; and if she will make a statement. [76739]

Caroline Flint: The contract to provide the NHS strategic tracing service (NSTS) runs to the end of June 2007, with an option to extend further for periods of six months up to the end of December 2008. Migration from NSTS to the personal demographics service (PDS) is scheduled to have been completed within this timescale.

The PDS is part of the national programme for information technology spine, and went live, on time, in June 2004. In addition to stand-alone patient tracing services the PDS provides an essential element of the integrated national health service care record service which underpins the creation of an electronic care record for every NHS patient in England. The PDS enables a patient to be readily identified by NHS staff and associated, seamlessly and accurately, with their care record. The PDS also supports other key initiatives such as choose and book and the electronic prescription service.

The PDS currently contains demographic information on most NHS patients and is currently processing over 136 million searches a year from over 14,500 locations.

Use of the PDS will continue to develop over the life of the NHS information technology programme to deliver the full set of planned patient benefits and clinical improvements to the NHS.

NHS Structure

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions she has been requested to involve the Independent Review Panel on questions arising from a proposed change in NHS structure or pattern of service provision since 1997; and on how many occasions she acceded to such a request. [76308]

Andy Burnham: To date, there have been 13 referrals from Overview and Scrutiny Committees (OSCs) to the Secretary of State for Health. Two have been referred to the Independent Reconfiguration Panel for advice—East Kent (2002) and Calderdale and Kirklees (2006). Following a referral from Surrey OSC in October 2005, the panel was also asked to assist with the local process to ensure agreement is reached locally between the stakeholders.

Nuchal Fold Scans

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether it is her policy that nuchal fold scans should be available in all NHS trusts; [76290]

(2) how many NHS trusts carry out nuchal fold scans. [76291]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Guidance for the national health service on more accurate tests for Down's syndrome screening was published by the Department on 11 November 2003. The guidance provides a suggested time frame for progress. Nuchal translucency combined with serum tests are performed around 11 to 14 weeks and is one of the recommended tests for Down's syndrome screening. The national Down's syndrome screening programme advise that currently almost 25 per cent. of NHS trusts implement this form of screening. The nuchal fold scan performed between 18 to 20 weeks of pregnancy is not currently recommended by the United Kingdom National Screening Committee as an acceptable marker to detect Down's syndrome.

Nurses

Mrs. Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses were working in the NHS in (a) 1979, (b) 1990, (c) 1991, (d) 1997 and (e) 2006; how many nursing redundancies there were in the period (i) 1979 to 1990, (ii) 1991 to 1997 and (iii) 1997 to 2006; and what the total change was in the number of nurses working in the NHS in the period (A) 1979 to 1990, (B) 1991 to 1997 and (C) 1997 to 2006. [73812]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following table shows the number of qualified nurses in 1979, 1990, 1991, 1997 and 2005. Information on the number of qualified nurses in 2006 will be collected in September.

England

	1979[1,2,3]	1990	1991[4]	1997	2005

[1] Figures taken from 1985 HPSSS.
[2] Figures for 1979 are hospital staff only and are therefore not directly comparable with later years.
[3] Practice nurse figures for 1979 are estimated.
[4] Practice nurse figures for 1991 may not be fully comparable with other data due to under-reporting of fund holding practice staff by FHSAs.

The following table shows the increase in the number of qualified nurses 1979-90, 1991-97 and 1997-2005.

Headcount

	Change 1979-90	1991-97	1997-2005
All qualified nurses	106,914	9,075	85,305
HCHS qualified nurses	95,116	6,693	80,790
Practice nurses	11,798	2,382	4,515

Information on the number of nurse redundancies during these periods is not collected centrally.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses working within the NHS (a) retired and (b) left the NHS for other reasons in each year since 2001-02; how many are forecast to retire and leave in 2006-07; and if she will make a statement. [75149]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The NHS Business Services Authority (BSA) pension division is unable to provide data on retirements for nurses alone. I have asked the BSA to write to the hon. Member to let her know what data can be provided that might be of assistance.

Information on the number of nurses leaving the national health service is not collected centrally.

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been spent on (a) voluntary exit schemes and (b) mandatory redundancy schemes for nurses working in the NHS in each year since 2001-02; what the forecast expenditure is for 2006-07; and if she will make a statement; [75154]

(2) how many nurses left the NHS on (a) voluntary exit schemes and (b) mandatory redundancy schemes in each year since 2001-02; how many are forecast to leave in 2006-07; and if she will make a statement. [75155]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Obesity

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) children and (b) adults are (i) obese and (ii) overweight when measured by body mass index, according to the Government's most recent health survey figures. [72052]

Caroline Flint: The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity and overweight among children and adults is the Health Survey for England. The most recent data (2004) on the prevalence of obesity and overweight in children and adults are presented in tables 1 and 2. Table 1 refers to obesity and overweight prevalence among children aged two to 15. Table 2 reports the obesity and overweight prevalence among adults aged 16 and over.

Oesophageal Doppler Monitoring

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the total number of patients treated by the NHS in the last year for which figures are available who would benefit from oesophageal Doppler monitoring; what assessment she has made of the proportion of these patients who do not benefit from this technology; what plans she has to increase the uptake of this technology in NHS trusts; and if she will make a statement. [74047]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not made any assessment of the total number of patients treated by the national health service in the last year who would benefit from oesophageal Doppler monitoring.

Following the Government's decision to shift the balance of power, most central funding has been devolved to local primary care trusts (PCTs) and strategic health authorities. This means that PCTs are now responsible for selecting and funding services that they feel are required in their region. Each PCT takes into account the needs and demands in their own area, and have a local plan on how best to spend their money on the services they need.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with Medway NHS Trust regarding the effects of oesophageal Doppler monitoring; what estimate she has made of the savings made by Medway NHS trust through the use of this technology; and whether she has made any assessment of the total savings to the NHS of encouraging the use of oesophageal Doppler monitoring. [74048]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not had any discussions with Medway national health service trust regarding oesophageal Doppler monitoring and has not made an assessment of the costs of this treatment.

Operation Numbers

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average number of operations performed by a whole-time equivalent surgeon was in 2005-06. [74703]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In England, the average number of operations performed by a whole-time equivalent surgeon (defined as (medical) staff in the surgical specialities) in 2004-05 was 490. This is the latest year for which this calculation can be made.

Notes:

1. The number of operations in England in 2004-05 was 9,477,564. Data for 2005-06 are not available.

2. The number of whole-time equivalent staff in the surgical specialities at 30 September 2005 was 19,337 in England.

1. Hospital Episode Statistics (HES), The Information Centre for Health and Social Care.

Overseas Doctors

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation her Department undertook before introducing changes to visa arrangements for overseas doctors working in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [74161]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The immigration rules for permit free training were amended in July 2005 and the implications were discussed with the British Medical Association (BMA), postgraduate deans and overseas doctors groups.

Departmental officials discussed proposals to amend the regulations further at a meeting in January held by NHS employers which was attended by the Home Office and medical stakeholders, including the British Association of Physicians of Indian Origin, the British International Doctors Association, the BMA and representatives from the national health service.

Patient/Public Involvement (Health)

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that (a) the new bodies that replace patient and public involvement in health forums have sufficient resources and powers to enable them properly to discharge their functions and (b) there is a smooth and rapid transition to the new bodies to minimise the risk of losing existing expertise. [72743]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The expert panel, which was established to recommend measures to deliver a stronger voice for patients, services users and the public at all levels in the health and social care system, recently reported its recommendations to ministers in the Department. Ministers are considering the recommendations and will announce the Department's decision on the future structures for patient and public involvement shortly.

Physiotherapists

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many unfilled vacancies for physiotherapists there have been in the NHS in each of the last three years. [75668]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of vacancies for physiotherapists which national health service trusts were actively trying to fill, which had lasted for three months or more (full time equivalents), as at 31 March in each of the last three years, is shown in the table.

England

	Vacancies
2003	671
2004	626
2005	464

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many graduate physiotherapists were offered employment by the NHS in each of the last three years. [75669]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Public Transport

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what incentives are available to encourage members of her staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75112]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department promotes the use of public transport by offering interest-free season ticket loans. Loans are also available to purchase bicycles, and departmental buildings offer secure cycle parking and showers.

Royal Shrewsbury Hospital

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much central Government funding was made available to the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [72390]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not allocate funding to national health service trusts. NHS trusts as providers of services receive the bulk of their revenue funding from commissioning by primary care trusts. They also receive revenue funding from the Department for research and development and from strategic health authorities for medical staff training and other teaching costs. In addition, trusts can charge staff, visitors or patients for services provided, such as catering or provision of private patient facilities.

Shropshire county primary care trust (PCT) will receive allocations of £331.2 million in 2006-07 and £363.3 million in 2007-08. These represent a cash increase of £59.9 million or 19.7 per cent. over the two years.

Telford and Wrekin PCT will receive allocations of £187.6 million in 2006-07 and £209.3 million in 2007-08. These represent a cash increase of £41.3 million or 24.5 per cent. over the two years, compared to a national average of 19.5 per cent.

It is for primary care trusts in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Antisocial Behaviour

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which are the (a) best and (b) worst performing councils in England in terms of their ability to take effective action against antisocial behaviour; and if he will make a statement on the performance of Luton borough council in this area. [75923]

Mr. McNulty: The data are not available in the format requested. Tackling antisocial behaviour involves a multi-agency approach which includes the local police, crime and disorder reduction partnerships as well as local borough councils and other partner authorities. The Government have already provided guidance and support to these local agencies to help them to target resources and powers to protect the public and ensure that antisocial behaviour is tackled, not tolerated.

There are variations in performance to tackle antisocial behaviour across the country and the Government are determined that public concern about antisocial behaviour is adequately reflected in the priorities of all our services. The Respect Programme will now take this further so that local services are organised so that they respond swiftly and effectively to the problems that communities face today. People need to see and feel that a difference can be made.

The Government also aims to improve accountability between service providers and the public by giving more power to local communities. The Police and Justice Bill contains provisions for the community call for action. This is a way for local communities to demand a response from agencies to persistent local community safety or antisocial behaviour problems, via an approach to their ward councillor.

Approved Contractor Scheme

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has carried out an assessment of the total (a) cost and (b) benefits to companies of compliance with the approved contractor scheme. [58968]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office published a full regulatory impact assessment (RIA) on 16 February 2006 on the approved contractor scheme (ACS). The full RIA took into account the costs associated with obtaining ACS status and the benefits to companies that ACS will bring.

The effectiveness of the scheme and the standards being applied will be reviewed annually. I have also asked to be kept informed of the uptake of the scheme on a regular basis.

Buses

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were reported (a) on buses and (b) at bus stops in (i) the North East of England, (ii) County Durham and (iii) the City of Durham in each of the last 10 years. [75261]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office recorded crime statistics do not separately identify crimes occurring on buses or at bus stops.

Child Abuse Websites

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to introduce measures to prevent credit card-based access to websites hosting images of child abuse. [72503]

Mr. Coaker: The Government created the Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre (CEOP) to play a proactive role in protecting children, young people, families and society from paedophiles and sex offenders, particularly those who use the Internet and other new technologies in the sexual exploitation of children. This includes actively bringing together law enforcement with credit card providers as well as other key industry sectors to look at all aspects of online safety and to take proactive steps in preventing and detecting websites hosting images of child sex abuse.

Home Office is working closely with CEOP, the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) and the Association for Payment Clearing Services to consider how an Order under Schedule 3 of the Data Protection Act may ensure payment card companies can legitimately hold and internally process sensitive data concerning an individual's conviction(s) at court. The practical issues are still being clarified, but the DCA hope to lay an Order shortly. Card issuers usually have the power to remove an individual's payment card once they have been informed of the commission of a relevant offence.

Compensation

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial advice is provided to victims of violent crimes who are awarded large sums of money as compensation. [73950]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Claims to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (CICA) are confidential as between applicants and CICA, and Ministers are precluded by law from involvement in individual cases.

CICA do not give financial advice to successful claimants. However, successful claimants have the same access to the various sources of financial advice that are available generally to members of the public.

Where a successful claimant from England or Wales receives a large award but is incapable of managing his or her financial affairs, the Public Guardianship Office (PGO) will usually be brought in to decide how the award should be administered, unless other arrangements, such as the administration of the award in a trust, are to be made. In such cases the PGO's appointees or the trustees would be responsible for taking any necessary financial advice.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the average time taken was to process an application to the Criminal Records Bureau for a disclosure in each year since it was established; [74585]

(2) what the longest time taken was to process an application for a criminal record check in the last year for which figures are available. [74586]

Joan Ryan: Data concerning the average time taken to complete a disclosure are not a performance target and are not collated by the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB). The CRB operates to a set of published service standards (PSS), which are to process 93 per cent. of standard disclosure applications within two weeks and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosure applications within four weeks. The service standards are published on the CRB website, www.crb.gov.uk.

The longest time taken to process an application within the last year from receipt of the application to despatch of the criminal record check was 11 months. This was not a straightforward case and it required interaction with the registered body throughout the process; the application form was incomplete; there were three police forces involved in the local intelligence checking; and the Police National Computer (PNC) found alias details pertaining to the applicant which he had failed to declare on his form. On occasions such as this it is necessary to recheck these details against the PNC and the other databases containing details of people who are considered unsuitable to work with children and vulnerable adults. The disclosure was issued on 31 May 2006 and contained a total of six separate convictions.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the (a) efficiency and (b) effectiveness of the Criminal Records Bureau. [75691]

Joan Ryan: The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) publishes an annual report and accounts, which is presented to Parliament pursuant to section 7 of the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000. The annual report and accounts provides, among other things, analysis on the CRB's performance and its operating costs and balance sheet for the financial year. Copies of the CRB annual report and accounts 2004-05 were placed in the Library and a copy may be downloaded from the CRB's website www.crb.gov.uk. The bureau's management board, which includes a senior Home Office official, also regularly reviews issues concerning efficiency and effectiveness and the Chief Executive provides regular reports to Ministers on performance. The CRB's published service standards (PSS) are to issue 93 per cent. of Standard Disclosures within 14 days and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within 28 days. The CRB is currently issuing 99.7 per cent. of standard disclosures within PSS, and 88.6 per cent. of enhanced disclosures within PSS. More organisations than ever before have access to the CRB's disclosure service and this expansion clearly demonstrates the Government's confidence in the CRB and its ability to deal with growing volumes in a timely and effective manner. Furthermore, a CRB-commissioned MORI survey has also shown that customer satisfaction levels are at an all time high, reflecting the year-on-year improvements that the CRB has made. The independent research has also shown that the CRB is making a difference to the protection of children and the vulnerable. In 2005, some 25,000 unsuitable people were prevented from gaining access to children or the vulnerable, as a direct result of CRB checks. Many more unsuitable people are deterred from applying to work with children and the vulnerable as a direct result of a requirement for a CRB check.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Chief Executive of the Criminal Records Bureau. [75692]

Joan Ryan: The Secretary of State for the Home Department last met the Chief Executive of the Criminal Records Bureau on 25 January 2006. I last met the Chief Executive of the Criminal Records Bureau on 11 May 2006. Such meetings take place every six weeks, and the Minister reports back to the Secretary of State as and when necessary.

Crossbows

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were (a) charged with and (b) convicted of offences connected with the misuse of crossbows in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [75554]

Mr. McNulty: There is no specific offence relating to the misuse of crossbows. Such offences could be included under several different offences, such as possession of an offensive weapon, but the data cannot be separated to show how many of the offences involved a crossbow.

The table shows figures for prosecutions and convictions for the only offences that are solely relevant to crossbows. Figures for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Dangerous Dogs Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people who reside in (a) Southend on Sea and (b) Essex have been prosecuted under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in each year since it was enacted; [75524]

(2) how many dangerous dogs have been destroyed in (a) Southend, (b) Essex, (c) Hertfordshire, (d) the Metropolitan police area of London and (e) England and Wales in each year since 1996. [75537]

Mr. McNulty: The table shows figures for prosecutions under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991 in south east Essex and Essex since 1992. Figures for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006. Information on the number of dangerous dogs destroyed is not collected centrally by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform or DEFRA.

Dyfed Powys Police

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which Dyfed Powys Police were inspected by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary between 1992 and 2005; and if he will place copies of the reports in the Library. [75705]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 7 June 2006]: Details of when Dyfed Powys were inspected by HMIC are given in the table. The majority of reports between 1998 and 2005 can be found on the HMIC website at: www.inspectorates.homeoffice.gov.uk

Foreign Nationals (Northern Ireland)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to provide (a) protection and (b) assistance to foreign nationals working in Northern Ireland, with particular reference to access to entitlements. [74681]

Mr. Byrne: Foreign nationals in Northern Ireland, as elsewhere in the UK, will generally be entitled to assistance and protection from the consular authorities of their own country, in addition, in many cases, to those sources of assistance which are also available to British citizens, including the police. As to entitlements to social security benefits, in general these are not available to persons who are subject to immigration control, while EU nationals in general enjoy rights to equal treatment under community law.

Graffiti

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions for graffiti crime there have been in each year since 1997. [75363]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible to distinguish offences of graffiti from other types of criminal damage in the court proceedings data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform as the circumstances of individual offences are not collected centrally.

House Burglaries

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many house burglaries were reported in 2005; and how many reports subsequently led to a conviction. [75393]

Mr. McNulty: There were 304,400 recorded offences of domestic burglary in England and Wales in 2005. It is not possible to identify how many of these led to a conviction. This is because recorded crime deals with offences and court proceedings deal with defendants and the two data sets cannot be directly compared.

Individual Support Orders

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individual support orders attached to anti-social behaviour orders have been given at magistrates courts in each magistrates court area. [74523]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The available information is given in the table.

Knife Crimes

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been convicted of carrying a knife in a public place in each of the last five years. [75402]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The table shows the number of convictions in England and Wales for carrying a knife in a public place for the years 2000 to 2004. Data for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006.

Life Sentences

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people sentenced to life imprisonment since 2000 have been released from prison; and what the reasons were each prisoner was released. [74170]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information recorded on the prison IT system as at May 2006 shows that 53 life sentence prisoners who were sentenced from 2000 onwards have been released on licence. In one of these cases the prisoner was later recalled to custody and subsequently released for a second time.

The main criteria governing the release of the 53 lifers were that they had served the period of imprisonment necessary for the purposes of retribution and deterrence (the tariff) and that their risk to the public was acceptable. Since October 1992, the responsibility for the release of tariff expired life sentence prisoners has gradually transferred from the Home Secretary to the Parole Board.

In considering the possible release of any tariff expired life sentence prisoner, the Parole Board is required by statute to satisfy itself that "it is no longer necessary for the protection of the public that the prisoner should be confined".

Lobbying

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which foreign Governments and international organisations have made representations to his Department on potential changes to UK domestic law in each of the last five years; and what law was involved in each case. [74457]

Joan Ryan: Ministers and officials regularly discuss with foreign counterparts and international organisations, both bilaterally and in fora such as the EU, G8 and UN, a range of issues including proposals for legislation which would have implications for domestic law and policy. A list of all these meetings and their subject could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mobile Phones

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were (a) charged with and (b) convicted of offences relating to the theft of mobile phones in each of the last five years. [75561]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible to distinguish offences relating to the theft of mobile phones from other offences of theft in the court proceedings data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of mobile phones stolen from individuals by (a) street theft and (b) theft from premises in each of the last five years. [75562]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Parole Board

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of the Parole Board have been a victim of crime; and if he will make a statement. [75410]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We do not routinely collect or disclose information about whether existing members of the Parole Board have been victims of crime. However, in the current round of recruitment of new members, we invited expressions of interest for appointment as independent members from those who had experience as a victim of crime or of victims' issues.

Partners Against Crime Partnership

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 2017W, on crime, what plans he has to extend the Partners Against Crime Partnership; and if he will make a statement. [74462]

Mr. McNulty: An evaluation of this initiative, which was set up in partnership by Dyfed-Powys police and the Post Office Ltd., is now complete. The scheme has been a resounding success in Dyfed-Powys police force, providing enhanced access to policing services in remote rural communities.

I understand that local expansion is already under way with further premises in north Pembrokeshire added to the scheme in April this year. Locally, there are discussions with Post Office Ltd. to expand the scheme wider, subject to funding and police force restructuring plans in Wales. I would add that any decision to extend the Partners Against Crime Partnership is for the local police and partners.

Party Conference Security

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the costs to public funds were of policing and general security for the (a) Labour, (b) Conservative and (c) Liberal Democrat party conferences in each year since 1992. [76087]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The table shows the cost to public funds, in the form of special grant paid to police authorities, for policing party conferences in England and Wales. For security reasons, we do not disclose the other costs incurred.

Police

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many resignations and retirements of police officers from the Lancashire police force there have been in each year since 1997. [64122]

Mr. McNulty: Figures for the number of voluntary resignations by police officers are provided in the table. The data do not include officers who are dismissed or required to resign.

Figures for the numbers of ordinary and medical retirements by police officers are also provided in the table as follows.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the total police staff hours, including uniformed staff and support staff, that will be spent on duties related to police reorganisation in (a) 2006 and (b) 2007. [68615]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not held centrally.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers from each police force have been caught drink driving in each of the last five years; and how many have been (a) prosecuted, (b) disciplined and (c) dismissed. [77429]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate has been made of the costs of merging Lancashire and Cumbria constabularies; what estimate has been made of the likely savings; and if he will make a statement. [50142]

Mr. McNulty: It is estimated that set up costs totalling £22 million will be incurred during the year prior to merger and the first three years of operation. During the first five years of operation of the new force a net saving of £10 million is projected. The precise level of projected costs and savings is a matter for negotiations currently taking place.

The Government are committed to paying 100 per cent. of reasonable set-up revenue and capital costs of restructuring, net of reasonable savings.

Police Direct

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of Police Direct; and if he will make a statement. [75689]

Mr. McNulty: Police Direct is a public messaging service provided by Suffolk Constabulary to residents currently in the west Suffolk area. It is now being rolled out across all of Suffolk. It is also being trialled by Surrey police in the north-west Surrey area. Police Direct uses the Police Message Broadcasting facility which is part of the national Police Portal managed by the Police Information Technology Organisation. Day-to-day running of Police Direct is a matter for the Chief Constables of Suffolk and Surrey who are responsible for the operational management of their force.

Police Vehicles

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines his Department provides to chief constables on the purchasing of police vehicles. [76014]

Mr. McNulty: The Government are determined to ensure that the police have adequate resources to play their key part in tackling crime and disorder and improving community safety.

Planning and management of police resources locally, including use of vehicles, are matters for each police authority and chief officer.

Efficiency planning guidance sent to chief officers in February 2006 encourages forces to take advantage of the collective buying power of the police service by making use of nationally negotiated arrangements. We have worked with the police service to develop national frameworks for the purchase of vehicles, under which forces are offered significant discounts on manufacturers' prices. These have been in place since 1992 and are regularly re-tendered. The arrangements are strongly encouraged by the Association of Chief Police Officers and HM inspectorate of constabulary. The most recent version (spring 2005) has been designed to assist forces in rationalising the variety of models in use, to encourage standardisation and deliver further increases in value for money.

Prisons

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reasons underly the decision to reduce the operating margin of the useable operating capacity of the prison estate from 2,000 to 1,700 places; when the decision was taken:; and how the 1,700 figure was calculated. [75427]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The usable operational capacity of the prison estate is 1,700 spaces less than the certified operational capacity. This operating margin reflects the constraints imposed by the need to provide separate accommodation for different groups of prisoners such as gender, age, security category and conviction status, as well as the necessary provision of single cells, accommodation out of use and the geographical distribution of prisons and prisoners.

In April 2004, a database was introduced to assist with the management of the prison population. The more accurate information it provides enabled us to reduce the operating margin in stages from 2,000 to 1,700 places. The reduction added 300 places to the useable operating capacity while still maintaining a sufficient operating margin to manage the prison population safely.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the people who have absconded from open prisons in England since 1997 have (a) been returned to custody and (b) committed offences after absconding which have led to court appearances; and if he will make a statement. [74871]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Forest of Dean [73593] about the numbers of prisoners who remain unlawfully at large having absconded from open prisons. In respect of the request for information about court appearances for offences committed by prisoners now recaptured while unlawfully at large, this information is not held centrally by the Prison Service. It would be necessary to interrogate each prisoner's record and cross check with police and court conviction records which could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what factors are taken into account when a decision is made to hold prisoners who are awaiting deportation or being considered for deportation in open prisons. [76694]

Mr. Sutcliffe: All prisoners are categorised objectively according to the likelihood that they will seek to escape and the risk that they would pose should they do so. The likelihood of deportation must be taken into account when considering foreign national prisoner's allocation to open conditions.

Probation Service

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences were committed by offenders under the supervision of the Probation Service during 2005-06. [75391]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information is not routinely collected in the form requested.

Data on crimes that are categorised as serious offences committed by offenders under the supervision of the Probation Service are available for the financial year 2004-05 in Table 5.6 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004".

This report is available at: www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1705.pdf

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation officers were employed by the Probation Service in each of the last five years. [75903]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data collected prior to one April 2003 are unreliable, and are not directly comparable with the more accurate figures collected since that time. The figures presented in the table show full-time equivalent (FTE) figures at the close of each quarter from 1 April 2003 to 31 December 2005.

		Probation officers[1]
2003-04	Quarter 1	5,831.10

[1] The 'Probation Officers' category includes the senior probation officer, senior practitioner, and probation officer job groups. Trainee probation officers have been excluded from these figures.

Release on Licence

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many UK national offenders were released on licence from prison in the last 12 months, broken down by type of offence. [74992]

John Reid: Information on the numbers of United Kingdom nationals received into prison establishments between April 2005 and March 2006, by type of offence, is contained within the following table drawn from the Prison Service IT System. The figures are restricted to those sentenced to one year or more as the majority of those with shorter sentences are not released on licence.

Receptions are used as a proxy for discharges because of concerns about the completeness of the available data on discharges.

Receptions into prison establishments of UK nationals, April 2005 to March 2006 by type of offence, sentence lengths of one year or more

Sexual Offences Act

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of section 73 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003; what recent representations he has received about the operation of this Act; and whether he plans to amend this Act. [75522]

Mr. Coaker: In 2005 the Government undertook a stock take into the effectiveness of the Sexual Offences Act 2003. During that review, the provisions of section 73 of the Act—exceptions to aiding, abetting and counselling—were generally welcomed as a necessary safeguard and helpful to those whose job it was to protect children from pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases or otherwise protect or promote the well-being of children. There are no plans to amend section 73 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003.

Torture

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the use in British courts of evidence obtained by torture or forcible methods overseas; and if he will make a statement. [64996]

Mr. McNulty: Evidence obtained as a result of any acts of torture by British officials, or with which British authorities were complicit, would not be admissible in criminal or civil proceedings in the UK. It does not matter whether the evidence was obtained here or abroad.

During the individual appeals against certification under powers provided under part four of the Anti-Terrorism, Crime and Security Act (ATCSA), the Special Immigration Appeals Commission (SIAC) emphatically rejected any suggestion that evidence relied upon by the Government was, or even may have been, obtained by torture. The Court of Appeal later confirmed the view of SIAC. This issue is currently before the House of Lords' Judicial Committee. It is not always possible to know where all intelligence information has come from or the precise circumstances under which it was obtained. The Security Service and Secret Intelligence Service receive material from a wide range of foreign intelligence services. The agencies evaluate the reliability of this intelligence against other information available to them. It is then passed, together with an assessment of reliability, to the Government.

It may be necessary in some circumstances to rely operationally on material which may have been obtained through the use of torture where it is considered necessary to do so, in particular for preventing terrorist attack and protecting life. The Government do not believe there is an absolute exclusionary rule preventing the use of such evidence in legal proceedings to assess the lawfulness of such executive action. Such a rule could endanger national security as it would undermine our ability to defend in court the decision made and therefore inhibit executive action to protect national security.

We do not condone torture in any way, nor would we carry out this completely unacceptable behaviour. However, we do have an obligation to protect national security and public safety. We would be deficient in this duty if we did not properly assess all the information available to us.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Biodiversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to her comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74407]

Vera Baird: Under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006, all public bodies have a duty to have regard to the conservation of biodiversity in the exercising of their functions. There is no statutory obligation on Departments to monitor the extent to which public bodies comply with this duty. However, we understand Defra is working with a wide range of partners to develop guidance for public bodies to support the implementation of this duty and will involve all relevant Departments on the development of guidance.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which Minister in her Department is responsible for monitoring her Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if she will make a statement. [73948]

Vera Baird: The Minister in the Department for Constitutional Affairs responsible for maintaining compliance under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 1974 is Baroness Ashton of Upholland.

Compensation Bill [Lords]

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will introduce new clauses and amendments to the Compensation Bill [Lords] to exempt (a) accidents occurring during the course of employment from Clause 1 of the Bill and (b) trades union legal schemes from Part 2 of the Bill; and if she will make a statement. [76000]

Bridget Prentice: The Government do not intend to introduce amendments on either of these issues. In relation to (a), the factor embodied in Clause 1 may be relevant in employers' liability cases, and it would change the law to provide otherwise. In relation to (b), exemptions will be achieved by secondary legislation. Independent trade unions (certified by the certification officer) will be exempted in respect of regulated services offered to their own members.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact on the amount recoverable from accident victims and insurers as a consequence of the enacting of Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill [Lords] for the purposes of benefit recoupment and the recovery of NHS outlays; and if she will make a statement. [76001]

Bridget Prentice: Clause 1 does not change the law, and will not therefore have any impact on these areas.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent representations she has received (a) in favour and (b) against Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill [Lords]; and if she will make a statement. [76002]

Bridget Prentice: A range of different organisations have published views and made representations on aspects of the Compensation Bill, including Clause 1, during passage of the Bill.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the legal profession on Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill; and if she will make a statement. [76003]

Bridget Prentice: The Government have held discussions with a number of organisations representing the legal profession during passage of the Compensation Bill, including the Law Society, the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers and the Personal Injury Bar Association.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions she has had with the judiciary on Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill [Lords]; and if she will make a statement. [76004]

Bridget Prentice: Informal discussions on the Bill took place with the judiciary prior to introduction, as is common practice.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many staff in her Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75101]

Vera Baird: 35 staff did not achieve an acceptable mark for the 2004-05 financial year. This represents 0.25 per cent. of the total workforce. For 2003-04 the corresponding figure is 23 staff which represents 0.17 per cent. of the total workforce. For 2002-03 the figure is 24 staff which represents 0.18 per cent: of the total workforce. Comparative figures for the 2005-06 financial year are not available as they are still being collected.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate her

Department has made of the number of (a) failed asylum seekers and (b) foreign nationals not from the Commonwealth or Irish Republic who are fraudulently on the electoral register. [73919]

Bridget Prentice: This information is not collected. Electoral registers are available for public inspection and anyone who believes that an ineligible person has been included may notify the ERO who may then make further inquiries as to the eligibility of that individual. Currently, it is an offence to fail to supply information to the ERO and knowingly supply false information on the annual canvass form. The Electoral Administration Bill, currently under consideration, strengthens the objection process and creates a new offence of supplying false information of any kind to an ERO, or failing to supply information in connection with registration, at any time. The electoral register does not specify the immigration or asylum status of individuals entered on it; however, the addition of a "nationality" box in the registration form does provide an opportunity for EROs to determine the eligibility of an applicant for inclusion in the register on the basis of their stated nationality.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 43W, on electoral registration officers, what estimate her Department has made of the cost of writing to each electoral registration officer to obtain the information on prosecutions brought for failing to return an electoral registration form. [75351]

Bridget Prentice: To obtain such information by writing to electoral registration officers (EROs) would exceed the threshold of £600 set for parliamentary questions. Furthermore, any records kept by EROs locally at their discretion would not necessarily distinguish between the cost of prosecutions brought specifically for failing to return an electoral registration form and the cost of any prosecutions brought for other electoral offences.

Legal Aid

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many claims for legal aid were (a) rejected and (b) successful in (i) England and (ii) Winchester in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement. [74848]

Vera Baird: Legal aid is administered by the Legal Services Commission (LSC) for both England and Wales combined. The following tables therefore include information for both England and Wales, as compared to Winchester.

For civil matters, the LSC records figures for applications received for legal aid and certificates issued. The following table shows the applications received and the certificates awarded for civil legal aid in Winchester, and England and Wales for each of the three previous years.

	Winchester		England and Wales
	Applications received	Certificates issued	Applications received	Certificates issued
2005-06	374	316	194,788	156,164
2004-05	380	324	193,305	155,464
2003-04	379	300	205,122	160,998

Notes:
Care should be taken not to confuse the certificates issued in any year as only relating to applications made in the same year. Certificates issued may relate to applications made in previous years. Additionally, certificates may not be issued following applications for a variety of reasons such as; the application being withdrawn or the matter being abandoned by the applicant, as well as being rejected.

For criminal matters, the vast majority of legal aid applications are made in the magistrates court. However, Winchester does not have one.

The following table shows the number of applications granted and refused in Winchester Crown court for representation in the Crown court, compared to all Crown court locations in England and Wales[1].

[1] These figures include a small number of applications granted in the magistrates court and extended by the Crown court.

	Winchester Crown court		Crown courts in England and Wales
	Applications granted	Applications refused	Applications granted	Applications refused
2005-06	210	1	12,777	225
2003-04	180	1	11,675	229

The number of legal aid applications for any specified geographical area should not be misinterpreted as being representative of the number of people within that area. The figures relate to the location of the court for criminal matters, and the location of the supplier for civil matters. For criminal matters it is possible for people from outside a specified location to have their applications decided by courts within it and vice versa. For civil matters, it is possible for people from outside a specified area to receive legal aid by suppliers within that area and vice versa.

Anne Milton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many applications for legal aid have been (a) made and (b) refused in each year since 1997. [75341]

Vera Baird: The following table gives information on applications for representation. Central records are not kept for matters such as civil legal help or criminal advice and assistance, as the decision whether to grant legal aid is taken by the service supplier, not the Legal Services Commission (LSC).

	1997-98	1998-99	1999-2000	2000-01	2001-02

[1] Before 2000, the Legal Aid Board administered legal aid. For civil matters, the LSC now records figures for applications received and certificates issued. Care should be taken not to confuse the certificates issued in any year as only relating to applications made in the same year. Additionally, certificates may not be issued following applications for a variety of reasons, such as the application being withdrawn or the matter being abandoned by the applicant, as well as being refused.
[2] These figures are estimates based on returns submitted by magistrates courts.

Postal Voting

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate the Government have made of the number of electors who registered for postal votes in each election in each year since the Representation of the People Act 2000 came into force, excluding elections with all-postal voting. [70598]

Bridget Prentice: The Government holds the following information on the number of postal voters in each election held since the RPA 2000 came into force:

UK general election 2001—1,758,055 electors

English local elections 2002 (non pilot regions)—4.9 per cent.[1]

Scottish parliamentary elections 2003—3.6 per cent.[1]

National Assembly for West Wales elections 2003—6.9 per cent.[1]

UK European parliamentary and local elections 2004 (excluding pilot regions)—2,507,272 electors[2]

UK general election 2005 - 5,362,501 electors[2]

2006 local elections—not yet available.

[1] No statistic showing the precise number of electors available.

Public Transport (Incentives)

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what incentives are available to encourage members of her staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75100]

Vera Baird: The Department for Constitutional Affairs offers interest free loans for the purchase of season tickets for travel to work by public transport and for bicycles (including safety equipment) which are available to all employees that have at least 2 months service. These advances are repayable in equal monthly instalments within the life of the ticket or over a maximum of 12 months for the purchase of the bicycle.

The Department also offers:

reimbursement of a Young Persons Railcard for employees under the age of 24.

reimbursement of standard public transport fares for new entrants under the age of 21 taking up an initial appointment who have to live away from home because of their workplace.

three free journeys by public transport to the parental home each year for single employees under 21, who are appointed or transferred from a post where they lived with their parents to a post beyond reasonable travelling distance and who live in lodgings.

Small Change Big Difference Campaign

Anne Milton: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps her Department has taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [72008]

Bridget Prentice: Over the past year the Department has been engaged in, and is developing, several activities that support this initiative. There has been a series of articles produced for the in-house magazine on a range of health topics, including diabetes and migraine, and more are planned including ones on healthy living and exercise. The Department runs stress courses to offer tips and strategies for managing stress. The occupational welfare team provides a range of information on health issues. The Department is also working towards implementation of the smoking ban in line with the impending legislation and, through the welfare team, has committed to providing information and support to those wishing to give up, both in the run up to and after implementation. As the programme of work on this initiative develops the Department of Health will be working across all of Government to ensure the programme joins up to promote maximum impact. DH is leading the implementation for the initiative as part of its cross-government commitment to deliver the public health "White Paper Choosing Health".

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many appeals against statements of special educational needs there have been in the most recently recorded 12 month period; how many were successful; and what percentage of successful appeals had involved legal representation. [75513]

Ms Harman: In 2004-05 the Special Educational Needs and Disability Tribunal registered 1,592 appeals from parents against the contents of statements of special educational needs. The Tribunal has decided 744 of these appeals and upheld 647 (41 per cent.), at least in part. Parents had legal representation in 229 (35 per cent.) of the upheld appeals.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the work his Department is undertaking in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [72811]

Hilary Benn [pursuant to the reply, 24 May 2006, Official Report, c. 1780-81W]: The figure given for DFID's spend in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) in 2001-02 was £7 million. This should have read £5.6 million, mostly on humanitarian interventions.

An estimate was made for DFID's expenditure in 2005-06. This was premature, however, as DFID's 2005-06 out-turn figures have yet to be confirmed but are expected to be finalised by the end of August 2006.

DFID funds available for the DRC this financial year were given as £63 million. The correct amount is £62 million.

I apologise for these errors in the original answer.

HIV/AIDS

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effect on treatment of HIV/AIDS in African countries of the departure of qualified doctors and nurses from the developing world for employment in the developed world. [75683]

Mr. Thomas: DFID supported analysis of the human resources for health crises in Africa for the High Level Forum for Health in November 2005. The migration of skilled health workers from poorer African countries to developed countries in Europe, the United States and elsewhere has a significant impact on the capacity of African national health services to deliver HIV and AIDS treatment, prevention and care. However, migration to other more developed African countries and internal migration from rural to urban areas are also important factors. Health worker shortages are exacerbated by AIDS-related mortality among the health work force. The result is an overburdened health work force and weak health systems with inadequate capacity to deliver services.

DFID is working at country level to address human resources capacity and support Governments to implement policies on retention, skill mix and deployment. For example, DFID is supporting the health sector in Malawi—one of the most severely affected countries, with £100 million over five years. About £55 million of this is earmarked for the Emergency Human Resources Programme of the Malawi Government. This programme is aiming to increase recruitment and retention of staff by raising health worker salaries by 50 per cent., providing housing and improving training. This is expected to double the number of nurses and triple the number of doctors in training—while using international volunteers to fill gaps in the meantime. DFID is also funding country HIV and AIDS programmes to mitigate the impact of HIV and AIDS on the health workers.

DFID is also working closely with the Department of Health (DH) to address "pull" incentives, preventing the targeting of developing countries in the international recruitment of health care professionals within the NHS through the Code of Practice for International Recruitment of Healthcare Professionals.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department. [69011]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments do not employ special advisers.

The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office (RCPO) and HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate (HMCPSI) book hotel accommodation for civil servants with First Option through an Office of Government Commerce framework agreement. The agreement enables the CPS, RCPO and HMCPSI to secure specifically negotiated rates and value for money in hotel accommodation. Individual discounts are not available to civil servants under the contract but a rebate is paid at the end of each year.

SFO books hotel accommodation through Expotel under an Office of Government Commerce framework agreement, unless exceptional circumstances apply. The Expotel agreement seeks the best rate within Government prescribed rates and also allows for a subsequent rebate.

The Treasury Solicitor's Office (TSol) and this Office do not have arrangements which provide discounts but bookings are made within Government prescribed rates except in exceptional circumstances.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Catering Supplies

Mr. Drew: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what environmental and social sustainability criteria are applied when purchasing food for the House dining rooms. [76016]

Nick Harvey: Last year, the House of Commons Commission approved and adopted an outline strategic plan covering the five years from 2006 until 2011. This plan explicitly states that the House administration must match current public service standards, including in the area of environmental protection. Food procurement tenders include consideration of bidders' environmental and ethical policies and procedures, but the precise evaluation criteria applied differ according to the nature of foods being supplied.

Refreshment Department (Alcohol Sales)

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what steps the House took to mark English Wine Week. [76800]

Nick Harvey: The Refreshment Department would have been pleased to support English Wine Week, which ran from 29 May until 6 June. This coincided with the spring bank holiday recess, so that most of the restaurants and bars in the House were closed. It was not considered viable to run a special promotion for the two days the House was sitting during this period.

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if the Commission will take steps to ensure that a Sussex sparkling wine is added to the House of Commons wine lists. [76690]

Nick Harvey: The Refreshment Department is always pleased to consider new wines for addition to its wine lists. The Director of Catering Services is happy to advise any suppliers how to apply to have their wines included on the House of Commons wine lists.

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if the Commission will take steps to ensure that Harvey's beer is considered for stocking in House of Commons bars during Cask Beer Week in September 2006. [76686]

Nick Harvey: The Refreshment Department supports the small independent brewers of Britain by offering a guest ale, changed weekly, in two of the House of Commons bars. This scheme does not operate during parliamentary recesses, when the bars are very quiet. It would therefore not be economic to support Cask Beer Week in September 2006 by stocking Harvey's or any other real ale. I have asked the Director of Catering Services to contact the hon. Member in relation to the prospects for offering Harvey's as a guest ale.

Staff Security Clearance

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the (a) shortest, (b) longest and (c) average time it has taken over the last 12 months to obtain security clearance for a House of Commons pass for hon. Members' staff working at Westminster; and if he will make a statement. [76008]

Nick Harvey: In the past 12 months it is estimated that the shortest time it has taken to obtain security clearance for a House of Commons pass has been approximately three weeks, the longest approximately 12 months, and the average approximately one month. This is dependent upon the nature of foreign connections, and the multiplicity of addresses which have to be checked by agencies both in this country and abroad.

As hon. Members have been informed, the Deputy Serjeant at Arms can in certain circumstances authorise the issue of a pass on the basis of satisfactory references pending the receipt of final clearances.

Tours

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission if he will estimate the unit cost of the (a) organisation of a tour of the House and (b) cost of the tour itself; and if he will make a statement. [75997]

Nick Harvey: In the financial year 2005-06, the cost of organising a Member's guided tour was around £50. Each tour may contain the guests of a single or several Members.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many tours requested by hon. Members the House provided in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [76006]

Nick Harvey: Between June 2005 and May 2006, 7,374 tours were organised for hon. Members of both Houses by the Central Tours Office, covering around 119,000 guests. Some tours contained the guests of more than one hon. Member.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what percentage of the House's senior staff are of minority ethnic origin; and if he will make a statement. [76007]

Nick Harvey: As at 31 March 2006, the House had 79 senior staff, 72 of whom have declared their ethnicity. One of these senior staff (1.4 per cent.) is identified as of minority ethnic origin.

The proportion of ethnic minority staff across all pay bands is 19 per cent. The Commission is committed to valuing diversity throughout its workforce, and the board of management has made a commitment in its 2006 corporate plan to monitor the development of a diverse workforce at all levels by establishing gender and ethnic profiles by band and role.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House how many of his staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77323]

Mr. Straw: The Office of the Leader of the House of Commons currently has 12 staff, with one aged over 55 years of age.

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited by his office in each of the last three years. [77324]

Mr. Straw: None, but I am 59.

IT Refreshment Scheme

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Leader of the House what the total cost is of the IT refreshment scheme to replace and install new computers for hon. Members; and how much of that cost is to be spent on (a) implementing, installing and administering the scheme, (b) leases of equipment and (c) licensing of software. [75670]

Mr. Straw: The cost of Members' IT installation and upgrade programme is borne mainly on the House of Commons: Members Estimate; but some costs are borne on the House of Commons: Administration Estimate which is the responsibility of the House of Commons Commission. The maximum estimated cash costs expected to be paid from the Members Estimate are:

	£000 Amount
Administration costs including surveys, storage and porterage	749
Installation charges	646
Equipment costs	3,085
Software costs	1,188

The figures are provisional at this stage, as they depend significantly on the choices Members themselves make about the amount, type and location of the equipment they require.

I understand that the costs borne on the Administration Estimate cannot easily be disaggregated from the other running costs of the Parliamentary ICT Service.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Leader of the House what percentage of hon. Members have had their leased equipment replaced under the IT refreshment scheme; and if he will list the hon. Members concerned. [75679]

Mr. Straw: 58 per cent. of Members have now received their new equipment. The IT refresh project is being undertaken in phases, and all Members will have been given an opportunity to refresh their equipment before the summer recess, provided forms are returned and survey and installation dates are agreed as set out in the guidance issued to Members. Equipment is loaned and not leased to Members and whether Members choose to use their allowance or not is a matter for them.

Party Political Funding

Philip Davies: To ask the Leader of the House when he expects to publish the Government's response to the Electoral Commission's report of December 2004 on the funding of political parties. [76559]

Mr. Straw: The Prime Minister announced on 16 March that there was to be an independent review of the funding of political parties. Sir Hayden Phillips is currently undertaking this review. It would neither be appropriate nor courteous to publish a response to the Commission's report prior to Sir Hayden Phillips reporting.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal Welfare

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average period was between (a) the state veterinary service and (b) his Department receiving urgent animal welfare complaints and the making of a visit to the premises being complained about in the latest period for which figures are available. [76339]

Mr. Bradshaw: Any complaints received by the Department are immediately passed to the state veterinary service (SVS). The SVS aims to respond within 24 hours of receiving a complaint. The figures for April 2005 to March 2006 show the average response time was 0.5 days.

Biofuels

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Government have to promote (a) the wider use of and (b) research into biodiesel. [75455]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Government announced in November 2005 that a Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation (RTFO) will be introduced from 2008 which will require all suppliers of transport fuels in the UK to ensure that a certain percentage of their total annual sales is made up of biofuels. The level of the obligation will rise from 2.5 per cent. in the financial year 2008-09 to 3.75 per cent. in 2009-10 and 5 per cent. in 2010-11. This should ensure that, by 2010, biodiesel sales in the UK will amount to over a billion litres a year—a 20-fold increase from where we are today.

This Department has funded research in recent years into different aspects of biofuel production and use, but none has considered individual biofuels in any detail. Our research has focused instead on the potential environmental and other impacts of significant use of biofuels in the longer term, and on the emissions consequences and economics of various bioethanol and biodiesel blends. Research into biofuels will continue as part of the work the Department has commissioned to develop a carbon and environmental assurance scheme to underpin the RTFO.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his policy is towards the encouragement of biofuels as an alternative energy source. [75892]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are committed to encouraging the most sustainable forms of biofuels for emissions savings as well as for security of supply reasons. That is why we announced in November 2005 that we will introduce a Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation in April 2008 which will require all suppliers of transport fuels in the UK to ensure that a certain percentage of their total annual sales is made up of biofuels (or, in the longer term, some other renewable transport fuel).

The level of the obligation will rise from 2.5 per cent. in the financial year 2008-09 to 3.75 per cent. in 2009-10 and 5 per cent. in 2010-11. These levels will deliver a significant increase on current sales and will mean that by 2010 the vast majority of UK forecourts will be supplying renewable fuels in the form of biodiesel and bioethanol. The RTFO will deliver real environmental benefits and is projected to save around 1 million tonnes of carbon by 2010.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent advice he has received on ways to improve the efficiency of testing cattle for bovine tuberculosis. [76330]

Mr. Bradshaw: The single intradermal comparative cervical tuberculin (SICCT) test is a well-established screening test for TB in cattle and the primary tool for live testing in Great Britain.

The SICCT is approved and recognised by the EU Commission and the International Animal Health Organisation (OIE) as the primary tool for the diagnosis of TB in cattle and other species, by virtue of its overall accuracy, robustness and relative simplicity. This has been demonstrated in several field evaluations conducted throughout the world.

The accuracy of any test is measured in terms of its specificity (proportion of uninfected animals identified as negative) and its sensitivity (proportion of infected animals detected as positive). The specificity for a correctly performed SICCT is above 99 per cent. Its sensitivity is between 77 per cent. and 95 per cent.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure adequate numbers of veterinary surgeons are available to test herds for bovine TB. [76331]

Mr. Bradshaw: We recognise the importance of ensuring sufficient resources are available to carry out bovine TB testing. My officials closely monitor the situation and meet regularly with the veterinary profession.

Last year the Government introduced legislation under the Veterinary Surgeons Act 1966 to enable technical staff in the State Veterinary Service to carry out TB tests. A pilot study into lay TB testing is due to conclude shortly. We will consult the veterinary profession and other interested parties on the results and any proposals to extend lay testing.

End-of-Life Vehicles

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps the Environment Agency has taken to implement the end-of-life vehicle legislation; [75656]

(2) how many operators have been prosecuted due to failure to apply for a site licence for storing and treating end-of-life vehicles. [75658]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) has transposed the End-of-Life Vehicles Directive (2000/53/EC) through the End-of-Life Vehicles Regulations 2003 (SI 2003/2635) and the End-of-Life Vehicles (Producer Responsibility) Regulations 2005 (SI 2005/263). DEFRA has responsibility for Part VII of the 2003 Regulations, on the keeping and treatment of waste motor vehicles, and these provisions are enforced by the Environment Agency (EA) in England and Wales.

All facilities treating un-depolluted end-of-life vehicles are required to have a permit, a condition of which is that the site in question must meet the minimum technical standards set down in Schedule 5 to the Regulations.

There are currently around 1,100 'Authorised Treatment Facilities' for ELVs. The EA has worked closely with DEFRA, DTI and the vehicle dismantling sector to produce practical treatment guidance. Sites that hold the necessary site licence are inspected by the EA to ensure that they meet required standards. The EA also investigates sites thought to be handling vehicles illegally.

In 2004, the EA took forward 15 prosecutions for offences involving the keeping or treatment of ELVs. The figure for 2005 was 30. There have been 13 in the first five months of 2006. These are cases where ELVs were the main, or a significant proportion of, the waste being handled illegally.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidelines have been issued by his Department to authorised treatment facilities licensed to store and treat end-of-life vehicles. [75657]

Mr. Bradshaw: 'Guidance for Authorised Treatment Facilities', a booklet providing guidance on depolluting end-of-life vehicles, has been issued by the Department and is available from:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/topics/elvehicledir.htm

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will list the operators in North Devon who have been issued with a licence for storing and treating end-of-life vehicles. [75659]

Mr. Bradshaw: The operators in North Devon who have been issued with a licence for storing and treating end-of-life vehicles are listed in the following table.

Company name (licence holder)	Address
Mr. R. Penfold, South Molton Metals	Pathfields Business Park, Quicks Close, Hacche Lane, South Molton, Devon
Esau's Vehicle Dismantlers, Mr. A. J. Esau and Mr. P. L. Cridge	Adjavin Lane, Clovelly Road, Bideford, Devon
Oxy Ltd., Stoneybridge Vehicle Dismantlers	Stoneybridge, Knowle, Braunton, Devon
James Sherlock BMW Motorcycles	3 Cooks Cross Industrial Estate, South Molton, Devon
Mr. A. C. Poulton, Deepmoor	Deepmoor, St. Giles in the Wood, Torrington, Devon
Mr. G. Holmes and Mr. P. Holmes	No 2 Yard, Patchacott Cross, Patchacott, Seaworthy, Devon
Gilead Foundation Charity	Risdon Farm, Jacobstowe, Okehampton, Devon
Mr. Stephen W. Bolt and Mr. Michael Pilivant	3 Oaklands Drive, Okehampton, Devon
Mr. C. E. K. Patience	29 Yelland Road, Fremington, Barnstaple, Devon
Bedminster Estates Limited	Seven Brethren Industrial Estate, Barnstaple, Devon
Mr. H. and Mrs. E Penfold	Sunnyside, Station Road, South Molton, Devon

In order to treat end-of-life vehicles, licensed sites also need to meet the requirements of the End-of-Life Vehicle Regulations 2003. To do this they need to have the necessary infrastructure in place to be an authorised treatment facility (ATF). The Environment Agency inspects and approves such facilities under these Regulations. At present only those sites listed below are both licensed and authorised to treat end-of-life vehicles.

Company name (licence holder)	Address
Mr. R. Penfold t/a South Molton Metals	Quicks Close, Hacche Lane, South Molton, Devon
Esau's vehicle dismantlers	Clovelly Road, Bideford, Devon
Oxy Ltd. t/a Stoneybridge Vehicle Dismantlers	Stoneybridge, Knowle, Braunton, Devon
James Sherlock BMW Motorcycles	3 Cooks Cross Industrial Estate, South Molton, Devon

There are a number of sites in North Devon that are registered as exempt from the requirement to have a waste management licence under paragraph 45 of the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994 (as amended). This exemption allows for the storage of dry ferrous and non-ferrous metals and storage of depolluted end-of-life vehicles. It does not allow for the storage and treatment of un-depolluted vehicles for which a licence would be required.

Export Health Certificates

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of export health certificates have been granted within agreed timeframes in each year since 1997. [76340]

Mr. Bradshaw: The state veterinary service (SVS) only holds reliable and accessible figures for the period from January to April 2006. Applications for export certificates need to be made 10 working days before export. The following table shows the SVS success rate for timely applications:

	Success rate (percentage)
January 2006	99.7
February 2006	99.8
March 2006	99.5
April 2006	99.2

This compares favourably with the SVS's target of processing 95 per cent. of timely applications within the agreed time frame.

Poultry Keepers

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many keepers of poultry with flocks of fewer than 50 there are; and what estimate he has made of how many chickens this represents. [76176]

Mr. Bradshaw: The June Survey of Agriculture and Horticulture for 2005 shows that there are approximately 21,000 registered poultry holdings in England with fewer than 50 birds. This represents approximately 350,000 chickens, or 0.3 per cent. of the national flock.

These figures only represent poultry kept on registered holdings in England. There are likely to be a significant number of poultry keepers with fewer than 50 birds that are kept on unregistered holdings, including domestic premises. No estimate is available for unregistered keepers.

Recycling

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to increase the level of recycling; and what additional resources will be granted to (a) local authorities and (b) the Waste Resources Action Plan to achieve this. [76043]

Mr. Bradshaw: The review of England's Waste Strategy, due to be published later this year, will put forward a range of measures to build on recent improvements in recycling. The proposed target increases for household waste recycling are 40 per cent. by 2010, 45 per cent. by 2015 and 50 per cent. by 2020.

Local authorities' main source of funding for waste management is the environmental, protective and cultural services (EPCS) block of the revenue support grant, distributed by central Government each year. In the last Spending Review (SR2004) the Government announced an increase in the EPCS block of £888 million by 2007-08 over 2004-05. A further £260 million through the waste performance and efficiency grant and £535 million in private finance initiative credits were also made available by 2007-08.

For 2006-07, the Waste Resources and Action Plan (WRAP) has been allocated £10.8 million for market development work, £40 million under the Waste Implementation Programme (to divert biodegradable municipal waste from landfill), £9 million under the Business Resource Efficiency and Waste programme and £5.5 million under the Aggregate Sustainable Levy Fund.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will amend local authority league tables on recycling to give greater weight to waste minimisation. [76687]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 12 June 2006]: Local authorities are assessed against a number of indicators on household waste which include the percentage sent for recycling or composting and the total weight collected per head. The Audit Commission publishes information on local authority performance against these indicators each year. This is available from the Audit Commission website:

http://www.audit-commission.gov.uk/performance/dataprovision.asp

Currently, there is no local authority statutory performance standard for waste minimisation. However, as part of the review of England's Waste Strategy, Defra is looking at what levels and what forms of targets and indicators will, in the longer-term, be the most efficient at continuing the recent improvements we have seen in waste performance. The review will take into account existing policies designed to make waste management more sustainable, and consider how best to present information on local authority waste performance, consistent with sustainable waste management objectives.

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of (a) plastic and (b) glass bottles were recycled in each of the last five years. [75564]

Mr. Bradshaw: Each year the Department publishes its Packaging Data Note (which can be found on the Defra website), giving the overall tonnages of all glass and plastic packaging waste recycled each year. These are shown in the following tables.

Glass packaging waste recycled

	Tonnes
2001	766,000
2002	747,000
2003	862,000
2004	1,050,000
2005	1,260,000

Plastic packaging waste recycled

	Tonnes
2001	270,000
2002	360,000
2003	321,000

2005 figures are subject to confirmation. It is estimated that of the total amount of glass packaging waste recycled in 2004, approximately 75 per cent. were glass bottles. Of the total amount of plastic packaging waste recycled, about 10 per cent. is estimated to have been plastic bottles.

The Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 2005 place an obligation on producers who put packaging on the market to recover and recycle packaging waste. The packaging targets increase each year and we expect the amount of glass and plastic packaging waste (including bottles) recycled to also increase.

Supermarkets

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether his Department will give evidence to the forthcoming Competition Commission inquiry into the impact of supermarkets on market towns and out-of-town superstores in rural areas. [74503]

Barry Gardiner: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1129.

My noble Friend Lord Rooker, the Minister for Sustainable Farming and Food has since written to the Competition Commission to highlight a number of areas which the Commission may wish to consider as part of its investigation. In doing so, he confirmed that the Department is willing to provide the Commission with any assistance or information it may request. A copy has been placed in the House Library and on Defra's website.

Waste Facility (Wrexham)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the closure of the agricultural waste collection facility near Wrexham. [76045]

Mr. Bradshaw: I understand the facility which was approved for the collection of fallen stock was closed on 26 May when council officers inspected the plant after members of the public raised health concerns over the number of dead carcases on site.

The local authority and state veterinary service is now working with the facility to clear the backlog of carcases with a view to reinstating the approval of the site to begin receiving fallen stock again as soon as possible. In the mean time farmers in the area have been given a choice of alternative collectors and a good fallen stock collection service remains available to them under the National Fallen Stock Scheme.

Waste Management

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of increased incineration of waste on the environment. [75568]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra published the independent Review of the Environmental and Health Effects of Waste Management, in 2004, which was peer reviewed by the Royal Society. The review concluded that, based on the evidence from studies so far, the treatment of municipal solid waste—including by incineration—has, at most, a minor impact on human health and the environment. Defra has also recently published a study, "Impact of Energy from Waste and Recycling Policy on UK Greenhouse Gas Emissions", in support of a review of the Government's waste strategy. This is available on the Defra website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/waste/strategy/pdf/ermreport.pdf

9 per cent. of waste is currently incinerated in England, but an increase is likely to be needed to be able to meet landfill directive targets, despite big improvements in waste recycling and minimisation. Recovering energy from waste through incineration produces many fewer greenhouse gas emissions than landfilling. Deriving energy from biodegradable waste also helps to offset fossil fuel generation.

The Environment Agency ensures that emissions and other outputs from waste management facilities are within the limits set by the EU and the UK Government to minimise any negative impact. Incinerators are also required to conform to tighter emission standards than other types of combustion plants.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of the UK's waste was (a) recycled and (b) sent to landfill in the last period for which figures are available. [75574]

Mr. Bradshaw: In 2002-03, the estimated proportion of controlled waste which was landfilled in the UK was 43 per cent. In the same year, the estimated proportion which was recycled or reused was 42 per cent.

This encompasses waste collected from household, industrial, commercial, construction and demolition sources.

Whaling

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of whales killed for scientific research in each year since the international moratorium on commercial whaling was introduced, broken down by species. [77385]

Mr. Bradshaw: Up to 2005 the number of whales taken each year, by species and by country for scientific whaling (since the moratorium was introduced in 1986) are shown in the following table as reported to the International Whaling Commission.

	Country	Species taken	Number

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the UK's objectives are for the next International Whaling Commission meeting. [77386]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK's key aims are to resist any attempts to end the moratorium on commercial whaling and resist threats to weaken or remove the conservation agenda of the International Whaling Commission (IWC). We will also highlight the cruelty involved in whaling, and promote the adoption of a new whale sanctuary in the South Atlantic. Furthermore, we will strongly urge Japan, Iceland and Norway, to cease their whaling activities.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what changes to the present international whaling arrangements a majority of votes at the International Whaling Commission could achieve. [77387]

Mr. Bradshaw: Although Japan and her allies may, for the first time, gain a simple majority at the next annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission (IWC), such a majority would not be sufficient to overturn the moratorium on commercial whaling (which requires a ¾ majority). However, it would enable them to determine the IWC agenda, delete certain key conservation items and change the rules of procedure to their ultimate benefit.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who the member states are of the International Whaling Commission; and which are eligible to vote. [77388]

Mr. Bradshaw: The International Whaling Commission, as of 12 June, has 70 member Contracting Governments: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Belize, Benin, Brazil, Cambodia, Cameroon, Chile, People's Republic of China, Costa Rica, Cote d'Ivoire, Czech Republic, Denmark, Dominica, Finland, France, Gabon, The Gambia, Germany, Grenada, Guatemala, Republic of Guinea, Hungary, Iceland, India, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Republic of Korea, Kiribati, Luxembourg, Mali, Republic of Marshall Islands, Mauritania, Mexico, Monaco, Mongolia, Morocco, Nauru, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Oman, Palau, Panama, Peru, Portugal, Russian Federation, San Marino, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, San Marino, Senegal, Slovak Republic, Solomon Islands, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Togo, Tuvalu, United Kingdom, United States.

How many of these member states have voting rights will be determined only at the opening of the next annual International Whaling Commission meeting (IWC58) on 16 June, when it is known whether member states have paid their annual subscription and whether their credentials are in order. Even then the position can change during the meeting.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which member states of the International Whaling Commission are (a) in favour of and (b) against (i) commercial and (ii) scientific whaling. [77475]

Mr. Bradshaw: Issues are very rarely put to the International Whaling Commission (IWC) in such stark terms. As such, the UK Government cannot determine with absolute confidence how each IWC member state might vote on removing the moratorium on commercial whaling or in protest against scientific whaling.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

AK-47s

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether a consignment of AK-47 type assault rifles has recently been imported from Bosnia into the UK. [75595]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available.

Belvedere Incinerator

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to make a decision on the proposed Belvedere incinerator. [76651]

Malcolm Wicks: I expect a decision to be announced very shortly.

Building Industry

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what support his Department is giving to the TrustMark scheme in the building industry. [75174]

Margaret Hodge: The TrustMark scheme has been developed jointly by Government, industry and consumer stakeholders to raise standards in the domestic repair, maintenance and improvement sector and to provide better information to consumers. The TrustMark scheme grew out of the Government's 2001 manifesto commitment to tackle cowboy builders.

DTI licensed TrustMark Ltd. (a not-for-profit company, limited by guarantee) on 19 August 2005 to operate the framework. This involves assessing and licensing compliant membership organisations ("Approved Operators") to use the logo, and monitoring their continued compliance. Approved Operators can then license compliant members. There are currently 10 Approved Operators (with further applications being considered) and around 6,500 licensed members.

Our aim is that, over time, improved performance as a result of TrustMark will enhance the construction industry's reputation and improve consumer confidence leading to higher volumes of work and better levels of consumer satisfaction.

DTI is supporting TrustMark Ltd. with a grant of £2 million over two years, ending March 2007.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department since April 2005, broken down by Act. [76911]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is as follows:

No legislation introduced by my Department received Royal Assent.

2006

Consumer Credit Act
51(1)	Penalty for false information. In addition to the new offence created under Section 51 (1), it is an offence under Section 39 (1) of the Consumer Credit Act 1974 for any person to engage in activities for which a licence is required under the Act when he does not have a licence covering those activities and the 2006 Act makes debt administration and the provision of credit information services new licensable activities. Hence, the ambit of Section 39 (1) is extended.

Departmental Expenditure

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from his Department in each of the last five years. [71809]

Jim Fitzpatrick: From 2003-04 the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from the Department were as listed, in alphabetical order, as follows. Information at this level of detail relating to prior years is not held on the Department's current financial system, and cannot be retrieved without incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what opportunities exist for people to work beyond retirement age in his Department. [69006]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Staff may retire on reaching the age of 60 or work until they are 65 or retire at any time between 60 and 65 subject to giving three months notice. Staff in the senior civil service may work beyond 60 if there is a business requirement for them to do so. For all other staff the current maximum retirement age is 65 and they are not retained after that age other than in cases of exceptional departmental need.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69008]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following statistics refer to Staff in Post at 1 April 2006.

Percentage of staff in post in the DTI

Grade[1]	Male	Female	Declared disability
Senior civil service	72	28	4
Band C	65	35	6
Band B	55	45	9
Band A	37	63	12
Fast stream	52	48	6
DTI total[2]	57	43	8

[1] Grade bands—the grade structure at the DTI is split into three bands. The equivalent civil service grades are as follows: Band C—senior executive officer (SEO) to grade 6 Band B—executive officer (EO) to higher executive officer (HEO) Band A—administrative assistant (AA) to administrative officer (AO)
[2] Including UK Trade and Investment and Office of Manpower Economics
Note:
Departmental records of disabled staff are solely based on voluntary declaration of disability under the Disability Discrimination Act and not connected in any way to a formal register of disability.

Minimum Wage

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Department has considered implementing a higher minimum wage in areas where the overall cost of living is higher. [76718]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There are no plans to set different minimum wage rates for different areas or regions. There are often greater variations in pay within regions than between regions, and this would be complex to monitor and enforce. Single national rates are less bureaucratic and more easily understood for all concerned.

Mobile Phones

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of mobile phones in circulation in England and Wales in each of the last five years. [75557]

Margaret Hodge: The Department does not hold the information that my hon. Friend requested nor is it available centrally and to obtain such information would entail disproportionate cost. However, research carried out by Ofcom found that the number of mobile phone subscribers in the UK rose from almost 45 million in 2001 to more than 64 million by the end of 2005.

Sayers Bakery

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what notice of redundancies he has received in respect of Sayers Bakery, Lorenzo Drive, Liverpool; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement. [76696]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Advance notification of the proposed redundancies at Sayers Confectionery Limited., Lorenzo Drive, Liverpool, has been received. The information was passed to the Manager of Norris Green Jobcentre plus, who has arranged for staff to visit the site to assist those employees who are facing redundancy. The Jobcentre plus offers access to a range of support schemes, from the new deal and the jobseekers allowance through to more focused schemes designed to help those caught up in restructuring. It provides information on job searching; compiling CVs; further education and training for individuals who need to develop new skills; benefits information; etc. The help required is agreed in discussion with the employer, and in liaison with the local Government Office and the Local Learning and Skills Council.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people have responded to his consultation on Sunday trading; and if he will list the persons invited to his stakeholder conference on the subject. [74074]

Mr. McCartney: From 13 January to 14 April the DTI asked for views and evidence on all aspects of extending Sunday shop opening hours. We have received around 1,000 responses. We intend to publish a summary of the responses on the DTI website (www.dti.gov.uk/consumers/buying-selling/Sunday%20Shopping) within three months of the close of this consultation.

On 10 May we held a stakeholder conference, attended by a wide range of stakeholders, where Indepen Consulting Ltd. presented their cost-benefit analysis and participants discussed the assumptions and findings. This was followed by optional forums where we gathered views on the impact on society, the retail sector and employees, and also what can be learnt from international comparisons.

We wrote to around 150 organisations including retailers, trade associations, trade unions, faith groups and groups with an interest in family life to make them aware of the conference. Details of the conference and how to sign up were posted on the DTI website and we also placed an advertisement in a number of retail trade publications. A report of the conference with a list of the organisations that attended, will be published on the DTI website shortly.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casinos

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what methodology the Casino Advisory Panel is using (a) to consider the social impact of new casinos and (b) to assess local opposition to new casinos in its work allocating casino licences. [77062]

Mr. Caborn: The role of the Casino Advisory Panel is to advise the Secretary of State on the areas for the 17 new casinos permitted by the Gambling Act 2005, which will provide the best possible test of social impact, not to measure that impact. The panel is also required to ensure that the areas selected are willing to license a new casino and that they include areas in need of regeneration.

No earlier than three years after the award of the first premises licence, the Government will ask the Gambling Commission to advise on whether the introduction of the new types of casinos has led to an increase in problem gambling or is increasing that risk.

All local authorities who put proposals to the panel were asked to include details of their research into local opinion.

In announcing its short list of casino bids the panel has asked any interested members of the public to write to it expressing their views on the short listed areas, whether in support or in opposition.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations (a) she and (b) the Casino Advisory Panel has received in the last six months criticising the methodologies used by the Casino Advisory Panel in its work. [77063]

Mr. Caborn: There have been no representations criticising the methodology used by the Casino Advisory Panel.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the Parliamentary Ombudsman have been (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by her Department since 1997. [76263]

Mr. Lammy: There were no occasions where the Department rejected or partially rejected recommendations of a report from the Parliamentary Ombudsman.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what incentives are available to encourage members of her staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75120]

Mr. Lammy: The vast majority of staff already use public transport. There are no car parking spaces, other than for disabled staff. We provide interest-free loans for the purchase of public transport season tickets and the purchase of bicycles. We are currently upgrading on-site facilities for cyclists.

Tourism

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to promote tourism in South East Essex; and if she will make a statement. [75652]

Mr. Woodward: The Regional Development Agencies have had responsibility for tourism support and promotion at a regional level since 2003. My Department contributes £3.6 million a year towards this in grant-in-aid.

The East of England Development Agency (EEDA) works with the Essex Development and Regeneration Agency (ExDRA), as the body delegated responsibility for promoting tourism in Essex by the county council.

Initiatives that are directly being supported by EEDA include a tourism strategy for Essex which incorporates the Thames Gateway and Haven Gateway areas of the county. In addition EEDA is working with the Arts Council on cultural development and tourism in the Southend borough.

SCOTLAND

Biodiversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73939]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office have no responsibilities in relation to section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to him comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74397]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office have no responsibilities in relation to section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73964]

David Cairns: None.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what incentives his Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73058]

David Cairns: All staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) and, where appropriate, may avail themselves of the schemes offered by those Departments.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69100]

David Cairns: There have been no Ministers of State in the Scotland Office during the last three years. All travel by Ministers is undertaken in accordance with the terms of the "Ministerial Code" and "Travel by Ministers" which state that when travelling on official business, Ministers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements.

Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75272]

David Cairns: I refer the hon. Member to the technical note which was placed in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90W, following a response at oral questions by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury. Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual departments but for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in Table 1 of the technical note.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73059]

David Cairns: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the department who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 31 May 2006 are shown in the following table.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	1	2
Added years	3	6

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in his Department in each of the last three years. [69105]

David Cairns: The staff in the Scotland Office are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs; both Departments provide access to training and development opportunities. The Scotland Office does not hold information in the form requested; however, the total direct expenditure on training was:

2003-04	23,482
2004-05	11,123
2005-06 (Estimate)	13,370

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Community Integration

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department is taking to encourage community integration. [76450]

Meg Munn: The Secretary of State is developing the Commission on Integration and Cohesion's scope to ensure that it contributes to the delivery of the new Department's strategic priorities. We expect to make an announcement about the way ahead before the summer recess.

The creation of the new Department for Communities and Local Government gives a renewed impetus to our work of encouraging integration with its powerful new remit to promote community cohesion, equality and civil renewal along with its responsibilities for housing, urban regeneration, planning and local government.

Council Tax (Pensioners)

John Penrose: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many copies of council tax bills for 2006-07 he has received from pensioners. [65110]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

4,487 copies of council tax bills for 2006-07 have been received by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister as at 21 April 2006.

Digital Challenge Competition

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to include the Digital Challenge Competition in the Transformational Government work programme. [75921]

Mr. Woolas: The Digital Challenge competition is an integral part of the programme outlined in Connecting the UK: the Digital Strategy, of which Transformational Government is also a part.

The Digital Challenge competition has the potential to make a real difference to people's lives. There are three overarching criteria for the winning bid which are fundamental requirements and which also reflect the principles outlined in Transformational Government:

Empowerment

The winning bid must show how they will use ICT to give new choice, voice and empowerment to citizens; it should be about enabling citizens to participate in their communities, as well as gaining access to services.

Service Transformation

The winning bid must demonstrate innovation in changing how we offer services to people—using ICT to transform the way services are provided, used and experienced.

Efficiency

Local authorities must show that after year one their initiatives are sustainable and cost effective and be prepared to showcase these to other local authorities in years two and three, acting as the UK exemplar.

The Digital Challenge is supported across government by many departments. Learning and evaluation of the winning bid and runners-up will be used to inform the development of Transformational Government programmes.

Home Information Packs

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the legal status of home condition reports will be; when home information packs are introduced; and for how long the Condition Report will be valid. [73899]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The regulations to be laid shortly will specify that Home Condition Reports will be valid documents once they are registered. The regulations will also specify that buyers, sellers and mortgage lenders can legally rely on Home Condition Reports. Home inspectors will be required to have in place suitable indemnity insurance.

The regulations will require that Home Condition Reports must be no more than three months old when marketing begins, but there will be no requirement for sellers to update them after this. We expect the industry to develop cheap solutions for updating packs where the seller wishes to do so.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many home inspectors are in training; what qualifications are required to enter training; and how many home inspectors she expects to have in place in each local authority area in England by 1 June 2007. [73900] Yvette Cooper [holding answer 5 June 2006]: As of 30April 2006, over 4,400 potential home inspectors were in training. The current qualification, the ABBE Diploma in Home Inspection, is open to people with different levels of previous experience, but all candidates must satisfy all parts of the Diploma. This includes providing a portfolio of evidence demonstrating the required skills and experience, and passing the ABBE examination.

We have estimated that the number of home inspectors required in England and Wales by 1 June 2007, will be between 5,000 and 7,400. The 'Report on the Number of Home Inspectors Required from Introduction of Home Information Packs' published by DCLG on 23 May 2006 shows the number of inspectors expected to be required in each of the English regions and Wales. I have deposited a copy in the Library of the House.

Housing

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average waiting time was for a council property with disabled access in (a) Leeds and (b) the West Yorkshire region in the latest period for which figures are available. [75490]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 7 June 2006]: Information in the form requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what plans she has to (a) build and (b) supply council housing for those with serious disabilities in (i) Leeds and (ii) the West Yorkshire region; [75491]

(2) what plans her Department has to improve the provision of council housing for those with serious disabilities in (a) Leeds and (b) the West Yorkshire region. [75492]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 7 June 2006]: We have a duty to deliver housing appropriate to the needs of those with serious disabilities. Housing Associations are now the main providers of new social housing. Regional Housing Boards recommend the allocation of resources to deliver regional and sub-regional priorities identified in Regional Housing Strategies. The Housing Corporation has invested £3.3 million for 54 new supported housing units in West Yorkshire between 2004-06. For the period 2006-08, £4.2 million has been allocated to provide 95 new supported housing units in West Yorkshire.

In addition, Leeds are delivering through the private finance initiative high-quality accommodation and support services for people with learning disabilities. In addition to specialist provision, we continue to enable people with serious disabilities to live in their own homes if they wish to do so, with the appropriate level of care. Council housing adaptations are resourced through Council's Housing Revenue Account, or from other financial resources available to the local authority. Local authority tenants are statutorily entitled to assistance under the Disabled Facilities Grant programme but the present financial arrangements preclude the ODPM ring fenced fund being used for the provision of such adaptations for LA tenants. In the private sector, each year around 30,000 applicants benefit from a Disabled Facilities Grant (DFG), which since 1997 has increased from £57 million to £103 million in 2005-06. Leeds allocation for 2006-07 is £1.5 million, a 37 per cent. increase. Provision for suitable accommodation will also be increased through our decision to implement the Lifetime Homes Standard through the new Code for Sustainable Homes.

I also understand that Leeds city council is preparing a Disability Housing Strategy and a Learning Disabilities Strategy (Valuing People), which will set out the approach that the authority needs to take in future years for provision of new housing which meets the needs of the seriously disabled in our communities.

Greg Mulholland: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people with serious disabilities are on the waiting list for council housing in (a) Leeds and (b) the West Yorkshire region. [75496]

Yvette Cooper: Information in the form requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Infrastructure (Sussex)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to ensure timely development of infrastructure to keep pace with housing construction in (a) West Sussex and (b) Mid Sussex. [64450]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 19 April 2006]: I have been asked to reply.

Government have increased overall spending in the south east since 2000 by 50 per cent. from £30 billion to £45 billion, including a 244 per cent. increase in housing and community funding, 67 per cent. increase in health, 59 per cent. in transport and 58 per cent. in education.

The South East Plan has been recently submitted to Government and sets out the regional assembly's views on required house building levels in the south east to 2026. This work has been prepared in partnership with local councils, and so takes account of local assessments of need. In its draft the assembly has taken a view of infrastructure requirements across the region, and this will be debated at the forthcoming examination in public. In due course, the Government will give their approval to the final version, which will certainly take into account the issue of infrastructure delivery, on the basis of the best information available at the time.

The Government response to the Barker report included:

a cross-cutting review in the run-up to CSR 07 to co-ordinate infrastructure provision across Departments; consultation on the Government's response to Kate Barker's recommendation for a Planning-Gain Supplement (PGS) to help finance infrastructure and ensure that local authorities share in the benefits growth brings.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will announce the local authorities' (a) capital grants for 2006-07 and (b) indicated grants for 2007-08. [46138]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

Information on capital grants issued to local authorities is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much rates support grant was given to Lancashire county council over the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [53372]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

The following table shows the amount of formula grant provided to Lancashire county council for the period 1998-99 to 2007-08, together with the increase year-on-year on a like-for-like basis after adjusting for changes in funding and function. Formula grant comprises revenue support grant, redistributed business rates and, for authorities with responsibility for policing, principal formula police grant. It is not appropriate to show just revenue support grant as the amount for England is dependant on the amount of redistributed business rates available for England in the year.

The large change in the level of formula grant in 2006-07 is due to the transfer of schools funding to the Dedicated Schools Grant.

	Previous year's adjusted formula grant	Current year's formula grant	Change in formula grant	Percentage change in formula grant
1998-99	559.359	578.211	18.852	3.4
1999-2000	578.211	601.844	23.633	4.1
2000-01	601.843	628.203	26.360	4.4
2001-02	624.510	644.495	19.984	3.2
2002-03	623.966	650.639	26.673	4.3
2003-04	680.497	712.003	31.506	4.6
2004-05	691.061	733.177	42.116	6.1
2005-06	740.515	779.547	39.032	5.3
2006-07	215.765	222.766	7.001	3.2
2007-08	222.317	232.482	10.165	4.6

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which local authorities make provision for their councillors to hold a budget which they can spend on approved projects and organisations in their own wards. [76274]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government in respect of which local authorities the Government are proposing to reduce their support for borrowing for capital expenditure; and if she will make a statement. [76617]

Mr. Woolas: Government support for borrowing by local authorities is issued as part of the Formula Grant Settlement. Formula Grant is unhypothecated and so capital support is not provided as a separate funding stream. The amount issued is calculated on a formulaic basis and therefore the Government do not intervene by reducing support to individual local authorities.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the Government's policy is on supported borrowing for capital expenditure by Buckinghamshire county council; and if she will make a statement. [76618]

Mr. Woolas: Government support for borrowing by local authorities is issued as part of the Formula Grant Settlement. Formula Grant is unhypothecated and so capital support is not provided as a separate funding stream. The amount issued to Buckinghamshire county council, as with all local authorities, is calculated on a formulaic basis and therefore the Government do not intervene by reducing support to individual local authorities.

Mixed Communities Initiative

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will make a statement on the Mixed Communities Initiative. [76449]

Yvette Cooper: The mixed communities approach is one element of our strategy to tackle concentrated deprivation and create sustainable communities for all. It brings together social, economic and physical regeneration, alongside essential improvements in public services, in order to transform failing communities into ones able to attract and retain households on a wide range of incomes. The Government are currently working with a number of locally led and managed projects in order to develop mixed communities in some of our most disadvantaged areas, while also testing out approaches to encourage mixed communities more widely. One such project is based in Coventry.

Parliamentary Questions

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she will answer question 65110, tabled on 19 April to the Deputy Prime Minister. [73584]

Mr. Woolas: I have answered the hon. Member's question today, 13 June 2006.

Staff Discipline

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many civil service staff formerly working in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have been disciplined as a result of breaches of rules contained in the departmental staff handbook in each year since 2001; and if she will make a statement. [76238]

Angela E. Smith: Information on the number of disciplinary cases is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Supported Housing

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the effect of the introduction of Supporting People on the safety and security of staff in supported housing. [76226]

Mr. Woolas: Supporting People is a national programme which funds and enables local provision of housing-related support services. The programme went live on 1 April 2003, and brought together a range of pre-existing services and funding streams under a single strategic framework. This included the establishment of national quality standards—the Quality Assessment Framework—which include, among many other matters, ensuring proper procedures for risk assessment and health and safety of staff and against which all of these services have now been assessed.

While no specific assessment has been made by DCLG of the effect of the introduction of Supporting People on the safety and security of staff in supported housing, the Audit Commission national report on Supporting People (published in October 2005) reported that the Quality Assessment Framework has been effective in raising standards.

DEFENCE

Military Units (Oxfordshire)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which military units from (a) the UK, (b) the United States and (c) other nations have been based in Oxfordshire in each of the last five years; and where each unit has been based. [76412]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Bearskins

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent research he has commissioned on whether animals used to provide bearskins are killed humanely; and if he will make a statement. [76169]

Mr. Ingram: The pelts used to provide bearskins are provided by traders operating under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Authorities. Those pelts that are provided are certified under the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). Details on the manner in which the bears are killed are a matter for the Canadian Authorities. The UK MOD requirement for fresh bearskins has been reduced through the operation of a refurbishment programme.

Defence Intelligence Staff

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 20 April 2006, Official Report, column 767W, on the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre, from which units of the US armed forces the two American personnel are drawn. [76414]

Mr. Ingram: The US Army Exchange Officer is a member of the US Army Intelligence Corp (304th MI Battalion, 3rd MI Brigade).

The US Air Force Exchange Officer is from the Intelligence Branch of the US Air Force.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether each recommendation in the Butler Review related to the Defence Intelligence Staff was accepted by the Government; and what progress has been made in meeting each recommendation which was accepted. [76409]

Mr. Ingram: The Government's response to the Butler Review was presented to Parliament in March 2005 (Cm 6492) and its response to the recommendations regarding the Defence Intelligence Staff (DIS) is in Chapter 7.

Lord Butler recommended that the relevant work of the DIS should be more closely integrated with the rest of the intelligence community. The DIS is now fully integrated into the central intelligence requirements and priorities process, although with the acknowledgement that the Ministry of Defence remains ultimately responsible for providing the DIS with its direction.

Lord Butler recommended that consideration should be given to the provision of proper channels for the expression of dissent within the DIS. As the Government response indicated, the MOD had already introduced new arrangements for raising issues of conscience and professional concern, including dissent, in order to address (inter alia) the concerns expressed by Lord Butler. The procedure for handling matters of conscience or professional concern was promulgated to staff in a standing instruction in March 2005.

Lord Butler recommended that in future the Deputy Chief of Defence Intelligence should be an intelligence specialist. The MOD recognises the advantage of appointing an intelligence specialist to this role, but as the post requires a wider skills base, increased staff development effort, including a leadership programme for members of the DIS, has been introduced and will enable more personnel with intelligence experience to be considered for the post.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which bodies in addition to the Defence intelligence staff constitute the UK defence intelligence community. [76410]

Mr. Ingram: The bodies which make up the UK Defence intelligence community are the Defence intelligence staff, the J2 branch at the permanent joint headquarters (PJHQ) and the single service intelligence organisations. Operational deployments will also have intelligence elements.

The PJHQ J2 branch act in conjunction with the rest of the Defence intelligence community. Each of the single services has an intelligence branch at their respective front line command headquarters. These are N2 (HQ fleet), G2 (HQ land command) and A2 (HQ strike command). The services also have specialist intelligence units to support them, such as the Air Warfare Centre, the Army Intelligence Corps and the RAF Intelligence Branch.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature was of the charges brought against them. [73966]

Mr. Watson: Records are not kept centrally on how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by the Department in each year since 2001 and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Low Flying

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying flights there were in the (a) Highlands of Scotland and (b) South West of Scotland and Anglo-Scottish border tactical training area in each year between 1998-99 and 2004-05. [76237]

Mr. Watson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 5 June 2006, Official Report, columns 260-61W.

Psychological Operations

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 622W, on 15 Psychological Operations Group, whether any of the operations of 15 (UK) Psychological Operations Group since 1 January 2003, other than training, have been carried out in the United Kingdom. [76413]

Mr. Ingram: 15 (UK) Psychological Operations Group have never carried out operations in the United Kingdom.

Submarines

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1993W, on nuclear-powered submarines, what the standard operating procedures are for collecting effluent produced by the warming up process from nuclear-powered submarines using (a) Southampton and (b) other X berths; and if he will make a statement. [76215]

Mr. Ingram: There are no X berths at Southampton. At the Southampton Z berth all reactor warm-up effluent is kept onboard the submarine until such time as it can be dealt with in accordance with the standard operating procedures at either HM Naval Base Devonport or HM Naval Base Clyde. These procedures were described in the answer I gave the hon. Member on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1992W, and there is nothing further I can usefully add.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what dates since 1 January 2005 US Navy nuclear-powered and nuclear-armed submarines have visited UK waters or designated berths; and what the location was in each case. [76289]

Mr. Ingram: US Navy nuclear-powered submarines have visited the following UK designated berths since 1 January 2005:

Plymouth

4-9 May 2005

19-22 October 2005

9-15 November 2005

Faslane

6-16 May 2005

10-17 June 2005

22-29 June 2005

5-12 August 2005

17-19 August 2005

25-29 August 2005

8-11 May 2006

A further visit to Faslane will take place 9-15 June 2006.

During the period there have been no visits to Portsmouth, the Solent anchorages, or to other UK designated berths.

All these visits were by nuclear powered submarines (SSN). There were no visits by nuclear ballistic missile armed submarines (SSBN).

UK Military Airfields

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress with the review of UK military airfields; and when he expects to report the outcome. [75933]

Mr. Ingram: My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence announced to the House in July 2004 during his statement on the White Paper on Delivering Security in a Changing World that we would be undertaking an extensive review of our future requirements for airfields. There will not be one single report on the outcome of the Defence Airfield Review as the work is being taken forward through a series of business cases assessing the best configuration, both operationally and in value for money terms, for a number of future aircraft types.

I announced the conclusions of the studies into the basing of Joint Combat aircraft and Nimrod MRA4 aircraft to the House in my statement on 17 November 2005. I will announce the results of the remaining individual studies in due course.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75109]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Government's policy is to encourage the use of sustainable transport methods.

Pensions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his role will be in developing Government policy on pensions. [71543]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister set out details of the new role he has asked me to undertake in his written answer on 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 985W, and a copy of my letter of appointment has been made available in the Library.

I will be taking the lead in overseeing the delivery of Government business and improving the effectiveness of Government policy across the whole range of policy areas, including delivering key pledges in our 2005 election manifesto. An important challenge will be to ensure a long-term infrastructure is put in place to entrench a new pensions savings culture, where future generations can take increasing personal responsibility for building their retirement savings. We believe the proposals in the Pensions White Paper do this, and I shall continue to play a full role in discussions as we seek a consensus on the way forward on pensions. The hon. Member will be aware that, until recently, I was responsible for ensuring proper regulation of the local government pension scheme. I intend to build on that experience in seeking agreement on sustainable, affordable and fair pensions for the future.

PRIME MINISTER

Sports Relief

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Loughborough (Mr. Reed) of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 247, when he took part in the mile run in aid of Sports Relief; and between which points. [77244]

The Prime Minister: A number of events have been planned by Sport Relief in the build up to 'Sport Relief Saturday' which takes place on 15 July. In the coming weeks, I am taking part by running a mile in aid of Sport Relief with 2012 ambassadors and young people. I congratulate hon. Members who took part in the Westminster Mile.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Agricultural Crops

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total value of the agricultural crop in Northern Ireland was in each of the past four years; and what the total value of agricultural subsidies was in each year. [75969]

David Cairns: Gross output is the standard measure of the value of agricultural output. The published gross output figures normally include the value of agricultural subsidies paid on products. In answer to this question the gross output figures for agriculture in Northern Ireland are given with the subsidy on products removed to give a clearer picture of the value of market returns. These figures and the total value of direct agricultural subsidies in Northern Ireland for the last four years are presented in the following table. The figures for 2005 are provisional and may be subject to change as more up-to-date information becomes available.

	Gross agricultural output less subsidies on products	Total direct agricultural subsidies
2002	925.2	248.1
2003	1,026.1	238.5
2004	1,055.8	277.4
2005 (Provisional)	1,048.0	281.7

Animal Cruelty

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of animal cruelty have been reported across the Province over the last three years, broken down by Westminster constituency. [77339]

David Cairns: The number of reported cases of animal cruelty is not held centrally by one agency. DARD records those cases reported directly to the Department (mainly in respect of farmed animals), while other suspected cruelty cases will also be reported directly to the Police Service of Northern Ireland or to animal welfare organisations. However, the PSNI do not collate figures relating specifically to animal cruelty.

Records of the number of cases of animal cruelty reported to DARD, for calendar years 2003, 2004 and 2005 are provided in the table. The information is not recorded by Westminster constituency, but is held by Divisional Veterinary Office area.

Cattle Identification Offences

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been charged under cattle identification legislation in each of the last five years; and how much was recovered by way of fines in each year. [77095]

David Cairns: The Department referred 65 individuals to the Public Prosecution Service (PPS) during the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2006. Total fines imposed by the courts during the period—£72,005.

Number of people charged under cattle identification legislation

April to March	Number	Total fines (£)
2001-02	5	5,275
2002-03	3	1,610

2005-06	23	32,930

Cross-border Arrangements

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the proposed EU legal instrument for cross-border institutional arrangements. [75422]

Mr. Hanson: The EU Commission has proposed a legal instrument, European Grouping of Territorial Cooperation (EGTC), to allow public bodies from different member states to create or join an EGTC with the objective of facilitating and promoting cross border, transnational and interregional co-operation in order to strengthen economic and social cohesion. No new powers are confirmed on public bodies by joining an EGTC and member states can withhold their approval of an EGTC if it considers it to be contrary to the public policy of the member state.

Other corporate and European structures can also facilitate such co-operation and the EGTC instrument would offer one more option for cross border co-operation to those arrangements that already exist. This may have operational benefits and can be welcomed. The institutions created under the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and the North South Cooperation (Implementation Bodies) (Northern Ireland) Order 1999 already facilitate work across the border between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. The current Ireland/Northern Ireland PEACE and INTERREG IIIA programmes are managed by the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB) and these structures have performed well.

Door-to-door Bus Services

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the delivery of the door-to-door bus service (a) for Comber and (b) elsewhere in Strangford constituency. [75472]

David Cairns: The Department for Regional Development is currently evaluating tenders for the provision of door-to-door transport services in a number of urban areas and would hope that services would start on a phased basis in September 2006. As part of this scheme Comber is linked with Newtownards and Dundonald as a single contract area.

Through the Rural Transport Fund, the Department for Regional Development provides support to two rural community transport partnerships operating door-to-door services within the Strangford constituency. These are Down Community Transport based in Downpatrick (which also operates in the South Down constituency) and Peninsula Community Transport based in Kircubbin.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to ensure that women are more equally represented in the civil service in Northern Ireland. [76322]

Mr. Hanson: Significant progress has been made in ensuring that women are properly represented, particularly at senior grades, in the Northern Ireland civil service, and this has been reflected in changing compositional figures.

Before advertising a vacancy in the civil service, an assessment is made of the gender balance and where this shows women to be under-represented a statement welcoming applications from women is included in the advertisement. In the period January 2005 to May 2006, welcoming statements were included in 125 advertisements.

The civil service is anxious to make further progress to increase the diversity of the work force in order to make it more reflective of the community it serves. To this end an outreach programme is being devised and in relation to gender an emphasis will be on encouraging more women into occupations that traditionally have been carried out by men.

Forum for Local Government and the Arts

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times the Forum for Local Government and the Arts in Northern Ireland met in 2005; and where each meeting took place. [76648]

Maria Eagle: The Forum for Local Government and the Arts in Northern Ireland met once in 2005, on 6 December at the Sean Holywood Centre, Newry.

Household Condition Survey

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will (a) increase the number of households included in the Northern Ireland Household Condition Survey, (b) add energy and income datasets to the Northern Ireland census and (c) include energy and income datasets in surveying for community planning under new local government arrangements. [75588]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is as follows:

(a) For the 2006 Northern Ireland House Condition Survey the Housing Executive increased the sample size to 7,250 dwellings (compared to 3,000 in the interim House Condition Survey of 2004), making it broadly comparable to the sample used in the full survey of 2001.

(b) No decisions on question topics and content for the 2011 census have yet been taken. Proposals for the 2011 census will be brought forward in a White Paper, probably in 2008, drawing on consultation with users, testing of options and the balancing of competing requirements. The issues of energy and income were raised by users during recent consultation on the content of the next census. A planned census test in 2007 will include a question on income.

(c) Strategic Community Planning Partnerships within the new councils will seek to utilise all available relevant information, data and research to inform how the situation within their localities can be improved for the benefit of all citizens.

Knife Amnesty

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many items have been surrendered to date in each district council area in Northern Ireland since the commencement of the knife amnesty. [76440]

Mr. Hanson: The police have estimated that at 31 May, a total of 320 items were surrendered since the commencement of the knife amnesty and put on show on Wednesday 7 June a number of the items deposited. A definitive count will be made shortly after the amnesty finishes and information will be available in the week commencing 19 June.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to extend the knife amnesty in Northern Ireland in accordance with the amnesty operating in England and Wales. [76444]

Mr. Hanson: The current knife amnesty will not be extended beyond 14 June, but I do plan to re-run the amnesty later this year. This would give an opportunity for the year-long public information campaign to begin to make an impact of changing attitudes.

Playgroups

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children were not able to obtain a place in the playgroup of their first choice in each of the five education and library boards in each of the last three years. [75543]

Maria Eagle: The requested information is as follows.

BELB	33	51	31
NEELB	209	259	159
SEELB	176	148	179
SELB	205	269	208
WELB	—	—	140

The WELB is not able to supply the figures in respect of the 2004-05 and 2005-06 school years.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what promotion boards have been held in (a) each Northern Ireland Department and (b) the Northern Ireland Office in each of the last five years. [70454]

Mr. Hanson: The following are details of general service promotion competitions which have been held in each Northern Ireland Department and the Northern Ireland Office during the period 2001 until 2005.

	Promotion board held
2001	Grade7/A, Staff Officer/B2, Executive Officer 1, Executive Officer 11/Band C, Administrative Officer/Grade 1
2003	Deputy Principal/B1, Staff Officer/B2
2004	Grade 7/A, Executive Officer 1
2005	Executive Officer 11/Band C

The following list provides details of all other departmental promotion boards held in each of the last five years ie 2001 until 2005.

DSD (including SSA and CSA) and DEL did not hold any promotion boards in each of the last five years other than general service promotion competitions as shown above.

Public Land Transfers

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public land in Northern Ireland, has been transferred to the private sector in each of the past 10 years for which figures are available; and at what cost. [64977]

Mr. Hanson: It has not been possible to provide information for the 10-year period as recovery of the required information would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

The tables detail the information requested for the five-year period from April 2001 to March 2006.

Table A: All organisations except NIHE

Period	Number of lots sold[1]	Total area (Ha)	Total of sale prices (£)
1 April 2001 to 31 March 2002	134	79.44	28,140,738
1 April 2002 to 31 March 2003	162	746.99	26,200,374
1 April 2003 to 31 March 2004	135	2,554.71	21,989,858

Total	778	3,554.01	252,617,615

[1] In a very small number of cases the information on the "number of lots" or the "total area" is not available, but the total of sale prices is complete in all cases.

Table B: NIHE[1]

Roads

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Department for Regional Development spent on structural maintenance for the road network in counties (a) Tyrone, (b) Derry and (c) Fermanagh in each of the last five years; and how much the Department has budgeted for structural maintenance in (i) the current year and (ii) the next two years in these counties. [76299]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 13 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about how much the Department for Regional Development spent on structural maintenance for the road network in counties (a) Tyrone, (b) Derry and (c) Fermanagh in each of the past five years; and how much the Department has budgeted for structural maintenance in (i) the current year and (ii) the next two years in these counties. I have been asked to reply as this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

Firstly I should advise that whilst Roads Service does not maintain details of expenditure on a county basis, such information is available on a district council basis. The table below details Roads Service's expenditure, for the five-year period 2000/01 to 2004/05, on structural maintenance for the nine district councils whose boundaries straddle Counties Tyrone, Londonderry and Fermanagh. Expenditure details for 2005/06 year are not yet available.

Roads Service expenditure on structural maintenance by council area

£ million

District council	2000-01	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Omagh	2.5	3.6	4.0	4.9	4.0
Strabane	2.3	2.7	2.9	3.4	3.9
Cookstown	1.3	1.5	1.8	2.5	2.2
Dungannon	2.7	3.1	3.5	3.4	4.0
Derry	2.1	2.2	2.4	3.2	2.7
Magherafelt	1.2	1.5	1.9	2.7	2.2
Coleraine	1.7	2.1	2.3	3.4	2.4
Limavady	1.0	1.2	1.6	2.6	2.1
Fermanagh	2.9	3.1	4.3	5.5	4.6

In providing this information, I should explain that Roads Service does not simply apportion its total structural maintenance expenditure equally across district council areas. Resources available for each maintenance activity (e.g. resurfacing, patching, gully emptying, grass cutting etc) are apportioned to district council areas using appropriate indicators of need. This ensures, so far as possible, an equitable distribution of funds across the country.

With regard to structural maintenance expenditure in the current year and the next two years, I can advise that Roads Service's structural maintenance budgets are not allocated at the outset of the financial year on a district council basis. Therefore, it is not possible to give an initial budget allocation for 2006/07 for structural maintenance in each district council area as requested. However, expenditure this year, coupled with the Revised Budget allocations, suggests that approximately £170m will be invested in roads' structural maintenance across Northern Ireland in the three years to 2007/08.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Department for Regional Development Roads Service will outline the options for the route of the proposed dual carriageway between Londonderry and Dungiven. [76367]

David Cairns: The Chief Executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 13 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding when the Department for Regional Development Roads Service will outline the options for the route of the proposed dual carriageway between Londonderry and Dungiven.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

When the Secretary of State announced that this £250m (estimated cost) scheme to provide a dual carriageway between Londonderry and Dungiven had been added to the Forward Planning Schedule, he indicated that it was expected to be completed in the latter part of the 10 year period to 2015.

A study is underway to identify the preferred corridor for the route. This involves preliminary studies of environmental, land form and traffic modelling, particularly at the Londonderry end of the route. It is well advanced and will report later this summer. Although it is not normal practice to make announcements at this stage in a scheme development, it is anticipated that a public exhibition and consultation will be undertaken as the next step in the more detailed development of the Londonderry to Dungiven scheme.

The next stage will be the development and assessment of possible road line options within the corridor identified in the current study. This will take several years and it is not anticipated that any announcement of a preferred line for the Londonderry to Dungiven dual carriageway will issue for some time.

It is worth reminding ourselves that this 30km scheme is the largest undertaken by Roads Service and will undoubtedly take several years in development.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in the average number of vehicles using the Limavady bypass between its opening and the most recent date for which figures are available. [76319]

David Cairns: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 13 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question regarding the change in the average number of vehicles using the Limavady Bypass between its opening and the most recent date for which figures are available.

I have been asked to reply as these issues fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service.

As you know, Roads Service collects traffic volume data by means of 270 automatic census points strategically located throughout the Northern Ireland road network. Unfortunately none of these census points are located on the Limavady Bypass, and therefore we are unable to provide the information requested.

However the location of our census points throughout Northern Ireland is currently under review, and it is intended to install a new counter on the Limavady Bypass as part of this review.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful on this occasion.

Sinn Fein

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been paid in salaries and expenses to Sinn Fein MLAs since the suspension of the Northern Ireland Assembly. [13942]

Mr. Hain: The following table presents the amounts paid by the Northern Ireland Assembly to Sinn Fein MLAs as a result of their entitlements, under various pieces of assembly legislation, during the period 1 April 2002 and 31 March 2006.

	Salaries	OCA	T and S	Resettlement and winding up	Other	Total (£)

St. Mary's Primary School

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children at St. Mary's Primary School in Barrack Street, Belfast, were entered for the 11-plus examination in each of the last five years; and what grades were achieved in each year. [76222]

Maria Eagle: Over the past five years only one child from St. Mary's Primary School, Belfast was entered for the transfer procedure test. It would not be appropriate to give the grade achieved, to avoid disclosure of personal data.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children at St. Mary's Primary School in Barrack Street, Belfast (a) began and (b) completed Key Stage (i) 1 and (ii) 2 in each of the last five years. [76223]

Vehicle Registration

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to enable the owners of vehicles registered in the United Kingdom and who have moved to or are working in Northern Ireland to receive their vehicle test in Northern Ireland. [73861]

David Cairns: The Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency will carry out a vehicle inspection on vehicles registered in the United Kingdom once they have reached four years of age, as is the statutory requirement in Northern Ireland.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to enable vehicles registered in Scotland, England and Wales to obtain a vehicle test in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [73906]

David Cairns: The Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency will carry out a vehicle inspection on vehicles registered in the Scotland, England or Wales once they have reached four years of age, as is the statutory requirement in Northern Ireland.

Water Framework Directive

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the conclusions of the second stage study carried out by the Rivers Agency into the implications of the EC Water Framework Directive. [76457]

David Cairns: No. The second stage study into implications of the Water Framework Directive was intended to provide an internal management report to inform the Rivers Agency Management Board of the implementation issues for the Agency. I have no plans to place it in the Library.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Citizenship Curriculum

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department plans to take to ensure that young people take part in his Department's review of the citizenship curriculum. [76677]

Jim Knight: Gathering the views of young people is a crucial part of the review process. The review team is working with the National Children's Bureau and the National Youth Agency to consult directly with groups of young people.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75098]

Mr. Dhanda: It is Government policy to encourage the use of sustainable travel. In the Department, we encourage staff, wherever possible, to use public transport or cycle to work especially those commuting to our London offices due to very limited car parking and traffic congestion.

The incentives made available to encourage staff to use public transport to and from work are interest free loans for season tickets and cycle purchases loans for those who want them.

Director General for Higher Education

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the appointment of the next Director General for Higher Education in his Department will be by open competition. [76130]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 12 June 2006]: Yes.

Purity Rings

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance he has issued to local education authorities on pupils wearing jewellery with religious significance, with particular reference to purity rings. [76141]

Jim Knight: School governing bodies determine school uniform policy and dress codes under powers conferred by the 1998 School Standards and Framework Act. The Department's guidance does not specifically mention jewellery with religious significance, but states that in deciding the format of their uniform, governors should have regard to their responsibilities under equalities legislation. It also states that in setting a policy, the school should be sensitive to pupil's cultural and religious needs and differences.

School Governors

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school governors will be appointed by (a) town and parish councils, (b) district authorities and (c) county councils to foundation schools at (i) primary and (ii) secondary level under arrangements proposed in the Education and Inspections Bill. [77038]

Jim Knight: The stakeholder model of school government introduced through the School Governance (Constitution) (England) Regulations 2003 requires that the governing body of a foundation school must comprise at least one but no more than one fifth local authority governors. The local authority will be the county council in two tier authorities and the unitary authority in other areas.

There is no requirement for other tiers of local government to be represented on the governing body of any other category of maintained school. The Education and Inspection Bill would not change these arrangements.

School Meals

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the recommendations submitted to her Department by the School Meals Review Panel and the School Food Trust; and what assessment she has made of the impact the recommendations would have on the soft drinks industry. [66374]

Jim Knight: On 19 May 2006 the Secretary of State announced a suite of new nutritional standards for school lunches and food and drink served at other times of the day.

These standards combine the recommendations of the School Meals Review Panel and the School Food Trust. New regulations for school lunches will mesh the existing standards in the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) (England) Regulations 2000 with the new food-based standards to produce interim food-based standards from September 2006. A subsequent set of regulations will set out the final food and nutrient-based standards which will apply to school lunches, and the standards for food served at other times of the day. A guide to introducing the food-based standards for lunch will be issued by the School Food Trust in late June.

We have published a full Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) which considers the financial impact that the new nutritional standards will have. In compiling the RIA, account was taken of the report written for the School Meals Review Panel (SMRP) by PricewaterhouseCoopers on the costs of implementing the Caroline Walker Trust's recommendations, which are closely mirrored by the recommendations of the SMRP.

School Sprinkler Systems

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans to make it mandatory to install fire-safety sprinklers in schools. [76742]

Jim Knight: We do not have plans to require the installation of sprinklers in all schools. Our current guidance to local authorities, promoters, governing bodies and all those involved in the provision and design of schools, is to use risk assessments as the basis for deciding whether or not sprinklers should be installed in new school buildings.

Secondary Schools (Wellingborough)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of (a) secondary school and (b) primary school aged children taught at home in (i) Northamptonshire and (ii) Wellingborough in the most recent year for which figures are available. [75301]

Jim Knight: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Booe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils there were in each year group in the (a) Wrenn, (b) Sir Christopher Hatton and (c) Weavers secondary schools in Wellingborough in the most recent period for which figures are available; and what the maximum admission number is for each group in each school. [75302]

Jim Knight: The number of pupils in each year group for each school is given in the table.

Information about the published admission numbers of schools is not collected centrally. Northamptonshire county council has informed us that the admission numbers for each school is as follows:

School	Number of admissions
Wrenn School	250
Sir Christopher Hatton School	208
Weavers School	[1]246

[1] Northamptonshire county council has provided an additional year 9 class at Weavers School and so there are 376 places available in that year.

Selective Mutism

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) which organisations received funding from his Department to research selective mutism in each of the last five financial years; and how much each organisation received in each year; [76375]

(2) which organisations received funding from his Department to support (a) teachers and (b) parents in their work with children exhibiting selective mutism in each of the last five financial years; and how much each organisation received in each year; [76376]

(3) what guidance is provided by his Department on selective mutism to (a) local education authorities, (b) schools and (c) teacher training institutions; [76377]

(4) what assessment his Department has made of the incidence of selective mutism among children under the age of 16 years; and if he will make a statement; [76378]

(5) what assessment his Department has made of the adequacy of the provision of information to teachers and parents about assisting children who exhibit selective mutism; and if he will make a statement. [76379]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department has not commissioned any recent research or produced guidance specifically on selective mutism, although it is one of a number of communication difficulties addressed in our Early Support publication "Speech and language difficulties", published in 2005.

Where a child is exhibiting selective mutism in a school or early years setting we would normally expect early referral to a speech and language therapist and/or psychologist. Selective mutism often appears associated with anxiety, and thus may be linked to a number of factors. Patience and understanding, coupled with measured interventions designed to build the child's confidence, appear to have beneficial effects, as does reducing pressure on the child.

The Department has not made any assessment of the incidence of selective mutism, or any assessment of the adequacy of information available. In 2002-03 and 2003-04 we gave grants of £30,000 and £2,000 respectively to help the Selective Mutism Information and Research Association (SMIRA) produce an instructional video entitled "Silent Children—Approaches To Selective Mutism" and an associated booklet.

Supply Teachers

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will take steps to prevent teacher employment agencies from employing experienced supply teachers only if they accept the lower pay scale of newly qualified teachers. [76667]

Jim Knight: Teachers who are not employed by a school or local authority are free to choose whether or not to work for an employment agency. Employment agencies are not bound by the national School Teachers Pay and Conditions Document, and are free to set their own rates.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Career Advice

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she is taking to improve career advice for girls. [75803]

Meg Munn [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The "Youth Matters: Next Steps" document, published on 8 March 2006, sets out proposals for improved information, advice and guidance for young people. It recognises the importance of access to individually tailored information, advice and guidance that challenges rather than perpetuates traditional stereotypes.

Central to improved information, advice and guidance will be the development of quality standards. The challenging of traditional stereotypes will be included in these standards. The Equal Opportunities Commission is represented on the Steering Group that is supporting the development of the standards.

Domestic Violence (Refuge)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what discussions she has had with ministerial colleagues about improving the services offered to women seeking refuge from domestic violence. [75353]

Meg Munn: As Deputy Minister for Women and Equality, I sit on the Inter-Ministerial Group for Domestic Violence (chaired by my hon. Friend Baroness Scotland of Asthal) which undertakes the performance management of the cross-Government National Domestic Violence Delivery Plan by reviewing progress at quarterly meetings. This is the mechanism for improving the services offered to women seeking refuge from domestic violence nationally.

A substantially revised domestic violence Best Value Performance Indicator will help assess overall provision and effectiveness of local authority services designed to help victims of domestic violence.

Management Positions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she is taking to encourage firms to consider women for senior management positions. [75804]

Meg Munn [holding answer 12 June 2006]: Encouraging firms to consider more women for senior management positions is something that the Government take very seriously. The Government support initiatives such as the FTSE 100 cross company mentoring scheme 'Women Directors on Boards', which is backed by 29 Chairmen and CEOs.

Vertical segregation and the 'glass ceiling' is something that the Women and Work Commission identified as a cause of the gender pay gap. The Government will issue an Action Plan in response to the Commission's recommendations later in the year. Companies from a range of sectors have committed to develop and deliver programmes that support the Work and Work Commission's recommendations, including initiatives, which support women into senior management positions.

Sex Industry

Mr. Bone: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government are taking to assist women who have been trafficked into the UK to work forcibly in the sex industry; and if she will make a statement. [76029]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

Since March 2003 the Home Office has funded Poppy, a scheme run by Eaves Housing for Women to provide safe accommodation and tailored one-to-one support for adult female victims who have been trafficked into the UK for the purposes of sexual exploitation.

In April of this year the Home Office entered into a two-year, £2.4 million funding agreement with Eaves Housing for Women. This funding will not only provide for the continuation of the existing crisis provision service for up to 25 women it will also meet the costs of: 10 additional "step-down" places which will help the women to live semi-independently; the introduction of the first ever specialist national outreach service in the UK for victims trafficked into sexual exploitation; and the development of a resource pack for victims, service providers and law enforcement agency staff.

Vocational Training

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps she is taking to increase the take-up of vocational training by girls. [75805]

Meg Munn [holding answer 12 June 2006]: There are a number of steps we are taking to increase the take up of vocational training by both boys and girls. In particular we are challenging stereotypical choices through the Young Apprenticeship programme for 14 to 16-year-olds, the 14-19 Pathfinders and in the development of new specialised Diplomas.

Working in partnership with the EOC, we have been evaluating how equal opportunities are being addressed in practice by Young Apprenticeship partnerships, particularly to encourage all young people to consider non-traditional options, through, for example, vocational tasters.

Computer Clubs for Girls is also an innovative, award-winning initiative created by e-skills UK and funded by DfES. Clubs are being run in partnership by schools and employers in order to raise the standard of girls' ICT skills while transforming girls' attitudes to careers in IT.

Underpinning all this work is access to information, advice and guidance so that young people, and girls in particular, can make informed choices. The "Youth Matters: Next Steps" document, published on 8 March 2006, sets out proposals for improved information, advice and guidance for young people. Central to improved information, advice and guidance will be the development of quality standards. The challenging of traditional stereotypes will be included in these standards. The Equal Opportunities Commission is represented on the Steering Group that is supporting the development of the standards.

TREASURY

Criminal Offences

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department since April 2005, broken down by Act. [76905]

John Healey: There were no provisions creating criminal offences in primary legislation sponsored by Her Majesty's Treasury since the end of April 2005.

Developing Countries (Health)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of International Monetary Fund and World Bank targets for achieving longer-term economic growth of public health spending by developing countries; and whether he proposes to make representations on this issue at the International Monetary and Finance Committee meeting in Singapore. [76348]

Mr. Timms: In 2005 the international community committed to double aid flows to Africa by 2010.

To achieve the Millennium Development Goals in health the international community must accelerate support to develop universal and equitable health systems.

Ensuring that the increased aid can be used effectively will require partnership between developing countries, donors and the international financial institutions.

The Bank and the Fund have a critical role to play in this international effort, in supporting countries' own poverty reduction and development strategies. The World Bank is now the largest provider of development finance in the health sector. We will continue to urge the Bank to do more to help countries scale up their investment in their health programmes.

The IMF plays a crucial role in supporting financially and through policy advice the macroeconomic stability necessary for lasting poverty reduction. We welcome the commitment—expressed in the Managing Directors' medium-term strategy—for the IMF to assist developing countries in the management of increased aid inflows, and will continue to urge the Fund to support countries in increasing their investment in priority sectors including public health, within their frameworks for macroeconomic stability and sustainable growth.

Family Tax Credits (Northern Ireland)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the uptake of family tax credits has been since its introduction in Northern Ireland, broken down by Westminster constituency; how much in total has been paid and if he will make a statement. [77340]

Dawn Primarolo: Take up rates for family credit, working families tax credit and child and working tax credit is not available by constituency. Estimates of take up rates for child and working tax credits in 2003-04, including breakdown by country and region, are detailed in the HMRC publication "Child Tax Credit and Working Tax Credit 2003-04".This publication also details take up rates for family credit and working families tax credit, which preceded the new tax credits. Estimates for the number of in-work families, and amounts paid, receiving working family tax credit and family credit between May 1998 and February 2003 appear in the quarterly published WFTC statistics. Estimates for 2003-04 and 2004-05 of the numbers of in-work families with child and working tax credit awards, including breakdown by constituency, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003-04 and 2004-05 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credit. Finalised Awards 2003-04. Geographical Analysis" and "Child and Working Tax Credit. Finalised Awards 2004-05. Geographical Analysis".

These publications are available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-take-up.htm

Income Statistics

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his most recent estimate is of the average income per person in Houghton and Washington East. [76336]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest estimates for the mean and median of total income (for taxpayers) by constituency can be found in table 3.15 "Income and tax by Parliamentary Constituency" on HM Revenue and Customs website. http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_distribution/menu-by-year.htm#315. The information is based on the latest Survey of Personal Incomes (2003-04).

Because sample sizes at constituency level are small and can demonstrate a large variability from year to year, inference from the information in the table should take into account the confidence intervals in table 3.15a "Income and tax by Parliamentary Constituency, Confidence Intervals".

Similar information including non-taxpayers is not available.

Taxation

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the net yield from inheritance tax in each year since 1996-97; and what the forecast for 2006-07 is; [66650]

(2) if he will estimate the revenue collected from (a) stamp duty on property, (b) inheritance tax and (c) council tax in each year since 1996-97; and what his estimate is for (i) 2006-07 and (ii) 2007-08. [66659]

Dawn Primarolo: Receipts of stamp duty on land and property are shown in the following table.

Receipts of stamp duty on land and property

	£ billion
1996-97	1.1
1997-98	1.5
1998-99	2.1

2004-05	6.3

The figures quoted in the table for the period 1999-2000 to 2004-05 are published in table 15.1 on the HMRC website: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/stamp_duty/15_1_sep05.pdf

Figures for future years will depend on estimates of property sales, both residential and commercial.

Receipts of inheritance tax are published in table T1.2 on the HMRC website: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/tax_receipts/1_2_v2_dec05.pdf

The latest estimates/forecasts for receipts of inheritance tax are set out in table C8 in chapter C of the 2006 Financial Statement and Budget Report on the website: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/media/20F/42/bud06_chc_247.pdf

Council tax receipts net of council tax benefit are shown in the following table.

Net receipts of council tax (2004-05 prices)

	£ million
1996-97	10,683
1997-98	11,237
1998-99	12,137

2004-05	17,592
2005-06	17,978
2006-07	18,231

Forecasts for these taxes are only published for years up to 2006-07, the last year covered in the Budget report.

Insurance Policies

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what representations he has received regarding cashback claims from insurance policies operated by a company called PowerPlan; [76524]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that consumers applying for cashback from insurance policies are made aware of the laid down conditions included in the small print. [76525]

Ed Balls: The Government have received representations regarding the issue of cashback claims from insurance policies operated by Powerplan.

The Financial Services Authority (FSA) is responsible for regulating the sale of general insurance policies. The FSA requires all disclosure to be clear, fair and not misleading, and for retail customers to be given a policy summary which sets out key aspects of a policy before the sale is concluded. The FSA does not regulate travel insurance sold as part of a package. Nor does it regulate sales of non-motor extended warranties under €500.

Extended warranties can be service agreements or insurance backed contracts. The sale of extended warranties on domestic electrical goods are regulated through The Supply of Extended Warranties on Domestic Electrical Goods Order 2005, which includes specifying information that should accompany the sale of the product.

For insurance-backed products, consumers will have a right of recourse to the Financial Ombudsman Service in respect of the insurance contract.

Ivory Imports/Exports

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many elephant products have been seized by HM Revenue and Customs in each year since 2000, broken down by (a) type of item and (b) country of origin; [76212]

(2) how many offences have been committed under the Customs and Excise Management Authority Regulations relating to ivory seizures since 1997; and what (a) the nature of the offence and (b) the penalty was in each case. [76211]

Dawn Primarolo: Details of seizures made by HM Revenue and Customs of endangered species (as listed under Council Regulation (EC) No. 338/97 on the protection of species of wild fauna and flora) between 1999 and 2004 are available on the UK CITES website at www.ukcites.gov.uk/news/tradestatistics.htm The 2005 figures are due to be published here shortly.

The records list countries of origin or export. Elephant products are likely to be listed under the headings "Ivory" or "Parts and Derivatives". However ivory seizures will only be recorded as elephant ivory where they have been declared as such either by a passenger or in accompanying documents.

The published statistics only list ivory as a separate heading with effect from 2002. Prior to this ivory is included under the Parts and Derivatives heading. Statistics on ivory seizures before 1999 are set out in HM Customs and Excise annual reports. The 1997 and 1998 annual reports list 11,907 and 51,675 seized CITES items as Parts and Derivatives.

Offences committed since 1997 breach either the import or export prohibitions contained in Council Regulation 338/97. These offences render ivory liable to forfeiture and it is, therefore, seized under the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979. In addition to seizure, the penalty for these breaches is the non-restoration of the ivory unless a valid retrospective CITES permit has been obtained from DEFRA.

Most seizures made are from private individuals returning to this country or on occasion as gifts sent to them via the post. Some of these individuals will not even be aware that ivory imports are banned in the EU, especially if they have seen ivory goods openly on sale in some international airports.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has revised data collection methods for ivory imports and exports since 2002 to include weight, number of items and description of items. [76716]

Dawn Primarolo: Data on imports and exports are collected using a standard European classification. Details of the classification can be seen on HM Revenue and Customs' trade statistics site uktradeinfo.com. There have been no changes to the description or requirement to collect value and weight for ivory products since 2002.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the approximate financial value is of ivory imported into the UK since 2003, based on declarations made to HM Revenue and Customs. [76717]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table includes the approximate financial value is of ivory imported in the UK since 2003 based on declarations made to HM Revenue & Customs.

Imports into the UK of Ivory, 2003-06

	Commodity	Statistical value (£000)[1, 2]

Mr. Leech: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made by his Department of how much additional tax revenue will be collected as a result of the introduction of pay-as-you-earn taxation for junior football clubs in Scotland. [76455]

Dawn Primarolo: No additional tax is due. HMRC is simply updating tax collection procedures for some Scottish junior football clubs.

Neonatal Mortality

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the neonatal mortality rate for all births was in (a) Peterborough constituency, (b) the Peterborough city council area and (c) England in each of the last five years. [76596]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 13 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the neonatal mortality rate for all births was in (a) Peterborough constituency, (b) the Peterborough City Council area and (c) England in each of the last five years. I am replying in her absence. (76596)

Information on neonatal mortality is routinely published for local authorities and health authorities. Data cannot be provided for Peterborough constituency because of the risk of disclosing individual's information due to small differences with local authority boundaries.

Neonatal mortality rates for the Peterborough City Council area and England from 2000 to 2004 (the most recent year for which data are available) are given in the table below.

Neonatal mortality rate[1], Peterborough city council area and England 2000 to 2004

	Peterborough rate	England rate
2000	2.4	3.9
2001	2.9	3.6
2002	3.7	3.6
2003	6.3	3.7
2004	1.2	3.4

Civil Service (Relocation)

Ben Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has held with ministerial colleagues on the implications for the civil service of the Government relocation programme in the north-west. [66798]

Des Browne: The Chancellor announced in Budget 2006 that over 7,800 posts have now been relocated out of London and the south-east. Over 1,600 posts have already been relocated to the north-west. The Government are on course to meet the target to relocate 20,000 civil service posts out of London and the south-east by 2010. Individual Departments are responsible for deciding on sites for relocation, but they must do so taking into account both their business needs and local economic factors, as set out in central guidance, "Choosing Locations for Government Business".

Nottingham East Midlands Airport

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value was of (a) imports flown into and (b) exports flown out of Nottingham East Midlands airport in each of the last five years. [77447]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on trade with other EU member states by port/airport is not collected. The table gives the data for the last five years of the declared value of the non-EU imports and exports through East Midlands airport.

Non-EU Imports and exports via East Midlands airport

£ million

	Value of imports	Value of exports
2001	2,541	1,396
2002	2,167	1,460

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the Parliamentary Ombudsman have been (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by his Department since 1997. [76265]

John Healey: HM Treasury is not aware of any occasion since 1997 in which it has rejected or partially rejected recommendations of the Parliamentary Ombudsman in relation to HM Treasury's activities. However, HM Treasury does not hold definitive statistics of this nature. HM Treasury cannot provide this information without first identifying and then reviewing all HM Treasury files relating to every Parliamentary Ombudsman investigation since 1997. This exercise would incur disproportionate cost.

Small Breweries Relief

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will amend the criteria governing the eligibility of breweries for Small Breweries' Relief to encompass independent breweries producing between 60,000 and 100,000 hectolitres of beer per annum. [76691]

John Healey: Since SBR was introduced in June 2002 more than 100 new breweries have opened, creating over 1,000 new jobs and injecting energy and innovation into a traditional industry.

The Government are committed to ensuring that SBR is targeted to benefit those who need it most. Although all reliefs are kept under review, the Government believe that SBR is currently striking the right balance, and meeting its objectives.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit payments were not made to claimants because the award fell below the payment threshold in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05 and (c) 2005-06; and what the total value of these non-payments were for each year. [76206]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the total cost of the £25,000 tax credits overpayments income disregard; and if he will make a statement. [76420]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 13 December 2005, Official Report, column 1836W.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in the Inland Revenue and HM Revenue and Customs have worked on tax credits in each quarter since April 2002; and how many worked (a) in contact centres, (b) on policy, (c) in the debt management service, (d) in inquiry centres, (e) in the tax credits offices, (f) in the programme office, (g) on compliance, (h) on the IT live service and (i) on IT development; and if he will make a statement. [76473]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Unclaimed Assets

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress he has made in establishing (a) the extent of unclaimed assets in the UK and (b) their availability for charitable or other purposes. [77331]

Ed Balls: The Government reported in the Budget that the banking industry has set in train work to develop a scheme to enable unclaimed assets to be reinvested in society. The Government are clear that that such a scheme needs to be consistent with retaining the rights of owners to reclaim assets at any time and, with this in mind, are assessing the legal and accounting issues involved. The industry's steering group is considering issues of definition, reuniting and operation and distribution. This work is ongoing.

TRANSPORT

Night Flights

11. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints the Department and the Civil Aviation Authority received about night flights in 2005. [76584]

Gillian Merron: The Department receives a number of complaints and other representations about night flights policy. We received around 6,000 responses to our recent consultation document on night flying restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted airports.

Complaints about specific night flights are properly a matter for individual airports, which are best equipped to investigate complaints.

Departmental Expenditure

13. Mr. Jamie Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what change in spending on transport his Department plans to make between 2005-06 and 2007-08. [76586]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Public spending by the Department of Transport is planned to increase from around £11.4 billion in 2005-06 to around £12 billion in 2007-08.

Concessionary Fare Scheme

14. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total cost of implementing the Government's concessionary fare scheme. [76588]

Gillian Merron: The Government are providing an extra £350 million for 2006-07 and a further £367.5 million for 2007-08 to fund free off-peak local bus travel for people aged 60 and over and disabled people. The Chancellor announced in the Budget that the free local bus travel entitlement would be extended further to national bus travel from April 2008, for which Treasury earmarked up to an additional £250 million per year.

Road Accidents

15. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he plans to take to reduce the number of road traffic fatalities among young drivers. [76589]

Dr. Ladyman: We are very concerned about young driver fatalities, especially, that a minority appears to have a seriously unsafe attitude to the risks. We have strengthened the driving test; have commissioned research on improving pre-driver education and how to develop safe attitudes to driving among young people; and are developing a package of measures to tackle unlicensed driving.

16. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent progress has been made in reducing the number of people killed and seriously injured in road accidents. [76590]

Dr. Ladyman: Our provisional statistics for 2005 indicate that there were 32,150 people killed or seriously injured in accidents reported to the police in Great Britain, 33 per cent. below the 1994-98 baseline average.

Traffic Management

17. Christine Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve traffic management to ease road congestion. [76591]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government have a number of initiatives to tackle road congestion, through a combination of investment, improved management, new technology and better information. Under the Traffic Management Act 2004 local authorities have greater duties to manage traffic on their road network, including co-ordinating street works. Newly created traffic officers are helping to keep traffic moving, and ease congestion and ensure safety primarily on English motorways.

Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation

18. Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to introduce a renewable transport fuels obligation. [76592]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government announced in November 2005 that a renewable transport fuels obligation (RTFO) will be introduced from 1 April 2008. Further details of the obligation were announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the March 2006 Budget, including the level of obligation for the years leading up to 2010.

We are currently discussing aspects of the detailed design of the RTFO scheme with stakeholders and we envisage consulting on the draft secondary legislation around the end of the year. We are also developing robust carbon and environmental assurance schemes to deliver the best biofuels from day one of the obligation. This work is being taken forward by the Low Carbon Vehicle Partnership (LowCVP).

Roads (Wales)

19. Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with his colleagues in the National Assembly for Wales about road systems in and out of Wales. [76593]

Dr. Ladyman: Officials from the Department for Transport have met with officials from the Welsh Assembly Government on several occasions to discuss cross-border schemes. I have also recently offered to meet with Andrew Davies, Minister for Enterprise, Innovation and Networks in the Welsh Assembly Government to discuss these issues.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his plans to reduce carbon dioxide emissions from road transport. [76594]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government are introducing a Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation in April 2008, the effect of which will be that by 2010 5 per cent. of all transport fuels sold in the UK will come from renewable sources—a 20-fold increase on biofuels market share on 2005. The RTFO will deliver real environmental benefits and is projected to save around 1 million tonnes of carbon by 2010 (the equivalent of removing a million cars from the road).

To encourage company car drivers to drive more environmentally friendly cars with lower carbon dioxide emissions, the Chancellor announced in Budget 2006 that the lower threshold for company car tax rates will be reduced by 5g/km from 140g/km to 135g/km from 2008-09. It also provides for introduction of a new 10 per cent. band for cars with CO_2 emissions of 120g/km or below, also from 2008-09.

Vehicle excise duty for cars is based on carbon dioxide emissions which give a clear signal to motorists to choose less polluting vehicles. New energy efficiency vehicle labels—matching the graduated VED structure—were introduced into car showrooms last year, raising consumer awareness of the potential fuel savings available from using more efficient vehicles. At Budget, the Chancellor announced further reforms to VED, including a new higher band for the most polluting new cars, and a zero rate of VED for cars with less than 100g per kilometre of CO_2 emissions to assist the development of the low carbon car market.

On 7 June I announced that we will refocus the two-year budget of £40 million earmarked for environmental grants and advice. The full budget will remain allocated for green transport initiatives, the detail of which will be developed as part of the Powering Future Vehicles Strategy review this year.

The European Voluntary Agreement on new car fuel efficiency provides an incentive for vehicle manufacturers. Government are working with relevant stakeholders to consider a replacement for the voluntary agreement, which expires in 2008-09.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made in lowering the average emissions per vehicle. [76545]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the former Secretary of State for Transport, my right hon. Friend for Edinburgh, South-West (Mr. Darling) to the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn, Badenoch and Strathspey (Danny Alexander) on 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 829.

DVLA

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) total staff costs and (b) total staffing complement of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's diversity unit are; and if he will make a statement. [76303]

Dr. Ladyman: The total costs of the nine staff in the diversity unit in the 2005-06 financial year were £273,329.

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will increase staffing levels at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency to ensure that more roadside checks can be made on untaxed vehicles. [76173]

Dr. Ladyman: Increasing DVLA staffing levels to enable more roadside checks on untaxed vehicles to be made is not the most effective way of tackling this problem.

DVLA supplies the police with details of untaxed vehicles for use with their ANPR Units. They are thus able to identify these on the public road without the need for DVLA officials to be present. Additional resource has been made available to considerably increase DVLA's level of wheel clamping activity against untaxed vehicles. The DVLA works closely with the police and clamping units are available to support them at roadside checks. Offending vehicles, the keepers of which are frequently involved in other criminal activity, are impounded in this partnership approach to the problem.

Motorways

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average cost was of adding an extra lane to an existing motorway in each of the last 10 years. [75815]

Dr. Ladyman: The following table lists the average cost in real terms of adding an extra lane to existing motorways, provided by publicly funded major schemes for the last 10 years.

	Lane km added to HA motorway network	Cost per km in real terms (£ million)
1996-97	51	7.0
1997-98	39	4.0
2002-03	7	32.3
2003-04	21	13.3
2004-05	4	2.0
2005-06	32	6.2

Potters Bar Rail Crash

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial assistance has been made available by the Government to Network Rail in connection with litigation arising out of the Potters Bar rail crash; and whether he plans to make financial assistance available to the survivors and victims' families in connection with their litigation arising out of the crash. [76121]

Derek Twigg: No funds have been made available to Network Rail. The Legal Services Commission granted legal aid to one of the families in connection with their application for judicial review of the Secretary of State's decision not to hold a public inquiry.

Seat Belts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the seat belt wearing rate was among (a) males and (b) females on each motorway in each of the last five years, broken down by front and rear seats. [77504]

Dr. Ladyman: This information is not available. I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 942W, which sets out the reports that contain information on the seat belt wearing rates that are observed.

Thameslink 2000

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1288W, on Thameslink 2000, when he plans to make these reports available to the public. [76372]

Dr. Ladyman: The inspector's report on the re-opened Thameslink 2000 inquiry will be published when the decision is announced, in line with standard practice for planning inquiries. The report by London TravelWatch assessing the impact on users of the related rail closure proposals is available on their website.

West Coast Main Line

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether all the additional services in the West Coast Mainline Progress Report planned to call at Milton Keynes will allow passengers to alight and embark. [76929]

Derek Twigg: A revised timetable is due to be introduced early in 2009 when the West Coast Main Line Project will be substantially complete. It is too soon to say whether there will be any restrictions on boarding or alighting at Milton Keynes but extra platform capacity is being provided there to enable more trains to call.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Africa (Chinese Policy)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of Chinese policies in Africa including aid strategies. [76040]

Mr. McCartney: We are keen to increase our dialogue with China on implementation of their Africa policy launched this year. Our network of diplomatic posts in China and Africa provide regular reporting and analysis. The Department for International Development has recently commissioned several papers on the impact of Chinese policies in Africa, one of which, from the Institute of Development Studies, focuses on aid, among other issues. This paper can be found at the following website: http://www.ids.ac.uk/ids/global/AsianDriverpdfs/DFIDAgendaPaper06.pdf. Copies will also be placed in the Library of the House and sent to my hon. Friend.

Burma

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have made to the Government of Burma regarding humanitarian problems caused by the Burmese Army for the Karen, Karenni and Shan people. [76872]

Mr. McCartney: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 893W and the answer my right hon. Friend the Minister for Europe, gave the hon. Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. David Jones) on 23 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1626W-27W.

Commonwealth Youth Sunday

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what countries Commonwealth Youth Sunday is observed. [76038]

Mr. McCartney: I am unaware of Commonwealth Youth Sunday. National Youth Days are celebrated at different times of the year across the Commonwealth.

Ethiopia

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to encourage Ethiopia to implement the International Boundary Commission 2002 ruling on the border with Eritrea. [75327]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Tewkesbury (Mr. Robertson) on 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 318W.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her Department's policy is towards Ethiopia regarding the border dispute with Eritrea; and what assessment she has made of the effect of this policy on relations between Eritrea and Ethiopia. [75329]

Mr. McCartney: We have consistently urged the Ethiopian Government to accept the final and binding resolution of the Ethiopia-Eritrea Boundary Commission and to allow demarcation of the frontier with Eritrea. We welcome the participation by both parties in the recent meetings of the Ethiopia-Eritrea Boundary Commission in London. We continue to urge both sides to engage constructively in future meetings of the Boundary Commission and to commence demarcation as quickly as possible. We remain committed to normalisation of relations on either side of the final border between the two countries as the only permanent basis for peace.

EU-Morocco Fisheries Agreement

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) she and (b) diplomatic and consular staff plan to meet (i) Polisario and (ii) the Moroccan authorities to discuss the EU-Morocco Fisheries Agreement. [77170]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no plans to discuss the EU/Morocco Fisheries Agreement with either the Polisario Front or the Moroccan authorities. However, on my recent visit to Morocco on 6 June, I discussed this issue with the Moroccan Deputy Foreign Minister. Officials have also discussed the agreement with representatives of both the Moroccan Government and members of the Polisario Front.

The UK's position on the issue is clear. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Ben Bradshaw) to the hon. Member for Portsmouth South (Mr Mike Hancock) on 2 May (Official Report, column 1315W).

Madagascar

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment she has made of diplomatic links with Madagascar. [75890]

Mr. McCartney: UK diplomatic links with Madagascar are conducted through a non-resident ambassador based in Port Louis, Mauritius and an honorary consul based in Antananarivo (we are currently seeking accreditation for both these officials), and through contact with the Malagasy embassy in London.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Government of Sudan regarding its attitude towards peace measures and human rights in Sudan. [76041]

Mr. McCartney: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, saw the Sudanese Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs on 7 June, and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development also spoke to him. We welcomed the signature by the Government of Sudan of the Darfur Peace Agreement, and stressed the need for this to be implemented rapidly. On the Government's side early action on disarmament of the Janjaweed was key. We have condemned the grave abuses of human rights in Darfur and will continue to do so. There must be no impunity for those who have committed these crimes and those responsible must be brought to justice.

Trade-related Intellectual Property Rights

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that the EU does not negotiate bilateral deals which oblige countries to adopt intellectual property standards or timetables which go beyond trade-related intellectual property rights. [76241]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The UK position on intellectual property rights in bilateral and regional agreements was published in the Government response to the report of the Commission on Intellectual Property Rights following recommendation 77 of the Commission under chapter 8—The International Architecture. This is available at the following website: http://www.iprcommission.org/graphic/uk_government_response.htm.

The Government state clearly that bilateral and other agreements should not, as a matter of course, oblige countries to adopt intellectual property standards or timetables that go beyond the requirements of the World Trade Organisation Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) Agreement. They also makes the further commitment that > "For our part, we will seek to ensure that EU agreements with developing countries avoid imposing obligations beyond TRIPS".

I can confirm that UK negotiators are routinely briefed regarding this commitment.

The TRIPS Agreement, however, sets minimum standards and not a maximum level of intellectual property protection. It is therefore within a government's sovereign right to enhance their intellectual property protection if they judge it to be in their country's interest, including as part of an overall package of trade issues which make up a bilateral trade agreement.

Uganda

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the written statement by the Secretary of State for International Development of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 81WS, on his visit to Uganda, what steps she is taking to ensure the Secretary General's recommendations to the Security Council of the United Nations are submitted without further delay; and if she will call for a UN Special Envoy, a UN Panel of Experts and action to improve the protection of civilians throughout Northern Uganda. [75041]

Mr. McCartney: UN Security Council Resolution 1663 of 24 March 2006 requested the UN Secretary General to make recommendations to the Council on how to address more effectively the problem of the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA). On 26 April 2006, the Assistant Secretary General at the Department of Political Affairs briefed the Security Council on the threat posed by the LRA and made a number of recommendations, including that:

- a Panel of Experts be established to investigate the financial backing for the LRA;
- the Government of Uganda be encouraged to accept the appointment of a senior envoy for the LRA;
- the Government of Uganda set out a strategy for dealing with the root causes of the conflict through dialogue so that internally displaced peoples could return home.

In the Security Council discussion which followed the UK welcomed these proposals. We are urging the Secretariat at all levels to deliver a detailed written report as soon as possible, as the basis for taking these proposals forward.

The UK is encouraging the Ugandan Government to accept the appointment of a Special Envoy. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development raised this with President Museveni on 16 May when they discussed the role a Special Envoy could play in achieving greater regional co-operation on the LRA issue.

Improving the protection of civilians is a crucial issue and on 4 May the Government of Uganda launched the Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC) to oversee the protection of civilians, the conditions of internally displaced persons planning for the return of the displaced to their homes and peace building including the return and reintegration of combatants and reconciliation.

This JMC represents an important step forward. It involves greater public recognition by the Government of Uganda of the scale of the problem and it creates an opportunity for constructive dialogue and joint planning. The JMC is currently developing an action plan to take this work forward and our High Commission in Kampala and the Department for International Development Uganda are both closely involved in this.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the reports relating to the proposed trial for treason of Dr. Besigye, the Leader of the Opposition in Uganda; and if she will make a statement [76024]

Mr. McCartney: Dr. Besigye, the leader of the Forum for Democratic Change party in Uganda, is currently on trial in the Ugandan High Court facing a number of treason charges. On 18 May this trial was put on hold pending the outcome of a petition to the Constitutional Court, made by Dr. Besigye's lawyers. The Constitutional Court is expected to give a ruling by the end of June 2006.

On 16 May my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development raised Dr. Besigye's on-going High Court trial with President Museveni. The President gave an assurance that due process would be followed.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1971W, on Uganda, what assessment she has made of reports of (a) the execution by Ugandan security forces of two soldiers for the alleged killing of Father O'Toole and (b) the 2003 execution by Uganda Chieftaincy Military Intelligence of (i) Ismael Muviru, (ii) Mutwabil Walakira and (iii) Captain Sewamuwa Daudi; and if she will make a statement. [76214]

Mr. McCartney: Pursuant to my answer to the hon. Member on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1970W, on Uganda, no-one has been executed on the orders of the High Court since 1999.

Father Declan O'Toole and two workers from his parish were murdered on 20 March 2002. Following a field court martial two Uganda Peoples Defence Force (UPDF) soldiers, Corporal James Omediyo and Private Abdullah Mohammed were executed by firing squad on 25 March 2002. These executions prompted legal challenges to the authority of the UPDF to act in this manner and two related cases are currently before the Supreme Court of Uganda.

The non-governmental organisation Human Rights Watch has claimed that, in September 2003, the Joint Anti-Terrorism Task Force detained without trial and then executed Ismael Muviru, Mutwabil Walakira, Captain Sewamuwa Daudi, and another unnamed man. The UPDF, the Uganda Human Rights Commission and the independent Foundation for Human Rights Initiative have reported that they investigated the allegations and could not find any evidence to verify the claim. There also was no known response to newspaper appeals for the public to come forward with any information on the case.

We have repeatedly made clear to the Ugandan Government our opposition to the death penalty and the need for a fair and transparent judicial process.

UK Ambassador (Kyrgyzstan)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2006 to question 74571, on the UK Ambassador to Kyrgyzstan, what the cost was of (a) travel, (b) subsistence and (c) accommodation for the (i) Ambassador, (ii) Deputy Head of Mission and (iii) Defence Attaché of each of the visits listed. [76128]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The total cost of travel for the Ambassador, the Deputy Head of Mission and the Defence Attaché for their visits to Kyrgyzstan from Almaty, Kazakhstan since January 2005 is £589. The total combined costs for accommodation and subsistence for these visits is as follows: Ambassador—£3,752; Deputy Head of Mission—£2,237 and Defence Attaché—£3,730.

Whaling

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with the Norwegian Foreign Minister on (a) Norway's expansion of its commercial whaling programme and (b) Norway's support for Japan's attempts to gain a simple majority at the International Whaling Commission; and if she will make a statement. [76993]

Mr. McCartney: The UK's opposition to Norway's commercial whaling programme has been consistent and strong. In April 2006, the UK led a demarche against Norway's announcement of a record increase in the number of North Atlantic minke whales they plan to catch this year. We will continue to fight vigorously at the International Whaling Commission to oppose whaling activities. The focus of the recent meeting between my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and her Norwegian counterpart was Iran and the Middle East. Whaling was not discussed.

World Expo

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) why the UK has not signed up for the World Expo in Shanghai in 2010; [73616]

(2) what resources her Department has allocated to British participation in the World Expo in 2010. [73617]

Mr. McCartney: We are considering the Chinese Government's formal invitation to participate in the Shanghai Expo 2010. As part of that process we are looking at how UK participation might be funded and we are discussing this with a wide range of possible stakeholders including Government Departments, other parts of the public sector, and many private sector companies.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Asylum and Immigration Tribunal

26. Mr. Bone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what average time was taken by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal to process an appeal in relation to asylum seekers and immigration cases in the latest period for which figures are available. [76566]

Bridget Prentice: In the financial year 2005-06, the average time taken to promulgate immigration judge appeals in asylum cases was 15 weeks and in immigration cases, 14 weeks.

Legal Services

27. David Taylor: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she is taking to reform the regulation of legal services. [76567]

Bridget Prentice: The draft Legal Services Bill (Cm 6839) which was published on 24 May 2006, sets out the Government's proposals for reform in the way legal services are regulated to deliver a better deal for consumers. These provide for the creation of a strong and independent oversight regulator, the Legal Services Board, a new independent Office for Legal Complaints and a provision for legal services to be provided in new ways to meet the needs of consumers. The draft Bill is currently subject to Pre-Legislative Scrutiny by a Joint Committee which is expected to report by 25 July. The Government will carefully consider the Joint Committee's recommendations and will introduce a full Bill as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Domestic Violence Court (Swansea)

28. Mrs. James: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what consideration has been given to establishing a specialist domestic violence court in Swansea. [76568]

Ms Harman: Swansea magistrates court is being considered as a venue for a specialist domestic violence court. An announcement will be made later this year after assessments of all bids across England and Wales including that from Swansea have been considered.

Victims of Crime

29. Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what mechanisms are in place to ensure that victims of crime and their families have a voice in court proceedings. [76569]

Ms Harman: The Government are currently piloting victims advocates at five Crown courts. The scheme allows the relatives of murder and manslaughter victims the choice to speak in court about the impact of the crime on them, after conviction and before sentence.

Electoral Turnout

30. John Robertson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 159W, on electoral turnout, what initiatives the Government have undertaken to promote participation in democracy. [76570]

Bridget Prentice: The Government's "1824 Collective" campaign aimed to raise awareness of registration in advance of the May 2006 London elections. They are also working with local authorities to pilot ways of increasing registration nationally. They have also undertaken pilots in the 2006 elections aimed at modernising the voting process. The Electoral Administration Bill contains a number of clauses to encourage participation at elections.

Fine Defaulters/Bail

31. Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what progress has been made in introducing measures to deal with people who do not pay fines and who break their bail conditions. [76571]

Ms Harman: On 27 March we completed the full national rollout to the magistrates courts in England and Wales of the tough new measures introduced in the Courts Act 2003 to deal with fine defaulters. We have also introduced a strategy to improve first time compliance with bail conditions, speed up the execution of Fail to Appear warrants and deal with Bail Act offences robustly when offenders are brought back before the court.

Next of Kin

32. Jeremy Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans the Government have to review who is considered to be next of kin in cases where the next of kin is accused of the murder of the deceased. [76572]

Ms Harman: The Government have no plans to carry out such a review.

Being someone's next of kin does not automatically give a person the right to do anything. Being next of kin does not, for example, give a person a right to bury someone, or to administer their estate.

Family Courts

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will bring forward proposals to end enforcement action by family courts without a public hearing. [76573]

Ms Harman: My hon. Friend will be pleased to know that the Government will soon be publishing a consultation paper on improving the openness of family courts which will focus on all family proceedings. I am sure hon. Members will take the opportunity to consider it and respond on this very important issue.

Dr. David Kelly

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer from the Under-Secretary of State at the Home Department of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 274W, on Dr. David Kelly, whether the Oxfordshire coroner consulted the police in this case in line with rule 6 of the Coroners Rules 1984. [76692]

Ms Harman: Yes. The details are set out in the evidence given by ACC Page of Thames Valley police to the Hutton Inquiry on 3 September 2003.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take (a) to discourage alcohol volume drinking and (b) to promote soft drink alternatives to alcohol; and what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to this end. [74613]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are proposing a number of measures to discourage alcohol volume drinking: it will later on this year begin a campaign to discourage binge-drinking, focusing on specific groups at the highest risk of harm; it is currently working with the alcohol industry and others to refresh and promote the "sensible drinking message", including on product labelling; and is working with the industry to prevent irresponsible drinks promotions, in particular those that encourage people to drink too much, too quickly.

The Government support the industry's Social Responsibility Standards document and the Portman Group's code of practice, both of which include guidance on preventing irresponsible promotions. We are also encouraging the licensed trade to promote the safe consumption of alcohol, for example by linking alcohol promotions with soft drinks or food.

The Department for Trade and Industry was involved in the development of the Social Responsibility Standards document and has provided advice on the competition issues impacting price promotions.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alcohol-related crimes have been committed in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) age and (b) sex of offenders. [75407]

Mr. Coaker: From the information collected, it is not possible to identify those offences which are alcohol-related. Such offences are not specifically defined by statute and details of the individual circumstances of offences do not feature in either the recorded crime or court proceedings data series.

Buses

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to prevent people using illegal drugs on buses. [76669]

Mr. Coaker: The initial responsibility in such circumstances falls to the bus operator. Any instances of drug misuse on buses should be reported to the police who will advice on the issue in general and respond to specific instances as appropriate.

Caravan Thefts

Mr. Heban: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were successfully prosecuted in Hampshire for the theft of a caravan in each of the last five years. [76549]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 12 June 2006]: It is not possible to identify separately the number of thefts of caravans from other theft offences on the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform; data are therefore unavailable.

Child Trafficking

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what studies his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the future of child trafficking victims after they have been returned to their home countries. [75977]

Mr. Coaker: The Government have not commissioned any evaluation into the futures of child trafficking victims who have returned to their county of origin. However Her Majesty's Government are aware that children returned to certain countries could be put at risk of further harm, with the likelihood of being re-trafficked. As a general principle, therefore, children will only be returned, where it is considered both possible and safe to do so and only after a full assessment of each case has been thoroughly carried out. Before considering the return of a child, full consideration is given to the Government's obligations under the immigration laws and the European Convention on Human Rights and the unique circumstances of each case including an assessment of the country of origin.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the letter to his predecessor dated 27 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Ms E. Lennon. [72164]

John Reid: My right hon. Friend's letter, addressed to my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, was received by the Home Office on 22 March. My hon. Friend, the hon. Member for Leigh (Andy Burnham) replied on 27 March.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter to his predecessor dated 10 April from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, about Mr. H. Kadir. [75881]

John Reid: A reply was sent to the right hon. Member on 20 April 2006.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the custody plus provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 to be introduced. [76744]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 12 June 2006]: While continuing to work towards an implementation date of Autumn 2006 for Custody Plus, the Government would not implement such an important sentence unless it was satisfied that the National Offender Management Service could cope with the additional work. The issue of capacity to implement this fully and effectively is being considered.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how much compensation the Criminal Records Bureau has paid for delays in processing criminal record checks in each year since it was established; and how many applicants received such compensation payments in each year; [74584]

(2) what total compensation was paid to individuals who were incorrectly assigned a criminal record at the Criminal Records Bureau in each of the last five years; [75299]

(3) what steps he is taking to compensate individuals wrongly assigned a criminal record by the Criminal Records Bureau. [75307]

Joan Ryan: The Criminal Records Bureau compensates customers for any loss which is a consequence of its maladministration. This includes errors and mistakes which the CRB have made that have delayed it from issuing Disclosures. However, there are a range of other factors that can contribute to delays in completing Disclosures, including incomplete or inaccurate application forms that require further information from the applicant or Countersignatory; the existence of criminal record information or other relevant non-conviction information and, for Enhanced Disclosures, the performance of Disclosure Units within police forces.

The CRB aims to return customers to the position they would have been in but for its maladministration; this is by making ex-gratia awards. In financial year 2002-03, the CRB made 19 awards totalling £30,603 for consequential loss; in 2003-04 it made 47 awards totalling £56,618; in 2004-05 it made 32 awards totalling £26,489 and in 2005-06 it has made 59 awards totalling £67,014. The following table illustrates the number of awards made against the number of disclosures issued in each of those years:

	Number of:
Financial year	Disclosures issued	Awards	Value of awards (£)
2002-03	1,441,704	19	30,603
2003-04	2,287,109	47	86,618
2004-05	2,434,290	32	25,489
2005-06	2,772,929	59	67,014

Figures to determine the number of applicants that these sums were paid to are not available, because in some circumstances the awards were paid to Registered Bodies, employers or Umbrella Bodies.

Information is not available to determine the total amount of compensation paid by the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) for individuals who were issued with a Disclosure which, following investigation, was found to contain incorrect conviction information.

The fact that a Disclosure is proved to be inaccurate after a dispute, often following a fingerprint check, does not automatically incur a redress award. This is because in some instances an applicant's details are the same, or very similar, to those of an individual with a record on the Police National Computer (PNC). It may be that the applicant's details have been used by another individual when arrested or convicted and the CRB has a statutory obligation to disclose such records where they are identified.

The Disclosure Service enables individuals to dispute the content of a Disclosure and allows them to distinguish themselves from the record on the PNC. This did not happen under the previous arrangements. The CRB scheme complies with existing treasury guidelines.

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Criminal Records Bureau checks are made on applicants for taxi licences who have previously resided overseas. [76135]

Joan Ryan: An individual may become known to the police within days of entering the country and eligible employers should therefore always be encouraged to undertake disclosure checks regardless of the length of time an individual has been resident in the UK. This applies to those who wish to obtain private hire and taxi licences.

The CRB introduced the Overseas Faxback Service in February 2003, to provide details and guidance to employers and individuals on how to obtain a certificate of good conduct or a copy of a person's own criminal record from those countries included in the faxback service. This information can be used in conjunction with the full range of pre-appointment checks to ensure that the prospective employee is suitable for the post. These pre-appointment checks are the responsibility of the employer and a CRB disclosure is only one part of that process.

Full details of this service are available on the CRB's website at www.crb.gov.uk. For those seeking general advice about the countries covered by the faxback service, the CRB also has a national rate enquiry line on 0870 0100 450 and an e-mail enquiry facility at overseas@crb.gsi.gov.uk.

Some countries, including most in the EU, also have arrangements enabling their citizens to obtain certificates of good conduct or extracts from any existing criminal record to show to prospective employers. These may be obtained once the prospective employees have arrived in the UK but it may be advisable for them to obtain the document before leaving their home country.

Following a recent EU Council decision, the CB has, in conjunction with Home Office colleagues and the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), become involved in EU initiatives to explore how criminal record and disqualification data cross EU states might be used for employment vetting and disclosure purpose. These discussions are in the preliminary stages at present and more information will become available in due course. The CRB are also in discussion with ACPO and others about seeking access to other, non-EU, overseas conviction data.

Crossbows

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what restrictions apply to the (a) sale and (b) use of crossbows. [75553]

Mr. Coaker: It is an offence under the Crossbows Act 1987 to sell or hire a crossbow to a person under the age of 17 and for a person under the age of 17 to purchase or possess a crossbow. In the Violent Crime Reduction Bill currently before Parliament, we are proposing to increase this age limit to 18. Those carrying a crossbow in a public place without lawful authority or reasonable excuse could be committing the offence of carrying an offensive weapon in a public place under section 1 of the Prevention of Crime Act 1953.

Deportation

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether (a) fingerprints and (b) DNA samples are taken from those who are deported from the UK. [75380]

Joan Ryan: It is not routine practice to fingerprint deportees under immigration powers, as the notice of intention to deport is often served by the prison service on behalf of the immigration service. However, fingerprints will be taken if the prisoner lodges a claim for asylum or as part of the re-documentation process. Fingerprints may also have been taken at an earlier stage if the deportee had been identified as an immigration offender or under police powers at the point of charging.

Immigration legislation does not give immigration or police officers the power to take DNA samples from individuals. However, where the Immigration Service is looking to prosecute an individual, we will consider asking the police to take DNA samples on an individual case basis in accordance with their powers under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) 1984. Under provisions in PACE, police officers may take a DNA sample from any person arrested or charged in connection with a recordable offence.

Suspects (Description)

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance has been issued on the releasing of information on a suspect's ethnic origin as part of a description where the public's help is sought in tracing the suspect. [71204]

Mr. McNulty: The release of information in relation to the description of a suspect is an operational matter. The Association of Chief Constables (ACPO) Media Advisory Group provides guidance to the police on working with the media and releasing information about individual cases. The Media Advisory Group's guidance is at:

http://www.acpo.police.uk/asp/policies/Data/magguidelines.pdf

Financial Fraud

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of financial fraud have taken place in each of the last five years involving credit card cheques; and what the total value was in each year. [75899]

Mr. Coaker: The available information relates to recorded offences of cheque and credit card fraud and is published in Table 2.04 of "Crime in England and Wales 2004-05". A copy of this table is available at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1105chap2.xls

The Home Office does not collect data on the total value involved. Statistics provided by the Association for Payment Clearing Services (APACS) on financial losses were also published in section 4.6 of the volume referred to above. These are available on the website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1105chap456.pdf

Holocaust Memorial Day

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Muslim Council of Britain on Holocaust Memorial Day; and if he will make a statement. [69260]

Mr. Coaker: The Secretary of State for the Home Department last met representatives of the Muslim Council of Britain on the 3 May 2006. There is no formal record of the meeting. However, whenever the issue of Holocaust Memorial Day has been raised, the Home Secretary has stressed that the Government take a broad and inclusive approach towards the content and community outreach of the commemoration. Lessons about the need to confront all forms of racism and hatred, including anti-Semitism and Islamophobia, have been a consistent theme of Holocaust Memorial Day. The Government regret that the Muslim Council of Britain does not support Holocaust Memorial Day and we hope that in the near future they will reconsider their stance.

Knife Crimes

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent crimes have been committed using a knife in each of the last five years. [75401]

Mr. Coaker: The information requested is not collected centrally. Crimes involving the use of a knife cannot be separately identified in the recorded crime statistics.

The Homicide Index has details of the number of homicides where the apparent method of killing was by a sharp instrument. Figures for the last five years are given in the following table:

Offences of homicide where the apparent method of killing was by a sharp instrument: England and Wales

	Number of offences
2000-01	214
2001-02	261
2002-03	266
2003-04	234
2004-05	236

Medicinal Imports

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to allow pharmaceutical manufacturers of opiate-based analgesic medicines to import their raw materials from overseas manufacturers; and if he will make a statement. [75749]

Mr. Coaker: In common with other major opiate manufacturing countries, the United Kingdom does not permit importation of such base material drugs domestically manufactured and readily available. This policy is in furtherance of the aims of the United Nations Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs 1961 to limit international supply to what is necessary for countries' medical needs. It is adjusted to take account of treaty obligations on overseas trade with the European Union and the European Economic Association only.

National Non-Emergency Number

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the national non-emergency number for community safety advice and action will be available for use in Dudley. [77143]

Mr. Byrne: The 101 single non-emergency number service for community safety action, information and advice will be rolled out across England and Wales in a number of waves. The first wave of services have been launched in Hampshire and South Wales, with Leicestershire and Rutland, South Yorkshire and Northumbria launching in summer 2006. The next wave of areas is yet to be agreed. It is planned that the service will be available across England and Wales by the end of 2008.

Police

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil service staff hours have been spent on duties related to police reorganisation since 16 September 2005; and what estimate he has made of the number of staff hours which will be spent on this issue in (a) 2006 and (b) 2007. [68616]

Mr. McNulty: Six Home Office officials have been working on police restructuring since my right hon. Friend the Member for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke), the then Home Secretary, launched the review in September 2005. The implementation team currently includes eleven Home Office officials (full-time equivalents). No estimate has been made of the number of staff hours which will be spent on this issue in 2006 and 2007.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Ministers have duties related to the proposed police reorganisation in England and Wales; and how many hours these Ministers have spent on issues related to police reorganisation. [68617]

Mr. McNulty: As the Minister of State for Policing, Security and Community Safety, I am responsible for the work relating to the proposed police reorganisation in England and Wales. I have recently begun a series of meetings with chief constables, chairs of police authorities and other stakeholders on police restructuring.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) telephone calls and (b) meetings he has had with chief constables to discuss police restructuring in England and Wales. [68624]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Secretary had the opportunity to discuss police restructuring with senior police colleagues at the Association of Chief Police Officers conference in May, but it is not possible to identify how many telephone calls he has had.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been convicted of a criminal offence in each of the last five years, broken down by type of criminal offence. [75404]

Mr. McNulty: It is not possible to identify the number of police officers convicted of a criminal offence as details of defendants are not held centrally.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outsourcing of police custody suites. [57774]

Mr. McNulty: Police authorities and chief constables have responsibility for the local provision of custody facilities and the resourcing of those facilities. Chief constables have specific responsibility under section 35 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE) for the designation of police stations in their area which are used for the purpose of detaining arrested persons.

Each chief officer is responsible for ensuring that all police officers and police staff working in their custody suites are suitable, capable and trained whether police staff are employed directly or through a contractor. Most forces make use of the mixed economy approach. It provides chief officers with a level of flexibility to provide staffing levels to meet local requirements while providing the overarching framework to raise standards and achieve improved custodial care.

The National Centre for Policing Excellence on behalf of the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Home Office has produced the 'Guidance on the Safer Detention and Handling of Persons in Police Custody'. The guidance was launched on 8 February 2006. The guidance identifies the standards expected of both police officers and police staff in the handling of persons who come into police contact.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are in Lancashire; and how many there were in 1997. [76011]

Mr. McNulty: As at 30 September 2005 there were 3,550 full-time equivalent police officers (FTE officers is less those on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave) in Lancashire. As at 30 September 1997 there were 3,281 FTE officers. This represents an 8 per cent. increase over the period.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police raids on suspected terrorist sites in the past three years have been based on false information; and what the cost of the raids was. [75968]

Mr. McNulty: It is not our policy to comment on police operations on suspected terrorist sites or their cost. This is an operational matter for the police.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of his time the Permanent Secretary of his Department has spent on police force restructuring in the last 12 months. [68696]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 May 2006]: It is not possible to identify what proportion of his time the Permanent Secretary has spent on police restructuring in the last 12 months.

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his officials have been deployed on police force restructuring in the last 12 months. [68697]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 May 2006]: Six Home Office officials have been working on police restructuring since the then Home Secretary launched the review in September 2005. The implementation team currently includes eleven Home Office officials (full-time equivalents).

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of his official time has been spent on police force restructuring in the last 12 months. [68699]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 May 2006]: It is not possible to identify the proportion of the Home Secretary's official time that has been spent on police restructuring in the last 12 months.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of bringing protective services in the four Welsh police forces up to the level considered Fit for Purpose in the report Closing the Gap by Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary. [66043]

Mr. McNulty: The case submitted by the four Welsh police authorities in December 2005 identified costs and benefits of force merger, including a considerable investment to provide an uplift in protective services.

Our assessment, based on independent financial review and professional moderation, is that the same benefits could be realised for a much lower investment. The Home Office continues to work with Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary and the Welsh police forces and authorities to review the business case, to refine the costs and benefits of providing the necessary uplift in protective service provision while achieving best value for money.

The operational assessment that a single authority and force for Wales is the best option to protect people better from serious crime and terrorism remains unchanged.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many days of absence have been taken by officers of the Metropolitan police as a result of injuries sustained from collisions of police vehicles travelling above the speed limit in each of the last five years. [75344]

Mr. McNulty: This information is not collected by the Home Office.

Prisons

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1212W, on Leyhill open prison, how many of those prisoners escaping have not yet been detained, broken down by (a) original offence and (b) the year of escape. [73593]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Leyhill is an open prison with no secure perimeter and prisoners are not held in secure accommodation. Prisoners who leave the premises without authority or do not return are defined as absconders rather than escapees. Since 1999 there have been 393 absconds. Of those absconds, 25 only remain unlawfully at large. Details of these are provided in the table. The police are notified when prisoners abscond and their details are entered on the Police National Computer.

Probation Officers

Mr. Mallins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time probation officers were employed in the area covered by the Greater London magistrates courts in each of the last six years. [76745]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 12 June 2006]: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data collected prior to 1 April 2003 are unreliable, and are not directly comparable with the more accurate figures collected since that time. In addition, due to the manual process employed in the collection of data for quarter one 2003-04 it is not possible to breakdown the data requested by area. The figures presented in the table show full time equivalent (FTE) figures at the close of each quarter from 1 July 2003 to 31 March 2006.

London	Probation Officers[1]
2003-04
Quarter 2	795.70
Quarter 3	840.50
Quarter 4	862.50
2004-05

[1] The 'probation officers' category includes the senior probation officer, senior practitioner, and probation officer job groups. Trainee probation officers have been excluded from these figures.

[2] From Quarter 4 2005-06 the workforce data collected will be structured according to the new offender management model. These latest figures are as yet unpublished and are currently being validated. As a result of this they may be subject to change.

Proceeds of Crime Act

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of assets seized under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 were returned to the Cambridgeshire Constabulary from seizures in the Cambridgeshire police force area in each year since 2003-04; what the value was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [77082]

Mr. McNulty: The police asset recovery incentive scheme came into force in 2004-05. Under the scheme, agreed with the Association of Chief Police Officers, police forces received one-third of all assets recovered above £40 million in 2004-05, rising to one-half in 2005-06 allocated to individual forces on the basis of their performance.

Cambridgeshire Constabulary received an incentive payment of £410,828 for their performance in 2004-05 and will shortly receive a payment of £48,033 for 2005-06.

Registration Marks Regulations

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females have been (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted of an offence under the Road Vehicles (Display of Registration Marks) Regulations 2001 in (A) Southend, (B) Essex, (C) Hertfordshire, (D) the Metropolitan Police area of London and (E) England and Wales in each year since 2002, broken down by age group. [75523]

Mr. McNulty: A breach of the Road Vehicles (Display of Registration Marks) Regulations 2001 amounts to an offence under s.59(1) of the Vehicle Excise and Registration Act 1994. However, this offence forms part of a group of miscellaneous motoring offences in the data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform. It is not possible to separate these offences from others within the group and therefore no separate data can be provided.

Resignation

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times he has offered his resignation to the Prime Minister; and on what dates. [67908]

John Reid: This is a matter for my right hon. friend the former Home Secretary.

Runaway Children

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish his Department's strategy for co-ordinating police forces' response for safeguarding children who run away or go missing from home or care. [75882]

Mr. McNulty: Our aims are to reduce the number of missing person episodes and, so far as the police are concerned, ensure that all inquiries are risk-assessed and pursued appropriately in accordance with guidance approved by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO). To achieve this we are striving to develop effective partnership working across the statutory and voluntary sectors and are providing funding and support through data exchange protocols. This should help provide better analysis of the extent and nature of the problem which will support policy development.

ACPO, the Police National Missing Persons Bureau (PNMB) in the Metropolitan Police and the voluntary organisations are currently developing proposals for improved working which we look forward to considering.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for registration with the Security Industry Authority as a door supervisor have been (a) approved and (b) rejected since inception of the scheme. [66520]

Mr. Coaker: As of 7 June, 44,983 door supervisor licences have been granted, and 2,793 refused.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for registration with the Security Industry Authority as a door supervisor are awaiting decision. [66521]

Mr. Coaker: As of 7 June, 7,665 door supervisor applications are currently in the SIA's processing system awaiting a decision.

The SIA's licensing statistics are updated weekly on the SIA website at: http://www.the-sia.org.uk/home/licensing/stats_2.htm.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Adviser Discretion Fund

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of individual grants made under the Adviser Discretion Fund in each of the last 12 months were for (a) less than £100, (b) between £100 and £300 and (c) over £300; and what the total amount paid was in each category. [74619]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information requested is not routinely collected and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Information is available on the number of awards made and total value of those awards in each of the last 12 months (April 2005 to March 2006). In this period 221,214 awards were made at a cost of £16.3 million. The average value of awards was £73.72.

Departmental Jobs (Regional Distribution)

Financial Assistance Scheme

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his oral statement of 25 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1648-70, on pensions reform, what steps he is taking to allow early retirement funded by the Financial Assistance Scheme if a beneficiary is in ill health. [76824]

James Purnell: Financial Assistance Scheme payments commence at age 65, except in special circumstances where early payment can be made to terminally ill qualifying members or to survivors of qualifying members who have died, on application by the scheme trustees.

We have no plans to extend early access to payments more broadly to anyone in ill health.

Incentive Packages

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the value is of (a) pay supplements, (b) bonuses and (c) other incentive packages that are payable in his Department on the basis of geographic location; how many people are in receipt of each payment; and what the total cost to his Department of each payment was in 2004-05. [35913]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is as follows.

(a) DWP has four geographical pay areas:

National

Inner London

Outer London, and

Specified Location Zone (SLPZ)

The differential cost is not a standard amount but is calculated in each individual pay range.

The current numbers of staff in post in each individual pay area, the 2005 value of the average additional cost above national rates for each of the main grades and the estimated total additional cost in 2004-05 are contained in the following tables:

In addition to the above pay areas, DWP pays a location based recruitment and retention addition (RRA) to staff based on a number of Scottish islands:

Orkneys

Shetland

Outer Hebridies

Tiree

Islay and

Jura

In 2004-05 it is estimated that some 106 staff were eligible for payments at a total cost of some £92,000 pounds.

(b) DWP does not pay bonuses on the basis of geographical locations.

(c) DWP does not have any incentive packages in place for staff in any particular geographical locations.

Jobcentres

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Jobcentre Plus offices closed in 2005-06; and how many are planned for closure in (a) 2006-07 and (b) 2007-08. [63377]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question on how many jobcentre plus offices closed in 2005/06; and how many are planned for closure in (a) 2006/07 and (b) 2007/08. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The shape of the Jobcentre Plus network is under continual review. Following the creation of Jobcentre Plus in 2002 a programme of closures emerged. A detailed service delivery planning exercise was carried out in each District, in consultation with local stakeholders, to identify the locations from which new processes and services would be delivered. Jobcentre Plus inherited a network of around 1500 offices from the former Employment Service and Benefits Agency. It was established during the service delivery planning process that many were unsuitable due to the fabric of the building, location or both. These factors influenced the shaping of the future network. For these reasons a total of 206 offices have closed since 1st April 2005. A further 113 offices are scheduled to close in 2006/07 and 8 during 2007/08. In addition there are a number which are scheduled to close but for which final closure dates are subject to further planning and stakeholder consultation.

Secondly, as a result of a decision in September 2004 to centralise the processing of benefits, 35 offices have been identified for closure once processing work has migrated out of those locations. Four have closed during 2005/06. The closure dates for the remaining offices is subject to more detailed planning but the assumption is that a further 10 will be closed during 2006/07 and the remaining 21 sites during 2007/08.

We continue to evaluate our services and the network of offices from which they are delivered to ensure efficiency. Any site identified as a potential closure, as part of this process, is referred to the Minister of State for consideration. To date 12 offices have been agreed for closure. The actual dates for these closures are currently being finalised but the expectation is that they will occur during 2006/07.

Manchester Action Team

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Manchester, Withington constituency and (b) the City of Manchester have found employment as a result of the Manchester Action Team. [74539]

Mr. Jim Murphy: During the period April 2004 to March 2006 the Manchester Central and Manchester South Action Teams helped 538 people from the Manchester Withington constituency into work. Information is not available prior to this period because of changes to ward boundaries.

From October 2000 to March 2006 the four Manchester based Action Teams (Manchester Central, Manchester North, Manchester South, and Salford) helped 12,545 people into work.

Pensions

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures he is taking to ensure that all pensioner households receive their full entitlement of benefits. [76017]

James Purnell: The Pension Service has written to every pensioner household to tell them about pension credit. In the last eight months the Pension Service has carried out a number of campaign initiatives such as the "You're Missing Out" direct mailings targeted at 1.5 million people most likely to be entitled. Full page adverts have also been taken out in the Daily Mirror, Sunday Mirror, Sun, News of the World, Daily Record, and the People.

The Pension Service local service also offers a full benefit entitlement check to customers that focus on a range of entitlements including pension credit.

Since 5 December 2005 customers who contact the pension credit application line to make an application have also been able to claim housing benefit and council tax benefit during the one phone call.

Over the financial year the Pension Service will be:

Writing again to everyone we believe may have an entitlement to pension credit, encouraging them to apply and advising how the Pension Service can help them do so— over two million mailings are planned.

Offering face-to-face visits and a full benefit entitlement check to the most highly eligible and vulnerable pensioners—with plans to undertake over one million successful home visits.

Handling over 1.3 million calls from customers and making telephone calls to around 250,000 customers to encourage and help them to apply for pension credit and council tax benefit and housing benefit—at one time and with one call.

Continuing to issue an invitation to claim the state pension approximately four months prior to customers reaching their state pension age.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners living in Chorley constituency are in receipt of pension credit. [76018]

James Purnell: The most recent number of households and individuals receiving pension credit in the Chorley constituency are in the following table:

	Number of recipients
Households	4,060
Individual beneficiaries	5,000

Notes:

1. These figures are early estimates. The preferred data source for figures supplied by DWP is the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS). However, the figures provided are the latest available figure: which are taken from the GMS scan at 17 February 2006. These are adjusted using the historical relationship between WPLS and GMS data to give an estimate of the final WPLS figure. Average amounts are displayed as at the scan reference data of 17 February 2006.
2. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest ten.
3. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant postcode directory.
4. Individual beneficiaries comprise claimants and partners and may include partners who are aged less than 60.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the cost of uprating the basic state pension at (a) earnings growth and (b) 5 per cent. per annum in each year from 2006 to 2030, assuming price indexation as the benchmark. [70297]

James Purnell: The information requested is provided in the following table:

	Net costs (£ billion)
	(a) Earnings growth	(b) 5 per cent. per annum
2006	0.4	0.6
2007	0.7	1.3

1. Figures are in 2006-07 price terms in £billions rounded to the nearest £100 million.
2. Costs are measured against current policy with basic state pension linked to prices.
3. The costs are net of income related benefits.
4. Figures are for Great Britain and overseas expenditure.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will post on his departmental website his response to the report of the Parliamentary Ombudsman on occupational pensions; [76304]

(2) when he was first informed of all the recommendations in the report of the Parliamentary Ombudsman on occupational pensions; [76305]

(3) what factors he took into account when deciding not to follow the Parliamentary Ombudsman's recommendation to consider her report Trusting in the Pensions Promise for a period of two months before responding. [76309]

James Purnell: The Department first received draft recommendations from the Ombudsman on 21 December 2005 and responded provisionally in January 2006 A further draft was provided by the Ombudsman on 13 February which the Department also responded to. The recommendations in the published report are substantially the same as were in these two drafts. Therefore, when the report was published the Department had already had over two months to consider the issues raised. Having decided that it was not able to accept four out of the five recommendations made by the Ombudsman, the Department saw no reason to delay responding to her published report. To do so could have raised expectations in the affected members which would not be met.

In his oral statement on 16 March the Secretary of State informed the House that he would publish a full response to the Ombudsman's report. This response is on the departmental website at www.dwp.gov.uk/publications/dwp/2006/pensions/response-ombudsman.pdf.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on progress with the admission of the MG Rover pension scheme to the Pension Protection Fund. [76148]

James Purnell: The MG Rover pension schemes are currently in a Pension Protection Fund (PPF) assessment period.

The PPF works with scheme trustees to progress schemes through the assessment periods as quickly as possible.

During the assessment period, scheme members receive the PPF level of benefits.

Spending Review (Efficiency Targets)

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what total efficiency savings were achieved by his Department in 2004-05; and whether these count towards the agreed efficiency target for his Department set out in the 2004 Spending Review. [52867]

Mrs. McGuire: Total efficiency savings made by DWP in 2004-05 are estimated at £313 million.

The target for DWP is that we realise annual efficiency gains of at least £960 million by 2007-08 against our spending in 2003-04. As such these early savings do not count towards our agreed efficiency target but are an encouraging indication of DWP's ability to meet the efficiency target set for the Department in the 2004 Spending Review.

Teleclaiming

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of the teleclaiming system on claimants (a) with psychosis, (b) with other mental illnesses, (c) on low income and (d) for whom English is a second language. [66070]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 26 April 2006]: While no specific research has been undertaken in relation to the impact on people with specific conditions such as psychosis, Jobcentre Plus aims to make access to its services as straightforward as possible.

Initial contact by telephone is our normal and preferred way of taking claims. However, our delivery of services is tailored to meet individual customer requirements taking health conditions, disabilities, and language barriers into consideration. Staff will hold face to face interviews where a customer cannot use telephone based services.

Where a customer's first language is not English, Jobcentre Plus will use Language Line which provides a translation service between customer and our staff. We also provide other translation services and specialist equipment for disabled customers.

We recognise that customers on a low income may be concerned about the costs of calls made to the Contact Centre. Jobcentre Plus Contact Centres operate a local BT rate 0845 number although customers using mobile telephones or other landline networks are charged at their network provider's normal tariff. Customers can also use "warm phones" in local Jobcentre Plus offices to make this call free of charge and when asked we can arrange to call them back at any point during their call.

In addition we are currently operating a free phone pilot within two of our Contact Centres, where we are offering a 0800 free phone number to customers using our services from a landline. If the pilot is successful we are considering extending this nationally.

In delivering high quality services to our wide and diverse customer groups, we do recognise that some customers face particular difficulties. For example, we are working in consultation with stakeholder groups such as the Royal National Institute for the Deaf to continuously improve our processes.

The Department has recently established a group to examine best practice in the use of telephony for people who have difficulty accessing services and this group will make recommendations on implementing service changes.

Jobcentre Plus is about to commission a programme of research to look at whether certain groups, such as customers with specific physical and/or learning difficulties have problems making contact. The results of this research will be available by early summer 2007.

Work-based Learning (Surrey)

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Surrey, (b) Guildford and (c) Waverley have (i) participated in and (ii) completed each of the three Work Based Learning for Adults Scheme stages in each year since 1997. [66166]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Work Based learning for Adults was launched in 1998, replacing Training for Work. In April 2001, the delivery of Work Based Learning for Adults was transferred from Training and Enterprise Councils in England to the former Employment Service, to ensure greater coherence between the support available to unemployed people, and to make Work Based Learning for Adults even more work-focused.

Information on the numbers of starters and leavers for the various strands of Work Based Learning for Adults in Surrey, Guildford and Waverley is available from April 2001 and is shown in the following table.

From April 2006, voluntary training outside the new deals will no longer be supported. Training in the new deal programmes, including voluntary training, will continue to be funded; this includes new deal for lone parents and new deal for partners programme.

We are also working closely with DfES and the Leaning and Skills Council to see how they can give greater access to basic skills training for people not participating in the new deal programmes.

Abortions

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to the NHS of carrying out abortions (a) in the UK and (b) in Gloucestershire was in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [74163]

Caroline Flint: The available information is set out in the following tables.

The cost to the national health service of carrying out abortions in England is shown in table one. For NHS providers data for the period prior to 1997-98 are not held centrally. For non-NHS providers, data for the period prior to 2002-03 are not held centrally. These data do not include personal medical services pilots.

Table two shows the cost to the NHS of carrying out abortions in NHS providers in Gloucestershire. Data are not collected on a geographical basis and the data provided cover the following organisations:

Cotswold and Vale Primary Care Trust (PCT);

Cheltenham and Tewkesbury PCT;
West Gloucestershire PCT; and Gloucestershire Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust.

Equivalent data prior to 2002-03 are not available due to organisation reconfiguration.

No data were submitted for non-NHS providers by these organisations.

[1] Alcohol related diseases defined as following ICD-10 codes recorded in primary diagnosis: F10: Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of alcohol; K70: Alcoholic liver disease; T51: Toxic effect of alcohol. Notes: Finished consultant episode (FCE): A FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. Figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.
Patient counts:
Patient counts are based on the unique patient identifier hospital episode statistics identifier (HESID). This identifier is derived based on patient's date of birth, postcode, sex, local patient identifier and NHS number, using an agreed algorithm. Where data are incomplete, HESID might erroneously link episodes or fail to recognise episodes for the same patient. Care is therefore needed, especially where duplicate records persist in the data. The patient count cannot be summed across a table where patients may have episodes in more than one cell.
Diagnosis (primary diagnosis):
The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (seven prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in the hospital episode statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
Primary care trust (PCT) and SHA data quality:
PCT and SHA data were added to historic data-years in the HES database using 2002-03 boundaries, as a one-off exercise in 2004. The quality of the data on PCT of treatment and SHA of treatment is poor in 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99, with over a third of all fce finished episodes having missing values in these years. Data quality of PCT of general practitioner (GP) practice and SHA of GP practice in 1997-98 and 1998-99 is also poor, with a high proportion missing values where practices changed or ceased to exist. There is less change in completeness of the residence-based fields over time, where the majority of unknown values are due to missing postcodes on birth episodes. Users of time series analysis including these years need to be aware of these issues in their interpretation of the data.
5. Ungrossed data:
Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data, that is the data are ungrossed.

Cannabis (Therapeutic Use)

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to change the status of drugs derived from cannabinoids to allow their wider legal use for pain and spasm control. [75927]

Mr. Coaker: I have been asked to reply.

The Home Office continues to license clinical trials aimed at developing non-smoked medicines derived from cannabis. We would seek Parliament's agreement to make any necessary changes to the law to enable the prescription of cannabis-based medicine, for the purposes of relieving pain and spasm control, but not before product approval from the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA). The MHRA is responsible for evaluating the safety, quality and effectiveness of all prospective medicinal products. It is a process which is designed to protect public health.

Care Costs

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost of providing free (a) personal care and (b) long-term care for each year until 2015. [77290]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 8 June 2005, Official Report, columns 585-86W.

Child Sexual Abuse

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what therapeutic services her Department provides for children who have suffered sexual abuse; [75482]

(2) what assessment her Department has made of (a) the psychological effects of child sexual abuse and (b) effective treatments for such effects; [75483]

(3) what steps her Department is taking to ensure that children who have experienced sexual abuse receive the therapeutic services they require. [75484]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Specialist services including treatment for sexually transmitted infections, termination of pregnancy and mental health services are available for those children who need them as a result of sexual abuse. For children with less severe mental health problems, it is more appropriate for universal services to provide the psychological support they need than for them to be referred to specialist child and adolescent mental health services.

The Department and the Mental Health Foundation jointly funded a multi-centre study to evaluate the use of psychotherapy with girls aged six to 14 years who had been sexually abused. Two of the main findings were that high rates of depression, anxiety and post traumatic stress disorder were found and both group and individual psychotherapy were effective and improvement in the patients' condition tended to continue after treatment had ended.

It is important that children and maternity health services (CAMHS) are developed in a way that is responsive to the needs of the populations they serve. The CAMHS standard of the children's national service framework (NSF) sets out the requirement for an assessment of the needs of particular groups of children in the locality who are vulnerable or at risk. The NSF also states the commissioners and services should be able to > "demonstrate multi-agency partnership working in the following areas: the provision of services to children and young people who may or may not have been harmed, as set out in 'Working Together to Safeguard Children', contributing to the assessment of complex child abuse cases; the assessment and provision of post-abuse therapeutic services; and services for looked after and adopted children".

Choose and Book System

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 8 May 2006, Official Report, columns 63-64W on the choose and book system, what budget was set before the system was set up for adding the choose and book system to the other systems that send messages through the care record spine. [73257]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A key element of the national health service care records service is to provide a transaction messaging capability to support the messaging requirements of all the systems supported by the spine. The cost of spine services relating to choose and book messaging is not separately identified within the contract cost of the care record spine.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 935W, on the choose and book system, (1) for how many years she expects financial incentives to GPs and GP practices to be necessary for the operation of the scheme; [73277]

(2) what budget has been set to fund the necessary revisions to the general medical service contract in respect of the (a) choice and (b) choose and book component; [73284]

(3) what estimate she has made of the cost in each of the next five years of providing financial incentives to GPs to use the choose and book system if all GPs were to register and employ the choice and choose and book component. [73285]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The payments available to primary medical care contractors for utilisation of the choose and book service and for delivering choice to patients were agreed as part of the amended contractual arrangements that run from April 2006 to March 2007. Whether there is a need for payments in future years will be a matter for consideration by NHS employers in the context of their continuing review of the contractual arrangements as a whole.

The full value of the directed enhanced service (DBS) is 96 pence per registered patient. There are approximately 53.3 million registered patients in England. Assuming that every practice in England meets the full requirements of both components of the DES, the value of the DES in 2006-07 could be just over £50 million, which is funded as a relatively small part of the growth in overall resource allocations to primary care trusts.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 935W, on the choose and book system, what estimate she has made of the administrative cost of each referral. [73286]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No estimate has been made of the administrative cost of each referral made using the choose and book service. However, the choose and book service should reduce considerably the overall administrative burden of managing referrals.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 935W, on the choose and book system, what budget has been allocated to administer the system in 2006-07. [73287]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This is a matter for individual primary care trusts and strategic health authorities.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 935W, on the choose and book system, what comprises the choice component. [73288]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the second paragraph of the reply given on 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 935W:

> The full value of the directed enhanced service is 96p per registered patient and comprises two equal components, one for choice (48p) and one for choose and book (48p). Half of the choice component, worth 24p will be made as an aspiration payment to those general practitioner practices who make a written commitment to ensure that choice is offered to relevant patients. The remaining half, also worth 24p, will be paid based on the results of a new survey of patient experience.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 935W, (1) what assessment she has made of the likely take up of such a scheme if financial incentives were not available for general practitioners who register and use it; [74253]

(2) on the choose and book system, what assessment she made of likely take-up of the choose and book system without the financial incentives available to GPs who register and use the system; and what definition of relevant patients her Department uses when assessing applications for aspiration payments. [74494]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department strongly believes that both choice and choose and book deliver significant benefits to patients, and both primary and secondary care practitioners. The choice and booking direct enhanced service (DES) is designed to encourage general practitioner (GP) practices to proactively implement choice and the choose and book service in order to realise these benefits early, as opposed to GP practices adopting at their own pace. However, no specific assessment has been undertaken to determine what uptake would have been if financial incentives had not been made available.

In the choice component of the DES, relevant patients for aspiration payments are those referred from primary care to secondary care, where a specialist's opinion is needed and the current nationally agreed guidance on choice exclusions do not apply.

Consultation Costs

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the consultation on (a) primary care trust, (b) ambulance and (c) strategic health authority restructuring. [75137]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As the consultations were led by strategic health authorities, the cost of them was financed from local national health service allocations. These figures are not collected nationally.

Dentistry

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health: (1) how many dentists signed the NHS General Dental Services contract in dispute, broken down by primary care trust; [64983]

(2) how many dentists have signed the new NHS dental contract in England; and how many of those have done so in dispute, broken down by primary care trust. [66072]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract and the number who have signed in dispute is not available centrally.

Provisional management estimates on the number of signed contracts and, of these, the number signed in dispute has been placed in the Library. A contract may be for either a practice or an individual dentist.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists have left the NHS in Trent Strategic Health Authority in the last 12 months, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [69779]

Ms Rosie Winterton: At 31 March 2006, there were 1,005 dentists in the Trent Strategic Health Authority (SHA) area. The table shows the numbers of national health service dentists who have retired or otherwise left the general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS) in Trent SHA by parliamentary constituency during the 12 months ending 30 September 2005.

Notes:
1. The latest available data cover the 12 months to 30 September 2005.
2. Leavers indicate that the dentist had an open GDS or PDS contract as at 30 September 2004 but no GDS or PDS contract as at 30 September 2005.
3. A dentist may have left a GDS or PDS contract within more than one parliamentary constituency within Trent SHA, in which case they would appear in figures for each individual constituency.
4. Data include all notifications of dentists leaving the GDS or PDS, received by the NHS Business Services Authority, up to 8 November 2005. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, e.g. data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists leaving the GDS or PDS.
5. A dentist with a GDS or PDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses or has agreed with the primary care trust. Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual GDS or PDS dentists are not centrally available.
6. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded.
7. Data on dentists that work only in private practice are not held centrally.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 206W, on dentistry, why the Department has stopped collecting information relating to the number of dentists accepting new patients in Chesterfield since 4 April 2005. [73214]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not collected data on the number of dentists accepting new patients. The Department has in the past asked primary care trusts (PCTs) to provide information to the nhs.uk (web resource) and NHS Direct on which dentists are accepting new patients. The main problem with these data is that they can change at a rapid pace and therefore may not be reliable, thus making them limited in their practical use. That is why the Department has given PCTs more flexibility in deciding how they most effectively inform the local public about access to dental services. The implementation review group, which includes patient representatives, dentists and national health service organisations, has been set up to monitor the NHS dental reforms; as part of this they will be assessing the level of information that is on the website.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) for what reasons a transitory maternity pay arrangement was not put in place for dentists who were pregnant but not yet on maternity leave in April 2006; [75316]

(2) what representations she received prior to the introduction of the new dental contract in April 2006 requesting a transitory arrangement for dentists who became pregnant while the former general dental services contract was operational. [75317]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In England, we made transitional provisions for parental leave payments equal to the general dental services payments paid immediately before 1 April 2006 and pensionable earnings for leave periods which commenced after 1 April 2006. These are a minimum and primary care trusts may use their powers of assistance and support, under new section 28Y of the national health service 1977 Act, if they deem it appropriate to pay more.

The arrangements for parental leave payments are set out in the Statement of Financial Entitlements, on which we consulted with the British Dental Association.

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1558W, on dentistry, whether a dentist who was pregnant but had not started a period of maternity leave before the new dental contract was introduced on 1 April 2006 is able to claim maternity pay at the levels prescribed in the former general dental services contract. [75318]

Ms Rosie Winterton: For a dentist in England who starts a period of maternity leave after 1 April 2006, the amount to which they are entitled in respect of parental leave payments is calculated on the basis of their estimated monthly pensionable earnings immediately before the parental leave is taken.

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost was of (a) staff away days and (b) staff team building exercises in her Department in each of the last three years. [69215]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not held centrally. Obtaining the data would incur disproportionate costs.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff from her Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to her Department of their attendance. [72989]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-Ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Ms Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) women and (b) men are employed in the Department; what the average pay was for (i) women and (ii) men in the Department in (1) 1997 and (2) 2006; what women's average pay is as a percentage of men's average pay; and how many (A) women and (B) men the Department employed in each of the last five years, broken down by grade. [67787]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the tables.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of her private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69223]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In the six ministerial private offices, 37.5 per cent. of the staff are male and 62.5 per cent. are female. The declaration of disability is voluntary and no current staff have declared a disability.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the staff in her Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69224]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is shown in the table.

Note:
Proportions for disabled are based on staff whose disability status is known.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what incentives her Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [72991]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The promotion of car-sharing depends upon the circumstances of the employee site—the majority of departmental staff work in central London and, as such, very few employees drive to work.

Car-sharing is only one of a number of measures which organisations can include in their workplace travel plan to encourage staff to travel more sustainably. The Department promotes the use of public transport by offering interest-free season ticket loans. Loans are also available to purchase bicycles, and departmental buildings offer secure cycle parking and showers.

East Lancashire Hospital Trust

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether undertakings were given at the time that the East Lancashire Hospital Trust was formed regarding the future location of accident and emergency services; and if she will make a statement. [68716]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No undertakings were given at the time that the East Lancashire Hospitals National Health Service Trust was formed regarding the future location of the accident and emergency services. The services available at the hospitals managed by the trust need to be agreed locally. A consultation exercise is currently underway following the East Lancashire Hospitals NHS Trust review of clinical services.

English Patients (Devolved Administrations)

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients from England were treated in hospitals in (a) Wales and (b) Scotland in each of the last three years. [75877]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not hold this information. The information may be available from the devolved Administrations.

Foundation Trusts

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with Monitor on financial deficits in foundation trusts; what the content of those discussions were; and if she will make a statement. [75056]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I am advised by the chairman of Monitor, whose statutory name is the Independent Regulator of NHS foundation trusts, that national health service foundation trusts delivered an encouraging financial performance in the 2005-06 financial year.

Monitor published on 5 June its full-year update on the unaudited financial performance of NHS foundation trusts, which is publicly available on its website (www.monitor-nhsft.gov.uk). The chairman of Monitor has advised me that, in aggregate, the 32 NHS foundation trusts in operation during the 2005-06 financial year made a deficit of £24 million on a turnover of £6.8 billion. This figure includes the substantial deficit incurred by University College London Hospital NHS Foundation Trust (UCLH).

Excluding the performance of UCLH, which made a £35.9 million deficit and is implementing a financial recovery plan that will return it to break-even by 2007-08, the remaining 31 NHS foundation trusts generated a £12 million surplus.

Monitor attributes the strong performance of the NHS foundation trust sector principally to the rigours of foundation status.

Gershon Report

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many civil servants were employed in her Department before the Gershon Report; what net reductions are proposed in the Gershon Report; how many reductions have been made; and how many civil servants are expected to be employed in her Department in the Gershon target month of April 2008. [74290]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Gershon Report, confirmed by the 2004 Spending Review, set the Department a target net reduction of 720 in its number of full-time equivalent (FTE) posts. As the Department had already embarked on its change programme, it was agreed that reductions made since the programme was announced in March 2003 would be included and the 720 target was calculated and agreed on this basis. The baseline level of staffing was therefore the 3,645 FTE posts that had previously been budgeted for in 2003-04. The Change Programme anticipated an eventual staffing level of 2,245 FTE posts, a reduction of 1,400 FTE posts. This consisted of the 720 Gershon target and a further 680 to be achieved through the transfer of work to other organisations.

As at 31 March 2006, the Department's staffing was 2,387 FTE (this may not correspond with other published figures because of the way secondments into and out of the Department are counted). This represented a reduction of 1,258 FTE from the baseline of 3,645 FTE, and consisted of a 635 net reduction and 623 transfers to other organisations. The Department is therefore well on the way to meeting its April 2008 targets in terms of both net reductions and transfers.

Health Treatment Centres

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, columns 937-38W, on health treatment centres, what cost has been met by her Department for commissioning procedures from independent sector treatment centres that is in excess of the NHS equivalent (a) in total and (b) broken down by primary care trust; and how much the NHS has paid in total to independent sector treatment centres. [73263]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is commercially sensitive and could impact upon the Department's ability to obtain best value from phase two of the independent sector procurement.

Health White Paper

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the answer of 10 March 2006, Official Report, column 1821W, to the hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr. Lansley) on the Health White Paper, when she expects to publish the conclusions of the review announced in paragraph 3.34 of the Health White Paper and referred to in the answer; [66723]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 452W, on the Health White Paper, when she expects the review of NHS walk-in centre funding arrangements to report; and when she expects to publish it. [68053]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The matters are still under consideration.

Hospital Negligence Cases

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital negligence cases have been (a) filed and (b) upheld in each of the last five years, broken down by hospital. [74560]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not collected by hospital. However, the information is available by national health service organisation which has been placed in the Library.

Hospital Travel Costs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the cost to a hospital trust of reimbursing the travel costs of patients eligible under the hospital travel costs scheme is (a) included in the reference cost or national tariff payment to the hospital trust and (b) forms an additional cost which may be invoiced to the patient's primary care trust; and if she will make a statement. [75502]

Andy Burnham: Where the service provided to a patient falls within the scope of payment by results the national tariff applicable to that service includes an element in respect of the hospital travel costs scheme (HTCS) and hospital trusts should not receive additional funding from primary care trusts (PCTs) in respect of that patient. Where the service is outside the scope of payment by results the trust will need to recover its outlay in respect of HTCS from the PCT in the normal way.

ISTCs

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) name and (b) location is of (i) each of the independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) which were established at part of the first wave of the ISTC programme and (ii) each ISTC which is planned in the second wave; and if she will make a statement on the progress of the programme. [67861]

West Midland South;
Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire;
Greater Manchester (two schemes);
South London;
Hampshire and Isle of Wight; and Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire.

We expect a further tranche of ITNs to be issued in the summer.

Negotiations are also under way with bidders on seven regional diagnostics schemes. These are in the following areas:

London;
the North East;
the West Midlands;
the North West;
the South East;
the South West; and the East.

By the end of 2005, patients had benefited from over 250,000 procedures centrally procured from the independent sector including those from ISTCs, the general supplementary contract and the magnetic resonance imaging contract. ISTCs are now firmly part of the national health service family, delivering NHS services to NHS patients. Phase two of the programme is currently underway which will further increase NHS capacity, reduce waits for treatment and diagnostic tests, and increase patient choice.

Leased Land

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) land and (b) property her Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan Police area of London. [72113]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold any land.

The Department does not have details of leases prior to 1996.

In 1997 the leases held were as follows:

	Land/property
Southend West Constituency	None held
Essex	St. Charles School, Weald Road, Brentwood, Essex CM 14 4SN
Hertfordshire	None held
Metropolitan Police area of London	Skipton House, 80 London Road, London SE1 6LH Hannibal House, London SE1 6TE Health Control Unit, Waterloo, International Terminal, London SE1 Eileen House, Newington Causeway, London SE1 6EF 40 Eastbourne Terrace, London W2 3QR Market Towers, 1 Nine Elms Lane, London SW8 5NQ

Marfan Syndrome

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from (a) medical staff and (b) others regarding provision for people with Marfan syndrome. [77233]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I am not aware of receiving any recent representations regarding the provision of health and social care for those living with Marfan syndrome.

Mental Health (Barnet)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on funding for mental health services in Barnet. [75999]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The resources that are necessary to deliver mental health services are included in the unified allocations made directly to primary care trusts (PCTs). It is for PCTs in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use these resources to deliver services in line with their assessment of local need.

Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the potential risks to public health associated with the use of Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether as an additive in gasoline; [76663]

(2) what assessment she has made of whether Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether presents a greater risk to public health than alternative gasoline additives. [76664]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not undertaken a formal comparison of Methyl Tertiary Butyl Ether (MTBE) with other fuel additives. However MTBE has been assessed separately.

The Department's committee on the medical effects of air pollutants (COMEAP) published a statement on the air quality and health implications of MTBE in September 2000[1]. This concluded that > "The addition of MTBE to petrol is unlikely to increase significantly the health risks associated with exposure to ambient air in the UK".

This conclusion was very similar to that of a major review of the potential health effects of oxygenates, including MTBE, carried out by the Health Effects Institute in 1996 in the United States of America (USA). This concluded that 'it is unlikely that fuel containing oxygenates would substantially increase the overall health risk from fuel used in motor vehicles' (levels of MTBE use in the USA are higher than in the United Kingdom).

MTBE has also been evaluated under the existing substances regulations[2]. This concluded that risks to consumers were not expected as risk reduction measures already being applied are considered sufficient. There were concerns for the potability of drinking water in respect of taste and odour as a consequence of leakage from underground storage tanks and actions to reduce this were recommended. Recommendations were also made to reduce repeated dose local skin effects in workers involved in maintenance operations and automotive repair.

Midwifery

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent studies she has carried out into independent midwife-led birth units, with particular reference to care for mothers with learning disabilities; [75991]

(2) what research she has evaluated on the effects of a normal birth with minimal interventions on the incidence of post-natal depression; and what recent assessment she has made of the comparative rates of normal births in different settings; [76075]

(3) what opportunities there are to increase choice in maternity provision, with particular reference to midwife-led units in acute hospital settings; [76076]

(4) what recent studies she has carried out into the impact on (a) ante-natal and (b) post natal care of closing independent midwife units; [76078]

(5) what support the National Service Framework offers midwife-led maternity units; [76080]

(6) what research the Department (a) is undertaking and (b) has commissioned into (i) the effects of maternity provision being placed in the community and (ii) the merits of midwife-led units outside district general hospitals. [76082]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has not carried out studies that cover birth settings or their effectiveness on specific client groups or the impact of their closure on antenatal and postnatal care. However, in a survey of patients conducted on behalf of the Department[1], asking for a preference as to where the next delivery would take place, 36.9 per cent. wanted to give birth outside a hospital setting (home—13.1 per cent., midwife unit—20.4 per cent., general practitioner unit—3.4 per cent.).

Through the service delivery and organisation research and development programme, the Department has commissioned a three-year study, 'An Evaluation of Maternity Units in England', about the effectiveness, acceptability and efficiency of maternity units. We expect to be able to make an announcement about the award of the contract shortly.

The maternity standard of the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services is quite clear that maternity services should be designed, reviewed and improved through a programme of consultation with users and that the full range of choices of types of birth, antenatal and postnatal care, and birth environment should be offered. It also advocates that local options for midwife-led care will include midwife-led units in the community. Ultimately, it is for local health communities to decide on the best pattern of service provision, taking into account the needs of local people, evidence of effectiveness and available resources.

We have made commitments in the 2005 manifesto and in the White Paper 'Our Health, Our Care, Our Say' which was published in January 2006, to offer all women a choice over where and how they have their baby, including in hospital, a midwifery-led unit and at home—this will be in place by 2009.

[1] Different models of maternity care: an evaluation of the roles of primary health care workers, Hewison J, Renfrew MJ, Gregson B, Young, G, Braunholtz D, Dowswell T, Hirst J, Ross-McGill H, 2003.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the answer of 18 May 2006 to the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Janet Anderson), Official Report, column 1173W, on midwives, if she will publish the results of the assessment on its completion; [74749]

(2) what estimate she has made of the minimum number of midwives needed in England to enable all women a choice as to where and how to have their baby, broken down by (a) strategic health authority and (b) primary care trust; and if she will make a statement. [74768]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: A maternity services outline delivery plan is being developed, which will set out a single vision for choice in maternity services, identify risks and management strategies and also set out the strategy for delivery including performance management arrangements, governance structures nationally, stakeholder engagement and the communication plan to support delivery. This is due to be published in autumn 2006.

Local national health service organisations are responsible for developing maternity services in response to the needs of their local population, and for ensuring that they have sufficient staff, with the right skills, to offer appropriate choices.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many milk tokens were issued (a) to pregnant women and (b) to mothers for children in each month from January 2005. [72885]

Ministerial Visits

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many official visits to hospitals (a) she has and (b) her ministerial team have made during the night since 1 May 2005. [69948]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health carried out night visits to Ipswich Hospital on 31 May 2005 and to the Greater Manchester Ambulance Service on 3 April 2006. Former Minister of State for Health (Jane Kennedy) visited North East Ambulance Service on the night of 14 September 2005. Lord Warner visited London Ambulance Service and Kings College Hospital on the night of 22 November 2005.

NHS Data

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what duty is placed on primary care trusts to ensure that data submitted to the website www.nhs.uk regarding (a) dentists accepting NHS patients and (b) other information are kept up to date; how often these data are updated; and whether NHS Direct actively monitors these data to ensure their accuracy. [64183]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) to decide how most effectively to provide information to the public and to agree any local arrangements with nhs.uk and NHS Direct.

NHS Direct holds some information on the open and closed status of dental practices but the accuracy of the information is dependent on dentists notifying PCTs of any changes, and PCTs updating the information on nhs.uk.

As a result of feedback from user groups, and following the introduction of the local commissioning of national health service dentistry in April 2006, the information held by nhs.uk (and by extension NHS Direct, as they use the same database) is currently being updated by PCT web editors. Additional information, including best possible information on how patients can get routine, urgent in-hours and urgent out-of-hours care or advice is being added by PCTs to the new format site. The expected date for these changes to go live on nhs.uk is the last week of June 2006.

NHS Direct

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how NHS Direct as an NHS Foundation Trust would be accountable to local communities; [76698]

(2) whether NHS Direct as an NHS Foundation Trust would remain subject to ministerial control; [76699]

(3) whether NHS Direct as an NHS Foundation Trust would be able to outsource its call centres abroad. [76700]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are developing plans for NHS Direct to become a national health service trust from April 2007 with the aim of becoming an NHS Foundation Trust (NHSFT) thereafter. NHS Direct is in the very early stages of considering its application for foundation trust status, including appropriate ways to ensure it can demonstrate that it is accountable to local communities, as other foundation trusts have done.

Legislative provisions establish NHSFTs as independent public benefit corporations, free from Secretary of State powers of direction.

As a NHSFT, NHS Direct will continue to plan delivery of its services in the most effective way. There are no plans to transfer its services abroad.

NHS Staff

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the net change has been in the numbers of (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) midwives, (d) physiotherapists and (e) cleaners in each London strategic health authority area since 1996; and if she will make a statement. [75693]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The net change in the numbers of doctors, nurses, midwives, and physiotherapists in each London strategic health authority (SHA) area since 1996 is shown in the following tables.

The Department does not collect separate data for the number of cleaners. These are included in the figures for hotel, property and estates support staff.

Nurses

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are employed by NHS Direct in (a) England and (b) the North West region; and if she will estimate how many nurses will be employed by NHS Direct in (i) England and (ii) the North West region in April 2007. [75660]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 30 September 2005, the most recent centrally collected information available, there were 1,909 qualified non-medical nursing, midwifery and health visiting staff employed by NHS Direct in England. Regional information is not collected centrally but may be available from the Chairman of NHS Direct Special Health Authority.

NHS Direct began a 12-week consultation period with staff and staff side representatives on 16 May 2006 on proposals to ensure that its organisational structure, estates and staffing are fit for purpose to meet future developments and demand. The consultation period is due to end on 16 August 2006. The outcomes of the consultation will be made public thereafter.

OFT Annual Plan

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who is responsible for progress on each of the objectives set out on pages nine to 21 of the Office of Fair Trading Annual Plan 2006-07; to whom each person reports; what recent discussions he has had about implementation of each objective; and if he will make a statement. [71960]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government's response to the recommendations made by the Committee of Public Accounts in their "Nineteenth Report Tackling Cancer: improving the patient journey" (HC 790) was made in "Treasury Minutes on the Eighteenth to Twenty-first Reports from the Committee of Public Accounts 2005-06".

The Treasury Minutes detail on-going actions and discussions in response to the recommendations made in HC 790. Sir Ian Carruthers, as the acting Permanent Secretary and Accounting Officer, is responsible for progress on the actions set out in that response.

Obesity

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likely cost to the NHS of the consequences of childhood obesity in the next 20 years. [74430]

Caroline Flint: The joint report from the Audit Commission, Healthcare Commission and the National Audit Office (NAO) published in 2006 estimated that, at present, the direct cost to the NHS is £1 billion a year and the indirect cost to United Kingdom the economy is a further £2.3 to £2.6 billion. Furthermore, it estimated that should the present trend continue, the annual cost to the economy could be £3.6 billion a year by 2010.

The Health Select Committee revisited the NAO figures in 2004, and they estimated the overall cost for overweight and obesity to be nearer £6.6 to £7.4 billion per year.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the percentage of (a) adults and (b) children who are (i) obese, (ii) overweight and (iii) underweight in (A) each region in England and (B) the Tees Valley. [67197]

Caroline Flint: The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity is the Health Survey for England (HSE). The data is not available in the format requested. However tables 1 to 4 provides the most comparable data.

Overseas Doctors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations have been held with the Community Relations Council on the implications of the new immigration rules for the employment of Commonwealth doctors, with particular reference to those from Pakistan and India. [65031]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1166W.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation process was undertaken on the requirement for work permits for trainee doctors from overseas before the new regulations came into force; who was consulted; and what the duration of the consultation period was. [74602]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The immigration rules for permit free training were amended in July 2005 and the implications were discussed with the British Medical Association (BMA), postgraduate deans and overseas doctors groups.

Departmental officials discussed proposals to amend the regulations further at a meeting in January held by NHS Employers which was attended by the Home Office, and medical stakeholders, including British Association of Physicians of Indian Origin, British International Doctors Association, the BMA and representatives from the national health service.

People with Disabilities

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which are the (a) best and (b) worst performing councils in England in terms of their provision of assistance with aids and adaptations to people with disabilities; and if she will make a statement on the performance of Luton borough council in this area; [75924]

(2) what (a) maximum and (b) average time a person with a disability has had to wait for assessment and assistance with occupational aids and adaptations in the last 12 months. [75926]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The social services performance framework indicator AO/D54 sets out the percentage of items of equipment and adaptations delivered within seven working days. The most recent figures for 2004-05 indicate that Luton unitary authority is the highest performing council; and Surrey the lowest.

The figures for 2004-05 indicate that Luton unitary authority delivered 3,900 items of equipment and adaptations; the percentage of items of equipment and adaptations delivered within seven working days was 97.9 per cent. This was the highest percentage of any council for this period.

Information on the maximum and average amount of time that a person with a disability has had to wait for assessment and assistance with occupational aids and adaptations is not collected centrally.

It is for local social services departments to prioritise assessments for people with disabilities, based on need.

Photodynamic Therapy Treatment

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department is taking to speed up the fast track referral pathways for photodynamic therapy patients (a) in the Richmond and Twickenham primary care trust and (b) in England; [75333]

(2) how many patients have been referred for photodynamic therapy treatment (a) in England and (b) in the Richmond and Twickenham primary care trust area in each of the last five years for which records are available; [75332]

(3) what percentage of the available capacity at the Kingston photodynamic therapy treatment centre has been used in each month since November 2005. [75331]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Specialised Services Commissioners are responsible for commissioning photodynamic therapy. Guidance to commissioners has stressed the importance of ensuring the development of fast track systems to ensure that the time between the initial referral and the treatment is as short as possible. Locally, commissioners and clinicians have worked to raise awareness and speed the patient's passage from first contact with a health care professional to treatment. Where there is a need we look to Commissioners to continue to work for improvements.

Data for the available capacity at the Kingston photodynamic therapy (PDT) treatment centre are not collected centrally nor are figures for the number of patients referred for PDT locally or nationally. However, the table shows the count of finished consultant episodes and patients for selected diagnosis and operations where the primary diagnosis was degeneration of macula and posterior pole and the main operation was an eye operation for Richmond and Twickenham Primary Care Trust and England.

Finished Consultant Episode (FCE)
An FCE is defined as a period of admitted patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. Please note that the figures do not represent the number of patients, as a person may have more than one episode of care within the year.
Patient counts
Patient counts are based on the unique patient identifier HESID. This identifier is derived based on patient's date of birth, postcode, sex, local patient identifier and NHS number, using an agreed algorithm. Where data are incomplete, HESID might erroneously link episodes or fail to recognise episodes for the same patient. Care is therefore needed, especially where duplicate records persist in the data. The patient count cannot be summed across a table where patients may have episodes in more than one cell.
Diagnosis (Primary Diagnosis)
The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 14 (7 prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was in hospital.
Main Operation
The main operation is the first recorded operation in the HES data set and is usually the most resource intensive procedure performed during the episode. It is appropriate to use main operation when looking at admission details, e.g. time waited, but the figures for "all operations count of episodes" give a more complete count of episodes with an operation.
Primary Care Trust (PCT) and Strategic Health Authority (SHA) Data Quality
PCT and SHA data were added to historic data years in the HES database using 2002-03 boundaries, as a one-off exercise in 2004. The quality of the data on PCT of Treatment and SHA of Treatment are poor in 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99, with over a third of all finished episodes having missing values in these years. Data quality of PCT of GP practice and SHA of GP practice in 1997-98 and 1998-99 are also poor, with a high proportion missing values where practices changed or ceased to exist. There is less change in completeness of the residence-based fields over time, where the majority of unknown values are due to missing postcodes on birth episodes. Users of time series analysis including these years need to be aware of these issues in their interpretation of the data.
Low Numbers
Due to reasons of confidentiality, figures between 1 and 5 have been suppressed and replaced with "*" (an asterisk).
Ungrossed Data
Figures have not been adjusted for shortfalls in data (i.e. the data are ungrossed).

Porphyria

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate how many people suffer from each of the forms of porphyria. [77283]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have made no estimates for the number of people living with the seven different forms of porphyria.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she had received on the reconfiguration of primary care trusts in Cambridgeshire, up to 22 March 2006; how many of these were supportive of the proposals outlined by the Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire strategic health authority; and if she will make a statement. [67443]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridge primary care trust (PCT) consulted on having three PCTs (Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire) or five PCTs (Norfolk, Suffolk, Cambridgeshire, Peterborough, Great Yarmouth and Waveney).

Secretary of State and other Health Ministers received 18 representations on the reconfiguration of PCTs in Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire up to 22 March 2006.

The 18 representations were made against the strategic health authorities and were broken down as follows:

two lobbied for single PCT for Great Yarmouth and Waveney PCT;

11 lobbied for a single PCT for Huntingdon;

three lobbied for a single PCT for Peterborough;

two suggested alternatives to the options that were being consulted on.

An announcement on PCT reconfiguration was made on 16 May. The new configuration of PCTs in Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridge will be five PCTs. The new PCTs are expected to come into force in October.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the private Members' Bills in respect of which her Department adopted a policy of neutrality in each session since 2001-02; and if she will make a statement. [72112]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Where private Members' Bills receive a second reading Ministers indicate the Government's position at that point.

Racial Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints of racial abuse in her Department have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in each of the last five years. [72858]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There have been no complaints of racial abuse in the last five years.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) her Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68340]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not held centrally. Obtaining the data would incur disproportionate costs.

Royal Cornwall Hospitals Trust

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the final financial position of the Royal Cornwall Hospitals Trust will be for financial year 2005-06; and what assessment she has made of the implications of this for the (a) patient services and (b) health economy in Cornwall. [75013]

Caroline Flint: I am advised that South West Peninsula Strategic Health Authority has commissioned an independent review to work with the trust to understand the size and causes of the deficit. This work is due to be concluded in early June and the report being presented to the public trust board meeting on 13 June.

The trust is part of the national National Health Service turnaround programme for organisations experiencing financial difficulty. The results of the independent review will be incorporated into a turnaround plan. This plan will also make clear what the implications of turnaround will be on local services and the health economy in Cornwall.

Section 64 Grants

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations were (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful in their bids through the section 64 Scheme of Grants for 2006-07. [72823]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 23 May 2006]: A list of those organisations who were successful in their application for a Section 64 General Scheme of Grants in the 2006-07 application round is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/section64.

A copy of the list of those organisations that were unsuccessful has been placed in the Library.

Chris Huhne: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, (Sir Stuart Bell) representing the Church Commissioners what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Commissioners' chief accounting officer. [76815]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Secretary, appointed by the Church Commissioners, is the principal officer responsible to the Commissioners for the conduct of all business in their name and on their behalf. The current Secretary is Andrew Brown BSc (Hons) FRICS. He qualified as a chartered surveyor in 1982 and after 13 years in private practice, the last three as a partner, he joined the Church Commissioners as their first chief surveyor. He was appointed Secretary in 2003.

TRANSPORT

A3 Hindhead Improvement Scheme

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects a decision to be made on the A3 Hindhead improvement scheme; and if he will make a statement. [77521]

Dr. Ladyman: We are continuing to consider the inspector's report into this scheme alongside the advice from the south east region on the priority it attaches to the improvement of the A3 at Hindhead within the indicative funding allocation for major transport schemes in the south east. We hope to make an announcement on the way forward for this scheme before the summer recess.

Criminal Offences

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department since April 2005, broken down by Act. [76906]

Gillian Merron: The question is taken to refer to criminal offences created directly in primary (rather than subordinate) legislation sponsored by the Department for Transport that received Royal Assent in the period 1 May 2005 to 9 June 2006.

No criminal offences have been created directly by such legislation during this period.

Departmental Pension Liability

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75273]

Gillian Merron: Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual Departments. They are estimated for individual pension schemes.

HM Treasury have produced a technical note which shows the breakdown in liabilities per pension scheme. This note was placed in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006 following an oral statement in Parliament by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury.

Government Car Service

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicles in the Government car service fleet were made by (a) Peugeot and (b) Citroen. [77141]

Dr. Ladyman: The Government car service operates eight cars made by Peugeot/Citroen.

Motor Traders

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue guidance to post offices to ensure that they permit motor traders to present the different names on insurance documents and registration certificates when applying for a tax disc. [77079]

Dr. Ladyman: There is no intention to accept motor trade policies as evidence of insurance for vehicles registered in different names, unless a satisfactory link between the policy and the keeper can be established.

When a vehicle is licensed, the law requires evidence that there is insurance in force in relation to the keeper's use of the vehicle. Motor trade policies provide cover for vehicles in the policyholder's possession, allowing the trader to drive a vehicle in the course of business. This cover does not extend to the re-licensing of vehicles except when a vehicle is registered in the policyholder's name.

Road Safety

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to complete his review of speed limits on roads; and if he will make a statement. [77701]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department's revised guidance to local traffic authorities on setting local speed limits will be published in the coming weeks.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Badgers

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that any badger cull in Shrewsbury and Atcham is not undermined by different procedures in Wales; [76185]

(2) whether he plans to start the cull of badgers on the same date in England as in Wales. [76628]

Mr. Bradshaw: No decision has yet been made on whether to cull badgers. However, given the seriousness of the disease situation. We aim to proceed as quickly as possible while giving the issue the thorough consideration it requires. The decision is not a simple one and we are taking into account all the evidence.

In considering this decision we will liaise closely with the Welsh Assembly Government.

Coastal Access

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in which locations there is no access to the UK coastline; and for what reason in each case. [76656]

Barry Gardiner: We do not hold information on the exact number of locations where the UK coastline is inaccessible, or the reasons for this. It would be at disproportionate cost to gather this information.

Commons Bill

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the judgment by the House of Lords in the Trap Grounds case; and what assessment he has made of its implications for the current drafting of the Commons Bill. [76324]

Barry Gardiner: The Trap Grounds judgment has clarified rights and protections over greens, and reversed the earlier ruling that action taken on land after a registration application can affect the determination of the application.

The judgment has no significant implications for the current drafting of the Commons Bill, but we intend to clarify the term "local inhabitants" in clause 15 in the light of relevant remarks on the judgment.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he will reply to the letter of 6 February 2006 from the hon. Member for Aylesbury on behalf of Weston Turville parish council, which was referred to his Department by the Home Office on 15 March 2006. [76341]

Fisheries

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consideration he has given to the request from English Nature for him to close an area of 60 square miles off Lyme Regis to fishing; what consultations he has held with scallop fishermen on this request; if he will take into account the social and economic implications in his deliberations; when he expects to make a decision; and if he will commission research to determine density and location of scallop beds in relation to those of protected seabed fauna. [76702]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 13 June 2006]: I regard the request from English Nature very seriously. I also recognise that Lyme Bay represents an extremely important fishery for the south west and the socio-economic impact of any action needs to be taken into account in reaching a decision. My officials have attended meetings with English Nature and Southern and Devon Sea fisheries Committees and, more recently, with the newly formed South West Scallopers Association. This dialogue is continuing.

I hope we can urgently broker a local solution to this issue which will be acceptable both for the marine environment and the livelihoods of fishermen. If this is not possible, or if individual scallopers choose not to respect any negotiated agreement, I will not hesitate to accede to English Nature's request.

Fungaflor

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received on the (a) licensing and (b) availability of (i) the product fungaflor and (ii) a substitute for it in the last 12 months. [76748]

Ian Pearson: My Department has received representations from the Horticultural Development Council, the Cucumber Growers Association and a cucumber grower about both fungaflor and a possible substitute product.

GM Crops

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the policy of the European Commission is on co-existence of GM and non-GM crops. [76070]

Ian Pearson: The Commission's general policy is that coexistence measures should be proportionate and science-based, and that they are best determined and implemented at member state level. This is confirmed in the recommended guidelines that the Commission has issued to help member states develop their national coexistence strategies. These are available at http://ec.europa.eu/comm/agriculture/publi/reports/coexistence2/guide_en.pdf. More up to date background on the Commission's thinking in this area is contained in the report that it issued earlier this year on the implementation of national coexistence measures. This can be found at http://ec.europa.eu/comm/agriculture/coexistence/com104_en.pdf.

Payment Schemes

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many claims for the Single Payment Scheme were submitted by 31 May; and what proportion this represents of claims for entitlements made in 2005. [76360]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The information is as follows:

103,005 applications were received by 31 May.

120,367 applications were received for 2005 (this is up to the final deadline on 10 June 2005).

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what budget sum he has allocated for payments under (a) Entry Level Stewardship, (b) Higher Level Stewardship, (c) Hill Farm Allowance and (d) all other environmental and rural development policies for 2006-07. [76362]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The current planned budget sum to cover payments for these schemes, which form part of the England Rural Development Programme (including domestic and European funds) during 2006-07, is:

	£ million
Entry Level Stewardship (includes Organic Entry Level Stewardship)	66
Higher Level Stewardship	3
Other environmental and rural development policies which come under the umbrella of the England Rural Development Programme	[1]342.7

[1] Includes Countryside Stewardship Scheme, Environmentally Sensitive Areas Scheme, Energy Crops Scheme, Organic Farming Scheme, Woodland Grant Scheme, Farm Woodland and Farm Woodland Premium Scheme Rural Enterprise Scheme, Vocational Training Scheme and Processing and Marketing Grant.

Due to the nature of Entry and Higher Level Stewardship, payments commence some time after agreements are entered into. Consequently, the value of payments shown above for 2006-07 reflects scheme uptake activity from the previous financial year (2005-06).

Arrangements for the Hill Farm Allowance for this financial year are currently being considered, in light of the recently closed public consultation on support for upland areas.

The transition between the current and new England Rural Development Programme takes place on 1 January 2007. Funding arrangements from 2007 onwards are currently being discussed within government. The above figures should be seen as indicative only until these discussions have concluded.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many claimants have received interim payments of less than 80 per cent. under the Single Farm Payment arrangements since April 2005. [76605]

Barry Gardiner: All partial payments under the Single Payment scheme have been calculated at a rate of 80 per cent. However, the calculation took account of data held in RPA's validation system at a specific point in time, which in some cases meant payment was reduced to reflect late claim penalties.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1311W, to the hon. Member for North-East Milton Keynes (Mr. Lancaster), on single farm payments, (a) on what basis and (b) in what form data on regional farm payments is held. [77043]

Barry Gardiner: Details of payments made in England up to 30 June 2006, including by constituency and county, will be published in due course.

Poultry Culling

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the agreed levels of poultry culling capability are; when these levels were agreed; what methods of poultry culling have been agreed; and what the poultry culling capacity was in each month since January 2001. [76338]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are no formally agreed levels of poultry culling capability. However, there are a range of culling methods available to the state veterinary service. These include maceration (for day old chicks only), lethal injection, neck dislocation, percussion killers, gassing in containers, whole-house gassing and, as a last resort when no other method is practicable, ventilation shutdown.

Killing capacity has been progressively increased over the last two years through the establishment of contingency contracts with catchers and equipment suppliers. Capacity has been further increased since January 2006 through the development of a system based on the gassing of poultry in containers using a mixture of argon and carbon dioxide; the Department has commissioned 50 of these units, each capable of killing 2,000 chickens per hour. In addition, we have purchased a number of percussion killers for use on larger birds and plan to further increase our capability to gas poultry in their sheds.

However, it is not possible to state the total killing capacity per month because this figure depends on a variety of factors. These include the age and species of poultry, the housing system, the size, location, quantity and geographic spread of the affected holdings, and the availability of catchers, gas and resources.

Rural Payments Agency

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) the Rural Payments Agency, (b) farmers' unions and (c) the European Commission on the use of partial payments to farmers in England for the Single Payment Scheme for 2006. [71531]

Barry Gardiner: Arrangements for the 2006 Single Payment Scheme, including the possible use of partial payments, are discussed regularly at the fortnightly meetings that my noble Friend Lord Rooker, and the Interim Chief Executive of the Rural Payments Agency have with industry leaders. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has also had a useful discussion on the issue with the Agriculture and Rural Development Commissioner, Mariann Fischer Boel.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) permanent staff and (b) temporary staff were employed by the Rural Payments Agency in each month since October 2001 expressed in terms of (i) actual staff numbers and (ii) full-time equivalent staff; and if he will make a statement. [71536]

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the delay in single farm payments upon feed merchants; and if he will make a statement. [73410]

Barry Gardiner: Feed merchants are, to varying effects, likely to be affected by the cash-flow issues faced by farming business waiting for receipt of payments under the 2005 Single Payment Scheme (SPS). Over £1.3 billion, representing 89 per cent. of the total value of such payments, has been disbursed and the Rural Payments Agency remains focused on paying the outstanding sums as soon as possible for the benefit of all concerned.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Rural Payments Agency made of the efficiency of the (a) historic system and (b) regional average area system of calculation for the Single Payment Scheme prior to the implementation of the Single Payment Scheme; and what such assessment the Agency has undertaken since undertaking the implementation of the Single Payment Scheme. [66707]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency contributed to the advice supplied to Ministers before the decision was taken to adopt the flat rate model of the Single Payment Scheme. That advice pointed to a greater degree of challenge in implementing a flat rate, as opposed to a historical, model of the SPS, but at no point was any suggestion made that the chosen model was undeliverable. Given that EU regulations required member states implementing the SPS in 2005 to notify the Commission of their chosen models by 1 August 2004, subsequent assessment of different models would not serve any practical purpose.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average Single Farm Payment is for England; and if he will make a statement. [76026]

Barry Gardiner: As at 6 June 2006 the number of full and partial payments made under the Single Payment Scheme was 96,000, with a total value of £1.33 billion.

The average payment based on the above values is £14,000.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many recipients of single farm payments have yet to receive any payment, broken down by county area. [76044]

Barry Gardiner: The total number of single payment scheme customers is approximately 120,000. As at 6 June 2006, 24,000 customers had not received either a full or partial payment.

Details of payments made in England up to 30 June 2006, including by constituency and county, will be published in due course.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he expects all single farm payments will have been made in full. [76181]

Barry Gardiner: The payment window for the 2006 Single Payment Scheme opens on 1 December 2006 and runs until 30 June 2007.

The Rural Payments Agency is working hard to ensure that payments are made as soon as possible within this time frame. Staff have already started basic validation checks on a proportion of the 2006 application forms.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will take steps to ensure that farmers who have now received their single farm payments will receive interest due on the delayed payments. [76183]

Barry Gardiner: The question of interest arises only in respect of payments made after the legal deadline of 30 June. We have not reached that point yet and I do not want to deflect the Rural Payments Agency in the interim period from concentrating on its main priority, which is to ensure that outstanding payments are made as soon as possible.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations he has received from the European Commission on the UK Government's implementation of the Single Farm Payment Scheme. [76186]

Barry Gardiner: The Department and the European Commission are in regular contact in order to help further our common interest in ensuring that the Single Payment Scheme is implemented as smoothly as possible.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the extent to which the dynamic hybrid system has contributed to the delays in the Single Payment Scheme. [66709]

Barry Gardiner: Experience among member states implementing the Single Payment Scheme in 2005 has indicated that there is a greater degree of challenge in implementing flat rate models. However, the precise timing of payments in each member state will have been dependent on a range of factors.

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs by what processes and for what reasons the decision was reached to use a dynamic hybrid system of calculation for the single payment scheme. [66713]

Barry Gardiner: The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Derby, South explained her reasons for adopting the flat rate model of the Single Payment Scheme when she announced that decision on 12 February 2004, Official Report, column 1585. This followed analysis of advice and supporting data from officials, responses to a public consultation document and discussions with stakeholders.

Tendring Hundred Water Company

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent to which Tendring Hundred Water Co. is conserving water during the present drought. [76205]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency's report, "Drought Prospects 2006—Spring Update", explains the likely consequences of a continuing rainfall deficit and recommends action by water companies. The report recommends that water companies in Norfolk and Suffolk should monitor their water resources carefully and be prepared to take further steps to manage supply and demand if the drought intensifies. This report is available from the Agency's website:

www.environment-agency.gov.uk.

Each water company has specific plans to manage short-term water shortages depending on the severity of a drought. These drought plans are a statutory requirement, and also subject to public consultation. A consultation on Tendring Hundred Water services draft drought plan is currently in progress. This can be viewed on the company's website at:

http://www.thws.co.uk/

Water Shortages

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to meet water companies to discuss the issue of leaks; and what guidance his Department has issued to water companies on leakages. [74783]

Ian Pearson: The Secretary of State and I met with representatives of the water industry, including water companies, on 1 June. Leakage reduction was discussed and a commitment was reached to keep leakage targets—set by the Economic Regulator—under review, taking account of costs, technology and best practice. All parties are set to meet again before the end of the year.

Ofwat is responsible for leakage target setting and enforcement. A Leakage Study commissioned jointly by Ofwat, the Environment Agency and Defra was published in March 2003, and all water companies were asked by Ofwat to update their appraisals of leakage in line with best practice identified in the study. Ofwat assesses the leakage appraisals to ensure that water companies meet the best practice principles identified in the report.

The study is available at: http://www.ofwat.gov.uk/aptrix/ofwat/publish.nsf/Content/tripartitestudycontents.

Water Supplies

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of the leakage of water in each water supply company region in each financial year since 1997. [76452]

Ian Pearson: Water company leakage figures are published annually by the water services regulation authority (publicly known as Ofwat) in the 'Security of supply, leakage and the efficient use of water' reports. Total water company leakage for each year since 1996-97, in megalitres per day, was reported as follows:

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Building Bulletin 100

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on progress with the Building Bulletin 100 review. [77455]

Jim Knight: Public consultation on Building Bulletin (BB) 100, "Designing and Managing Against the Risk of Fire in Schools", concluded in November last year. There were 66 responses to the 12 questions asked and many included additional comments, some extensive. An analysis of these responses has been completed and will shortly be published on the Department's website. This feedback has now been incorporated into a new draft of BB 100, which is being internally reviewed. We hope to publish the final, agreed version before the end of this year.

Class Sizes

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on class sizes in the London borough of Havering. [75443]

Jim Knight: Information on class sizes in Havering local authority area is given in the table. This shows that the average size of Key Stage 1 and Key Stage 2 classes has decreased since 2002. The average size of classes in secondary schools has remained the same.

Education Act 1996 (Prosecutions)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many prosecutions were brought under section 7 of the Education Act 1996 in the last year for which figures are available; and how many such prosecutions involved children with cerebral palsy. [76949]

Jim Knight: Home Office data for 2004, the latest year for which figures are available, show 8,140 prosecutions in England and Wales under the Education Act 1996. These include:

3,393 prosecutions for truancy under section 444(1);

1,091 prosecutions for truancy under section 444(1A) (the aggravated offence);

3,654 prosecutions for various offences under the Education Act. These are likely to include some prosecutions under sections 444(1) and (1A); and two prosecutions for child employment offences.

Prosecutions related to section 7 for truancy are brought under section 444 of the Act. Information is not collected on the characteristics of pupils or their families.

Examinations

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which organisations are permitted to submit (a) GCSE and (b) A-level examinations for approval by the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority. [76235]

Jim Knight: The awarding bodies AQA, Edexcel and OCR are the only organisations that currently submit GCSE and A-level specifications to the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority (QCA), which regulates qualifications in England. Any other organisations that wished to submit such a specification would have to show that it could abide by the relevant regulations.

Information and Communication Technology

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what progress the e-Strategy Programme Board is making on integrating the use of IT in education; and if he will make a statement. [76124]

Jim Knight: The Department established a high level Technology Group in October 2005 to oversee the system wide implementation of the e-Strategy in England. The Department is supported in this role by the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (Becta), and the Joint Information Systems Committee (JISC)—lead delivery partners for the e-Strategy.

The e-Strategy is being delivered through four interlinked transformational programmes:

Strategic Technologies—strategic and cost effective deployment of technological infrastructure.

E-Maturity—building people and institutional capacity for effective use of technology.

Personalised Content—multimedia resources adaptable to learners' needs and learning styles.

Knowledge Architecture—improving the way in which information is shared and managed to support more personalised learning.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was allocated to schools for the purchase of information community technology equipment in each year since 1997. [76161]

Phil Hope: There was no specific funding allocated for the purchase of ICT equipment in 1997. ICT funding allocations for schools in England in each year from 1998 to 2006 are detailed in 'Funding for ICT in Schools in England' which is available in the House Library.

From 2006-07 we have moved to a new method of funding for ICT equipment and there is no specific amount for ICT. The amounts previously allocated specifically for ICT have been included in allocations for Devolved Formula Capital and School Development Grant. Schools may use their overall resources, including their Devolved Formula Capital grant and their Schools Development Grant, to purchase ICT equipment and services. This supports schools in their financial management and provides greater flexibility on how they spend funding to target their priorities.

Maintained Schools

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many maintained schools in England offered (a) general and (b) vocational qualifications at level 3 or above in the national qualifications framework to pupils in the fourth key stage in the latest year for which figures are available. [76493]

Jim Knight: The Department does not hold information on whether schools offer level 3 qualifications to pupils in Key Stage 4.

School Fires

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the annual cost of fires in schools was in each year since 1995. [77454]

Jim Knight: The earliest figures we have from the Department for Communities and Local Government are for 2000 and the latest are for 2004. These cover school fires in England and Wales.

	Number—fires	Total costs (£ million)
2000	1,275	45
2001	1,529	67
2002	1,332	67
2003	1,313	61
2004	1,291	52

The costs are rounded to the nearest million and are derived from the (then) ODPM publication "Economic Cost of Fire, estimates for 2004". They cover property damage and the costs of the fire and rescue services attending the fires.

School Sprinkler Systems

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate he has made of the average additional cost of sprinkler systems in new school buildings built by local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [77456]

Jim Knight: Last autumn, the Department commissioned the Building Research Establishment to carry out a cost benefit analysis study of installing sprinklers in schools. This will include a quantitative assessment of the costs and benefits of fitting automatic fire suppression systems in new schools, based on actual system costs and proposed system costs. It should therefore provide reliable figures for the costs of installing sprinklers in schools.

The study is continuing and we expect to receive the final report within two months.

School Uniform Grants

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which local authorities do not provide school uniform grants. [76723]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not collected by the Department for Education and Skills.

Science Laboratories

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will make a statement on the recall of funding promised for science laboratories. [62969]

Jim Knight: Capital investment underpins the Government's drive to raise standards of education and we are fully committed to taking forward our programme to renew and improve all schools. Funding for investment in schools is £6.8 billion this year and it will rise to over £8 billion by 2010-11. This compares to under £700 million in 1996-97.

Our aims include rebuilding or renewing all secondary schools through the Building Schools for the Future programme, including their science laboratories, in fifteen waves of investment which started last year. Already about 350 schools have been prioritised in the first three waves, and we aim to include up to a further 600 schools in the next three waves. We also aim to have 200 Academies open or in the pipeline by 2010. In all, by 2010 almost a third of all secondary schools will be funded to improve their science teaching facilities.

Building Schools for the Future is only one of our capital programmes, and is allocated just over a third of the total capital funding for schools. All schools and authorities get additional funding for their priorities. This includes the funding which schools get directly—a typical secondary school will get over £100,000 of its own money this year, which can be rolled over to allow larger projects such as science facilities to be addressed.

We are providing the resources to improve school laboratories where this is the priority. What is now important is to ensure that the new laboratories are designed not just to teach the curriculum, but that they have 21st century facilities and are inspiring places to teach and to learn. Our aim is to enthuse pupils with an interest in science, both as a subject and a possible career. Therefore we are planning shortly to launch a "School Science Labs of the Future" project which will bring together teams of leading designers and bodies with specialist interest in, and practical knowledge of, the teaching and learning of science to develop a range of exemplar designs. The most exciting of these will be built in schools around the country so that there is a range of practical examples to act as benchmarks and to disseminate the learning.

Although this is over a longer timescale, we believe that this is the best way of ensuring comprehensively that all young people have the opportunity to learn in high quality facilities which inspire them to pursue their dreams and achieve their potential, and not be turned off by science.

Standards Fund Grant

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the value was of Standards Fund Grant 31a in each year of its existence, broken down by local education authority. [76160]

Phil Hope: Standards Fund Grant 31a existed in 2004-05 and 2005-06. The following table shows the allocations to local authorities in those years (including local authority matched funding).

Student Finance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the total value of payments made by people repaying student loans via the income contingent repayment model but not allocated to student loan accounts has been for each year since 2002; [75322]

(2) what total amount of payments collected via the income contingent model was not allocated to student loan accounts in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [75323]

Bill Rammell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 1 June 2006.

Student Income and Expenditure Survey

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans to repeat the Student Income and Expenditure Survey 2002-03. [75229]

Bill Rammell: The most current Student Income and Expenditure Survey was carried out in the 2004-05 academic year and was published on the 30 March. It can be found on the internet at: www.dfes.gov.uk/research/data/uploadfiles/RR725.pdf. The Department plans to repeat the survey in the 2007-08 academic year.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

2012 Olympics

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding she estimates will be spent on improving hotel facilities for the 2012 London Olympics. [76941]

Mr. Woodward: Improving the quality of the UK's hotels, and other visitor accommodation, is a key aim for my Department and its partners in the tourism sector. The grading schemes operated in England, Scotland, and Wales are central to that process of improvement, and to consumer certainty in the quality of the British tourism product.

VisitBritain's net expenditure on accommodation quality grading work in 2005-06 was £2,374,600 (after Value Added Tax). This figure represents payments to the Quality in Tourism division of GSL, which operates VisitBritain's quality scheme under contract, less participation fees received. These figures will change over time, but it is likely that a net minimum of £12.5 million will be spent on the quality scheme by VisitBritain from its grant in aid resources over the life of the 5 year contract, to 2010. VisitScotland and the Wales Tourist Board additionally invest significant amounts in their own quality schemes, which have been fully standardised with those of VisitBritain and the Automobile Association since May 2005.

My Department will shortly start a major consultation of the tourism sector, to inform a comprehensive strategy for making the most of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games of 2012. Funding for any new work on accommodation quality, which may arise as a result of that consultation, will be considered before the tourism strategy is issued.

British Slave Trade

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which organisations have received Government funding for events relating to the 200th anniversary of the Act which abolished the British slave trade; and what events and activities are planned. [77449]

Mr. Lammy: Among other support, my Department is contributing £250,000 per year to the new International Slavery Museum in Liverpool, due to open in 2007. In addition, museums in Hull, Bristol, Liverpool and London will, by 2008, have received £910,000 from my Department and DfES to encourage more informed and effective teaching about slavery as part of the Understanding Slavery Initiative education project, working with schools and communities. Many other museums, galleries, arts organisations, heritage sites, archives and libraries are currently planning their contribution and how best to involve their local communities. There are plans by faith leaders for a commemoration service in Westminster Abbey; and commemorative stamps and coins. The Heritage Lottery Fund has also funded the following community organisations:

Action Force Africa
African Caribbean Emancipation Trust
African Forum
Anti Slavery Arch group, Stroud
Anti Slavery International
Birmingham and District Local History Association

Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the Answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 979W, on consultations, why the cost of public consultations is not recorded and kept; and if she will now do so. [77196]

Mr. Lammy: The costs and demands of a public consultation can vary considerably, and as such would be difficult to quantify. As an integral part of policy development, the costs associated with public consultations are met from divisional budgets. I have no plans to record or keep the costs of public consultations.

Criminal Offences Legislation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by her Department since April 2005, broken down by Act. [76908]

Mr. Lammy: Criminal offences are created by the following provisions of the Gambling Act 2005:

s.33(1); s.37(1); s.41(1); s.42(1); s.43 (1); S.44(1); s.46(1); s.47(1), (4), (5), (6) and (7); s.48(1); s.49; s.50(1); s.51(1); s.52; s.53; s.54(1) and (2); s.55(1) and (4); s.56(l); s.57 (1); s.58; s.59(1); s.101(6); s.105(3); s.108(2); s.109(4); s.122(5); s.134(2); s.138(3); s.139(2); s.185(2); s.186(6); s.229(2); s.242(1) and (2); s.243(1) and (2); s.244(1); s.245(1); s.258(1); s.259(1); s.260(2); s.261(2); s.262; s.275(7); s.281(7); s.301(2); s.316(5); s.326(1); s.328(5); 5.330(1); s.331(1); s.337(5); 5.342(1); s.345(5); schedule 10 paragraph 20; schedule 12 paragraphs 13(1) and 15(6); schedule 13 paragraph 10(1); schedule 14 paragraph 20.

Members should consult the texts of the Gambling Act 2005 for full details of the offences.

Gaming Machines

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the impact on seaside economies of the freeze in gaming machine stake and prize levels. [77259]

Mr. Caborn: There is no policy to freeze stake and prize limits. We announced in October 2004 that our policy has been to increase the maximum stake for amusement with prizes (AWP) machines from 30p to 50p, and for jackpot machines in bingo halls from 50p to £1. This would be on full implementation of the Gambling Act in September 2007. The Government made their position clear during the passage of the Gambling Bill through Parliament that these changes would need to be connected with measures to improve social responsibility.

The stake and prize limits are only one factor amongst many affecting seaside economies. The Government are conscious of the issues facing the machine manufacturing industry, and the pubs, clubs and entertainment centres to whom AWP machines, in particular, are so important.

Survey Databases

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people have been interviewed by her Department as a result of (a) Taking Part: The National Survey of Culture, Leisure and Sport and (b) surveys undertaken by her Department since 1997. [76230]

Mr. Lammy: The information is as follows.

(a) To date approximately 22,000 people have been interviewed as a result of Taking Part: The National Survey of Culture Leisure and Sport.

The total, annual sample size for this survey will be about 30,000. This large sample size is needed to measure changes of 2-3 percentage points in participation rates with a high degree of confidence (95 per cent.), in support of the Department's Public service agreement target 3.

Until the launch of Taking Part: The National Survey of Culture, Leisure and Sport in 2005, several of our non-departmental public bodies commissioned their own surveys, for example the sport and leisure module within the General Household Survey. Taking Part is a collaborative cross-sectoral survey and in many cases replaces the need for our partner bodies to undertake additional surveys.

(b) Aside from Taking Part, the main quantitative surveys of members of the public to which the Department has contributed funding comprise:

the International Passenger Survey of 250,000 people a year from 2000-01. This is run by the Office for National Statistics and funded mainly by a consortium of Departments. These data are required to meet requirements of the European Union directive on tourism statistics.

the General Household Survey of 20,000 people a year between 2000-01 and 2004-05, also run by the Office for National Statistics. This provided the Department with data on specific issues such as digital television; and our funding enabled our non-departmental public bodies to commission a more substantial module of questions on sport and leisure; and several smaller surveys of 7,500 or fewer, which in total amount to about 50,000 interviews since 1997.

Tourism Tax

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what (a) assessment she has made of and (b) research she has commissioned on the potential impact that a bed tax on tourist accommodation would have on the tourism industry. [77531]

Mr. Woodward: I have commissioned neither an assessment nor research on the potential impact of a bed tax. Sir Michael Lyons is considering a wide range of local government role and funding issues, including the potential for local taxes and charges. The Government will not take any decisions on changes to local government finance, until it has had the chance to consider and reflect on Sir Michael's report and recommendations, due at the end of 2006. I will fully assess the potential impact of Sir Michael's recommendations once he has made them, as is appropriate in the case of an independent review, and respond accordingly.

TV Licences (Outlets)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make representations to the BBC in favour of the continued sale of (a) television licences and (b) television licence saving stamps at post offices. [77450]

Mr. Woodward: Contractual arrangements for the sale of television licences are a matter for the BBC as licensing authority, taking into account both value for money and the convenience of licence fee payers. It would be inappropriate for the Government to intervene in such matters.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assumptions she has made about the future growth of the number of households in assessing the level of the new BBC licence fee. [77533]

Mr. Woodward: The Government are considering this issue as part of the current review of the future funding of the BBC. Our conclusions will be announced in due course.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Budgetary Support (Developing World)

7. Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is on providing direct budgetary support to Governments in the developing world; and if he will make a statement. [77026]

Hilary Benn: DFID provides budget support—either direct budget support or sector support—to countries where:

the partner Government's planned budget priorities support the reduction of poverty;

there is commitment to strengthening administrative, financial and technical systems so that UK funds help to reduce poverty effectively and where, giving aid in this way produces benefits that would be unlikely to be achieved through other forms of aid delivery.

Currently, budget support counts for only 25 per cent. of the UK's bilateral aid programme.

HIV/AIDS

8. Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the outcomes of the recent UN General Assembly special session on HIV/AIDS. [77027]

Hilary Benn: The United Nations General Assembly high level meeting agreed a political declaration which met virtually all of the UK's objectives, including: committing countries to develop, by the end of 2006, ambitious national plans to work towards universal access by 2010; drawing up comprehensive HIV prevention programmes, treatment, care and support, with interim targets for 2008; ensuring that no credible, sustainable national plan should go unfunded, recognising the need to provide from donor countries, national budgets and other sources $20-23 billion annually by 2010 for AIDS responses; and intensifying efforts to develop new technology, especially microbicides and vaccines.

Overseas Aid

9. Mr. Goodwill: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of UK aid delivered by his Department compared with that channelled via the European Union. [77028]

Mr. Thomas: Evidence shows that the European Commission has improved its effectiveness substantially since 2000, when a major reform programme commenced. Today, delivery is faster, with implementation undertaken by strengthened field offices. The European Commission is also more active internationally, supporting the UK's push for increased aid volumes. However, there is still a case for further reform, with a focus on impact, quality and more devolution.

Climate Change

10. Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to assist developing countries to tackle the impact of climate change. [77029]

Hilary Benn: DFID is working to improve the availability and use of climate risk information in Africa through the Global Climate Observing System (GCOS), contributing £5 million over 5 years. We have launched a research programme, with Canada, which aims to improve African countries' capacity to adapt to climate change by building a body of knowledge and research skills which can be incorporated into planning processes, contributing £24 million over 5 years. We are contributing £20 million over 3 years through the United Nations to help countries develop national adaptation strategies. We have started to carry out climate risk assessments of DFID country programmes, starting with Bangladesh.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

11. Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to support the forthcoming democratic elections in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [77030]

Hilary Benn: The UK is the largest bilateral donor to the electoral process in the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), providing more than £23 million over 2 years. This is funding electoral operations through the Independent Electoral Commission, conflict prevention and mediation initiatives, international and national observation projects to ensure the equal participation of men and women, and training and equipping the police to provide security during the elections. The UK has also provided important and sustained political pressure to ensure that the transition remains on track and will continue to do so. I hope to visit the DRC after the electoral process is complete in the autumn.

Zimbabwe

12. Sir Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the humanitarian impact of land clearances in Zimbabwe. [77031]

Hilary Benn: DFID liaises closely with UN agencies and NGOs that closely monitor ongoing vulnerability among the 700,000 people whose homes or livelihoods were destroyed by the Government of Zimbabwe during last year's Operation Murambatsvina (Drive out Rubbish). The UN is also investigating new episodes of evictions.

Last year, DFID committed £1.8 million to the humanitarian response, which reached some 200,000 people with food, blankets and other essentials. For many the situation remains difficult, especially regarding shelter. We recently contributed a further £1.1 million to provide practical assistance to vulnerable urban families. We continue to raise concerns through the UN.

Millennium Development Goals

13. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of progress in meeting the millennium development goals for beneficial health outcomes. [77032]

Mr. Thomas: Improvements in health require progress against all MDGs. Progress is mixed; many countries have made significant gains but massive challenges persist in sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia. On current trends, many poor countries will not meet the goals. Without underestimating the challenges, the means to ensure that every country achieves the goals are available. The task is to live up to the commitments made by G8 leaders in 2005 to support countries efforts to ensure access to essential health services. DFID is currently revising its health strategy to meet this challenge.

Indonesian Earthquake

14. Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to his written statement of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 11WS, on the Indonesian earthquake, what further humanitarian assistance his Department plans to provide. [77033]

Hilary Benn: Immediate relief needs during the emergency phase are largely being met, and we have no plans to commit further humanitarian assistance in addition to the £5 million already announced. The Government of Indonesia are now planning for longer term reconstruction. The UK is ready to support longer term reconstruction, and we will decide on the appropriate level of funding on the basis of an assessment of needs.

Bilateral Aid (Water and Sanitation)

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on what basis the figures for the proportion of UK bilateral aid spent on water and sanitation are calculated. [76707]

Hilary Benn: DFID commissions an independent report on its expenditure on water and sanitation, including bilateral expenditure and all spend through other agencies. This report, 'Financial Support to the Water Sector', is produced by Atkins Consultants and is publicly available on the DFID website at http://www.dfid.gov.uk/pubs/files/water-sector-finance.pdf. Copies have also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The report provides detailed estimates of how much DFID spends on water and sanitation. It includes spending on programmes and projects for which water and sanitation improvement is the main objective. It also includes estimated proportions of spend for other programmes in education, health etc., where water and sanitation form part of the overall programme. It includes all themes covered by water and sanitation: water resource management, assessment and protection; urban and rural water supply and sanitation; humanitarian assistance; and water for food. It presents a breakdown of expenditure by region, country, theme and bilateral aid type. Sensitivity analysis of the necessary assumptions is also presented. An update of the report, with details of expenditure for 2004-05 and 2005-06 will be published in autumn 2006.

Burma

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in Burma. [77025]

Mr. Thomas: The humanitarian situation in Burma is very poor. Reliable data are scarce, but many of Burma's 50 million people live in serious poverty—a situation exacerbated by the Government's actions. There are reportedly half a million people internally displaced in Eastern Burma, with around 100,000 in hiding in conflict areas, and more than half a million refugees in neighbouring nations. Communicable disease is an acute problem. Over 70 per cent. of the population live in malaria risk areas and Burma has one of the most serious HIV epidemics in Asia.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73005]

Mr. Thomas: The following table gives the number of non-pensionable bonuses awarded to DFID staff over the last three years with total costs for each year.

	Number of awards	Total cost (£)	Percentage of DFID's total paybill
2003-04	711	475,101	0.77
2004-05	576	497,350	0.79
2005-06	1,171	892,965	1.27

DEFENCE

Arms Trade Treaty

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he plans to take to increase his Department's efforts, resources and capacity to deliver an Arms Trade Treaty. [74443]

Mr. Ingram: As part of a cross-Whitehall team the Ministry of Defence is fully committed to working together towards an international arms trade treaty.

We continue to play an active role and have committed Defence resource to support the delivery of this treaty.

Army Bases/Personnel (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Army personnel were stationed in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and if he will list the operational Army bases in Northern Ireland. [77132]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. member to the answer I gave to him on 18 July 2005, Official Report, columns 1320W-1322W. The number of armed forces personnel (Army, Navy and Air Force) stationed in Northern Ireland since then is set out in the following table:

	Number of armed forces personnel
31 October 2005	9,490
31 May 2006	8,890

In addition, other troops can be made available to the General Officer Commanding Northern Ireland from Land Command if required, for example during the marching season.

A list of military sites (military bases and installations, joint PSNI/military bases, towers and observation posts) as at 31 January 2006 was given in the ninth report of the Independent Monitoring Commission. This was laid before Parliament by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, in a written ministerial statement, on 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 79WS.

Since 31 January 2006, three observation towers (R21, R13A and G40) have been closed. Work has been completed on R21 and R13A, and the land has been handed back to Defence Estates for disposal. Work is still ongoing on the G40 site.

Army Land Rovers

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many working armoured land rovers the army has in (a) total, (b) Iraq and (c) Afghanistan. [75847]

Mr. Ingram: For UK holdings, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1992W. In respect of Iraq and Afghanistan I am withholding details of the military capability deployed on operations since its disclosure would reveal the strength and capability of UK forces operating in theatre, and could have a bearing on operational security.

Bonuses

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last three years; and what the total cost was. [73094]

Mr. Watson: The number and value of annual appraisal related bonuses paid to members of the senior civil service (SCS), to fixed term appointees and to civil servants below the level of the SCS, over the past three years, are listed in the following tables one to three. In addition, the Ministry of Defence awards special bonuses to individuals and teams for exceptional performance in a specific task or for the achievement of professional qualifications which benefit MOD and the individual; these are shown in table four. The final table (five) shows the total value of all bonuses paid: in cash terms and as a percentage of the total civilian pay bill.

Table 1: Bonuses paid to senior civil servants

Casualty Statistics

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether servicemen and women who lost a leg in action would be counted by his Department as wounded if treated by US doctors. [73740]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The Ministry of Defence publishes casualty information compiled from a number of sources. One of these sources is the UK's main (Role 3) Field hospital in Shaibah in Iraq. The current figure (around 240 personnel) cited for troops wounded as a result of hostile action on Operation Telic is based on the records of those treated at the Shaibah Field hospital. This figure does not therefore include UK forces treated only at US facilities.

To present a more complete picture and to capture UK military and civilian personnel injured in Iraq and not included in the Shaibah figure for those wounded as a result of hostile action, we have published figures on Telic casualties drawn from other sources. These are the Notification of Casualty (NOTICAS) reporting and Aeromed figures.

The Aeromed figure includes all UK military and civilian personnel medically evacuated from Iraq whatever the cause and from any location in Iraq, including Baghdad, to any destination outside that country. This reporting includes all UK service personnel who have lost a leg and have been treated at US medical facilities in Iraq.

The Notification of Casualty reporting is comprehensive from January 2005 onwards, when the Joint Compassionate Casualty Centre (JCCC) was set up, and includes all UK personnel treated at US facilities for serious injuries. But during the early phases of Operation Telic the tempo of operations meant that the paperwork associated with the NOTICAS process was not always completed properly. As a result we cannot be certain that all our NOTICAS records covering this early period are complete.

We are working to cross check historic information to improve our Telic casualty reporting, including records for RFA Argus and 202 Field hospital. Once this information has been verified, I will place a copy in the House of Commons Library.

Criminal Offences Legislation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by his Department since April 2005, broken down by Act. [76900]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence has sponsored no primary legislation since April 2005 and has, therefore, created no criminal offences.

Dartmoor National Park (Firing Ranges)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which dates were advertised in advance for live army firing in the Dartmoor National Park for the years ending (a) 31 December 2003, (b) 31 December 2004 and (c) 31 December 2005; on what dates firing actually took place on each of the firing ranges in the Dartmoor National Park in those years; and if he will make a statement. [76703]

Mr. Watson: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Iraq

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces personnel returned from Iraq in 2005 diagnosed with (a) mental health and (b) physical conditions which required (i) hospital and (ii) rehabilitation treatment in the UK. [72498]

Mr. Watson: Our records show that 732 armed forces personnel were aeromedically evacuated from Iraq in 2005. Of these, 666 were diagnosed with physical conditions, and 309 of them were treated at the Royal Centre for Defence Medicine at Selly Oak, Birmingham, which is the Ministry of Defence's main receiving hospital for aeromedically evacuated personnel. The others were transferred to other NHS hospitals or referred to community-based care for ongoing treatment. We are unable to determine precisely how many of these patients required hospital treatment or were discharged at the airhead for ongoing care in the community as the relevant database does not contain this information. To provide this information, individual patient records would have to be consulted, and this could only be done at disproportionate cost and with the patient's permission.

Determining the number of personnel who returned from Iraq with a mental health condition is not straightforward. Sixty six personnel were aeromedically evacuated in 2005 specifically because they were diagnosed as suffering from a mental health condition, but the number who were diagnosed, after their return, with psychological problems as a result of their service in Iraq is greater than this. The Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA) was notified of 727 personnel who were referred to the MOD's Departments of Community Mental Health in 2005 with possible mental health problems and subsequently identified as having a psychiatric disorder related to their service in Iraq at any date from 2003. It can also be difficult to determine the underlying causes of some mental health problems, some of which could be caused by a combination of other life events that occurred before or after service in Iraq.

MARS Programme

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to ensure that vessels in the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability programme will be constructed by United Kingdom shipyards. [77390]

Mr. Ingram: As indicated in the Defence Industrial Strategy, UK yards and other UK suppliers will be given every opportunity to compete for this shipbuilding work and should see it as a challenge and an opportunity to demonstrate world-class performance. With the high planned workload on CVF and Type 45, the complex warship design and integration capabilities that we intend to sustain in the UK will remain healthy for some years.

New Technologies (Research)

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the Department's budget was spent researching new technologies in the last period for which figures are available. [76808]

Mr. Ingram: The overall spend on research in relation to overall defence spending is available in the UK Defence Statistics 2005 publication. Table 1.1 'Defence Expenditure/Budget 2003-04' of the publication displays the net Defence budget as some £31 billion. Table 1.7 'MOD Research and Development Expenditure 2003-04' records the net budget spent on research as £574 million.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the Parliamentary Ombudsman were (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by his Department since 1997. [76257]

Mr. Watson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which my noble Friend Lord Drayson, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, gave in another place on 3 May 2006, Official Report, House of Lords, column WA87.

Public Consultations

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many public consultations his Department undertook in the last 12 months; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [70615]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence undertook 13 public consultations in the last year.

To obtain the cost of the 12 consultations carried out by Defence Estates (DE)—the Ministry of Defence agency with responsibility for the defence estates—would incur disproportionate costs, but it is likely to be in the thousands.

The thirteenth public consultation was carried out by the Met Office, which is a trading fund of the Ministry of Defence. The total estimated cost in terms of man hours for this consultation was £120,000.

In addition, the Ministry of Defence carried out 10 consultation meetings with local government elected representatives and officials relating to proposed RAF projects within local areas. The total cost of these consultation meetings, on a capitation rate basis, was less than £10,000.

Public Transport (Incentives)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75104]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) encourages the use of more sustainable travel as part its work on sustainable development. MOD offers staff interest free loans to purchase bicycles and public transport season tickets for commuting to and from their place of work. Subject to meeting our business needs the MoD also allows staff to stagger their working hours if that will assist them using public transport before or after the rush hour.

RAF Menwith Hill/Fylingdales

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) US military personnel, (b) US contractors, (c) US civilians, (d) UK military personnel, (e) Ministry of Defence Police Agency personnel, (f) GCHQ employees and (g) UK civilians work at (i) RAF Menwith Hill and (ii) RAF Fylingdales. [76294]

Mr. Ingram: As at 1 June 2006 the figures for RAF Menwith Hill were: 484 US military personnel; 538 US contractors; 458 US civilians, of which 243 are US Department of Defence civillians; 11 UK military personnel; 161 Ministry of Defence Police and Guarding Agency personnel; I am withholding the number of GCHQ employees in accordance with Government policy of not commenting on intelligence matters; and 231 UK civilian personnel work at the base.

As of 1 June 2006 the figures for RAF Fylingdales were: one US military personnel; 20 US contractors; nine US civilians; 85 RAF personnel; 104 Ministry of Defence Police and Guarding Agency personnel; there are no GCHQ employees working at RAF Fylingdales; and 37 UK civilian personnel work at the base.

Redress of Grievance Cases

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many redress of grievance cases have been withdrawn in each of the armed forces over the last 12 months. [68516]

Mr. Watson: The number of redress of grievance cases that have been withdrawn[1] having reached higher authority or service board level between 30 April 2005 and 1 May 2006 are shown in the following table. Records of grievances raised and withdrawn at unit level are not held centrally.

[1] The term "withdrawn" describes a complaint that was neither settled nor rejected, but was withdrawn by the complainant before action was completed.

Armed force	Number
Royal Navy	6
Army	19
Royal Air Force	4

Sexual Relationships (Dismissals)

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers in the armed forces were dismissed for having a sexual relationship with a subordinate in each of the last five years. [67965]

Mr. Watson: Officers would not be dismissed but may be required to resign their commissions or be administratively discharged.

No Royal Navy or Royal Air Force officers have been required to resign for having a sexual relationship with a subordinate in the last five years.

Information for the Army is only available for the last three years and is shown in the following table:

	Number
2003	7
2004	5
2005	3

Submarines

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many decommissioned nuclear-powered submarines are awaiting disposal; where they are located; and what estimate he has made of the amount of (a) high, (b) intermediate and (c) low-level nuclear material present in each submarine. [76288]

Mr. Ingram: There are 13 decommissioned and de-fuelled nuclear powered submarines awaiting disposal that are stored safely afloat—seven at Rosyth and four at Devonport (Plymouth). Two other submarines at Devonport are awaiting de-fuelling prior to being stored afloat pending disposal. The spent fuel is the only high-level radioactive material on these submarines.

On leaving naval service each submarine contains approximately 83 tonnes of intermediate-level waste (ILW) and 81 tonnes of low-level waste (LLW). A proportion of the ILW will decay over time to LLW. For example, after 30 years, the quantity of ILW would have reduced to approximately 19 tonnes and the LLW proportionally increased to 145 tonnes.

Typhoon Aircraft

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the key spares shortages are for Typhoon aircraft. [76682]

Mr. Ingram: The spares and support arrangements for Typhoon are being built up as the RAF aircraft fleet grows, and the availability of spares varies from day to day depending on the maintenance that is required.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Best Value Surveys

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance her Department has issued to councils on the carrying out of Best Value surveys; and if she will make a statement. [75909]

Mr. Woolas: The Department has published detailed guidance for authorities carrying out the Best Value user satisfaction surveys on a dedicated website established for the purpose of administering the surveys.

The website, www.survey.bvpi.gov.uk, serves as a single portal for authorities undertaking the surveys, hosting all materials required and enabling the upload of the data. The Department has been working very closely with the Audit Commission to provide the necessary support to local authorities undertaking the surveys. The Commission is administering the website and providing a helpdesk and the Department is running a series of seminars to field questions on the Best Value surveys.

The website and guidance went live in March 2006 and all authorities were contacted to ensure that they were aware of the publication. All local authorities have either registered on the website or are in communication with the Audit Commission about the surveys; a statement about the availability of the guidance is therefore felt to be unnecessary.

Citizen Information Project

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will place in the Library a copy of the written communication sent by the Citizen Information Project to her Department on 10 January 2005. [70641]

Angela E. Smith: We have no record of any correspondence received from The Citizen Information Project on 10 January 2005.

Council Tax

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many properties are (a) designated as second homes and eligible for a council tax discount and (b) claiming such a discount in each local authority in Wiltshire. [76983]

Mr. Woolas: The number of properties in Wiltshire designated as second homes and claiming a discount in council tax as at 19 September 2005, the latest date for which figures are available, is shown in the following table.

	Number of properties
Kennet	497
North Wiltshire	43
Salisbury	976
Swindon	79
West Wiltshire	467

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the merits of using the forthcoming council tax revaluation to encourage energy efficiency and waste reduction. [77035]

Mr. Woolas: In September 2005 the Government announced the postponement of council tax revaluation in England, and have made it clear that they do not expect that revaluation will occur during the present Parliament. The Government await the final report of the independent inquiry into local government by Sir Michael Lyons, which is due to be submitted by the end of 2006, before deciding whether any reforms to the council tax system are required.

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether (a) her Department or (b) its (i) Executive Agencies and (ii) non-Departmental public bodies use the services of private debt collectors. [71064]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government and its Executive Agencies do not currently use the services of private debt collectors. One DCLG non-Departmental body uses a private debt collector.

Fire Services

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what use the fire service (a) has made and (b) makes of perfluorooctane sulphonate; and what advice and guidance the Department has issued on its use. [70019]

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what use the fire services (a) have made and (b) make of perfluorooctane sulphonate; and what guidance her Department has issued on its use. [70589]

Angela E. Smith: Perfluorooctane sulphonate, known as PFOS, is used in a number of industrial applications and was used as an ingredient in two particular firefighting foam concentrate ranges for petrochemical fires.

In October 2004 DEFRA consulted on a national action to restrict the use of PFOS following evidence to suggest that it could be harmful in certain circumstance to both the environment and humans. However, before consultations had been completed, the European Commission suspended our unilateral action and subsequently issued its own draft directive to restrict the marketing and use of PFOS. In this draft, all current PFOS uses, including firefighting foam, would be allowed to continue. This would not therefore allow the UK to set regulations to ban its use.

The stocks of foams based on PFOS are diminishing but it is likely that some fire and rescue services do still hold some stocks.

As a result DCLG, jointly with the Environment Agency, are proposing a voluntary phasing out of PFOS-based firefighting foams and will shortly be issuing guidance to the fire and rescue services requesting them to no longer use these foams and instead to consider the use of alternatives once they are satisfied the performance of these alternatives meets their needs. Some fire and rescue services have already voluntarily substituted their stocks of PFOS foams with alternatives, the old foam having been destroyed by incineration.

Home Information Packs (Denmark)

Michael Gove: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of non-mandatory home information packs on the property market in Denmark. [65262]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The reforms to the Danish home buying and selling process have been widely welcomed by professionals and consumer representatives who assess that the reforms have improved the efficiency of the housing market. The latest figures show that there were 79,543 sales completed in 2004 as against 77,455 in 1996 (the year before the reforms were introduced). House prices have increased by 73 per cent. in Denmark during the period 1997 to 2005, compared to a 166 per cent. rise in Britain during the same period.

Local Strategic Partnerships

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to extend the scope and flexibility of local area agreements. [77108]

Mr. Woolas: Since the launch of LAAs in July 2004, their scope, and the opportunities they offer to local areas, have grown with each round. We have, in particular, seen a significant increase in the number of funding streams capable of being pooled, the introduction of automatically pooled funding streams, the launch of a new economic development block and the trialling of an increasing number of single pot agreements.

LAAs are rapidly becoming key to the way central Government and local areas do business together. We will continue to refine the LAA framework in the light of experience and in the wider context of the local:vision agenda.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69052]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not collected in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

New Deal for Communities

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment she has made of the merits of introducing a successor funding regime to replace the New Deal for Communities programmes from 2010-11. [77179]

Mr. Woolas: The Department is currently working with the NDC partnerships to support their planning in continuing progress after the NDC programme ends in 2010-11. This could involve the partnerships evolving into different succession organisations and encouraging partners to mainstream services.

The 2007 Comprehensive Spending Review will examine all DCLG programmes including regeneration and neighbourhood renewal.

Nuclear Rail Freight

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether local authorities along the rail routes taken by trains transporting nuclear material are required to prepare emergency plans to deal with an incident involving one of these trains. [73316]

Edward Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

Part 1 of the Civil Contingencies Act 2004 establishes a statutory framework for civil protection activity at the local level. Under this legislation all principal local authorities and other key partners are required to maintain emergency plans, informed by risk assessments, to ensure that they can mobilise an effective emergency response to a range of emergencies including transport accidents. The legislation also requires local authorities and other key partners to exercise these plans and ensure that relevant staff receive adequate training.

The transport of radioactive material, including nuclear materials, is governed by the stringent internationally agreed standards recommended by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the Parliamentary Ombudsman were (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by her Department since 1997. [76260]

Angela E. Smith: Since 1997 the Department for Communities and Local Government and its Agencies have not refused or omitted to give effect to the recommendations of the Parliamentary Ombudsman, either concerning complaints about administrative practices, service delivery or complaints made under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Information available for Department for Communities and Local Government on specific cases that concern Government offices shows that they have not refused or omitted to give effect to the recommendations of the Parliamentary Ombudsman, either concerning complaints about administrative practices, service delivery or complaints made under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

The Department for Communities and Local Government holds no comprehensive central information on the status of all Ombudsman cases in other Government Departments involving, or partly involving, Government offices. That information would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Party Wall etc. Act 1996

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will introduce enforcement powers exercisable by local authorities for failure to serve a notice of proposed works under the Party Wall etc. Act 1996; and if she will make a statement. [72844]

Angela E. Smith: I currently have no plans to amend the Party Wall etc. Act 1996 as suggested.

Public Transport

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions she has had with the Department for Transport on ensuring that improved public transport is an integral part of the community regeneration programmes. [77034]

Mr. Woolas: The Government continues to consider all aspects of regeneration as part of the remit of the Domestic Affairs (Communities) cabinet committee.

The two Departments work together to ensure that the Government's aims to deliver sustainable improvements in economic performance, and inclusive society, a better environment and better quality of life are achieved. Not only is this work carried forward inter-Departmentally across central Government, but it is undertaken on a day to day basis by the integrated Government offices in each region.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Exports

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are in place to ensure that arms exported from the UK to equip Iraqi security forces are not diverted to other users; and if he will make a statement. [75596]

Mr. McCartney: All export licence applications are assessed against the consolidated criterion taking account of any information we may hold on the end-user, the criterion specifically require assessment of the risk of diversion. If there is a clear risk that the proposed export would contravene any of the criteria, a licence is refused. In the case of Iraq, where not explicitly exempt, UNSCR 1546 additionally requires certification from the Iraqi Government or the multi-national force assisting it, that the goods are necessary for the purposes of giving effect to UNSCR 1546 and are therefore exempt from the embargo on Iraq.

Defence Contracts

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total amount of cover outstanding in respect of Government to Government defence contracts since 1991 was in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [75209]

Mr. McCartney: On the following dates, the value of Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD) cover for Government to Government defence contracts was:

As at 31 March each year:	£ million
2005	856
2006	497

ECGD Costs

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the administrative cost of the Export Credits Guarantee Department was in each year between 2002-03 and 2005-06, broken down into (a) staff costs, (b) accommodation costs, (c) consultancy costs, (d) IT costs, (e) external legal costs and (f) other costs. [75210]

Mr. McCartney: The Export Credits Guarantee Department's audited administrative costs in each year between 2002-03 and 2004-05 were:

	2002-03	2003-04	£ million 2004-05
Staff costs	14.022	14.806	15.157
Accommodation costs	4.282	5.271	4.201
Consultancy costs	1.031	0.833	0.539
IT costs	4.388	5.676	8.580
External legal costs	0.822	0.324	1.081
Other costs	1.620	3.625	1.804

The audited costs for 2005-06 are not yet available.

Gas Storage

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which local planning authorities his Department has contacted in the last two years to discuss the siting of new strategic gas storage facilities in their areas; what responses have been received from local authorities; and if he will make a statement. [76754]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has written to the following in the last two years regarding the national need for additional gas storage facilities. The county councils of:

Cheshire
East Riding of Yorkshire
Lancashire
Lincolnshire

and the borough councils of:

Redcar and Cleveland
Stockton on Tees.

We have received a response from Lancashire county council with some questions arising from the letter that the Department sent to them in April 2004.

On 16 May, my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, laid the 'Energy Statement of Need for additional gas supply infrastructure' in Parliament encouraging planning professionals and local decision makers to consider the national interest when looking at planning applications.

Nuclear Power Stations

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the recommended decommissioning dates are for each nuclear power station built in the UK; and what the (a) recommended and (b) actual decommissioning date was for nuclear power stations that have been decommissioned. [67821]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) assumed responsibility for the decommissioning and clean up of the UK's civil nuclear legacy on 1 April 2005. The NDA has four operational Magnox nuclear power stations: Dungeness A, Sizewell A, Oldbury, and Wylfa; and, seven that are being decommissioned: Berkeley, Bradwell, Chapelcross, Calder Hall, Hinkley A, Hunterston A, Trawsfynydd. The recently approved NDA strategy contains the following assumptions of end dates and states, but also signals that the NDA intends to review these in consultation with stakeholders in the near future. Details are as follows:

Non-operational Magnox	Lifetime	End state/date
Berkeley (Gloucestershire)	1962-1989	Delicensed/2083
Bradwell (Essex)	1962-2002	Delicensed/2103

Chapelcross (Scotland)	1959-2004	Undetermined/2128
Hinkley Point A (Somerset)	1965-2000	Delicensed/2104
Hunterston A (Scotland)	1964-1989	Delicensed/2090
Trawsfynydd (Wales)	1965-1991	Delicensed/2096

Operational Magnox	Lifetime/planned closure date
Dungeness A (Kent)	1965-2006/planned to cease generation end 2006	Landscaped/2111

Oldbury (Gloucestershire)	1967-2008/planned to cease generation end 2008	Delicensed/2118
Wylfa (Wales)	1971-2010/planned to cease generation end 2010	Brownfield/2125

British Energy (BE) has eight operational power stations (seven advanced gas-cooled reactor (AGR) stations and one pressurised water reactor (PWR)). The following table sets out BE's current estimated dates for station closure (and thereby decommissioning). Any changes to these dates will be a matter for BE, subject to approval from the NDA in certain circumstances: Current proposals are:

	Lifetime	Scheduled closure
AGR Stations
Dungeness B (Kent)	35 years	2018
Hinkley Point B (Somerset)	35 years	2011
Hunterston B (Scotland)	35 years	2011
Heysham 1 (Lane's)	30 years	2014
Hartlepool (Teesside)	30 years	2014
Torness (Scotland)	35 years	2023
Heysham 2 (Cleveland)	35 years	2023
PWR Station
Sizewell B (Suffolk)	40 years	2035

The NDA's Strategy is available through its website at: www.nda.gov.uk.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of a new generation of nuclear power stations on the UK's water supply. [75602]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The option of building new nuclear power stations is still being considered as part of the Government's Energy Review. Any implications for public water supply would be considered as part of the environmental impact assessment for the planning of individual power stations.

OECD Guidelines (Multinationals)

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps his Department has taken to promote the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises; [72075]

(2) how many UK registered companies have adopted the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises; [72076]

(3) what steps his Department has taken to co-operate with non-Governmental organisations in the promotion and implementation of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises; [72077]

(4) To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints have been investigated by the UK National Contact Point in each year since 2000; and when each case was (a) filed and (b) concluded; [72078]

(5) To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) nature and (b) outcome was of each complaint made to the UK National Contact Point in each year since 2000. [72079]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are committed to the effective promotion and implementation of the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. For example, on 20 December 2004, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry wrote to the chairmen of all FTSE 100 companies drawing their attention to the importance of the guidelines and their relevance in developing corporate codes of conduct. The UK's National Contact Point (NCP) for the guidelines also liaises with non-governmental and business organisations on a regular basis, both formally and informally, to discuss the promotion and implementation of the guidelines.

In September 2005, the Government consulted stakeholders on possible improvements to the NCP's promotion and implementation of the guidelines. We intend to publish a formal response in the near future.

The guidelines are recommendations addressed by governments to multinational enterprises. They are not adopted, as such, by companies.

Offshore Petroleum Licensing

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the Answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1635-36W on Offshore Petroleum Licensing; if he will publish the results of the Appropriate Assessment into the 24th Licensing Round; and what applications have been made in the 24th Round of offshore petroleum licensing for production consents for field developments in the Cardigan Bay area. [77384]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 13 June 2006]: As of 13 June 2006, two 24th Round licence applications have been received—neither are for acreage in the Cardigan Bay area. However the Round is open to applications until 16 June 2006. Once the Appropriate Assessment for the Round has been completed we will take a decision on whether to publish the results. In any event, the results of this and any other necessary Appropriate Assessments relating to the Round will be available on request.

Also, as indicated in my Answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1635-36W, drilling and production consents are not part of the licence award and have to be sought separately from the Department at a later stage and are subject to further environmental scrutiny.

Secured Debt Financial Products

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department is taking steps to restrict celebrity endorsement of secured debt financial products. [75014]

Mr. McCartney: The laws concerning the advertising of financial products have recently undergone a thorough review. While they do not specifically deal with celebrity endorsement of products, the Consumer Credit (Advertisements) Regulations 2004 provide that advertisements must be clear, fair and not misleading. In the case of a loan secured on a debtor's home, that advertisement must include a health warning regarding the consequences of not keeping up with repayments. Rules emanating from the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, under which first charge mortgages are regulated, contain similar provisions concerning financial promotions.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Civil Service Pensions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality if she will make a statement on equality of pensions in the civil service. [76154]

Mr. McFadden: I have been asked to reply.

The Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) is a final salary scheme. Benefits are worked out as a proportion of final pensionable earnings multiplied by years of service. Men and women have paid the same level of contributions and received benefits calculated on the same basis, including contingent dependants' benefits, in respect of service from 1 July 1987. To the extent that they have consistent career and salary patterns, the pension scheme therefore provides equal benefits.

New entrants to the civil service since October 2002 have, as an alternative to joining the PCSPS, been eligible to join partnership, a stakeholder pension arrangement, providing benefits on a money purchase basis. Employer contributions to partnership are between 3 per cent. and 12.5 per cent. of pensionable earnings based on the member's age but regardless of gender. Employers also match employee contributions up to 3 per cent. of pensionable earnings.

In addition amendments to the rules of the PCSPS will be laid before the House before the summer recess. These amendments will ensure that the pension arrangements do not discriminate on the grounds of age without any objective justification.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Sector Information

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many public information programmes have been broadcast since 1997, broken down by commissioning Department; and how much such programmes cost (a) to produce and (b) to screen. [76741]

Mr. McFadden: There have been 436 public information films produced since 1997. The numbers of public information films broken down by commissioning Department are shown in the following table.

Public information films produced since 1997

Production of a public information film costs approximately £60,284 (based on an average of all public information films produced during the last three years).

Screening costs for a public information film are: broadcast tape copies, £2,500; annual marketing of film to broadcasters, £7,650; and airtime, free of charge.

We expect a public information film to recoup both production and marketing costs in equivalent airtime value within the first three months in circulation.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster at what times of day public information programmes have been scheduled in each of the past three years. [76757]

Mr. McFadden: The Central Office of Information (COI) is not responsible for scheduling public information films. They are scheduled in donated airtime at the discretion of broadcasters. The COI does, however, promote the usage of public information films to broadcasters, requesting relevant time slots and programming environments, where possible.

In each of the past three years, public information films have been shown on broadcast television in ratios shown in the following table.

Time	Percentage of films shown	Number of transmissions
April 2003 to March 2004
Breakfast (6.00-9.29)	14	14,705

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions her Department has had with public service broadcasters on the (a) screening and (b) scheduling of public information films; and if she will make a statement. [76758]

Mr. McFadden: The Central Office of Information (COI) meets with public service and commercial broadcasters regularly to discuss both the screening and scheduling of public information films. COI also maintains regular contact with broadcast contacts via telephone, e-mail and via a monthly paper and electronic newsletter, which highlights the availability of material or related statistics to support the case for transmission. There is an online catalogue to facilitate broadcasters' selection of appropriate materials for slots they have available.

In the last three years, this activity has resulted in 2,127,007 transmissions, across 122 different television channels, in airtime worth an estimated £75,335,000 (based on average ITV station rate card).

Additionally, the COI also targets owners of out-of-home media. For example the 5-A-DAY campaign was screened free of charge on "Tesco TV", in shopping centres including Trafford Centre, Lakeside and Metro Centre, gyms such as Holmes Place, Cannons and David Lloyd and some doctors' surgeries. Out-of-home ratecard airtime value was estimated at £1.5 million for this film.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Administration Estimate

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the Answer of 25 May 2006 to Question 73851, how much was spent from the administration estimate on clothing and uniforms for (a) Clerks at the Table, (b) Serjeants at Arms and (c) the Secretary and Assistant Secretary to the Speaker in each of the last 3 years; and if he will make a statement. [77466]

Nick Harvey: The information requested is as follows:

	Clerks at the Table	Serjeants at Arms	£ Speaker's Office
2003-04	3,658	8,773	6,483
2004-05	5,802	17,343	4,828
2005-06	4,016	13,507	7,267

Note:
These figures include the uniform allowance for the Assistant Secretary to the Speaker.

Dining Facilities

John Mann: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission (1) what guidance has been issued to hon. Members on the use of House dining room facilities for party political fundraising; [75843]

(2) on how many occasions in the last 10 years a booking for dining room (a) A, (b) B, (c) C and (d) D has been refused due to the intention of the sponsor to use the booking for party political fundraising. [75844]

Nick Harvey: The Banqueting Regulations, which are issued to all Members at the time of booking, state that the private dining rooms

"are not to be used for direct financial or material gain by a Sponsor, political party, or any other person or outside organisation".

The banqueting booking confirmation requires Members to state whether they have a declarable interest relating to their sponsorship of the function and, if the interest is not registered, to provide details. Members in any doubt about the need to register an interest are given further guidance in paragraph 4.4 of the Banqueting Regulations, which states that "any Sponsor in doubt about the requirements to declare any interest should consult the Parliamentary Commission for Standards".

Furthermore, the Code of Conduct for Members, as approved by the House on 13 July 2005, provides that:

"Members shall at all times ensure that their use of expenses, allowances, facilities and services provided from the public purse is strictly in accordance with the rules laid down on these matters, and that they observe any limits placed by the House on the use of such expenses, allowances, facilities and services".

No record is kept of advice provided to Members when enquiring about the use of the private dining rooms, and so there is no record of any booking being refused due to the intention of the sponsor to use the booking for party political fundraising.

Refreshment Department

Mr. Drew: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what information the Refreshment Department collects on the quantity of (a) organic food and (b) food sourced within 50 miles of London for use in the House of Commons dining rooms. [76278]

Nick Harvey: The Refreshment Department can generally identify from its purchasing records the quantity and value of organic meat, poultry, fish, fruit and vegetables purchased over the past year, and the quantity and value of some organic grocery and counter-line products readily identifiable as organic (for example, certain brands of sandwiches, salads, yoghurts, biscuits, cakes, etc.). However, the Department does not keep a comprehensive list that specifically identifies the quantity of all organic foods used. No record is kept of the quantity of food sourced within 50 miles of London.

Spoiled Pre-paid Envelopes

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the Answer to Question 74325, if he will (a) take steps to remind users that the House can recover the cost of postage of spoiled pre-paid envelopes and (b) make visible collection points available for such envelopes; and if he will make a statement. [77474]

Nick Harvey: The Serjeant at Arms leaflet entitled "Stationery post paid envelopes and the use of the crowned portcullis" asks Members to send back spoilt envelopes to the Postmaster. A notice will be placed in the All Party Whip as a reminder. It would not be practicable to provide collection points as the incidence of spoilt envelopes is likely to be small.

Tours

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many tours of the Palace each hon. Member has requested in the last 12 months. [76009]

Nick Harvey: Between June 2005 and May 2006 inclusive, 7,374 tours ran for 620 Members of the House of Commons. By mixing smaller groups together (up to each tour slot's maximum capacity of 20), this accommodated 7,911 Member groups. The highest number of tour slots supplied to an individual Member was 89. It is not the practice to publish details of the use made by individual Members of such facilities.

Works of Art Collection

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many works of art from the Works of Art Collection have been reported (a) missing and (b) stolen in each year since 1997; and what their estimated value was in each case. [76272]

Nick Harvey: There have been no reports of missing or stolen works of art in the House of Commons since 1997. The Parliamentary Art Collection (Lords and Commons) has approximately 7,500 works of art, spread widely throughout the parliamentary estate. Some 5,000 are currently recorded as being within the House of Commons buildings.

NORTHERN IRELAND

999 Calls

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many emergency 999 calls were made in Northern Ireland in the last year, broken down by emergency service requested. [77346]

Paul Goggins: The numbers of emergency 999 calls received by emergency services in Northern Ireland in the last calendar year was as follows:

	Calendar year 2005
Fire	52,430
Ambulance	116,635
Police	94,916
Total	263,981

Alcohol Consumption

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department plans to take in response to the recent report by the European Commission which identified Ireland as having the fifth highest consumption of alcohol per person in the EU. [76629]

Paul Goggins: There are no comparable figures for Northern Ireland as currently such data are collected and presented on a UK basis. The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety in Northern Ireland launched the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2006-11 on 8 May 2006. It contains a number of regional and local outcomes aimed at reducing the overall level of harm caused by alcohol in Northern Ireland, including reducing the level of binge drinking and the amount of under-age drinking.

Ambulance Service

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of (a) the facilities and (b) the extent of ambulance cover in the Strabane district council area in each of the last three years; and whether ambulance service staff usually employed in the Strabane area have been redeployed to Derry since the opening of the new Northland Road base. [76220]

Paul Goggins: Ambulance cover in the Strabane district council area is provided from stations in Strabane and Castlederg. A 2004-05 Estate Appraisal, carried out by the Health Estates Agency, identified the need for separate male and female facilities at Strabane ambulance station and some minor alterations at Castlederg ambulance station. The Northern Ireland

Ambulance Service (NIAS) is currently making arrangements to carry out this work.

During the last three years, ambulance cover has been provided as follows:

	Days
Strabane Ambulance Station
08.00 to 20.00 hours (1 A and E crew)	Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday
08.00 to 20.00 hours cover provided from Altnagelvin	Thursday
20.00 to 08.00 hours (1 A and E crew)	Monday to Sunday
Castlederg Ambulance Station
08.00 to 17.00 hours (1 A and E crew)	Monday to Saturday
17.00 to 23.00 hours (cover provided by Strabane and Omagh stations)	Monday to Saturday
08.00 to 23.00 hours (cover provided by Strabane and Omagh stations)	Sunday
23.00 to 08.00 hours (1 A and E crew)	Monday to Sunday

No ambulance crews have been redeployed from the Strabane or Castlederg ambulance stations to stations in Derry. Cover at the new Northland Road deployment point is provided by Altnagelvin Ambulance Station crews. As NIAS deploys ambulance resources dynamically to match predicted and actual demand, Strabane or Castlederg ambulances may respond to incidents in Derry. However, control staff ensure that time spent by crews away from their base station is kept to a minimum.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of Social Security Agency customers have their benefits paid (a) directly into a bank or building society account, (b) via a Post Office card account, (c) by cheque and (d) in cash. [76679]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested (at March 2006) is shown in the following table:

Method of payment	Percentage of social security agency customers
Direct payment into a bank or building society account	58.8
Via a Post Office card account	37.7
Cheque payment	3.5
Cash	?
Total	100

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the levels were of (a) fraud and (b) overall incorrect payment by the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency (i) income support, (ii) jobseeker's allowance, (iii) disability living allowance, (iv) incapacity benefit, (v) carer's allowance and (vi) retirement pension in 2005-06 (A) in monetary terms and (B) as a percentage of the total expenditure in each benefit programme. [76680]

Mr. Hanson: The Social Security Agency now reports its findings based on calendar years. The following tables set out the information requested for the 2005 reporting year (January 2005 to December 2005).

Customer fraud

	2005[1] (£ million)	Percentage of expenditure
Income support	11.3	2.4
Jobseeker's allowance	2.8	3.0

Child Abuse

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children were admitted to hospital in Northern Ireland with injuries that gave rise to subsequent investigations for abuse in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [77342]

Paul Goggins: Information is not collected centrally in the format requested. However, information is collected on the number of child protection referrals to social services where the source of referral is categorised as "hospital". The number of such referrals is shown in the following table for the financial years 2002-03 to 2004-05. The number of referrals does not equate to the number of children referred, as a child may be referred more than once during the financial year.

Child protection referrals from hospital source

	Number
2002-03	115
2003-04	119
2004-05	96

All children and young people who are seen by hospital staff will be managed in accordance with the regional Child Protection Policy and Procedures guidance issued by the Health and Social Services Board Area Child Protection Committees.

All hospital staff have access to the child protection register and there would be an expectation that appropriate checks would be made where there are concerns about any child.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money was classed by the Northern Ireland Child Support Agency as probably uncollectable during the financial year 2005-06. [76678]

Mr. Hanson: The figure of probably uncollectable debt as at 31 March 2006 is £36,845,910, a reduction in the financial year 2005-06 of £2,084,496.

It is to be noted that the agency's annual accounts are still subject to audit and will not be laid before both the House of Commons and the Northern Ireland Assembly until July. Following this, the report will be available in the public domain.

Children in Care

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in the average number of children in care in Northern Ireland between 1995 and 2005. [76327]

Paul Goggins: Information is not collected centrally on the average number of children in care; however, the number of children in care at 31 March 2006 each year is collected and this is detailed in Table 1 below annually from 1995 to 2005, the latest year for which information is available.

Column 1 of table 1 details the year to which the information relates, column 2 the numbers of children in care on 31 March for that year, column 3 shows the numbers of children in care per 10,000 of the population aged under 18, and column 4 details the year to year percentage change in the numbers of children in care at 31 March 2006.

Table 1: Number of children in care in Northern Ireland, 1995 to 2005

	Number of children in care at 31 March 2006	Rate per 10,000 population	Percentage from previous year
1995	2,624	56.2
1996	2,625	56.2	0.0
1997	2,431	52.1	-7.4
1998	2,354	50.8	-3.2
1999	2,324	50.5	-1.3
2000	2,422	53.1	4.2
2001	2,414	53.6	-0.3
2002	2,453	54.8	1.6
2003	2,446	55.3	-0.3
2004	2,510	57.4	2.6
2005	2,531	57.9	0.8

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change was in the average number of children in care in reported missing for periods of more than 24 hours between 1995 and 2005. [76328]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of children in care reported missing for periods of more than 24 hours is not collected centrally. However a consultative document produced in 1998 entitled "Children Matter: A regional view of residential child care services in Northern Ireland" details the number of untoward incidents recorded in Northern Ireland during the period 31 March and 30 September 1997. It reports a total of 488 incidents of absconding recorded during that period, of which 227 related to periods of 24 hours or more.

An extract from table 4 of "Children Matter: A regional view of residential child care services in Northern Ireland" is shown as follows.

Untoward incidents recorded between 31 March and 30 September 1997

Nature of untoward incident	Vol and stat homes	Regional centres	Total
Absconding
Under 24 hours	115	146	261
24 hours plus	126	101	227
Total	241	247	488

Classroom Assistants

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many classroom assistants are employed in each (a) controlled, (b) maintained, (c) integrated and (d) Irish medium secondary school in the Western education and library board area. [76404]

Maria Eagle: The total number of classroom assistants employed in each type of secondary school in the Western education and library board area is as follows:

	Number
Controlled	60
Maintained	145
Controlled integrated	41
Grant-maintained integrated	43
Irish Medium	0

Clinical Trials

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the hospitals in Northern Ireland in which clinical trials take place; and if he will make a statement. [77382]

Paul Goggins: All hospitals in Northern Ireland can potentially carry out clinical trials of medicinal products as long as the chief investigator has successfully completed the Research Governance Process including having a favourable ethical opinion from a recognised NHS/HPSS Research Ethics Committee (Ref: UK Clinical Trials Regulation (2004)).

Since February 2004 and the establishment of the HPSS Research Ethics Committees (RECs), 21 Northern Ireland-based clinical trials of investigational medicinal products have been given a favourable ethical opinion. The trials are occurring in the following hospital trusts:

	Number of trials
Royal Group of Hospitals HSS Trust	11
Belfast City Hospital HSS Trust	5
Greenpark Healthcare HSS Trust (primarily Musgrave Park Hospital)	3
Craigavon Area Hospital Group HSS Trust	1
Ulster Community and Hospitals HSS Trust	1

I fully support the work of the HPSS RECs and the Office for Research Ethics Committees in Northern Ireland (ORECNI) in their mission to maintain a Research Ethics Service to protect the rights, dignity and welfare of research participants within the HPSS/NHS, and to protect the rights of researchers to perform ethical research and legitimate investigation.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was redistributed through resource-releasing savings (a) by each Northern Ireland Department, agency and non-Departmental public body and (b) in total during 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [76557]

Mr. Hanson: Targets for resource-releasing savings for each Department were set in the course of the Priorities and Budget 2005-08 process, with the relevant amounts being redistributed at that time.

The following table summarises the targets for each Department, with the amount specified covering the core Department, its agencies and non-Departmental public bodies. Efficiency technical notes, outlining how Departments intend to deliver their efficiency targets, are available on departmental websites.

Outturn information in respect of the efficiencies delivered in 2005-06 is not yet available.

Deprivation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to address the deprivation identified by the Northern Ireland Department of Finance and Personnel on 26 May 2005 in the Drumgask, Drumnamoe, Corcrain, Drumgor and Court areas of Craigavon. [77307]

Mr. Hanson: Drumgask, Drumnamoe, Corcrain, Drumgor and Court areas in Craigavon were identified by the Northern Ireland Measures of Deprivation (New Noble Index) as being in the 10 per cent. most deprived urban areas in Northern Ireland.

The Government's main strategy for tackling areas of high urban deprivation is neighbourhood renewal and three local Neighbourhood Partnerships have been established in the Craigavon borough council area to help take forward the strategy in the areas that have been identified as deprived. The Drumgask and Drumgor areas are covered by the Brownlow Partnership; the Court and Drumnanoe areas are covered by the Lurgan Partnership and the Corcrain area is covered by the Portadown Partnership.

All three partnerships are currently working in consultation with interested parties to develop a vision framework and action plan that will set out in detail the programmes and activities needed to address deprivation and improve services. Local consultation is expected to take place later this year.

Early Years Services

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the additional £1.2 million announced on 26 May 2005 to maintain front-line early years services in Northern Ireland was spent; and how much remained unspent. [77309]

Paul Goggins: On 26 May 2005, my predecessor, the Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, the hon. Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Woodward), announced an additional £1.2 million to support projects previously funded under 'Peace Measure 2.5—Investing in Childcare'.

Projects were invited to apply for this funding and had to demonstrate that they met the criteria in providing direct services to children in areas of low provision where the service is critical to provision in that area; or services that have targeted provision for ethnic minorities, traveller children and children with a disability.

In 2005-06 £1.2 million has been committed to 128 successful projects, and all funds have been fully utilised.

Head Teacher Vacancies

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many vacancies of principals of more than two months there were in secondary level schools in the (a) controlled and (b) maintained sectors in Northern Ireland during 2005. [76329]

Maria Eagle: The education and library boards and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools have advised that all principal vacancies during 2005 were filled immediately. If there is a delay in a principal taking up duty, the vice principal is required to undertake the role of acting principal in accordance with the terms of employment of the vice principal.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of patients in Northern Ireland waiting for elective admission to trauma and orthopaedics were seen in (a) under three months and (b) under 12 months during (i) 2004-05 and (ii) 2005-06. [76301]

Paul Goggins: The proportion of in-patients waiting for elective admission (ordinary admission or day case treatment) in the trauma and orthopaedics specialty that were seen during 2004-05 and 2005-06 in an NHS hospital in Northern Ireland in (a) under three months and (b) under 12 months is provided in the following table:

	Proportion of in-patients waiting for elective admission in the trauma and orthopaedics specialty that were seen in an NHS hospital in Northern Ireland in:
	Under 3 months	Under 12 months
2004-05	41.3	76.1
2005-06	38.6	81.5

Waiting time is calculated from the original date the decision to admit was made to the actual admission date. Data include in-patients who were medically deferred while waiting and in-patients who self-deferred or did not turn up for a previously arranged admission date.

Housing

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1818-20W, on housing, what assessment he has made of community differentials in the allocation of housing in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Belfast; and if he will make a statement. [76786]

Mr. Hanson: No assessment is made as housing is allocated on the basis of need through the Common Selection Scheme and not on the basis of community affiliation.

Knives

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of stabbings with knives have occurred in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [76627]

Mr. Hanson: The following table provides PSNI statistics on knife crime incidents over the past five years. The incidents are sorted by the recorded crime categories used by the police. While it is known that a knife was used in all incidents recorded below, it is not possible to indicate how the knife was used.

Clearly the categories of murder and attempted murder refer to the most serious incidents. While the overall incidents of use of a knife in crime rose last year, the number of murders and attempted murders reduced.

A knife amnesty and media campaign is currently in place. In early autumn an educational package will be introduced into schools and legislation giving powers to increase the minimum age for buying a knife will be introduced. I am hopeful that these actions will impact on these figures and we will see a reduction in knife related crimes this year.

Medication (Sell-by Dates)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are taken by pharmacies in Northern Ireland to ensure that (a) over-the-counter drugs, (b) alternative medicines and (c) prescription medicines are all within their sell by dates; and if he will make a statement. [75475]

Paul Goggins: A pharmacist is required to conform to all the legal controls pertaining to the quality, safety and efficacy of medicines, whether prescription or over- the-counter. In addition his/her professional standards of ethics and practice require him/her to ensure that dispensed products are in date.

This is also the case in relation to homeopathic or herbal medicines. However, many alternative therapies are not licensed medicines and are, therefore, subject to the laws governing foods.

National Insurance Numbers

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many applications for National Insurance numbers made in Northern Ireland have been refused in each of the last five years; [76405]

(2) how many applications for National Insurance numbers made in Northern Ireland have been refused as the result of an immigration check in each of the last five years. [76446]

Mr. Hanson: The information is outlined in the following table.

National Insurance number applications refused

Financial year	Number
2001-02	Not available
2002-03	562
2003-04	731
2004-05	1,015
2005-06	2,158

Information on applications refused as a result of an immigration check is not available.

National Stadium

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many discussions officials from (a) his office and (b) the strategic investment board have had with (i) Lisburn city council, (ii) Belfast city council and (iii) other local authorities on the proposals for a new national stadium. [74717]

Maria Eagle: Officials from the Department of Culture Art and Leisure (DCAL) and the strategic investment board (SIB) have had one formal meeting with Belfast city council specifically on the proposal for a new multi-sports stadium. In addition SIB officials have had several informal discussions with Belfast city council officials. There have been no discussions between officials from either my office or SIB with Lisburn city council or other local authorities on the same issue.

NHS Finances

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what NHS trusts in Northern Ireland are currently in financial deficit; and what the size of each deficit is. [77325]

Paul Goggins: Final audited and approved 2005-06 accounts for the 19 health and personal social services (HPSS) trusts will not be available until August 2006. However, based on projections as at 31 March, only one trust, Sperrin Lakeland, is forecasting a deficit. The forecast is £90,000, which is treated by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety as being within an acceptable margin of break even as it represents only 0.06 per cent. of the trust's 2005-06 income.

Planning Applications

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) residential, (b) commercial and (c) industrial planning applications were (i) received and (ii) decided by the planning service in Northern Ireland in (A) 2004-05 and (B) 2005-06. [76458]

David Cairns: The number of (a) residential, (b) commercial and (c) industrial planning applications that were (i) received and (ii) decided by the Planning Service in Northern Ireland in (A) 2004-05 and (B) 2005-06 are in the following table.

Total	33,378	33,101	25,437	28,474

Note:
There is no direct correlation between the number of planning applications received and the number of decisions issued.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of residential planning applications in Northern Ireland was processed to decision or withdrawal within 14 weeks in the last period for which figures are available. [76496]

David Cairns: In the fiscal year 2005-06 the proportion of residential applications processed by the planning service within 14 weeks to decision or withdrawal was 29.77 per cent.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of planning applications in Northern Ireland was processed to decision or withdrawal within 15 weeks in the last period for which figures are available. [76497]

David Cairns: In the fiscal year 2005-06 the proportion of applications processed by the planning service within 15 weeks to decision or withdrawal was 33.11 per cent.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what average time was taken by the planning service to process planning applications in the most recent period for which figures are available. [76498]

David Cairns: In the fiscal year 2005-06 the average time to process planning applications by the planning service was 31.04 weeks.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the conclusions were of the planning service's 2005-06 Customer Satisfaction Survey. [76503]

David Cairns: The 2005-06 customer survey of applicants/agents has just recently been completed and results are currently being analysed. I will write to the hon. Member to advise him of the results when they become available.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of industrial applications were processed by the planning service to decision or withdrawal within 17 weeks in the last period for which figures are available. [76504]

David Cairns: In the fiscal year 2005-06 the proportion of industrial applications processed by the planning service within 17 weeks to decision or withdrawal was 40.01 per cent.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of commercial applications were processed by the planning service to decision or withdrawal within 18 weeks in the last period for which figures are available. [76505]

David Cairns: In the fiscal year 2005-06 the proportion of commercial applications processed by the planning service within 18 weeks to decision or withdrawal was 42.65 per cent.

Somme Commemoration

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to hold events in Northern Ireland to mark the 90th anniversary of the Battle of the Somme. [76647]

Maria Eagle: The award winning exhibition "Conflict: The Irish at War" opened in December 2003 and will be on display until the museum's closure for redevelopment at the end of August. The exhibition incorporates artefacts and stories associated with the experience of Ulstermen at the Somme in 1916.

The Ulster Museum has also advised and contributed to a major exhibition marking the Battle at the Historial de la grand Guerre Chateaux in Peronne, France.

The Government will be represented at the service of remembrance at the cenotaph in Belfast by Lord Rooker who will lay a wreath.

The Secretary of State will attend the annual commemoration of the Battle of the Somme at the Ulster Tower in France on 1 July.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many households in Northern Ireland have requested Northern Ireland Electricity to supply them with eco energy in each of the last two years. [76325]

Maria Eagle: Northern Ireland Electricity has confirmed the following figures for the number of customers on their eco energy tariff:

As at March each year	Customers

2006	18,267

Vaccines

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many MMR vaccines the Department of Health and Social Services has committed to purchasing for use in Northern Ireland for 2006-07 and 2007-08. [77375]

Paul Goggins: The Department of Health (London) purchases stocks of MMR vaccine under the national childhood vaccine contract to meet the needs of the entire UK vaccination programme. Northern Ireland participates in this national contract and HPSS trusts purchase supplies of MMR vaccine as required to meet local needs. Vaccine is purchased on a demand basis from UK stocks based on previous usage. Therefore Northern Ireland has not committed to purchase any firm quantity of MMR vaccine for 2006-07 and 2007-08 but will purchase vaccine to meet the needs of the vaccination programme.

Waterside Health Centre

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the expected final cost to public funds is of the design, preparation and build of the new Waterside Health Centre in Londonderry. [76645]

Paul Goggins: The development of the new Waterside Health Centre, Distillery Brae, is being taken forward independently by three GP practices in the area. The full use of the building has yet to be confirmed, but, as part of the development, Foyle Health and Social Services Trust has agreed to utilise the third floor of the building in order to provide a range of essential local health services. The cost of the design, preparation and fit-out for this floor will fall to Foyle HSS Trust and is estimated to be £927,417.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Child Sexual Abuse (Northern Ireland)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Solicitor-General what criteria are used by the Public Prosecution Service of Northern Ireland in deciding whether to prosecute those found guilty of sexual abuse against children; and how many such prosecutions there have been in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [76402]

The Solicitor-General: All prosecution decisions are reached in accordance with the provisions of the Code for Prosecutors in that there must be sufficient evidence to afford a reasonable prospect of a conviction and prosecution must be in the public interest. The Public Prosecution Service takes all allegations of sexual abuse very seriously and an indication of the factors that are required to be considered in reaching decisions are set out in the Code.

The following table sets out the figures requested for prosecutions in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Antisocial Behaviour (York)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what representations she has received from the City of York council scrutiny board on the role of the courts in prosecuting repeat offenders of anti social behaviour resulting from alcohol and drug abuse; [74868]

(2) if she will meet the City of York council scrutiny board to discuss (a) reasons for anti social behaviour in York and (b) means of reducing and eliminating such anti social behaviour; [74869]

(3) if she will meet the courts service in York to discuss the conclusions of the City of York scrutiny board review of drug and alcohol-related anti social behaviour in the city. [74870]

Ms Harman: A letter to the Home Office from the Chief Executive of the City of York council, enclosing the 'Final Report and Recommendations of the Economic Development and Community Safety Scrutiny Board' on alcohol and drug-related anti-social behaviour, was received by the Department for Constitutional Affairs on 1 June 2006. A response will be sent shortly. If asked, I will meet with the City of York council scrutiny board and representatives of the court service in York to discuss the reasons for anti social behaviour in York and the means of reducing and eliminating such anti social behaviour.

Coroners (Oxfordshire)

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the names were of the deputy coroners employed by Oxfordshire county council in 2003; and what the dates were of their service. [76799]

Ms Harman: The deputy coroner for Oxfordshire in 2003 was Dorothy Margaret Flood. The assistant deputy coroner for Oxfordshire in 2003 was Dr. Richard Michael Whittington. They were appointed in 1997 and 2000 respectively and both continue in these appointments.

Courthouses

Bob Russell: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1469W, on courthouses, which consortium or company holds the equity of the Essex magistrates court. [76459]

Ms Harman: Currently no consortium or company holds equity in the Essex magistrates court scheme as this only occurs at contract close which is unlikely to be reached until early 2009.

Courts Administration

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many times a prisoner changed legal team due to a change in the court where the trial was held in each year from 2000 to 2005. [74572]

Ms Harman: This information is not held centrally and to obtain it would incur disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many and what percentage of staff in her Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73009]

Vera Baird: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the Department for Constitutional Affairs who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 1 June 2006 are shown in the table.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCs	333	1.08
Added years	445	1.45
Partnership	122	0.4

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether any building in her Department falls short of disability access regulations. [73007]

Vera Baird: Save for the exceptions detailed below, the majority of buildings used by the Department for Constitutional Affairs are now believed to be compliant with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 as regards accessibility for all users. There was some slippage with regard to works required by 1 October 2004 deadline at a small number of locations, but these have since been addressed.

Following on from the transfer of the magistrates courts estate to Her Majesty's Courts Service (an Executive agency of the Department for Constitutional Affairs) on 1 April 2005, a programme of access audits has been carried out to establish the degree of compliance of the magistrates courts buildings with the Act and to put in place managed solutions where appropriate. In parallel with this interim solution, a programme of works has now been agreed and costed and will be implemented as soon as practical.

Dr David Kelly

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what discussions took place between the Oxfordshire coroner and (a) her Department and (b) Lord Hutton before the coroner's decision to issue a death certificate for Dr. David Kelly on 18 August 2003. [74198]

Ms Harman: The coroner did not issue a death certificate for Dr. David Kelly. It is the responsibility of the local registrar to issue death certificates or more properly certified copies of entries in the register of deaths.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1663W, on Dr. David Kelly, what the verdict of the inquest was; and on what date the verdict was announced. [73991]

Ms Harman: There was no inquest verdict in the case of Dr. David Kelly. The coroner did not resume the inquest after it had been adjourned pending the Hutton inquiry.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs on what date the Oxfordshire coroner complied with the requirement of section 17A(6) of the Coroners Act 1988 in the case of the death of Dr. David Kelly; and if she will place in the Library a copy of the certificate required under this section. [74470]

Ms Harman: The Oxfordshire coroner advises me that he notified the registrar on 16 March 2004 in accordance with the requirements of section 17A(6) of the Coroners Act 1988. I understand that notification would have contained personal information about Dr. Kelly and it would not be appropriate for it to be put into the public domain.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the categories of information available to Lord Hutton for his inquiry into the death of Dr. David Kelly in respect of which some or all information has been (a) withheld from the public and (b) destroyed. [74481]

Ms Harman: None of the evidence submitted to Lord Hutton for his inquiry has been destroyed.

The website for the inquiry www.the-hutton-inquiry.org.uk contains a list of all evidence submitted to the inquiry. Where that evidence has been withheld from the public a reason has been given. Most of the evidence is, however, available to the public through the website.

The original documents supplied to the inquiry are held at the National Archives.

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1666W, on the Hutton inquiry, who took the decision that Lord Hutton did not need the formal powers of the 1921 Act in order to carry out a full and comprehensive inquiry. [70328]

Ms Harman: The Lord Chancellor took the decision that Lord Hutton did not need the formal powers of the 1921 Act. It was made clear that if Lord Hutton required more powers he could ask for them. Lord Hutton did not make any request for more powers.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) which Government Departments were issued copies of the Hutton Report following its publication; and how many copies were distributed to each: [74645]

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many copies of the Hutton Report were printed; how many were sold; at what price; how many were obtained by No. 10 Downing Street; and to whom they were issued. [74527]

Ms Harman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess), on 3 February 2004, Official Report, column 758W.

FOI Requests

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 for the disclosure of personal information from the 1911 census have been received by the National Archives since 29 January 2006; and what the outcome was in cases where the applicants provided documentary evidence that all the 1911 residents of a specific property were no longer alive. [76084]

Ms Harman: The National Archives has received 42 requests to access information contained in the 1911 census returns in the period between 29 January and 17 May 2006. All of these requests, including one where the inquirer provided evidence that all persons believed to be resident at a particular address in 1911 are now deceased, were denied on the grounds that the s.41 exemption of the Freedom of Information Act—relating to information provided in confidence—applies. These decisions were taken in the context of the Government's policy that decennial census returns should be closed for 100 years.

Information Commissioner

Mr. Davey: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost was of the casework management system installed in the Information Commissioner's Office in 2004 to monitor breaches of telephone preference service regulations. [75906]

Vera Baird: The Information Commissioner's Office is an independent statutory body. It receives a wide range of complaints, principally under the Data Protection Act 1998, Freedom of Information Act 2000, Environmental Information Regulations 2000, and the Privacy and Electronic Communications Regulations 2003. The Information Commissioner's Office introduced a Casework Management and Enquiry Handling system from 2003 onwards to provide support for all of these complaints activities.

Separate costings for the functionality of the different elements of the Information Commissioner's Office casework system are not available and there was no specific expenditure to cover complaints under the Privacy and Electronic Communications Regulations 2003.

Legally Aided Litigants

Mr. Scott: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect of costs protection on the opponents of legally aided litigants. [76526]

Vera Baird: No formal assessment has been made. However, the role of cost protection and its impact on clients and opponents was considered by the Department in 2004-05. It was decided to remove cost protection from most family cases but retain the existing rules for non-family proceedings. The purpose of cost protection is to ensure that vulnerable clients are not deterred from bringing proceedings by the threat of having to pay excessive costs, should they lose their case. Clients bringing certain types of civil proceedings with the help of legal aid are protected so that they can only be ordered to pay costs which are reasonable, given their circumstances. However, in certain circumstances, courts can also direct that costs awarded to an individual, against a funded client, should be paid by the Legal Services Commission, if the individual will suffer financial hardship if the costs are not paid.

Ministerial Travel (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her Department staying overnight in (i) mainland Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69026]

Ms Harman: This information is not held centrally and to obtain it would incur disproportionate cost.

Official Residences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the (a) notional market rent, (b) estimated capital value, (c) total cost of rent, security, utilities, facilities management and general maintenance was of the Lord Chancellor's official residence in the House of Lords in the most recent year for which figures are available. [75265]

Ms Harman: The Lord Chancellor's official residence is used by the Lord Chancellor as the Speaker of the House of Lords. The Lord Chancellor does not live there, but it is used for official entertaining and charitable receptions. It is maintained by the House. No figures are held by the Department for Constitutional Affairs.

Potters Bar Rail Crash

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the timetable is for the holding of a coroner's inquest into the Potters Bar rail crash. [76120]

Ms Harman: I refer the hon. Member to my previous reply of 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1594W. Further to that reply, the coroner has appointed Mr. Justice Sullivan as assistant deputy coroner to hold the Potters Bar rail crash inquests.

Victims of Crime

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what mechanisms are in place in the criminal justice system to ensure a formal acknowledgement of the harm caused to victims of crime and their families. [73980]

Ms Harman: The Victim Personal Statement scheme allows victims an opportunity to tell criminal justice agencies and services dealing with their case how the crime has affected them. Anyone who sees the case files should consider the Victim Personal Statement when making decisions. The scheme is one of a range of measures designed to give victims a voice, such as the use of Victims' Advocates. In some local areas, victims may also request a restorative justice process, which brings together the victim and offender, and the wider community, to address the harm caused by crime.

TREASURY

Climate Change Levy

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on the revenue to the National Insurance Fund of the increase in the climate change levy. [76644]

John Healey: The announced increase in the rates of the climate change levy in 2007 will not affect the revenue to the National Insurance Fund.

HM Revenue and Customs

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether some HM Revenue and Customs training courses are offered only to certain members of staff based on (a) sex, (b) ethnic origin and (c) sexual orientation; and if he will make a statement. [77411]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC has in the past and continues to offer development programmes to members of staff based on their sex, race or sexual orientation, usually with a mix of participants from various backgrounds.

These training programmes are offered as part of the Department's positive action programme which is in place to assist in righting the imbalance of under represented groups at higher grades. Both the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 and the Race Relations Act 1976 allow positive action.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in respect of the proposed closure of the HM Revenue and Customs office at Regian House, Liverpool; what response he has made; and if he will reconsider the closure. [77249]

Dawn Primarolo: The HM Revenue and Customs office at Regian House, Liverpool is not closing. However processing work currently carried out in Regian House and other offices in the Liverpool area, is being centralised in Manchester as part of HM Revenue and Customs' overall efficiency plans.

Special Protection Areas

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the population was of each ward (a) in and (b) adjacent to special protection areas in (i) Surrey, (ii) the Thames Basin and (iii) the UK in the last period for which figures are available. [76637]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 14 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question regarding the population in each ward (a) in and (b) adjacent to Special Protection Areas (SPAs) in (i) Surrey, (ii) the Thames Basin and (iii) the UK in the last period for which figures are available. I am replying in her absence (76637).

I am placing tables in the House of Commons Library, which provide the information you have requested The most recent population estimates for England and Wales wards are for mid-2002. These ward population estimates have been published with the status of "experimental statistics". Therefore these estimates should be treated with some care. The latest ward population figures for Scotland and Northern Ireland are from the 2001 Census.

Tables 1 to 3 include the wards which are covered, wholly or partly by SPAs for Surrey, the Thames Basin and the UK respectively. Tables 4 to 6 include the wards which are adjacent to the wards covered, wholly or partly by these SPAs for Surrey, the Thames Basin and the UK respectively, for all tables, the local authorities covered by these wards have been included.

Please note that in Scotland, many of the SPAs cover uninhabited islands which do not have a ward assigned to them, and therefore no ward information is included. In addition, a number of SPAs are on islands/or in lochs and so have no direct populations. The adjacent ward populations for these SPAs have been included in the data.

Stamp Duty (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many properties sold in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) the Peterborough city council area in each of the last three years attracted stamp duty at (i) 0 per cent., (ii) one per cent., (iii) three per cent. and (iv) four per cent. [76595]

Ed Balls: Estimates of the number of property transactions at local authority/unitary authority level and for parliamentary constituencies are only available for 2004-05 and 2005-06, and are given in the following table grouped by stamp duty band.

The number of transactions bearing stamp duty will be lower than the number shown in the non-zero bands due to the use of various reliefs, e.g. disadvantaged area relief, group relief, registered social landlord relief etc. There are also some lease transactions which fall in the 0 per cent. band on account of consideration, but which bear stamp duty on the lease rental.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the average time taken to answer calls to the tax credits helpline in each month since November 2005; and if he will make a statement. [75791]

Dawn Primarolo: For November 2005 to April 2006 I would refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 187W.

The figure for May 2006 is 53 seconds.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce an improved level of service for tax credit claimants; and if he will make a statement. [76417]

Dawn Primarolo: Since my statement to the House on 26 May 2005, Official Report, column 22W, HM Revenue and Customs have introduced a series of measures to improve the service. I made a statement on the progress that has been made on these measures at the Treasury Select Committee on the 1 February 2006.

In my written statement to the House on 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 5W, I announced further measures, as part of the pre-Budget report, to provide more certainty over tax credits award for families while maintaining flexibility to respond to falls in income and changes in circumstances.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his latest assessment is of the level of tax credit overpayments in 2004-05; [76433]

(2) what his latest assessment is of the level of tax credit overpayment for 2006-07. [76479]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 2004-05 of the numbers of in-work families with tax credits awards, including information on overpayments and underpayments, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2004-05 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits. Finalised Awards. 2004-05." This publication and provisional estimates for the number of in-work families with tax credit awards as at selected dates in 2005-06 are available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm.

Measures announced in the 2005 pre-Budget report, which are being introduced from April 2006, are expected to reduce overpayments by one third once they are fully implemented.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people who were underpaid tax credits from 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2005 have received the full amounts underpaid; and if he will make a statement. [76469]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC repay underpayments or offset them against any outstanding overpayments, as soon as the underpayments are recognised.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many disabled workers have (a) claimed and (b) been in receipt of tax credits for each month since June 2005; and if he will make a statement. [76486]

Dawn Primarolo: The characteristics of adults and children as initially captured in all tax credits claims, including rejected claims, are not available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The numbers of tax credits awards to in-work families with particular characteristics at selected dates from July 2003 to April 2006 are available in publications on the HMRC website:
http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he plans to carry out an assessment of the case for moving to a system of fixed tax credit awards; and if he will make a statement; [76871]

(2) what external research his Department has commissioned on the case for a return to a system of fixed tax credit awards; and if he will make a statement. [76942]

Dawn Primarolo: As the 2005 pre-Budget report stated, the Government will continue to listen to the case for a system of fixed awards, but believes on balance that it is preferable to maintain the current system that flexibly responds to changing circumstances.

The Department has not commissioned any external work on the case for a system of fixed tax credit awards.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Bali Bombing

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much the Government are contributing towards the London memorial for British people affected by the 2002 Bali bombing. [76836]

Dr. Howells: The Government are contributing £260,000, plus £44,000 VAT, to the London memorial project in memory of the victims of the 2002 bombings in Bali.

Basson/Project Coast Handling Strategy

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which officials attended the ad hoc meeting held on 13 January to discuss the Basson/Project Coast handling strategy; and which Department or agency each represented. [76369]

Dr. Howells: The meeting on 13 January 2006 was attended by 13 officials from a number of relevant departments and agencies, including the Ministry of Defence, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Health Protection Agency, to review what information was available on Project Coast and to ensure that the 12 parliamentary questions under consideration received consistent, full and accurate answers.

British Citizens (Overseas Convictions)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what system is in place for the supervision of activities of British citizens convicted of imprisonable offences abroad who are deported back to the United Kingdom. [76865]

Dr. Howells: When Consular staff are informed that a British national who has been imprisoned overseas is to be deported to the UK, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London passes details of the individual and the date of deportation, if known, to the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA). It is then for SOCA to ensure that this information is passed to the relevant authorities responsible for any necessary supervision of the deportee's activities following their arrival in the UK.

Commonwealth Meeting (Uganda)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) the Prime Minister and (b) Her Majesty the Queen plans to attend the Commonwealth meeting in Uganda. [76619]

Mr. McCartney: The Kampala Commonwealth summit is not until November 2007. While it is too soon to be certain, both my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and Her Majesty the Queen expect to attend Commonwealth Heads of Government Meetings.

Departmental Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will estimate the pension liability of her Department over the next 30 years. [75277]

Mr. Hoon: HM Treasury placed a technical Note about the total liability of unfunded public service occupational pension schemes in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90W following an oral Statement by my right hon. Friend the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Des Browne).

The Government Actuaries Department do not estimate pension liabilities for individual departments but for different pension schemes. UK-based staff at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office are covered by the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS). Table 1 of HM Treasury's Note of 2 March 2006 sets out estimates of the liabilities of the PCSPS.

James Miller

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Israeli authorities regarding the prosecution of the soldiers and commanding officer involved in the killing of British cameraman James Miller in May 2003 since the St. Pancras coroner's verdict. [75415]

Dr. Howells: My noble and learned Friend the Attorney-General is responsible for matters relating to possible prosecutions in the United Kingdom. Following the coroner's verdict he and my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary separately met James Miller's family. During his subsequent visit to Israel in May, the Attorney-General had detailed discussions on this matter and indeed the killing of Thomas Hurndall, with the Israeli Foreign Minister, Minister of Justice, Attorney-General and Military Advocate General and others. In addition the Attorney-General raised the issue of holding an independent inquiry into the death and subsequent investigation and pressed for appropriate compensation to be paid to the family without delay. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary is in contact with the Attorney-General about how this matter will be taken forward.

Peru

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action she is taking towards ensuring that the Peruvian presidential elections are (a) free and fair and (b) subject to scrutiny from international observers. [73563]

Mr. Hoon: We followed the Peruvian presidential election campaign closely through our embassy in Lima and we fully support the Peruvian Government's efforts to ensure the elections were free and fair. An Electoral Observation Mission of the Organisation of American States monitored the second round of the elections on 4 June 2006, with the participation of some 100 international observers. The European Parliament also sent an observer mission.

Terrorism

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information she has received about the terrorist Hambali, who is in US custody and is charged with masterminding the Bali bombing in 2002. [75744]

Mr. McCartney: Hambali (aka Riduan Isamuddin) was captured in Thailand in August 2003. It is the longstanding policy of the Government not to comment on intelligence matters.

UK-Israeli Relations

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the possible effect on UK-Israeli relations of the boycott of Israeli academics by the National Association of Teachers of Further and Higher Education; and if she will make a statement. [76554]

Dr. Howells: The Government regrets the decision by the National Association of Teachers in Further and Higher Education (NATFHE) to vote in favour of boycotting Israeli academics and institutions. We believe that such boycotts are counter-productive and that far more can be obtained through dialogue and academic co-operation.

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my noble Friend Lord Triesman of Tottenham, issued a public statement on the boycott on 29 May 2006. The full text of the statement is available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at:

http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029391638&a=KArticle&aid=1148472774425%20&year=2006&month=2006-05-01&date=2006-05-29

I understand that, following the merger between NATFHE and the Association of University teachers on 1 June, the boycott has now been suspended.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1416W, on the British embassy in Zimbabwe, where in Harare the new embassy will be located; what the timetable is for work on the new premises; what the total cost is forecast to be; what the total number of staff in the new premises is forecast to be; how many staff work in the existing embassy; what discussions she has had with the Government of Zimbabwe on the new embassy; and what plans she has for ministerial visits for the opening of the new embassy. [76236]

Mr. Hoon: The new embassy in Zimbabwe will be located on a greenfield site in Mount Pleasant, a suburb six kilometres north of the centre of Harare. Construction should begin this year with a new embassy completed late 2008. We are unable to make public the cost of the project as to do so would prejudice our commercial interests in circumstances where the contracts have still to be tendered.

There are 110 staff, UK based and locally engaged, working in our existing embassy in Harare. This figure includes the staff of the Department of International Development-Zimbabwe who are co-located with the embassy. This number is unlikely to change on transfer to the new building. Our embassy in Harare has been in contact with Government of Zimbabwe about our plans and has obtained the necessary permission to build. There are no plans for Ministers to attend the opening of the new embassy.

HEALTH

Ambulance Services

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to resolve the dispute over lunch breaks between the North East Ambulance Trust and ambulance crews. [76992]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 13 June 2006]: Where there are problems with assimilation of staff onto agenda for change terms and conditions NHS Employers uses implementation teams, working in partnership with national unions represented on the NHS staff council, to provide the necessary support.

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria she will take into account before changes are considered to the future of the Staffordshire Ambulance Service. [73450]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We shall shortly be agreeing the basis for partnership between Staffordshire Ambulance Service NHS Trust and the new West Midlands Ambulance Service NHS Trust. It is of course paramount that the safety of the public is protected, and this must be the main consideration in going forward.

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Staffordshire Ambulance Service will be merged into a West Midlands Ambulance Service within 24 months; and if she will make a statement. [73451]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As stated by the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Leigh (Andy Burnham), in his statement to the House on 16 May 2006, for now Staffordshire Ambulance Service NHS Trust will remain a separate trust, working in partnership with the new West Midlands Ambulance Service NHS Trust, but will merge at a later date.

No timescale has been set for this merger.

Cannabis (Therapeutic Use)

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in testing medicinal products containing cannabis for pain relief; and if she will make a statement. [75745]

Andy Burnham: There have been two main investigators of cannabis based medicinal product and these are Dr. Zajicek and GW Pharmaceuticals. Dr. Zajicek published the results of his study in The Lancet in November 2003 (Cannabinoids for treatment of Spasticity and other symptoms related to multiple sclerosis (cannabis in multiple sclerosis (CAMS) study). The 3 year CAMS trial, involving more than 600 patients in the United Kingdom, has yielded no definitive verdict on whether the drug can ease the symptoms of multiple sclerosis. I am not aware of any other ongoing studies by Dr. Zajicek.

On 17 March 2006, GW Pharmaceuticals announced the preliminary results from a Phase III study of Sativex (cannabis based medicinal product) in the relief of spasticity in people with multiple sclerosis (MS). This study is a randomized, placebo controlled group study in 335 MS patients with spasticity. According to the GW website, this study is one of a number of Phase III studies which are currently taking place to support approval of Sativex across Europe in a range of targeted indications.

Consultant Contract Benefit Realisation Team

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the remit is of the consultant contract benefit realisation team; how many people are employed in the team; and when it was established. [74864]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The consultant contract benefit realisation team was established in March 2005 and ended on 31 May 2006. Their remit was to work with national health service trusts on a more proactive approach to job planning; to gather and share examples of good practice; and to make recommendations to the office of strategic health authorities. There were five people employed in the team for most of this period.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letter of 3 February from the hon. Member for Aylesbury to the former Minister of State the hon. Member for Liverpool, Wavertree (Jane Kennedy), on behalf of Mrs B. G. of Lacey Green, about prescription medicines. [76346]

Andy Burnham: This letter was replied to on 12 June 2006.

Cosmetic Surgery

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been spent by the NHS on cosmetic surgery in each of the last 8 years; [75894]

(2) how much has been spent by the NHS on tattoo removal in each of the last 8 years; [75932]

Andy Burnham: This information is not collected centrally.

Departmental Pension Liability

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the pension liability of her Department over the next 30 years. [75231]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the technical note by HM Treasury that was placed in the Library on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90W, following an oral statement in Parliament by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury,

Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual departments, they are estimated for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in table one of the technical note.

Departmental Statistical Publications

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the planned publication date is of each annual statistical publication to be produced by her Department in the next nine months; and if she will make a statement. [75648]

Andy Burnham: Timing of annual and other statistical publications produced by the Department is pre-announced by way of a 12-month publication plan which is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Statistics/CodeOfPractice/12MonthPlan/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=40164238&chk=Eldbg/

This plan also currently includes statistical publications produced by the information centre for health and social care.

The Department process for pre-announcing statistical publications is carried out in accordance with the National Statistics protocol for release practices. Month of publication is given six months ahead with exact date at least two weeks ahead.

Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the potential effects of the withdrawal of the bulk contract for the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin, with particular reference to prescribing; and who will pay for the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin following the withdrawal of funds. [75339]

Andy Burnham: A number of alternative sources of information and advice remain readily available to prescribers following the Department's decision not to renew its bulk contract for the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin. I understand that individuals and organisations can subscribe direct to the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin if they wish to do so.

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation was undertaken before the decision was taken to cancel funding for the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin. [75477]

Andy Burnham: There was no requirement to consult on the decision not to renew the contract.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors she took into account when deciding not to renew the contract for the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin. [76551]

Andy Burnham: The decision not to renew the Department's national contract for distribution of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin was informed by our policy to devolve as much responsibility as possible to the national health service and to look very critically at central spending. It is our policy that central spending should be kept to an absolute minimum in order to maximise the resources available for the NHS to manage at the local level. The decision also took account of the availability of other sources of medicines information.

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on doctors of the decision by her Department to withdraw funding from the Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin; and if she will make a statement. [76902]

Andy Burnham: A number of alternative sources of information and advice remain readily available to prescribers following the Department's decision not to renew its bulk contract for the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin. I understand that individuals and organisations can subscribe directly to the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin if they wish to do so.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on dissemination of the Drugs and Therapeutics Bulletin to NHS doctors. [75898]

Andy Burnham: The Department has taken the decision not to renew its contract for the central purchase and distribution of the Drug and Therapeutics Bulletin. Future distribution arrangements are a matter for the publisher, Which? Limited, although officials have been discussing with them how the Department can best support this transition.

Generic Medicines

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the savings made by the NHS from the centralised procurement process for generic medicines in 2005. [71570]

Andy Burnham: The estimated savings made by the national health service from the centralised process for generic medicines in 2005 obtained through the national contracts sourcing programme for generic pharmaceuticals are £51 million.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of the savings which are to be made to the NHS through the optimal use of generic, rather than branded, medicines. [74053]

Andy Burnham: Data from the prescription pricing division of the Business Services Authority (formerly known as the Prescription Pricing Authority) indicates that from January to March 2006 the estimated savings that could have been achieved through the compulsory generic dispensing of the top 40 (in terms of the amount of potential saving that could be achieved) proprietary drugs for which a generic alternative is available and where the proprietary drug is suitable for substitution, was £11.7 million.

GP Contract

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the cost of the new general practitioner contract. [71574]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Introduction of the new primary medical care contractual frameworks represents a fundamental change in the way in which contractors are incentivised to deliver patient care. The new arrangements were underpinned by a three-year deal, ending in 2005-06, which guaranteed a 36 per cent. increase in resources in England, rising from £5 billion in 2002-03 to £6.8 billion in 2005-06.

Evidence from primary care trust (PCT) expenditure returns show PCTs have also made available additional resources to secure the wider range of services and improvements in care to meet national and local priorities.

The increased investment is directly benefiting the vast majority of patients who are experiencing improvements not only in the range of services available locally but also improvements in the quality of clinical services they receive.

HC1 Forms

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 15 May 2006, Official Report, column 756W, on prescription charges, in which languages HC1 forms are available; how much has been spent on advertising the availability of HC1 forms in each of the last five years; and how many people applied for a form in this period. [74480]

Andy Burnham: The HC1 form is available in English in England. For those whose first language is not English a telephone translation service is provided via any of the telephone numbers in the publicity material. The cost of advertising the availability of form HC1 is not identified separately. It is included in the range of 'Help with Health Cost' material produced. There is no record of the number of people who obtain from HC1. Forms may be ordered by individuals from Department's publications order line 08701 555 455. Forms are also ordered in bulk by national health service and other bodies for individuals to obtain from NHS practitioners, NHS hospitals, or Jobcentre Plus offices or citizens advice bureau. The numbers distributed in the past five years are shown in the table.

	Volume
2001-02	2,196,057
2002-03	1,986,232
2003-04	1,924,259
2004-05	1,681,846
2005-06	1,515,389

Medical Services Contracts

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) GPs and (b) private firms that win alternative provider of medical services contracts are required to disclose (i) how much money per patient they are earning, (ii) their quality framework score and (iii) their profit levels. [67940]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Individual general practitioners or providers of alternative provider medical services are not required to disclose to the Department the amount of money they receive per patient, or profit levels. Information about quality and outcomes framework scores for providers who participate in this scheme is published by the information centre for health and social care.

Mental Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many young people are waiting to access child and adolescent mental health services, broken down by region; what the average waiting time to access child and adolescent mental health services was in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [77487]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Not all the information requested is collated centrally. The most recent information is derived from provisional figures from the 2005 child and adolescent mental health service (CAMHS) mapping exercise. In November 2005, there were 26,207 cases waiting to be seen by specialist CAMHS in England, a reduction of 2,674 from the previous year.

In November 2005, 52 per cent. of new cases were seen by specialist CAMHS within four weeks, an additional 33 per cent. within 13 weeks, and a further 10 per cent. within 26 weeks. 5 per cent. of cases waited over 26 weeks to be seen by specialist CAMHS.

The Department is committed to ensuring that comprehensive CAMHS are available to all who need them. Our vision is set out in the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services, published in September 2004.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the black and minority ethnic mental health network (a) has been and (b) is (i) involved in and (ii) given appropriate notice of the development, implementation and facilitation of the race equality impact assessment consultation events on the Mental Health Bill; and if she will take steps to ensure that the network is (A) involved in and (B) given appropriate notice of future such events. [72961]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 22 May 2006]: Seven events were held, attended by about 430 people across England and in Wales as part of the process of consultation to assess the potential race impact of the proposed amendments to the Mental Health Act 1983 and the Mental Capacity Act 2005. The black and minority ethnic (BME) mental health network was involved in the initial development of the race equality impact assessment (REIA) consultation events. Due to an unfortunate breakdown in communications over the timing of the events, the network decided to withdraw their support from the events. We apologised for any misunderstanding and sought to involve the network in the events. The events were attended by a range of users and carers, including representatives from the African-Caribbean, South Asian, Irish, Pakistani and Chinese communities.

Professor Antony Sheehan, Director General of the care services directorate, is now personally overseeing this work and is meeting with members of the BME network on 19 June 2006 to discuss how to continue taking this forward. This meeting will be followed by a ministerial meeting with members of the BME network on 20 June 2006. In the meantime, the Department's REIA advisory group met on 31 May and agreed to further work on the impact of the amendments to the Mental Health Act. The REIA advisory group has met on 13 June 2006. One of the members of the Department's REIA advisory group is from MIND, and is also the co-chair of the BME network. The BME network continue to engage as part of the wider REIA process and we value their helpful input.

Modernising Medical Careers

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will assess the impact of planned changes in the budget for junior doctor training during the transition to modernising medical careers. [73845]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Allocations to strategic health authorities (SHAs) for 2006-07 will be issued shortly. They will include funding for modernising medical careers. The precise costs of the transition are not known as much of it will be managed at local level through the re-badging of existing posts rather than the creation of new ones. As a result, it will be for SHAs working closely with their postgraduate deaneries to determine exactly how much funding they will need to provide for modernising medical careers in their locality.

Overseas Doctors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many trainee doctors from (a) Pakistan, (b) India, (c) other Commonwealth countries, (d) EU countries and (e) European Economic Area countries work in the Northern Lincolnshire and Goole Hospitals Trust; [64662]

(2) how many trainee doctors from (a) Pakistan, (b) India, (c) New Zealand and (d) South Africa are working in hospitals in England. [64678]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is the responsibility of any employer for applications for work permits. No extra funding will be allocated to national health service trusts.

[1] Doctors in training and equivalents is the term used to refer to people in the registrar group, senior house officers, house officers and other staff in equivalent grades who are not in an educationally approved post.

[2] Excludes all dental staff. Information about country of qualification is derived from the General Medical Council. For staff in dental specialties, with a General Dental Council registration, the country of qualification is therefore unknown.

Payment by Results

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what formula is used for calculating payments to a hospital under payment by results. [74750]

Andy Burnham: Under payment by results, hospitals are paid according to the number and complexity of cases treated and on the basis of the national tariff. The national tariff paid to individual providers is adjusted for market forces factor (MFF), to account for unavoidable cost differences in land, labour and buildings. This could be expressed as a formula: activity x (tariff x MFF).

Prescriptions

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions have been issued using the electronic prescriptions service in each month since it became operational. [75441]

Andy Burnham: The number of prescription messages issued using the electronic prescription service is shown in the following table:

Queen Alexandra Hospital, Cosham

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the projected cost is of the private finance initiative re-development of Queen Alexandra Hospital, Cosham. [72540]

Andy Burnham: The capital cost of Portsmouth Hospitals National Health Service Trust's private finance initiative (PFI) scheme for the redevelopment of Queen Alexandra Hospital is £236 million. The annual payment the trust will make to its private sector under the PFI contract is £32,866,000 million, subject to satisfactory performance by the contractor and other factors such as refinancing. The contract is for 35 years; payment commences after the first three and a half years upon the successful construction and handover of the new facilities to the trust.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Advertising and Publicity

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the 10 most expensive advertising and publicity campaigns run by his Department and its agencies since 1 January 2004; and what the total cost was in each case. [41497]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. A breakdown of publicity costs for each financial year can be found in the Departments Reports which are available in the Library. The 10 most expensive advertising and publicity campaigns for 2005-06 are set out in the following table:

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many free air miles have been earned by senior civil servants in his Department in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [72867]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department of Work and Pensions does not have any scheme which collects free air miles gained from business journeys.

Benefit Recipients

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the number of people who are entitled to, but not receiving (a) pension credit, (b) income support, (c) housing benefit, (d) council tax benefit and (e) other benefits in Coventry South. [76527]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information is not available broken down below national level. For the available information I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave the right hon. Member for North Tyneside (Mr. Byers), on 3 March 2006, Official Report, column 1034W.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) social fund, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) family credit recipients there were on average in each and what the average award was in each year ward in Doncaster North in (i) 1984, (ii) 1994 and (iii) 2004; in each case. [68297]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. Social fund and family credit data is not available at ward level. Incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance data are not available at ward level prior to August 1999. The available information for incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance is in the following table.

Benefits (Information Leaflets)

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to ensure that leaflets on pensions and disability benefits from his Department are freely available at (a) post offices, (b) libraries, (c) doctors' surgeries, (d) council offices and (e) citizens advice bureaux. [44037]

Mrs. McGuire: Although there is no national agreement for the display of leaflets at libraries, doctors' surgeries, council offices and citizens advice bureaux there are a number of routes which ensure the availability of leaflets at these locations.

The Pension Service's local service teams, located throughout England, Scotland and Wales, have local partnerships with external organisations and formally monitor the use and availability of leaflets at 'Hard Copy Information Points' on partner premises. They also share local knowledge and experience of which leaflets are the most popular and most useful to our customers.

The 80,000 subscribers to the Department's Publicity Register receive a quarterly newsletter called 'Touchbase' which provides details of current and forthcoming information campaigns. Subscribers are also able to order leaflets directly from the Department through its on-line catalogue of information products.

Some private companies provide information services in public locations such as libraries and doctors' waiting rooms. The costs of providing this service are usually met directly by the Department or by the venue but the information remains free of any charge to the public.

Recent customer research has indicated that disabled people would prefer information to be available at the point of diagnosis. The Disability and Carers Service are proposing to develop an awareness poster for display in locations such as doctors' surgeries, hospitals and local authorities that will signpost potential customers to more detailed information. Where possible the outlet displaying the poster will also hold stocks of leaflets.

There is no longer any contractual agreement with the Post Office to display DWP leaflets.

Carers

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether receipt of state pension affects the level of carer's allowance granted to carers. [70321]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 12 May 2006]: Yes, the payment of carer's allowance is affected by receipt of state pension.

The payment of state pension takes precedence because it is a contributory benefit, either extinguishing the payment of carer's allowance, or reducing it if the amount of carer's allowance due is higher.

Although this will mean that carer's allowance is not payable, or not payable in full, an underlying entitlement to carer's allowance gives access to the carer premium in housing benefit and council tax benefit and to the carer's additional amount in pension credit.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire of 17 March 2006. [67320]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 2 May 2006]: I replied to the hon. Member on 2 May 2006.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on (a) Christmas cards, (b) Christmas decorations and (c) Christmas parties in each year since 1997. [39181]

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost to his Department of sending Christmas cards in 2005. [46482]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in 2002. The Department does not co-ordinate the purchase and distribution of Christmas cards centrally. However details on the cost of cards sent by Ministers, the Permanent Secretary and other areas of the Department can be found in the following table. Figures provided prior to 2005 in respect of other areas of the Department are based on the available information but may be under-estimates.

Cost (£)

	Ministers	Permanent Secretary	Other areas
2002	[1]1,695		0
2003	1,502	229	668
2004	1,649	210	777
2005	1,573	351	1,187

[1] Breakdown not available.

Christmas cards are also sent out by the Department's Executive Agencies, and I have asked the respective chief executives of these agencies to write to the hon. Members separately. A copy of their letters will be placed in the Library.

No expenditure was incurred on Christmas decorations in any year since the Department was formed.

Expenditure on Christmas parties was as follows:

Ministers and Permanent Secretary Christmas party

	Cost to DWP[1]	£ Cost
2002	—	[2]—
2003	94	326
2004	79	320
2005	72	217

[1] The Department only paid for approximately one third of the total cost. The Secretary of State and the Permanent Secretary paid personally for the remainder of the total cost reflecting broadly the proportion of external guests invited.
[2] Information not available.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the annual expenditure on training and development by (a) his Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which he is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005-06. [39989]

Mrs. McGuire: The following tables show the total expenditure for staff training and development for DWP, its agencies and its associate bodies at a national level. Full information by region is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

[1] Information taken from the Rent Service Business Plan 2005-2006.

The categories of data gathered during this period have changed, limiting the usefulness of any year by year comparison. In addition to formal training, staff are developed in a variety of other ways including e-learning, coaching, and mentoring in the work place. All these learning interventions are now reflected in the investment figures. Records have therefore become more accurate and comprehensive resulting in the apparent increase shown.

Notes:
Listed above are the salaries paid to civil servants, in the years stated, by agency. The figures exclude NI contributions, superannuation, bonuses, short term circumstances (e.g. deputising allowances) and staff on short term promotion. The first total includes all the agencies in the OWP (formally DSS) and therefore The veterans' agency (formally war pensions) is included but the employment service is excluded up to March 2002. This produces a large increase (36.9 per cent.) in 2002-03 when ES became part of the DWP. The second total includes ES and excludes war pensions from 1997-98 and therefore reduces the effect of the agency movements.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many public consultations his Department undertook in 2005; and what the cost was (a) in total and (b) of each consultation. [72862]

Mrs. McGuire: As part of its policy development activity, the Department for Work and Pensions ran six formal public consultation exercises in 2005. The consultation process involved not only the formal consultation document, but also ongoing dialogue with stakeholders. The precise cost of this consultation activity is not collated on a central basis and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Formal public consultation papers, summaries of replies, and Government's responses, are available at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/consultations/2005/index.asp.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff from his Department attended the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-ul-Adha event in London in 2005; and what the total cost was to his Department of their attendance. [73102]

Mrs. McGuire: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member with details of the Civil Service Islamic Society Eid-ul-Adha event. Copies of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether any (a) employee of his Department, (b) person engaged by his Department as a consultant and (c) paid adviser to his Department is a member of the House of Lords; and if he will make a statement. [52890]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The rules on political activities that Departments are required to enforce are set out in chapter 4.4 of the Civil Service Management Code. This does not directly state that Members of the House of Lords cannot be employees of the civil service.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in his Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68011]

Mrs. McGuire: The statistical information requested is not recorded by the Department and therefore not available.

All new recruits to the Department are required to provide their nationality on the application form to check eligibility for employment within the civil service. If an EU or non-EU foreign national applies for a specific post that requires vetting action over and above the standard pre appointment enquiries, either a security check or a developed vetting checks would be undertaken (depending on the nature of the individual post).

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what promotion boards have been held in his Department in each of the last five years. [72863]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not available centrally and to provide it would be at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many complaints of racial abuse in his Department have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in each of the last 5 years. [72864]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions records complaints relating to racial discrimination and harassment that are formally investigated by the Department.

The following table contains information about the number of complaints that were formally investigated in the years 2003-04 to 2005-06. The information is not available before 2003.

	Number of investigations	Number upheld
2005-06	19	[1]1-3
2004-05	12	3
2003-04	8	1

[1] Cases are ongoing

DWP staff can find out how to complain from their line managers or from the Department's internal intranet site.

Initial complaints are considered by line managers (or their manager if the complaint is about the line manager) to decide the appropriate course of action. A number will either be resolved without any further action or by Line Manager's enquiry where the potential for minor misconduct is identified.

If there is a suggestion of serious or gross misconduct, the complaint is referred for formal investigation by the Human Resources Investigation Service.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73101]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is shown in the following tables.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last 3 years; and what the total cost was. [73106]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not available for 2003-04. For the last 2 years the information is in the following table:

		Total cost

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether any building in his Department falls short of disability access regulations. [73103]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions has reviewed the duties placed upon it under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 to make reasonable adjustments to its premises to improve access to the public and for its staff.

The Department, through its property management and services partner LandSecurities Trillium, commissioned a survey of all its occupied buildings (approximately 1,500) to identify the need for public access improvement works. The resultant programme of works commenced in 2004 and was completed in March 2005 with the exception of approximately 55 Jobcentre Plus refurbishments projects that are due for completion by July 2006.

The existing arrangements are subject to annual review and any subsequent measures identified are scheduled through the annual buildings maintenance programmes conducted by LandSecurities Trillium.

Access improvements for members of staff are conducted on an ongoing basis as and when the need arises or is identified upon recruitment, transfer or when an existing condition deteriorates and further measures are required.

Early Retirement

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement in each year since 1997. [34048]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 bringing together the former Department of Social Security and the Employment Service. Information on the number of staff taking voluntary early retirement and voluntary early severance in each year since the Department's formation is shown in the table.

Information on the number of staff taking early retirement is not available prior to the Department's formation.

Year ending March	Number of staff
2002	415
2003	339
2004	768
2005	467

Notes: 1. Figures are full-time equivalent (rounded).
2. The above figures include those who have retired voluntarily with an actuarially reduced pension, those who have retired with benefits under the civil service compensation scheme and those who have retired on ill-health grounds.

Equal Pay

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps are undertaken within his Department to ensure that women are obtaining equal pay to men doing work of equal value. [65844]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions conducts equal pay audits as a minimum every three years. The last one was completed in 2005 and a further review is planned for later this year. The review completed in 2005 did not show any significant differences in pay arrangements for men and women. Some recommendations were made about the need to understand how policies are applied in practice and we are currently working on an action plan to address these recommendations. We conduct full impact assessments for every new policy we introduce.

Grievance Procedures

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many grievance procedures have been initiated in the Department in each of the last three years. [63528]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions does not centrally record the number of grievance procedures initiated.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last 3 years; and if he will make a statement. [68002]

Mrs. McGuire: DWP employees may work from home:

(a) Permanently, on a contractual basis; and

(b) On an ad-hoc basis.

A DWP wide home working policy becomes effective from 19 June 2006, but existing employees may already apply to become a permanent home worker under their legacy terms of employment as a former employee of the DSS or one of its agencies, or the Employment Service.

The parents of children aged under six (18 if the child is disabled) also have a statutory right to apply to become a home worker under the terms of The Flexible Working (Procedural Requirements) Regulations 2002.

The total staffing figures for DWP for the years 2004, 2005 and 2006, and therefore the number of employees who might apply to become permanent home workers, and the specific number who have contracted as permanent home workers are as follows:

As at March each year	Permanent employees	Contracted home workers
2004	143,610	4
2005	133,479	5
2006	127,147	6

Managers may exercise discretion and authorise employees to work from home on an ad-hoc basis for a variety of reasons.

Statistical data have never been collected about ad-hoc home working arrangements, which are treated the same as any other absence from the normal work place on official duties.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the decade in which the Government estimates a fall of one million claimants drawing incapacity benefits has already begun. [72920]

Mrs. McGuire: The Green Paper sets out our aspiration to see a million fewer claimants of incapacity benefits, over the course of a decade, through the combined efforts of the Government, employers, local authorities and health professionals. We are still at an early stage and will establish precise measures, including a baseline year, in due course.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the proportion of the expected fall in incapacity benefit claimants of one million in the next decade which will be brought about by the death or retirement of current claimants. [73172]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 23 May 2006]: While it is difficult to model the precise impact of our proposed measures at this stage, the Green Paper sets out our aspiration to see a million fewer claimants of incapacity benefits over the course of a decade, through the combined efforts of the Government, employers, local authorities and health professionals. More precise measures will be established in due course.

Leased Land

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) leases and (ii) leased in (A) 1979, (B) 1983, (C) 1987, (D) 1992 and (E) 1997 in (1) the Southend, West constituency, (2) Essex, (3) Hertfordshire and (4) the Metropolitan Police area of London. [72107]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001. The Department does not lease any property or land in Southend, West Constituency, Essex, Hertfordshire or the Metropolitan Police area of London. The Department's estate in these areas has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge, LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. A list of all the estate sold or transferred to LST by Government Office Region was placed in the Library with PQ33250 on 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2430W.

This response exciudes The Health and Safety Executive, an Executive Non-Departmental Public Body and The Rent Service, an Executive Agency, as their records are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department is not able to provide information about land and property leased in the years 1979, 1983, 1987, 1992 and 1997 in the areas, as the information is not available in the format requested.

Pathways to Work

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information is held on the Pathways to Work evaluation database; what data fields are used; how much of the information from the database is readily accessible to the public; and how that information may be obtained. [76888]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Pathways to Work Evaluation database hold information on most of the end-to-end process of Pathways, including National Insurance number (encrypted), Pathways starts, benefit claims, work focused interviews (WFIs), referrals and starts to programme provision, Return to Work Credit (RTWC) awards and job entries.

There are 179 variables (fields) on the database, a large proportion of which are derived variables that are used for calculation purposes such as classifying dates into months, creating binary flags or enabling the merging of data from different sources. The full list of variables has been placed in the Library.

A report, summarising information produced from the database appeared as a DWP Departmental Working Paper in January 2006 entitled "Incapacity Benefit Reforms—Pathways to Work pilots Performance and Analysis (Working paper no.26)", which is in the Library. Members of the public can access that information on the Department's website at: http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd5/wp26.pdf

Pay Gap

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the pay gap between able bodied and disabled workers in (a) Tamworth and (b) the UK in each year from 1997 to 2005; and what steps his Department is taking to reduce it. [53421]

Mrs. McGuire: This Department has not undertaken any research into the pay gap between disabled and non-disabled workers. However, the Low Pay Commission reports that, in 2004, the pay gap for people with a work-limiting disability was 13 percentage points.

The employment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA), as amended and strengthened by this Government, place a duty on an employer not to directly discriminate against a disabled person, or to treat the disabled person less favourably for a reason related to that person's disability, unless this can be justified. The Equal Opportunities Commission's Code of Practice on Equal Pay also makes clear that it is good practice for employers to compare the pay of disabled and non-disabled people doing equal work.

As a result of a strong economy and active labour market policies, the employment gap between disabled and non-disabled people is starting to close. The employment rate for disabled people was 38.1 per cent. in spring 1998, rising to 46.6 per cent. by spring 2005; over the same period, the employment gap fell from 35.1 per cent. to 28 per cent.

The Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report, "Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People" set out a 20 year strategy to realise our vision of substantive equality for disabled people. This strategy is being driven by a new Office for Disability Issues, which was launched in December 2005.

Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the current employer contribution rates to the principal civil service pension scheme are; what assumed rate of return underlies those contribution rates; and what the contribution rate would be if the assumed rate of return was in line with current redemption yield on index-linked gilts. [61908]

Mrs. McGuire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Parliamentary Secretary at the Cabinet Office, my hon. Friend the Member for East Renfrewshire (Mr. Murphy) on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 1030W.

Print/Broadcast Media

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the Department's policy on the use of broadcast and print media analysis. [37031]

Mrs. McGuire: Departments analyse coverage in the press and broadcast media as part of their day-to-day operations. This is an important part of best practice in communications (in both public and private sectors) as it enables us to measure the impact of our communications activities and so helps us manage future activity more effectively.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list those private Members' Bills in respect of which his Department has adopted a policy of neutrality in each session since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [72106]

Mrs. McGuire: None.

It is not possible to state the Department's position on private Member's Bills that did not reach Second Reading. Only one private Member's Bill has completed that stage since 2001 and the Department opposed the Bill.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [68995]

Mrs. McGuire: DWP Private Office consists of seven Ministers' offices, the Permanent Secretary's office, the Special Advisers office and the Parliamentary and Correspondence Teams. Of a total 73 staff in post, the percentage of Private Office staff in the Department for Work and Pensions who are recorded as (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled is as follows:

(a) 41 per cent. male

(b) 59 per cent. female

(c) The number of disabled staff included in the above is between 0-4. The Civil Service Code of Practice prevents diversity data being declared when small numbers are involved in order to protect the identity of individuals.

It should be noted that departmental records of disability are solely based on voluntary declarations of disability under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995.

Registered Disabled (Mobility Aids)

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of (a) the number of registered disabled persons who use cycles of various kinds as mobility aids, (b) the extent of the mobility benefits provided as a result of the use of (i) cycles and (ii) other mobility aids and (c) the status of cycles as a mobility aid in relation to Parts 3 and 5 of the Disability Discrimination Act. [63625]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on the number of registered disabled persons who use cycles of various kinds as mobility aids is not available.

There are several types of cycles on the market designed for use by disabled people. However, we have made no assessment of the extent to which they, or other forms of cycles, are used as mobility aids and information to inform such an assessment is not held centrally. The extent to which cycles benefit the mobility of disabled people when compared with other forms of mobility aids has therefore not been determined.

Similarly, we have made no assessment of the status of cycles as a mobility aid in relation to duties under Part 3 or Part 5 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. Part 3 of the Act includes provisions which place duties on service providers not to discriminate against disabled people and to make reasonable adjustments for disabled people in the way that they provide their services. Since 5 December 2005, the duties in Part 3 have started to be extended in stages to more areas, including private clubs, public bodies in their carrying out of public functions, and letting of premises. An adjustment for a disabled person who required a cycle as a mobility aid would need to be considered by those with duties under the Act when deciding what may be a reasonable adjustment to make. Factors such as the cost and practicability of making an adjustment, and the resources available to the service provider, private club or landlord may be taken into account in deciding what is reasonable in any individual situation.

Part 5 of the Act concerns accessibility regulations for all land-based public transport (trains, buses, coaches and taxis) rather than private modes of transport.

Remploy

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will ensure that job opportunities for disabled people at Remploy factories will not be reduced as a result of the current review. [67764]

Mrs. McGuire: The Review of Remploy, which was announced on the 16 March, is about creating more employment opportunities for disabled people. The Department commissioned PricewaterhouseCoopers to undertake a review, supported by an independent disability expert, Stephen Duckworth from Disability Matters, in order to put forward options for a strategy to enable Remploy to help more disabled people into work.

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Remploy factories there are in (a) Government office regions, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales. [74642]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Remploy has 81 factories in the Great Britain. The requested breakdown is in the following table.

Remploy factories in Great Britain, by country and region

	Number
England	59
North West	14
North East	8
Yorkshire and Humber	9
East Midlands	6
East of England	3
West Midlands	4
South East	4
South West	6
London	5
Scotland	10
Wales	12

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [72003]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions has not launched any new initiatives specifically linked to the Small Change Big Difference Campaign. It has, however, a good track record over many years of working with its occupational health consultants and local partners to promote a healthy lifestyle.

The Department of Health is leading the implementation for this initiative as part of its cross-government commitment to deliver the public health White Paper 'Choosing Health'. As the programme of work develops the Department of Health will be working across all of government to ensure the programme joins up to promote maximum impact.

Spending Review (Efficiency Targets)

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the target level of employment expressed as full-time equivalents is in his Department by April 2008, in order to meet his Department's civil service workforce reductions target set out in the 2004 Spending Review. [52842]

Mrs. McGuire: The target level of employment by 31 March 2008 in the Department is 101,900 full-time equivalent posts. The target is benchmarked against those activities undertaken by the Department at the start of the efficiency challenge, 1 March 2004.

In addition, 625 full-time equivalent posts have been approved by HM Treasury to fulfil new public service commitments.

Telephone Advice Lines

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone advice lines his Department and its non-departmental public bodies support; how many telephone advisers each employs; and how much funding is provided by (a) his Department and its non-departmental public bodies, (b) other Government departments, (c) the private sector and (d) the voluntary sector. [66583]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions and its non-departmental public bodies (NDPB's) have a total of 28 telephone advice lines. The information that is available (from the advice lines where some relevant data are held) is included in the following table.

Funding information is not held on a consistent basis. We do not provide any funding for helplines run by the voluntary sector. The constructing better health CLG helpline run by the Health and Safety Commission/Executive receives funding from another Government Department, Department of Trade and Industry and from the private sector. The pensions regulator raises an administration levy on pension schemes and money raised from this levy is offset against funding provided by DWP.

The number of advisers shown in the table are full-time equivalents at March 2006 for those who spend the majority of their time answering calls.

The Pension Service (TPS) operates its telephony service as an integrated part of its business, and does not hold separate data on the number of telephone advisers nor is it able provide specific data for telephony costs alone. Other pension service helplines are run by private companies and, under the terms of confidential commercial contracts, suppliers are not required to provide information on staffing or budgeting information.

Debt management staff undertake both telephony and non-telephony duties, therefore separate data are not available for the number of telephone advisers or telephony budgetary information.

Twickenham Social Security Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for the disposal of Twickenham social security office at 121/125 Heath Road. [73166]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions has vacated 121/125 Heath Road Twickenham. It was surrendered to our Estates Service Providers, Land Securities Trillium, on 28 February 2006. The Department is not involved in any disposal plans for the building.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Charity Commission

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what expertise in the education field the Charity Commission has; and what further training he expects to be made available to Charity Commission staff before it assumes responsibility for the supervision of trust schools. [68429]

Edward Miliband [holding answer 8 May 2006]: I have been asked to reply.

The role of the Charity Commission as the regulator of charities in England and Wales is to secure compliance with charity law, to deal with abuse and poor practice, and to enable charities to work better within an effective legal, accounting and governance framework. In its work with charitable schools the Commission is concerned with the governors' compliance with their legal obligations in exercising control and management of the school under charity law and it has substantial expertise in this area. The Commission is not competent to judge the quality and standard of education and care.

Commission on Integration and Cohesion

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the Commission on Integration and Cohesion to report. [73390]

Meg Munn: I have been asked to reply.

The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government expects to be in a position to make an announcement about the timetable and scope for the Commission on Integration and Cohesion before the summer recess.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community support officers there are in Coventry, South. [76528]

Mr. McNulty: Information on the number of police community support officers (PCSOs) at basic command unit level is collected annually. At the end of June 2005 (latest available data) the M2 operational command unit which covers the Coventry, South parliamentary constituency had four police community support officers. The deployment of PCSOs within the West Midlands police area is a matter for the chief constable. Data are not collected below operational basic command unit level.

Crime Control Orders

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) drug treatment and testing orders, (b) antisocial behaviour orders and (c) community orders have been (i) made, (ii) breached and (iii) revoked in the last 12 months. [68795]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on persons given drug treatment and testing orders and other community orders and those breaching them, is published in table 4.13 of 'Sentencing Statistics, England and Wales, 2004' (Home Office Statistical Bulletin 15/05). Information relating to termination of community orders, including DTTOs, is published in table 5.1 of 'Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004' (Home Office Statistical Bulletin 17/05).

These publications can be found in the Library and also on the Home Office website, as follows:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1505.pdf

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1705.pdf

For offences committed after 4 April 2005, drug treatment and testing orders are no longer available. The new community order may comprise up to 12 requirements, one of which is the drug rehabilitation requirement.

The number of ASBOs issued at all courts in 2004, as reported to the Home Office by the Court Service, is 2,668. From 1 January 2005 to 30 September 2005 (latest available) 2,679 ASBOs have been issued. Between 1 January 2004 to 30 September 2005 notification has been received of 11 ASBOs being revoked.

ASBO breach data are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. During this period, of the 1,892 ASBOs issued, 793 persons were convicted of breaching their ASBO on one or more occasions. Of these, 134 were for breach of ASBO alone.

Criminal Record Checks

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average cost to the Criminal Records Bureau is of processing a disclosure application. [76159]

Joan Ryan: The average unit processing cost for a disclosure for the financial year 2005-06 was £26.10. This figure includes payments to Police, the CRB's Public Private Partner, Capita, and the Agency's own costs. It does not include the Bureau's development costs. 20 per cent. of applications processed in 2005-06 were for volunteers and did not attract a fee. While the 2005-06 Standard and Enhanced Disclosure fees were respectively £29 and £34, the non-paying status of volunteers meant that the average unit income for a disclosure during the financial year 2005-06 was £26.15.

E-crime

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate (a) the extent and (b) the cost to the UK economy of e-crime in each of the last five years. [76722]

Mr. Coaker: We do not collect figures specifically on e-crime. However, the "DTI Information Security Breaches Survey", published April 2006, found that 52 per cent. of businesses (84 per cent. of large businesses) suffered premeditated and malicious breaches in 2006, compared with 68 per cent. in 2004 and 44 per cent. in 2002. In assessing costs, the survey showed the average cost of all incidents, both criminal and non-criminal, rose from £10,000 in 2004 to £12,000 in 2006 and estimates the total cost of all incidents is of the order of £10 billion per year, up roughly 50 per cent. since 2004.

The 2003-04 "British Crime Survey", published April 2006, showed that 27 per cent. (compared with 18 per cent. in 2002-03) of households with internet access reported their home computer had been affected by a computer virus and a third of those reported the virus had damaged their computer. 2 per cent. (in both 2002-03 and 2003-04) of households with internet access reported that someone had accessed or hacked into files on their home computer in the previous 12 months.

APACS, the UK payments association, estimate that internet fraud using UK plastic cards amounted to £117 million in both 2005 and 2004 and that losses from online banking fraud were £23.2 million in 2005, up from £12.2 million in 2004 (figures from the APACS "Fraud: The Facts 2006" publication, February 2006).

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken to process a Criminal Records Bureau check was in the last period for which figures are available. [77334]

Joan Ryan: I refer the hon. Member for Eastbourne to my written answer of 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 1025W.

Experience Corps

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Experience Corps has issued no public briefing papers since December 2003. [40240]

Edward Miliband [holding answer 9 January 2006]: I have been asked to reply.

The Experience Corps received grant-aid from the Home Office over three financial years until 31 March 2004. It is not a condition of Home Office grant aid that independent charities in receipt of public funding are required to issue public briefing papers.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements will be included in the Government's Action Plan for Tackling Human Trafficking to ensure that victims of trafficking are (a) treated as victims and (b) not detained. [76665]

Mr. Coaker: We are currently considering the responses to the consultation paper on proposals for tackling human trafficking, many of which focus on the issue of victims and how best to respond to their needs. A summary of the consultation paper responses will be published on the 21 June.

This is an area of concern which requires a careful response and consideration of these issues will form a central part of the National Action Plan against trafficking which will be published later this year.

Misuse of Drugs Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the operation of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971; if he will list the statutory instruments that have been made under this Act; and what recent representations he has received on the operation of the Act. [77111]

Mr. Coaker: The Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 provides the legal framework for the control of drugs that are considered "dangerous or otherwise harmful". Through the operation of the Act, the UK has a stable mechanism of drug control which allows the police and the criminal justice system to function effectively in respect of the enforcement of the Act. The Act also enables health professionals to have appropriate access to drugs that have proven medical use.

A list of the Statutory Instruments made under the Act is set out as follows.

The control of drugs gives rise to a wide variety of views and representations on the operation of the Act are regularly made across their full spectrum.

Homicide

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many murder victims there were aged under 18 years in each year since 1990, broken down by (a) age, (b) sex and (c) local authority area. [74187]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The available information relates to under 18 victims of homicide for each year from 1990 to 2004-05, with three tables giving breakdowns by age, gender and police force area. Local authority information is not collected centrally for this measure.

Passports

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the facial biometrics for use in passports in 2006 will be held on (a) the Passport Agency Support System and (b) any other database. [55510]

Joan Ryan: With the introduction of biometric passports the Passport Agency Support System has been amended to capture and store the facial Biometric data. This data is not being stored on any other database.

Referendums

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the charitable status of organisations that have funded (a) politicians' offices and (b) constitutional conventions in advance of referenda. [68796]

Edward Miliband: I have been asked to reply.

It is for the Charity Commission, the independent regulator, in any particular case whether or not a charity is in breach of the legal rules on political activities by charities. I have asked the Commission's Chief Executive to write to the hon. Gentleman.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) average, (b) shortest and (c) longest time taken to process an application for a security worker's licence by the Security Industry Authority has been from the date of receipt of a correctly completed application to the date of dispatch of the licence; and if he will make a statement. [55235]

Mr. Coaker: The SIA do not calculate average processing times. Some, such as those involving overseas criminal records checks, unavoidably take a considerable time. The SIA have a published target of processing 80 per cent. of all applications within six weeks, measured from the date that a properly completed application enters the processing system to the date that a licence is issued.

From April 2004 until August 2005 the SIA processed 62 per cent. within six weeks and 88 per cent. within nine weeks.

Since September 2005, there has been a backlog of applications that have been waiting to enter the system. These have added an additional time of between two and four weeks to the process, so it is now taking up to 10 weeks to process most applications.

UN Convention on Narcotic Drugs

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Office of Fair Trade is investigating interpretation in the UK of the United Nations Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs 1961; what recent representations he has received on this issue; and if he will make a statement. [77136]

Mr. Coaker: On 7 March 2006 the Office of Fair Trading published a review of undertakings given by the pharmaceutical supplier Macfarlan Smith Ltd., who supply opiate derivatives in the UK. The OFT report also recommends that the Government consider competition when licensing opiate derivatives.

The Government are committed to responding within 90 days to OFT recommendations that cover the impact of regulation on competition. On 5 June 2006 the Minister for Trade, wrote to the Chief Executive of the OFT explaining that a full response would take a further 45 days, owing to the need for Government to perform a wider analysis of the market beyond the scope of the OFT review. As part of that process officials have had discussions with Macfarlan Smith Ltd.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the enforcement by his Department of the United Nations Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs 1961; and if he will make a statement. [77133]

Mr. Coaker: I have made no recent assessment of the enforcement by my Department of the convention itself. However, the convention establishes a framework for control which, in the United Kingdom, is implemented through the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. So any assessment of the enforcement of the convention is, in effect, an assessment of the enforcement of the Act. The Act establishes the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs to advise me on all matters relating to drug misuse. The council meets, and makes recommendations to me, regularly.

TRANSPORT

A127/A13

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which 10 locations on (a) the A127 and (b) the A13 between the M25 and Southend have had the highest incidence of traffic accidents in each of the last five years. [77502]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many free air miles have been earned by senior civil servants in his Department in each of the last three years; and how they were used. [72874]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport and its agencies do not record air miles accrued by staff. Civil servants must conform to policy which states that benefits such as air miles arising from official travel may not be used for private journeys, but may be offset against further official travel.

Aircraft Corridors

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) current and (b) proposed aircraft corridors are across (i) Ribble Valley and (ii) Lancashire. [74826]

Gillian Merron: At present, all UK airspace is controlled above approximately 24,500 ft above mean sea level up to 66,000 ft. This will change in July next year when, in order to comply with European legislation, the lower limit of this Upper Airspace Control Area will be reduced to 19,500 ft. In the Upper Airspace Control Area, air routes UN615, UN57, UN601 and UL46 currently cross the Ribble Valley constituency. In addition, air route UY99 overflies Lancashire.

In lower airspace, above the Ribble Valley and the adjacent areas of Lancashire, controlled airspace exists in the form of airways with stepped lower limits to accommodate the climb and descent profiles of aircraft operations associated with airports at Manchester and Liverpool. From west to east the routes are N615, lowest limit 6,500 ft; N57, lowest limit 5,500 ft; and N601, lowest limit 9,500 ft.

I have arranged for a chart to be placed in the Libraries of the House indicating these routes as they pass over the Ribble Valley and northern Lancashire, together with the associated lower vertical limits.

South of a line, which approximately joins Barnoldswick and Woodfold Hall (south of Mellor Brook), the airways are in the Manchester terminal area. The lower limit of controlled airspace immediately to the south of this line is 4,500 ft. Below these specified levels/altitude the airspace is uncontrolled.

The Civil Aviation Authority is not aware of any proposals to change the dimensions of controlled airspace over the Ribble Valley and Lancashire.

Aircraft Safety

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether aircraft operators are required to show (a) crews and (b) passengers the Material Safety Data Sheets of the products they have been exposed to after a contaminated air event. [74817]

Gillian Merron: The Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) has advised that there are no certification or operational requirements related to Material Safety Data Sheets. Aircraft operators are not therefore required by civil aviation safety regulations to show them to crews or passengers.

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which aircraft types have reported the highest number of contaminated air events in the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [74818]

Gillian Merron: The Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) has advised that there have been 373 reportable occurrences involving contaminated air during the 10 year period from 1 May 1996 to 30 April 2006, during which there were 13.8 million flights carried out by UK operators worldwide in public transport operations.

Seven aircraft types had 10 or more reportable occurrences of contaminated air, representing 75 per cent. of the total number of contaminated air occurrences in the 10 year period.

1 May 1996 to 30 April 2006

Aircraft type	Reported occurrences involving contaminated air	Percentage of total reported occurrences
Boeing 757	94	25
British Aerospace BAe146	67	18
EmbraerEMB145	38	10
Boeing 737	29	8
De Havilland DHC8	22	6
Airbus A320	16	4
Airbus A319	14	4
Various other aircraft	93	25
Total	373	100

Mr. Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Civil Aviation Authority has suspended the medical clearance of a pilot due to possible exposure to contaminated air or organophosphates in the last 30 years. [74819]

Gillian Merron: It has not been possible to establish from the Civil Aviation Authority's medical records prior to1999 that any pilot attributed his/her symptoms to exposure to contaminated cabin air. During the past six years symptoms that have been reported by licence holders and attributed by them to exposure to contaminated cabin air have resulted in the suspension of medical fitness of 10 airline transport pilot licence holders. The periods of suspension varied according to the type of symptoms reported. However, the symptoms that have been reported by these pilots have been very varied and it has not been possible to attribute the symptoms reported to definite chemical exposures.

Antisocial Behaviour (Trains)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers were ejected from trains for antisocial behaviour in the last 12 months, broken down by region. [77779]

Derek Twigg: Figures for the ejection of passengers from trains are not recorded by the British Transport Police.

Aviation Security

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to (a) complete and (b) report on his review of airport policing and the system of designation under section 25 of the Aviation Security Act 1982. [75216]

Gillian Merron: The Secretary of State anticipates receipt of a report from the independent review team on airport policing before the summer parliamentary recess.

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73937]

Gillian Merron: Under Section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, Ministers and Government Departments have a duty to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity. This has been replaced by a similar provision under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act which comes into effect on 1 October 2006. There is no statutory duty to monitor compliance with this duty.

The Department for Transport has taken a number of steps to benefit biodiversity. The Highways Agency has in place a comprehensive biodiversity action plan (HABAP) that ensures all habitats and species likely to be affected by its roads or form part of the roads estate are restored or enhanced as appropriate.

The UK through the Maritime and Coastguard Agency has been very active in the development of the NW Europe Ballast Water Management Strategy and the International Maritime Organisation's convention for the control management of ships ballast water and sediments, which aims to control non-indigenous species invading through the medium of ballast water and therefore protect maritime, coastal, and estuarine environments.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to him comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74395]

Gillian Merron: Under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006, all public bodies have a duty to have regard to the conservation of biodiversity in the exercising of their functions. There is no statutory obligation on Departments to monitor the extent to which public bodies comply with this duty. However, we understand the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is working with a wide range of partners to develop guidance for public bodies to support the implementation of this duty and will involve all relevant Departments on the development of guidance.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74359]

Gillian Merron: Information on ethnicity is collected on a voluntary basis, and not all members of staff wish to declare their ethnic origin. Our existing database does not identify any staff working in the press office who have declared that they are from an ethnic minority.

Bus Delivery Plan

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place (a) on the Department's website and (b) in the Library a copy of the Department's bus delivery plan. [73809]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not intend to publish the delivery plan for its public service agreement target to increase bus and light rail patronage. It is a working document intended for internal planning purposes that is used for the formulation of Government policy.

Information on the detail and delivery of the public transport PSA target is available in the Department's Annual Reports and Autumn Performance Reports on PSA targets. These can be found on the DfT website and in the Library of the House.

Bus Services

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many posts are available to each traffic commissioner to monitor the reliability of bus services; and what the occupancy rate for each of these posts has been in each quarter in each of the last five years. [73857]

Gillian Merron: The information requested is in the following table.

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what total public spending (a) per head of population and (b) in total was on bus services in (i) County Durham, (ii) Tyne and Wear, (iii) Northumberland and (iv) the North East of England in each of the last 10 years. [75290]

Gillian Merron: The majority of financial support for bus services is provided by local authorities in line with policy choices made at a local level, from their Revenue Support Grant supplemented by Rural Bus Subsidy Grant paid to authorities by the Department. The figures requested are shown in the following tables and include re-imbursement of concessionary fares on local buses, (consistent figures are available only from 1998-99).

The figures for Tyne and Wear contain some inconsistencies which are currently being checked by the passenger transport executive.

Local authority returns to DCLG, revenue outturn (RO2).

In addition, operators of local bus services receive Bus Service Operators Grant from this Department. This is paid direct to operators and is not attributed to a specific area.

Confederation of Passenger Transport

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many employees of the Confederation of Passenger Transport are seconded to his Department; and what the length of each secondment is. [73808]

Gillian Merron: There are no current inward secondments from the Confederation of Passenger Transport.

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of his Department's employees have been seconded to the Confederation of Passenger Transport in each of the last five years, broken down by grade; and how long each secondment lasted. [73853]

Gillian Merron: There has been one pay band 6 (grade 7) secondment to the Confederation of Passenger Transport since the Department for Transport was formed in May 2002. The secondment lasted three years and 10 months from May 2002.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will reply to the letter of 6 March (reference DT/007188/06) from the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington), on railway services, on behalf of Mr M. M. of Aylesbury. [76343]

Derek Twigg: I have now written to the hon. Member on this matter, and apologise for the delay.

Departmental Credit Card

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what facility is available for senior civil servants in his Department to use credit cards supplied by the Department. [72873]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not issue official credit cards. The Department uses charge cards which are issued to officials, including some senior civil servants, to meet specific business needs.

The Department has adopted the Government Procurement Card for purchasing low-value goods and services, and Corporate Cards for some official travel and related expenditure, issued under the umbrella of the OGCbuying.solutions pre-tendered National Framework contract.

At the end of April 2006, six Government Procurement Cards and 21 Corporate Cards were held by senior civil servants.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of the staff in his Department is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled, broken down by grade. [69088]

Gillian Merron: The gender split of staff employed by the Department for Transport at 31 December 2005 along with the percentage of those reporting to be disabled are set out in the following table.

Responsibility level	Male	Female	Percentage Department declaring being disabled
SCS Level	78.34	21.66	1.38
Grade 6/7	78.33	21.67	3.41
SEO/HEO	69.79	30.21	4.72
EO	65.30	34.70	4.69
AO/AA	39.74	60.26	6.93
Others[1]	85.02	14.98	1.15
Total	56.62	43.38	5.39

[1] Others relate to staff in HA, GCDA and VOSA whose grades do not fit into the general clerical grade structure.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what percentage of staff in his Department are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension. [73118]

Gillian Merron: Members of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) can pay additional contributions to top up their pension either through the Civil Service Additional Voluntary Contributions Scheme (CSAVCS), a money purchase arrangement, or by buying added years of service in the PCSPS. As an alternative to membership of the PCSPS recruits from 1 October 2002 have been able to join a stakeholder arrangement, the partnership pension account.

The number and percentage of staff in the department (including the Agencies) who are making additional voluntary contributions to their pension as at 26 May 2006 are shown in the following table.

	Number	Percentage
CSAVCS	300	1.56
Added Years	523	2.72
Partnership	327	1.70

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75102]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport provides the following incentives to encourage staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work:

Salary advances for the purchase of season tickets

Desktop journey planning tools

Promotion of public transport and local and national transport information via intranets, internal newsletters and other communication routes.

Deputy Prime Minister (Government Car)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the cost of the Deputy Prime Minister's Government car in each of the last 10 years. [70672]

Dr. Ladyman: Guidance on the use and provision of Government cars is set out in Travel by Ministers and the Ministerial Code. It is for individual Ministers to account for their travel arrangements.

Discounted Oil

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential impact on the transport infrastructure of the proposed supply of discounted oil to London from Venezuela. [73649]

Gillian Merron: The supply of oil or oil products at discounted rates to the UK is a commercial decision for Venezuela. The Department is not at present aware of any firm commitment by the Government of Venezuela to do so. It is therefore not possible to speculate on the potential implications for UK's transport infrastructure.

Gershon Report

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many civil servants were employed in his Department before the Gershon Report; what net reductions are proposed in the Gershon Report; how many reductions have been made; and how many civil servants are expected to be employed in his Department in the Gershon target month of April 2008. [74285]

Gillian Merron: The Department's 2006 annual report records 16,338 full-time equivalent (FTE) civil servants in the Department for Transport, including its six agencies, for 31 March 2004 and 18,005 FTE for 31 March 2008. The Gershon Report proposed a reduction of 700-500 from the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) and 200 from the Centre of the Department by 31 March 2008. On 31 March 2006, DVLA and the centre had exceeded their trajectories for 2005-06 and are making good progress towards meeting the 2007-08 target. Further detail will be available in the Department's Autumn Performance Report. The Department's headcount reflects the 700 reductions in back office areas and necessary increases in front-line service areas—transport security, accident prevention, driving test provision, and traffic officer services—in order to meet customer demand. The Department has also taken on the Strategic Rail Authority's responsibilities.

Greater Western Franchise

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the mandatory High Return Alternative Tender for the Greater Western Franchise. [72450]

Derek Twigg: The High Return Alternative Tender (HRAT) formed part of the Invitation to Tender (ITT) for the Greater Western Franchise issued by the Strategic Rail Authority in June 2005. The Department intends to make this public once the franchise agreement has been placed on the public register, and is working to do this as soon as possible.

The Department did not require bidders to submit an HRAT in its Invitation to Tender for the South Western franchise, nor does it intend to require bidders to submit HRATs with future ITTs.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside his Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in his Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71810]

Gillian Merron: The total spend for the Department for Transport and its agencies on IT sourced from outside the Department in each of the last five years is as follows:-

	£ million
2001-02	70.2
2002-03	158.8
2003-04	151.3
2004-05	167.3
2005-06	244.5

The accounting officer is the person ultimately responsible for IT projects in DfT. This will normally be agency chief executives (who are also the agency accounting officers) or the permanent secretary (the departmental accounting officer). There are two additional accounting officers in Department for Transport (one for the Driver, Vehicle and Operator Group and one for rail).

Accounting officers will in turn be advised by their head of IT or equivalent, or the project manager for the relevant project.

Bearing in mind disproportionate costs, it is not feasible to identify and list all those involved in DfT with their expertise and qualifications. However, some 400 DfT staff have been trained in programme and project management as part of the Professional Skills for Government initiative. Of these, some 47 in the senior civil service and some 150 below the SCS have so far obtained related qualifications.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was in each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71811]

Gillian Merron: The Department was formed in May 2002. A table showing the five largest information technology contracts agreed by the Department since that date has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

International Car Free Day

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to promote International Car Free Day on 21 September. [76276]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport sponsors the UK Co-ordinator of the "In Town, Without My Car!" Campaign who oversees the process by which local authorities in England and Wales register to participate in International Car Free Day, which is on 22 September.

Each local authority has been sent a newsletter and information about European Mobility Week, which will take place between 16 to 22 September, and they have been invited to register to participate in the event. A new Good Practice Guide has recently been published and is available free of charge to members of the public.

This year, "In Town, Without My Car!" Good Practice Guides and an information sheet "European Mobility Week—You Control Climate Change" were distributed to local authorities in England, Northern Ireland, the Welsh Assembly and the Scottish Executive.

An advertisement to promote "In Town, Without My Car!" will shortly appear in an edition of "Local Transport Today" and a copy of the Good Practice Guide will be enclosed in each copy.

Regional workshops are being held and information linked to the campaign disseminated via the DfT website.

Additionally, the results of the campaign are registered on the website of www.22september.org and are used to monitor progress and the effectiveness of individual initiatives.

Local Authority Roads

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the evidential basis was for the conclusion in the annual road maintenance condition survey that there had been a marked improvement in local authority roads; and what evidence was found in relation to roads in the (a) Essex county council and (b) Colchester borough council area. [76463]

Gillian Merron: The local roads defects index in the national road maintenance condition survey is based on a sample survey of assessment sites throughout England and Wales. As the survey is not designed to provide statistically valid estimates below regional level, results for Essex county council and Colchester borough council are not available.

The conclusions on the visual condition of local roads in England as a whole are set out in Chapters 2 and 3 of the national road maintenance condition survey report, with further details of the statistical process provided in Annexe 3 of the report. The report for 2005 was published on 20 April 2006 and a copy placed in the House of Commons Library.

M4 Widening

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has made any plans for M4 widening. [76962]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has no current plans for widening the M4.

Milton Keynes and South Midlands Spatial Strategy

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions have been made to improve transport links between Wellingborough and the surrounding area and London in the context of the implementation of the Milton Keynes and South Midlands spatial strategy. [76635]

Gillian Merron: Specific funding is already being made available to support transport schemes around the Wellingborough area.

This includes growth area funding of £4.4 million to improve services and infrastructure on the X4 bus route linking Wellingborough with Northampton, Kettering, Corby, Oundle, Milton Keynes and Peterborough and £2.5 million for the Rushden Town Centre link road.

Northamptonshire have commissioned a series of transportation studies to inform the development of a specific transport strategy for growth.

Nitrogen Dioxide

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what use is being made of diffusion tube data in his Department's work assessing nitrogen dioxide levels in the Heathrow area. [77650]

Gillian Merron: Diffusion tube data have not been used by the Department in assessing the air quality in the Heathrow area as part of the Project for the Sustainable Development of Heathrow. Diffusion tube data may be useful for trend analysis but are not deemed appropriate for the purpose of monitoring compliance. The EC Directive and UK air quality objectives require the use of automatic analysers.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which methods of measuring concentrations of nitrogen dioxide are considered acceptable by the European Commission in order to demonstrate compliance with the relevant air quality directives. [77651]

Gillian Merron: The reference method for assessing the concentration of nitrogen dioxide to demonstrate compliance with EU air quality legislation is given in Directive 1999/30/EC as that defined in ISO 7996: 1985 "Ambient air—determination of the mass concentration of nitrogen oxides—chemiluminescence method". A member state may however use any other method which it can demonstrate gives equivalent results. Data from the Automatic Urban and Rural Network (AURN) are used to fulfil the UK's obligations to monitor nitrogen dioxide concentrations in air and to report the results to the European Commission.
The AURN has 94 urban and 16 rural nitrogen dioxide monitoring stations, all of which use the chemiluminescence method.

Northern Way Initiative

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what role his Department plays in the delivery of the Northern Way initiative. [74040]

Gillian Merron: The Northern Way is a pan-regional growth strategy being taken forward by the three northern regional development agencies and their partners. Its work has potential to play an important role in delivering the Government's Regional Economic Performance PSA. The Department for Communities and Local Government co-ordinates Government involvement with the Northern Way.

The DCLG, Her Majesty's Treasury and the Department of Trade and Industry are currently working with the Northern Way to reinvigorate its work and focus more clearly on a smaller number of key priorities to deliver its strategy. As part of this process, the three Departments have recently been discussing with the Department for Work and Pensions and the Department for Education and Skills, DfES and the DfT their engagement with the Northern Way and how this might be strengthened. The DfT is represented on both the Northern Way's strategic policy group and the transport compact.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what promotion boards have been held in his Department in each of the last five years. [72870]

Gillian Merron: Promotion in the DfT is achieved by way of promotion board panels, often for particular posts, and through assessment centres for certain grades within and below the senior civil service.

Information on the number of boards held is not collected centrally.

Racial Abuse

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints of racial abuse have been (a) investigated and (b) upheld in his Department in each of the last 5 years. [72871]

Gillian Merron: There have been a total of four complaints of racial abuse across the Department and its Executive Agencies over the past five years. None of these complaints has been upheld.

Railways

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he plans to take to encourage the streamlining of rail fares. [76587]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 14 June 2006]: The Department do regulate some rail fares but many are a commercial matter for the operator concerned. We are discussing with train operators what might be done to simplify passengers' choice of fares. We are also discussing with National Rail Enquiries how fares information might be better presented.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1280W, on rail services, if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's specifications for the construction of the timetable from Paddington to the West Country. [74390]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The timetable specification formed part of the invitation to tender (ITT) for the Greater Western franchise, issued by the Strategic Rail Authority in June 2005. The Department intends to make this public once the franchise agreement has been placed on the public register, and is working to do this as soon as possible.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 641W, on railways, what discussions his Department has had with Network Rail on (a) the funding of and (b) the likely timetable for the installation of enhanced CCTV at Network Rail railway stations. [71741]

Derek Twigg: [holding answer 17 May 2006]: Network Rail and the train operators are taking forward the installation of CCTV at stations as part of an ongoing programme of work. Franchise agreements already include funding to make improvements to station facilities and this would include the installation of CCTV where appropriate. About a third of the 2,500 stations on the national network already have CCTV in place.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what bonuses have been paid as a result of the publication of Network Rail's preliminary results for the year to 31 March; and to whom. [76020]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail is a private sector company, so decisions on bonuses paid to its directors and other employees are a matter for it. Network Rail's preliminary results for the year to 31 March 2006 and accompanying press notice provide information on bonuses and are available on the company's website, www.networkrail.co.uk.

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department and Network Rail expect to take a decision on the upgrading of Reading Station. [76957]

Derek Twigg: Reading borough council has submitted to the Department a local transport plan major scheme bid for Reading Station. Decisions on major scheme bids will need to take account of the advice from regions on their priorities within regional funding allocations, which we are currently considering.

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions his Department has had with Network Rail concerning the upgrading of Reading Station. [76958]

Derek Twigg: The Department is a member, alongside Network Rail and the Government office for the South East, of the Reading Station Partnership Board which is led by the local authority. Departmental officials last attended the board when the finalised business case for the enhanced capacity elements of the project was presented.

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with other agencies concerning a rail link to Heathrow from Reading Station. [76964]

Derek Twigg: The Department continues to discuss the project with relevant parties, especially with regard to the funding of the capital element of the project. In the invitation to tender for the South Western franchise, bidders have been invited to include indicative proposals for the costs of operating AirTrack services, assuming the necessary infrastructure is in place.

Recruitment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies spent on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years. [68336]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport and its agencies have spent the following amount on recruitment, search and selection agencies in each of the last five years:

2001-02	141,000
2002-03	263,000
2003-04	416,000
2004-05	1,152,000
2005-06	634,000

Note:
The figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.

Redhill Aerodrome

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is towards developing Redhill Aerodrome as a commercial passenger airport; and if he will make a statement. [75911]

Gillian Merron: The Government's policy on airport capacity is set out in "The Future of Air Transport" White Paper. The White Paper did not support major commercial development at Redhill Aerodrome because of its close proximity to Gatwick Airport and the associated airspace conflicts.

Road Improvements (Suffolk)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much central Government funding has been allocated to (a) Suffolk county council and (b) each local authority for road improvements in each year since 1997. [75383]

Gillian Merron: The information is as follows:

(a) The following table shows the funding allocated to Suffolk county council in the local transport capital settlements between 1997-98 and 2005-06. The integrated transport block allocations are available for local authorities to use on road and public transport improvements, according to their local priorities.

In addition Suffolk county council is receiving £30.5 million for the South Lowestoft Relief Road that will remove the major traffic flows from the old A12 allowing significant bus, safety and environmental improvements.

(b) Information relating to central funding for each local authority for road improvements since 1997 was placed in the Libraries of the House on 18 January 2006 and is also available on the DFT website.

Royal Flight

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1285W, on the Royal Flight, on which occasions since 1 January 2003 the BAe 146 and HS125 aircraft of 32 Squadron have been used by members of the Royal Family for private purposes; and what amount was reimbursed for each journey. [74296]

Gillian Merron: Since 1 January 2003, the BAe 146 and HS125 aircraft of 32 Squadron have been used for private purposes on four occasions. The details are as follows:

27 March 2004 - HRH the Duke of Edinburgh

Northolt - Stuttgart - Northolt (HS125) Reimbursement cost £6,375.

8 June 2004 - HM the Queen

Deauville - Northolt (BAe 146) Reimbursement cost £2,150.

Northolt - Manchester - Northolt (HS125) Reimbursement cost £3,547.

11 November 2005 - HM the Queen

Blackpool - Northolt (BAe 146) Reimbursement cost £4,054.

Smoking

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of the prevalence of smoking on buses where a no-smoking policy is in place. [76150]

Gillian Merron: Where general legislation on smoking is not in force it is for local bus operators to determine and enforce their own policies on passengers smoking on their vehicles, ultimately with recourse through the courts.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is legal to smoke while driving a car. [78340]

Dr. Ladyman: There is no specific prohibition on smoking while driving a vehicle. Road traffic legislation places responsibility on all drivers to have proper control of their vehicles. Any motorist who fails to do so, for whatever reason, such as smoking, or eating and drinking, is liable to prosecution.

Taxi Drivers

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what restrictions apply to the amount of time a taxi driver is allowed to drive in one shift. [75406]

Gillian Merron: The majority of taxi drivers are self-employed and there are no restrictions on the amount of time such drivers are allowed to drive in one shift.

Thames Crossing (Greater Reading Area)

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what recent discussions his Department has had with local authorities about a third Thames crossing in the Greater Reading area; [76956]

(2) what progress his Department has made on bringing local authorities together to execute a plan for a third Thames crossing in the Greater Reading area. [76965]

Gillian Merron: Although officials in the Government office for the South East have regular meetings with the authorities in the Thames Valley area, they have not been party to any recent meetings to specifically discuss a third Thames crossing in the Greater Reading area.

Transport Acts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 and for which his Department has policy responsibility which remains in force. [69604]

Gillian Merron: The provision of a definitive list would require extensive consultation with other Government Departments and incur disproportionate costs. Transport Infrastructure Schemes (Thames Valley)

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funds he has made available for transport infrastructure schemes in the Thames Valley in the last eight years, broken down by local authority area. [76966]

Gillian Merron: Since the Local Transport Settlement in December 1998 the Thames Valley area has received £370 million for local transport improvements and maintenance schemes. This figure is broken down in the following table. In addition Buckinghamshire county council is receiving £32.5 million for the A4146 Stoke Hammond and Linslade Western Bypass.

The Highways Agency has also made available £44 million in funding for the A41 Aston Clinton Bypass as well as £72 million for the A34 Chieveley/M4 Junction 13 improvement since 1998.

In addition, the Government are providing record levels of funding for railways infrastructure through the passenger franchises and by direct grant to Network Rail. This funding is not classified by local authority area, but the Thames Valley local authority areas have benefited from work by Network Rail to address the rail infrastructure renewals backlog. Particular local authorities have benefited from rail enhancement projects, including Buckinghamshire from improvements to the Chiltern Line and Berkshire authorities from replacement of "slam door" rolling stock on the Reading/Windsor—Waterloo route.

PRIME MINISTER

Civil Service Bill

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to be in a position to bring forward a Civil Service Bill; and if he will make a statement. [75886]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) to my hon. Friend the Member for Cannock Chase (Dr. Wright) on 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 159.

Correspondence

Bob Russell: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to reply to the letters from the hon. Member for Colchester of 1 March 2006 and 10 April 2006 on the centenary of the scout movement. [76467]

The Prime Minister: My Office has replied to the hon. Member.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 March 2006, Official Report, column 942, on avian influenza, what steps the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has taken to hold discussions with the Association of Local Government Ecologists. [68066]

Mr. Bradshaw: At the request of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, DEFRA officials held discussions with Mr. Steve Moon, Chair of the Association of Local Government Ecologists. An offer was extended to Mr. Moon, or another representative of the association, to participate in the DEFRA avian influenza stakeholder group. This offer was declined.

Coastal Access

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what legislation would be required to implement the Countryside Agency's coastal access proposals; [76652]

(2) what the estimated cost is of implementing the coastal access proposals of the Countryside Agency; [76658]

(3) what areas of the country would be exempt from the Countryside Agency's coastal access proposals; [76660]

(4) how many people were involved in the consultation by the Countryside Agency on coastal access; what the cost of the consultation is; which areas are involved in the consultation; what questions are being asked; and when he expects (a) the consultation to be completed and (b) the findings to be passed to him; [76661]

(5) what assistance his Department will provide (a) to landowners and (b) to prevent damage to the coastline if the Countryside Agency's coastal access proposals are implemented. [76662]

Barry Gardiner: In line with DEFRA's five-year strategy we are looking at ways to improve access to the English coast. We have asked the Countryside Agency, working together with its Natural England partners, English Nature and the Rural Development Service, to undertake additional research and analysis to identify a range of options.

As part of this work, the Natural England partnership has taken forward an information-gathering exercise to collect data on a national basis to develop a comprehensive picture of the coast and existing access provision. Advice will be submitted to DEFRA at the end of July, and will serve to inform a full public consultation paper in October. The consultation will discuss the best ways to improve access to the English coast, including costs and any legislative changes needed to support their implementation. It will be supported by a partial Regulatory Impact Assessment. The results of the consultation exercise will be published.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions the Countryside Agency has had with (a) the relevant authorities in (i) Wales and (ii) Scotland, (b) local authorities, (c) non-governmental organisations and (d) non-statutory bodies on its coastal access proposals. [76654]

Barry Gardiner: The Countryside Agency, along with its Natural England partners English Nature and the Rural Development Service, is represented on DEFRA's Coastal Land Advisory Group. Meetings of the Group have provided a forum for coastal access issues to be discussed with the National Trust, Local Government Association, Ministry of Defence, Environment Agency, English Heritage, Welsh Assembly Government and the Forestry Commission.

The National Countryside Access Forum, chaired by the Countryside Agency, considered coastal access issues at its meeting on 17 May 2006. The Forum's membership includes the British Horse Society, British Mountaineering Council, Central Council for Physical Recreation, Country Land and Business Association, Cyclists Touring Club, Local Government Association, Moorland Association, National Farmers' Union, National Trust, Ramblers Association and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds. Representatives from local access forums, the Countryside Council for Wales and Scottish Natural Heritage also attended the meeting on 17 May 2006.

In addition, the Natural England partnership held a series of stakeholder events in each of four study areas in which they have been doing detailed work on options to improve access to the English coast. At these events they sought the views and expertise of a wide range of local organisations, including the local authorities for each of the areas concerned.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions the Countryside Agency has had with those administering Crown interests on its coastal access proposals; and when they took place. [76655]

Barry Gardiner: The Countryside Agency held initial discussions with the Crown Estate in 2005. My officials also met representatives from the Crown Estate on 6 December 2005.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what (a) research has been commissioned and (b) surveys have been carried out by the Countryside Agency on coastal access in the last five years. [76657]

Barry Gardiner: The Countryside Agency, along with its Natural England partners English Nature and the Rural Development Service, has carried out a detailed data-gathering exercise to support a comprehensive picture of the English coast and existing access provision. This work includes in-depth investigation, testing and costing of a number of possible ways to improve access, and ways to maximise landscape, historic environment and wildlife benefits.

In 2005 the Countryside Agency carried out short studies of six different parts of the English coast to gain an understanding of different coastal environments. In January 2006 the Natural England Partnership selected four study areas in which they are exploring coastal access issues in greater depth. These areas, selected to reflect the diversity of the English coast, are the Suffolk Coast, Southern Cumbrian Coast and Morecambe Bay, County Durham and Hartlepool Coast, North Devon, Exmoor and the West Somerset Coast.

The Countryside Agency has also commissioned a study to examine how coastal access works in other European countries and what might be learnt from their experience. Further survey work is being done to assess current public knowledge about the demand for and use of coastal access, along with research into the costs of possible options to improve coastal access.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultations on coastal access the Department has conducted in the last five years. [76659]

Barry Gardiner: The Department has not carried out any public consultations on coastal access in the last five years.

Housing

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to discuss the recommendations of the Affordable Rural Housing Commission Report with his colleagues in (a) the Department for Communities and Local Government and (b) other Government Departments; and whether he has set a timetable for the development of a Government (i) response to the report and (ii) plan to implement the agreed recommendations. [74237]

Barry Gardiner: The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, the Minister for Housing and Planning, my hon. Friend the Member for Pontefract and Castleford (Yvette Cooper) and I all took part in discussions of the Affordable Rural Housing Commission report on the day of its launch. Affordable rural housing will continue to be one of the subjects covered in the regular dialogue between the two Departments and across Government.

The Government are currently considering the report and will use a range of channels and mechanisms to respond in a constructive way to the agenda set by the Commission, including in the forthcoming Spending Review.

Payment Schemes

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications for the Entry Level Stewardship scheme have been made; and how much had been paid to applicants at the latest date for which figures are available. [76361]

Barry Gardiner: By 7 June 2006, 22,500 applications for Entry Level Stewardship had been received, and a total of £17.4 million paid to agreement holders.

Rural Development Service

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of compiling, printing and posting the leaflet Celebrating the Rural Development Service; and whether there are plans to issue further Rural Development Service leaflets prior to the service's replacement in October. [76650]

Barry Gardiner: The total cost was £8,300.

There are no plans to issue further leaflets.

Single Farm Payments

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures are in place to ensure the next round of single farm payments is made on time. [76188]

Barry Gardiner: We are determined that the right lessons are learned from our experience this year with the Single Payment Scheme, first to prepare for the undoubted challenges that will exist in the delivery of the 2006 scheme, and secondly to move to a more stable position for the 2007 scheme year. Work has already started to this end with the measures set out on 29 March 2006, Official Report, column 305WH, by my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Bradshaw) and the subsequent appointment of Mr. Tony Cooper as interim chief executive of the Rural Payments Agency. But this is a long-term project with no quick or easy solutions.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps he has taken to ensure all maps used for the calculation of single farm payments are accurate. [76189]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) is responsible for the maintenance of the Rural Land Register (RLR), and information from the RLR is used to support claims to the Single Payment Scheme. The process of digitising land and amending existing land registrations has been amended recently, with activity brought back on to RPA's main computer system. This followed a period when an outsourced provider was used to digitise land during a period of exceptionally high demand.

The digitisation process itself includes a number of quality checks to ensure that the correct land parcel and area are digitised. Where errors are found they are corrected before maps are issued to customers. Further amendments are made where customers identify issues with the maps they receive. RPA is aware of a number of cases where there have been issues with maps sent to customers. The re-establishment of an in-house process will aid the cross-check of new and amended land areas to customer details.

Single Payment Scheme

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average cost is of processing a Single Payment Scheme claim; and if he will make a statement. [73468]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 25 May 2006]: The gross running costs of the Rural Payment Agency (RPA) for 2005-06 were £236.5 million, of which £55.1 million related to one-off costs associated with the RPA change programme and common agricultural policy reform implementation. The balance of £181.4 million represented the costs of RPA's normal operations, of which the administration of the Single Payment Scheme (SPS) forms part.

For the 2005 SPS scheme year, there were 120,000 claims with an expected value of £1.5 million (net of modulation).

Subsidies (Rossendale)

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action his Department is taking to recoup overpayments of subsidies paid to farmers in Rossendale. [68598]

Barry Gardiner: We have identified one farmer in the Rossendale area who has an existing debt with the Rural Payments Agency (RPA). The matter has been referred to the RPA Legal Division for a decision on whether legal proceedings should be issued to recover the debt. RPA is not aware of any other existing or potential overpayments in the Rossendale area.

Timber

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what monitoring systems are in place to ensure that all Government purchased timber and timber products are procured in accordance with the Government's timber procurement policy; and what evidence is required to prove that timber purchased is derived from legally harvested trees. [76284]

Barry Gardiner: The model conditions of contract that Departments are advised to use in respect of their timber purchases require contractors to obtain documentary evidence that the timber and wood derived products supplied are legal timber. The conditions further require the contractor to identify a chain of custody from the forest source through to delivery of the final product and to obtain independent verification if requested by the contracting authority.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Leader of the House if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his office on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77322]

Mr. Straw: My Office already keeps records on alcohol and hospitality costs. It spent approximately £1,150.00 on alcohol in the financial year 2005-06.

WALES

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the chief accounting officer of his Department. [76837]

Mr. Hain: As set out in the annual report (Col. 6385, published 25 May 2006), the Wales Office pays grant to the National Assembly for Wales, accounting directly within the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) for its own expenditure of some £5 million a year. Its director is appointed as an additional accounting officer to the DCA permanent secretary. The director combines these duties with responsibility for the overall organisation, management, staffing and procedures of the Wales Office.

The director is Alan Cogbill, a graduate entrant to the civil service. He has no professional accountancy qualification. He has experience as finance director of the DCA, and has undertaken civil service training in Government finance and accounting. He is assisted by professionally qualified accountants in DCA as need be.

TREASURY

World Poverty

2. Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contribution his Department is making to meeting the 2015 targets for reducing world poverty. [77540]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury works closely with DFID to deliver a substantial and high quality UK aid programme, and also with the international community to make progress towards the 2015 Millennium Development Goals. DFID's budget is increasing from £3.8 billion in 2004-05 to £5.3 billion in 2007-08—making a real terms increase of 140 per cent. since 1997. I have announced a timetable to reach the UN target of 0.7 per cent. ODA/GNI in 2013.

The MDGs and global poverty were at the heart of the UK Presidencies of the EU and the G7/8 in 2005. The international community committed to raise an additional $50 billion of aid by 2010, to cancel 100 per cent. of the multilateral debts of the world's poorest countries, and to launch the International Finance Facility for Immunisation. G8 leaders also agreed to achieve universal access to AIDS treatment for all those who need it by 2010, and work on Advance Market Commitments for vaccines against malaria, HIV/AIDS and other priority diseases.

These are the sorts of measures needed to get progress towards the MDGs back on track. The key challenge now is for donors to fully implement their commitments and for developing countries to develop 10-year plans to meet the MDGs.

Competitiveness

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the principal factors affecting the competitiveness of UK businesses. [77555]

Mr. Binley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has had made of the principal factors affecting the competitiveness of UK businesses and industry. [77561]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Members to what I said on the Floor of the House earlier today in reply to the hon. Member for Bromsgrove (Miss Kirkbride).

Biodiesel

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the merits of changes to taxation on biodiesel. [77617]

John Healey: Biodiesel attracts a favourable duty differential of 20 pence per litre less than that for the main road fuels. In line with the alternative fuels framework, we have guaranteed that this differential will continue until 2008-09. Changes to duty rates, including that for biodiesel, are made by the Chancellor in the light of a range of social, environmental and economic factors.

Bonuses

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2006, Official Report, column 1842W, on bonuses, why (a) the total amount awarded in bonuses to staff rose and (b) the total number of awards dropped between 2003-04 and 2005-06. [77200]

John Healey: The payment of end-year bonuses is linked to an individual's overall performance mark in their annual performance appraisal for the previous year. Prior to 2004-05 HMT operated a system for staff below Senior Civil Servant (SCS) with the following categories:

Top 5 per cent.
Next 30-35 per cent.
Next 50-55 per cent.
Next 5-10 per cent.

with those in the top two categories being awarded a bonus.

The categories in appraisal year 2004-05 were changed to:

Top 20 per cent.
Next 60 per cent.
Bottom 20 per cent.

with only those in the top category being awarded a bonus, which were paid in 2005-06. As a result the average size of end-year bonuses increased significantly.

Child Pregnancies

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many girls aged 16 years and under (a) became pregnant, (b) had an abortion, (c) gave birth and gave the child up for adoption and (d) gave birth and kept the child in each year since 1985, broken down by (i) age and (ii) region. [75626]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 15 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many girls aged 16 and under (a) became pregnant, (b) had an abortion, (c) gave birth and gave the child up for adoption and (d) gave birth and kept the child in each year since 1985, broken down by (i) age and (ii) region. I am replying in her absence. (75626)

Available figures are estimates of the number of pregnancies that resulted in a live birth, stillbirth or termination.

Number of conceptions to girls aged under 14, 14, 15 and 16 from 1987 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) are shown in Table 1. Figures for 1985 and 1986 are not provided because ONS amended the method for calculating woman's age at conception and revised data are not available prior to 1987.

Conception figures are routinely published each year by region for all girls aged under 16. Conception to girls aged 16 years by region can only be made available at a disproportionate cost.

Number of conceptions to girls aged under 16 by region from 1992 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) are shown in Table 2. There have been Government Office Regional boundary changes prior to 1992 and figures prior to then are not compatible with later years.

Number of abortions to girls aged 14 and under, 15 and 16 from 1987 to 2004 (the latest year for which figures are available) are shown in Table 3. Figures for girls for aged 14 and under are grouped to protect small numbers which may be revealed by previously published data.

Numbers of abortions to girls aged 16 and under, by regional offices in England from 1987 to 2004 are shown in Table 4.

Number of live births to girls aged under 12, 12 ,13, 14, 15 and 16 from 1985 to 2005 (the latest year for which figures are available) are shown in Table 5.

Figures on live births by region have been compiled on the same basis as conceptions and number of live births to girls aged under 16 by Government Office Region from 1992 to 2005 are shown in Table 6.

Information is not available on how many girls aged 16 years and under gave birth and gave the child up for adoption and gave birth and kept the child.

Robert Key: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many girls under the age of 16 years in Salisbury constituency gave birth in each year since 1995. [76984]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 15 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your question about how many girls under 16 years in Salisbury constituency gave birth in each year since 1995. I am replying in her absence. (76984).

Where constituencies are not co-terminous with local authority boundaries, ONS do not generally release figures based on recording of mother's age at birth registration. This is to protect against disclosure of information provided in confidence. Figures are provided for the relevant local authority instead. There were 14 girls resident in Salisbury county district who gave birth under the age of 16 during the period 1995 to 2005, too few to provide figures by year without breaching confidentiality.

Construction Industry (Registration Cards)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many construction industry services registration cards have been issued in each (a) year and (b) quarter since 1 April 2001; and if he will make a statement; [77067]

(2) how many construction industry services registration (CIS4) cards (a) have been issued and (b) are in use; and if he will make a statement. [77041]

John Healey: There have been 2.4 million construction industry registration cards (CIS4) issued since the scheme began in 1999. Of these 1.9 million have been used.

Unused cards are attributable to: holders of recently issued cards having not yet been paid within CIS; holders that normally work within the domestic sector having applied for a card in case they become involved in CIS work; and where one or two partners in a company use their cards on behalf of the company (with those of the other partners being unused).

A quarterly breakdown of the number of CIS4 cards issued since 1 April 2001 is given in the following table. These figures include replacements for cards that have been lost, stolen or have expired (in the case of temporary cards).

Number of CIS 4 cards issued

Quarter	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
April to June	56,000	61,000	63,000	74,000	77,000
July to September	61,000	83,000	73,000	83,000	82,000
October to December	48,000	55,000	63,000	65,000	63,000
January to March	58,000	70,000	78,000	75,000	81,000
Total	223,000	269,000	277,000	297,000	303,000

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what checks are made of (a) immigration status and (b) nationality before issuing construction industry services registration cards; and if he will make a statement; [77068]

(2) what changes he plans to make to the construction industry services registration card system in 2007; what (a) identity checks and (b) immigration status checks will be put in place; and if he will make a statement. [77042]

John Healey: Neither the legislation for the current construction industry scheme (CIS) nor the legislation for the new scheme empowers HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) to question the immigration status or nationality of applicants for CIS registration cards. There is also no legal exchange of information gateway to allow such information that might be obtained by HMRC to be passed to the Home Office.

Under both the current and new schemes, HM Revenue and Customs must be satisfied about the applicants' identity and addresses. They may be required to produce appropriate documentation to evidence their identity, which might include a passport or driving licence. The new CIS scheme will also allow HMRC to require attendance in person to provide such information as satisfies HMRC on an applicant's identity and address.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people over the age of 55 have been recruited into (a) the Treasury and (b) his private office in each of the last three years. [77203]

John Healey: No staff over the age of 55 have been recruited to the Chancellor's private office in the last three years. The number recruited to the Treasury can be found in the following table:

	Department
2003-04	4
2004-05	5
2005-06	4

Exotic Animals (Smuggling)

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been caught attempting illegally to bring exotic (a) animals and (b) birds into Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [77426]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) have interpreted exotic birds and animals to be live birds or animals of endangered species.

Details of seizures made by HMRC from January 1999 to December 2004 as a result of breaches in Council Regulation (EC) No 338/97 of 9 December 1996 on the protection of species of wild fauna and flora by regulating trade herein are available on the UK CITES website at http://www.ukcites.gov.uk/news/tradestatistics.htm.

There have been no seizures of live animals or birds of endangered species in Northern Ireland from outside the EU in the period in question. Travellers arriving at Northern Ireland airports from outside the EU almost exclusively arrive via another airport either in Great Britain or Eire.

Fuel Smuggling (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were caught smuggling fuel in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [77131]

John Healey: In the last five years the following number of vehicles have been seized in Northern Ireland as a consequence of hydrocarbon oils offences, including smuggling:

	Number of vehicles seized
2000	312
2001	684
2002	1,576
2003	901
2004	812

Gaming Machines

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the effects of the freeze on gaming machine stake and prize levels on tax revenues; [77156]

(2) what assessment he has made of the likely effects on tax revenues of an increase of category C and section 34 gaming machine stake and prize levels to 50 pence and £35, respectively. [77157]

John Healey: No assessment has been made of the effects of the freeze on gaming machine stake and prize levels on tax revenues. Similarly no assessment has been made of the likely effect for tax revenues of an increase of category C stake and prize levels to 50p and £35, respectively. Decisions on the stake and prize limits which venues can offer are made by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport for reasons unconnected to tax.

Male Longevity

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what average male longevity was at age 65 in each parliamentary constituency at the last date for which figures are available. [77139]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 15 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question concerning what the average male longevity at 65 was in each parliamentary constituency at the last date for which figures are available. I am replying in her absence. (77139)

Figures on life expectancy at different ages are derived from the life tables, calculated using data in both mortality and populations. The figures requested cannot be provided for parliamentary constituencies as population estimates are not available. Results for local authorities in England and Wales can be provided however. A table containing these figures for male life expectancy at age 65 for 2002-04 (the most recent period available) has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on how many occasions he has met the Paymaster General to discuss tax credits since 1 June 2005; and if he will make a statement; [76943]

(2) how many meetings (a) he and (b) the Paymaster General have had on the subject of tax credit fraud since 1 January 2006; and if he will make a statement. [76947]

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when he last met the Paymaster General to discuss tax credits; [77817]

(2) when he last (a) received and (b) sent written correspondence to the Paymaster General regarding tax credits. [77818]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers are in constant contact with each other in person, over the telephone and in writing about a wide range of issues, including tax credits.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Endangered Species

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether revised sentencing guidelines have been issued to the judiciary regarding the Control of Trade in Endangered Species Regulations. [76714]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There have been no sentencing guidelines issued in relation to these regulations.

HM Prison Belmarsh

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of inmates at HM Prison Belmarsh who report feeling unsafe; what action he is taking to reduce the incidence of such reports; and if he will make a statement. [73767]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Regular surveys into issues of prisoner personal safety are undertaken for Standards Audit and violence reduction purposes. The results assist in addressing and improving the quality of life experienced by prisoners. On arrival at Belmarsh, prisoners are advised how to report instances of bullying or feelings of self-harm. In addition information is displayed throughout the prison offering support and setting out what is readily available should support be required.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what stage the Government have reached in preparing for (a) signing and (b) ratifying the Council of Europe Convention on trafficking. [76675]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office is currently assessing whether to sign the Council of Europe Convention. Whilst the UK supports the multiple aims of the Convention there are certain provisions which present concerns and which remain under consideration. The Home Office recently sought views on aspects of the Convention in the consultation paper 'Tackling Human Trafficking-Consultation on Proposals for a UK Action Plan'. In reaching a decision on signature we will take into account the views expressed by respondents. A summary of responses to the consultation will be published shortly.

Illegal Drugs

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been for using illegal drugs on buses in each region in each year since 2001. [76151]

Mr. Coaker: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Lambert Report

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he (a) commissioned and (b) received the report by David Lambert into operational issues arising from the death of Joseph Scholes; what consultation was conducted with the family of the deceased; what the cost was of the report; what its principal conclusions were; what measures have been taken in response to its recommendations; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [75306]

Mr. Sutcliffe: David Lambert was asked to conduct a review of operational issues arising out of the death of Joseph Scholes. The review was formally commissioned on 21 September 2004. Mr. Lambert began work the following month. He sent his completed report to the Home Office on 12 October 2005. Home Office officials, in consultation with the Youth Justice Board and the Prison Service, have been considering the recommendations in the report, and the action that needs to be taken in response to them. The Government will set out their response, and give details of the action we are taking, in due course. We will also address the issue of disclosure.

I understand David Lambert offered in August 2005 to discuss with Mrs. Scholes the findings of the review, and repeated the offer the following month, but that Mrs. Scholes did not wish to take up the offer.

The cost of the report was £10,589.50.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 which remain in force for which his Department has policy responsibility. [69148]

Mr. Byrne: I have placed in the Libraries of the House a list of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 for which the Home Office had policy responsibility at the time of Royal Assent. Some of these Acts have been amended or repealed in whole or part, so not all of their provisions remain in force. Nor are all of these Acts still within the policy responsibility of the Home Office. It is not however possible to provide a definitive list of the provisions which remain in force and which are within the policy responsibility of the Home Office without incurring disproportionate cost.

Leyhill Open Prison (Absconded Prisoners)

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate has been made by the Avon and Somerset constabulary of the volume of crime committed in the Avon and Somerset area since 1999 by prisoners who have absconded from Leyhill Open Prison; and if he will make a statement. [73423]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I understand from Avon and Somerset Constabulary that no estimates are available.

Mentally Ill Prisoners

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reoffending rate was for people who were identified as mentally ill while in prison in 2005-06. [76778]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The information requested is not available.

Miscarriages of Justice

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis the Independent Assessor to the Home Secretary on Miscarriages of Justice makes recommendations for interim payments to claimants; and whether interim payments have been made on compassionate grounds. [76920]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Exceptionally, an interim payment of compensation in respect of a miscarriage of justice may be made by the Home Secretary, on the advice of the independent Assessor, before the final amount is determined. The amount of any interim payment will be paid on account and will be deducted from the final award. The Assessor's consideration of whether, and how much, interim payment might be made in a particular case is based on the information available to him about the miscarriage of justice in respect of which compensation is being paid and the consequences which flowed from it, not simply on what the applicant's financial needs are at the time. In very exceptional circumstances interim payments may be made on compassionate grounds depending on the circumstances and provided the payment is within the scope of compensation under the scheme.

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what average time was taken for the office of the independent Assessor to the Home Secretary on miscarriages of justice to reply to correspondence in the last period for which figures are available; [76922]

(2) what the standard procedure of the independent Assessor to the Home Secretary on miscarriages of justice is in responding to correspondence from claimants' legal representatives; [76923]

John Reid: The independent Assessor for compensation for miscarriages of justice does not generally correspond directly with applicants or their legal representatives. All correspondence is handled by the Miscarriages of Justice Team in the Office for Criminal Justice Reform. They attempt to resolve any apparent discrepancies in the submissions from applicants or their representatives, to ensure that the Assessor has all the information he needs to make an assessment. Claims for compensation can amount to hundreds of thousands of pounds and some run into millions. Claims are complex and time consuming and often require investigation by forensic accountants, and, on occasion, high-level legal advice. In many cases an interim award is paid before a final assessment of compensation is made. All correspondence requiring a response should receive an interim or substantive response within the Home Office target of 20 working days. In the circumstances of these applications an interim reply is often unavoidable. Detailed statistics on performance against target for correspondence for this work are not immediately available and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible with performance figures for the last quarter.

Misuse of Drugs

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of (a) the number of people convicted of drugs offences as a result of the Drugs Act 2005 and (b) how many of them have received a prison sentence. [76976]

Mr. Coaker: It is too early to see any impact of the provisions of the Drugs Act 2005 in the annually published conviction data.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the 10 most common motoring offences were for which men were (a) prosecuted, (b) convicted, (c) fined and (d) sent to prison in England and Wales in the last year for which figures are available, broken down by age group. [75536]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Available information taken from the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the 10 most common motoring offences for which men were (a) prosecuted, (b) convicted, (c) fined and (d) sent to prison in 2004 (latest available) is given in the following tables.

A person appearing in court can be dealt with for more than one offence at that appearance. The tables show the number of offences dealt with and not the number of persons appearing in court.

Police

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what complaints to the Independent Police Complaints Commission have been upheld in each year since its inception; what (a) response was made and (b) action was taken by the relevant police force to implement the recommendations; and if he will make a statement. [77250]

Mr. McNulty: The Independent Police Complaints Commission is responsible for the management of the police complaints system. I will ensure that the chairman receives a copy of the question and replies to you directly. Copies of the letter containing the IPCC's response will be placed in the House Libraries.

Prisoners' Compensation

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1049W to the hon. Member for Shipley (Philip Davies), on prisoners' compensation, if he will break down the awards by the prison where the prisoner was being held. [73338]

Mr. Sutcliffe: A copy of the table will be placed in the Library.

Prisons

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners under the age of 18 years are in HMP Gloucester; and what plans he has to transfer those individuals to specialist youth institutions. [74500]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There were no prisoners under the age of 18 held in HMP Gloucester on 8 June 2006.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) maximum, (b) mean and (c) median amount of money is held in prisoners' private cash accounts at each prison establishment; and if he will make a statement. [78194]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Prostitution

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Prostitution Strategy announced in January 2006 has been implemented; and if he will make a statement. [76708]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Implementation of the prostitution strategy is currently under way. This involves working with a range of stakeholders from across Whitehall as well as with non-government organisations and voluntary sector groups.

Present activity includes:

Working up the proposed new rehabilitative penalty for the offence of loitering and soliciting.

Working with police training provider, Centrex, to design a training package for police, with a multi-agency focus, for tackling prostitution in local areas.

Expansion of the scheme to report "dodgy punters" through a national Crimestoppers campaign (Ugly Mugs scheme).

Working with the Suzy Lamplugh Trust to develop Personal, Social, Health Education guidance for schools—with a focus on prevention and safety.

Rainsbrook Secure Training Centre

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions restraint was used on trainees at Rainsbrook Secure Training Centre between July and October 2005. [76204]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In the four months July-October 2005, trainees at Rainsbrook were restrained on 194 occasions. This figure includes low-level interventions, such as a trainee being led away from a potential incident.

Safety Cameras

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the police in Wiltshire use the LTI 20.20 mobile speed cameras. [76705]

Mr. McNulty: There are a number of speed meters type approved for police use, including the LTI 20.20. It is for individual police forces to decide which type approved to purchase and use. I understand that the Wiltshire constabulary do use the LTI 20.20.

Security Industry

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many meetings senior officials of the Security Industry Authority have held with officials of the National Security Inspectorate to discuss the implementation of the new approved contractor scheme. [75663]

Mr. Coaker: Insight Certification (the parent organisation of the National Security Inspectorate) was one of eight assessing bodies appointed in August 2005 to carry out assessments for the Approved Contractor Scheme. Accordingly there has been regular and frequent contact between the SIA personnel responsible for the ACS and NSI personnel at all levels.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what checks are in place to ensure that applicants for a security licence from the security industry authority originating from (a) other EU countries, (b) sub-Saharan Africa and (c) South East Asia do not have a criminal record in their country of origin. [75664]

Mr. Coaker: The SIA require that all applicants provide a complete five year address history preceding their application. If at any time during the past five years any applicant was abroad for six continuous months or more, they are required to provide an overseas criminality certificate (OCC) from the official competent issuing authority of the country concerned. This policy is uniform in its application and applies to all applicants irrespective of the country concerned.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what target has been set for processing applications for licences issued by the Security Industry Authority; and what the (a) mean and (b) modal period has been for processing applications since its inception. [71143]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 18 May 2006]: The SIA do not calculate the mean or modal period processing times for applications. Some, such as those involving overseas criminal records checks, unavoidably take a considerable time. The SIA have a published target of processing 80 per cent. of all applications within six weeks, measured from the date that a properly completed application enters the processing system to the date that a licence is issued. From April 2004 until August 2005 the SIA processed 62 per cent. within six weeks and 88 per cent. within nine weeks. Since September 2005, there has been a backlog of applications that have been waiting to enter the system. These have added an additional time of between two and four weeks to the process, so it is now taking up to 10 weeks to process most applications.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the ability of the Security Industry Authority to respond to telephone enquiries; and if he will make a statement. [55234]

Mr. Coaker: On average, the SIA call centre handles approximately 1,000 calls a day. During March 2006, average call volumes were four times higher than normal, reaching a peak of 8,000 calls on 20 March 2006. This high level of demand resulted from a late influx of cases.

To address this high demand, the SIA have increased the number of phone lines, hired more operators, and made their website more user-friendly. For example, the SIA are going to put onto their website an online tracker facility enabling applicants to check the progress of their application and to inform them of the date when they are likely to receive their licence.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many security personnel at (a) ports, (b) harbours and (c) airports are required to have Security Industry Authority licences by 20 March 2006; and how many have yet to receive such licences. [58986]

Mr. Coaker: There are no figures available of the number of personnel working at UK sea ports and harbours who are required to hold a SIA licence, although the Department for Transport (DfT) estimates the number to be relatively small.

To avoid double licensing, security personnel at UK airports have been exempted from SIA licensing where they are already subject to the DfT's directed personnel security and training regimes. This applies to all contracted security staff working airside at passenger terminals.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Gender Pay Gap

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what assessment she has made of the effects of occupational segregation in the gender pay gap. [75576]

Meg Munn: Occupational segregation has been identified as a significant contributor to the gender pay gap as women are highly concentrated in lower paid jobs or part-time occupations, which tend to be lower paid.

There is a body of evidence, most recently in "Shaping a Fairer Future", the report of the Women and Work Commission, which indicates that occupational segregation narrows the pool of talent that employers can choose from, which means that not everyone's skills are being utilised to the full. Government are committed to taking action on the recommendations and will issue an action plan later in the year.

Rape Sentences

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what discussions she has had with the Solicitor-General about the Sentencing Guidelines Council's recent recommendation that men convicted of rape should receive a lighter sentence if they had been close to their victim before the offence. [75578]

Meg Munn: The draft sentencing guidelines on sexual offending were published on 7 June and I will be discussing them with colleagues at the forthcoming inter-ministerial group on sexual offending. I sit on this group in my capacity as Deputy Minister for Women and Equality.

Women (Parliament)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what assessment she has made of progress in more women being (a) selected and (b) elected to Parliament. [75355]

Meg Munn: In 2002 we introduced the Sex Discrimination (Election Candidates) Act allowing positive measures towards women's increased participation. This legislation is having an impact and the numbers are rising particularly in the parties that made use of these measures.

The Labour Party was able to increase the percentage of women MPs in the last general election by using all-women shortlists to select candidates in its retirement seats.

By contrast the Liberal Democrat Party and the Conservative Party respectively only selected 32 per cent. and 12 per cent. of women candidates for its 50 most winnable seats.

Overall, 20 per cent. of MPs are now women compared with 9 per cent. before 1997. Nearly 27.4 per cent. of Labour MPs are now women, while 8.6 per cent. of Conservative MPs and 14.3 per cent. of Liberal Democrat MPs are women.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Bus Vouchers (Pensioners)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will provide (a) petrol and (b) taxi vouchers to pensioners who live in rural areas which do not have bus services; and if she will make a statement. [74171]

Gillian Merron: I have been asked to reply.

There are no plans to provide a statutory entitlement to petrol or taxi vouchers for older people. However, local authorities have the discretion to offer concessionary travel schemes which give discounted travel on public transport other than buses, such as taxi vouchers.

Cultural Strategy (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funding her Department is providing towards Coventry council's cultural strategy. [76451]

Mr. Woolas [holding answer 13 June 2006]: Through the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund my Department is supporting projects that contribute towards cultural activities in Coventry. They include:

'Coventry Fusion': £486,000—Preventative programmes to reduce crime, the fear of crime and antisocial behaviour. The project will deliver activity and diversionary programmes to children and young people.

'Lady Godiva Half Marathon': £50,000—To continue to establish the half marathon event as a flagship initiative with the aim of promoting exercise in general, particularly in priority neighbourhoods. It will also look to broaden the diversity of participants.

'One Body, One Life': £300,000—The project delivers a health programme for children, young people and families. The programme will be targeted at 1,000 individuals.

'Coventry—let's walk': £200,000—The project aims to develop a co-ordinated programme of activities around walks.

Coventry New Deal for Communities Partnership, is part of the Coventry Partnership and is a priority neighbourhood within the Coventry Partnership.

The NDC has also funded a number of projects that contribute towards the delivery of the cultural strategy albeit in the NDC area only. These include the provision of additional sport and recreation areas, leisure activities programmes, community music facilities, dance and theatre productions, totalling some £2.6 million in grant aid.

In addition, general Government support for local services, including cultural activity, is provided through the unhypothecated formula grant. Coventry receives increases in formula grant of 2.4 per cent. in 2006-07 and 4.0 per cent. in 2007-08.

Fires (Schools)

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many daytime fires in schools have been reported since 2001. [77453]

Angela E. Smith: The number of daytime fires reported to, and attended by fire and rescue services in England since 2001 is set out as follows:

Number of daytime school fires attended

	Number
2000-01	526
2001-02	748
2002-03	682
2003-04	657

[1] Provisional figures.

Notes:

1. Day time assumed to be 8.30 am—4.00 pm.
2. Figures include weekends and school holidays.
3. Fires were not recorded during the strike periods in November 2002 and January/February 2003.

Home Ownership

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many people in each electoral ward in the Stroud constituency own their own home. [77789]

John Healey: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 15 June 2006:

The National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many people in each electoral ward in the Stroud constituency own their own home. I am replying in her absence. (77789)

In the 2001 census information on owner occupancy was collected at the household as opposed to the person level. Therefore, the attached table below shows the number of "owner occupied" households in each ward within Stroud constituency on Census day (29 April 2001), broken down by type of ownership. The figures have been extracted from Table KS18 on the Key Statistics for Output Areas DVD, which is available on request from Census Customer Services (census.customerservices@ons.gov.uk)

IT

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside her Department and its predecessor in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in her Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71786]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) was created in May 2006 and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in May 2002. Expenditure on IT sourced externally over this period is as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure (£)
2002-03	26,748,425
2003-04	20,913,037
2004-05	16,815,471
2005-06	18,108,962

Note:
These figures include VAT where appropriate.

Regarding responsibility for IT projects, ODPM introduced dual key sign off in 2005-06, under which IT expenditure is approved jointly by the CIO and the relevant business manager. Prior to this responsibility rested with project Executives (formerly Senior Responsible Owner under Prince2 methodology).

There is no central record of project Executives, their expertise and qualifications; providing this information could not be achieved without incurring disproportionate cost.

Libraries

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many libraries have been closed in the last two years, broken down by region; and what estimate she has made of the number of libraries that will be closed in 2006. [76889]

Mr. Lammy: I have been asked to reply.

The table shows the change in the number of static public libraries, grouped into bands by opening hours, over the last three years and, for context, the comparable figures for 1997-98. The same information, by region, can be found in the Public Library Statistics published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy.

There have been a number of library closure proposals in recent months. I have written to the leaders of all the 149 library authorities in England asking them to consider carefully what would be lost through closures. Since then a number of the original proposals have either been dropped or scaled down.

Although some proposals remain it is too early to speculate on their likely outcome. However, my officials continue to monitor the situation closely.

Local Government Finance

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what funds were distributed to each London borough to increase efficiency in local government in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [75698]

Angela E. Smith: Funding to support efficiency in local authorities is distributed to nine Regional Centres of Excellence (RCEs). Each RCE has its own local governance arrangements for supporting authorities across the region.

Funding for individual projects, many of which operate across local authority boundaries, are decided by the RCE Board. Specifically, since 2004-05, funding made available to the London RCE in relation to taking forward the Efficiency Agenda is as follows:

Receiving authority	Grant payable (2004-05)	Grant payable (2005-06)	Additional core funding (2005-06)	Workstream specific efficiency support (2005-06)
London Regional Centre of Excellence	1.25 million	1.6 million	50,000	228,366.25 100,000

Individual projects supported by the London RCE are listed at:

http://www.lcpe.gov.uk/workstreamsexemplars/List_of_Current_Projects.asp

The Spending Review 2004 set out the expectation that local government (including councils, schools, police and fire authorities) would make at least £6.45 billion efficiency gains by 2007-08. This target is based on the achievement of annual gains equivalent to 2.5 per cent. of 2004-05 baseline expenditure. Local authorities have responded well to this challenge and councils are expecting to deliver £1.9 billion of efficiency gains by end 2005-06 against the target of £1.0 billion.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69054]

Angela E. Smith: I have been asked to reply.

Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers and the number in each payband. For information relating to the last financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS. Information on special advisers for this financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when available.

This information prior to 2003 is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps her Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. [72006]

Angela E. Smith: The Department and its agencies have introduced a number of initiatives which support the Government's Small Change Big Difference Campaign. These are aimed at encouraging staff to make choices which increase physical activity and improve diet.

The Department provides healthy options in the restaurants and has made available a series of "lunch time walks". Awareness of national campaigns is raised using the Department's intranet and staff are encouraged to participate in annual Sports Days and take exercise at departmental sports clubs.

As the programme of work develops the Department of Health will be working across all of Government to ensure the programme joins up to promote maximum impact. DH is leading the implementation for this initiative as part of its cross-Government commitment to deliver the public health White Paper "Choosing Health".

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many guided missiles (a) have been launched from Ascension Island and (b) have landed on Ascension Island since 1976 as permitted in article 2 (General Description of Rights), point 1a of the Bahamas Agreement 1956; and on what dates. [75465]

Mr. Hoon: No guided missiles have been launched from Ascension Island or landed on Ascension Island since 1976 as permitted in article 2 (General Description of Rights), point 1a of the Bahamas Agreement 1956.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what payment has been made in each year since 1976 by the United States Administration towards the maintenance of the services listed in article X (public services) of the Bahamas Agreement 1956. [75456]

Mr. Hoon: Regular payments by the United States Administration towards the maintenance of the services listed in article X (public services) of the Bahamas Agreement 1956 have only been made since the introduction of a system of taxation in April 2002. Since that time the US has paid contract employee income tax and import duty as follows:

Prior to April 2002, contributions were made on an ad hoc basis. These contributions continue in addition to the tax the US pays.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of her staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73035]

Mr. Hoon: The following table sets out the number and value of non-consolidated, non-pensionable bonus payments made to UK-based Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff over the last three years in relation to salary.

Canada

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her Canadian counterpart on (a) the threats posed by home grown terrorists and (b) how such threats can best be countered. [75876]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 8 June 2006]: My right. hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not yet had the opportunity to discuss counter terrorism issues with her Canadian counterpart. My right. hon. Friend the then Home Secretary discussed counter terrorism issues with Stockwell Day, Canadian Minister for Public Safety, on 27 March 2006.

This is also an area on which we have frequent contacts at official level.

Departmental Property

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many properties the Department owns in the UK; and where they are located. [77626]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office owns three freehold properties in the UK. These are:
Old Public Offices, King Charles Street, London, SW1A 2AH
Old Admiralty Building, London, SW1A 2PA
Hanslope Park, Milton Keynes, MK19 7HR

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of her staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77101]

Mr. Hoon: On 1 June 2006 the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) had 6,166 staff. Of these, 5,396 were aged between 17 and 54 years and 770 are aged 55 years or over. These figures are for UK civil servants only and exclude staff engaged locally at FCO Posts overseas for which details are not held centrally.

Departmental Training

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many officials from her Department were sent on courses run by the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre in each year since 1997; for what purpose; and at what cost. [76688]

Dr. Howells: The information requested is not held centrally. To obtain this information officials would need to contact all members of staff, or their departments past and present and this would incur disproportionate cost.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment has been made of the risk of terrorist activity by Methodist preachers who are United States citizens before adjudication following requests for entry clearance to the United Kingdom for the purpose of vocational religious education; and if she will make a statement. [77611]

Dr. Howells: All entry clearance applications worldwide are checked against a warnings index which contains the details of individuals identified as posing a threat to the security of the United Kingdom. For security reasons, I am unable to give details of which individuals or groups may be on this index.

We are, however, concerned to ensure that legitimate entry clearance applications for legitimate vocational religious education should not be unreasonably impeded and there will be further consideration of the issues with the Home Office.

UK Mission (Bugging)

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made by the Belgian authorities in identifying who bugged the UK mission in the Justus Lipsius Council of Ministers building in 2003; and if she will make a statement. [77520]

Mr. Hoon: The Belgian authorities are continuing their investigations. No results are yet available. We, and the other member states concerned, have co-operated fully with the Belgian authorities.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Northern Way

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what role her Department plays in the delivery of the Northern Way initiative, with particular reference to tackling social exclusion in Northern England. [74043]

Hilary Armstrong: The delivery of the Northern Way initiative is the responsibility of the Department for Communities and Local Government and the Cabinet Office will support the Department for Communities and Local Government in delivering their agenda around social exclusion. In addition, my role is to build on the achievements of the Government to date and spearhead a renewed drive to address the most socially excluded in our society. This will include chairing the new Cabinet Committee on Social Exclusion and publishing an Action Plan in the autumn setting out how we will reach the most excluded. The immediate priority will be to focus on the following:

improving the early identification of the most at-risk households, individuals and children; children in care; teenage pregnancy; mental illness; and supporting ongoing work by the Respect Unit.

We are also producing a 10 year review of the long-term trends and drivers of social exclusion and the systemic reform needed to address them.

Public Sector Information

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment she has made of the (a) effectiveness, (b) audience share and (c) number of viewers of public information programmes produced by the Central Office of Information being screened in the early hours of the morning. [76740]

Mr. McFadden: The Central Office of Information (COI) captures data on transmission numbers and estimated airtime value by film and by sponsoring department. Public information films are also assessed as part of wider research on multi media campaigns. COI records an estimated viewing level figure for each transmission of a film, based on the average number of viewers of the station in question across a particular section of the schedule (daypart). Dayparts are broken down as shown in the table.

Time	Daypart
06:00-09:29	Breakfast
09:30-11:59	Morning

SCOTLAND

Air Miles

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1335W, on air miles, what factors he took into account when deciding not to keep a record of free air miles accrued by senior civil service servants in his Department on official business; and if he will keep such a record. [77437]

David Cairns: The retention of a record of air miles is not considered necessary for the effective management of the travel and subsistence regime in the Scotland Office or for the proper financial monitoring and control of budgets for this expenditure.

Black/Asian Employees

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74361]

David Cairns: The overall number of staff in the Scotland Office's press office was published in our Annual Report for 2006. Information on ethnicity is collected on a voluntary basis but, in view of the small number of staff involved, this information is not published.

Bonuses

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73060]

David Cairns: The following table shows the number, cost and percentage of paybill of the non-pensionable bonuses awarded by the Scotland Office:

Economic Trends

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on recent economic trends in Scotland. [75189]

David Cairns: The macroeconomic stability and labour market policies put in place by this Government continue to benefit all of the UK, including Scotland. Scottish employment and economic activity have increased to their highest levels since records began in 1992, unemployment is lower than it has been for a generation and Scottish economic growth in 2005—at 1.8 per cent.—was on trend and equal to that of the UK. All business surveys are reporting a strong performance in the year to date and principal independent economic forecasters predict the Scottish economy will continue to grow at around or above trend in both 2006 and 2007.

Gaming Machine Stakes

Sandra Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) seaside economies and (b) public houses in Scotland of the freeze on gaming machine stake and prize levels. [77260]

David Cairns: There is no policy to freeze stake and prize limits. The Government announced in October 2004 that our policy has been to increase the maximum stake for amusement with prizes (AWP) machines from 30p to 50p, and for jackpot machines in bingo halls from 50p to £1. This would be on full implementation of the Gambling Act in September 2007.

Inward Investment

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what efforts his Department is making to attract Japanese investment into (a) Scotland and (b) Glasgow; and if he will make a statement. [74607]

David Cairns: My hon. Friend will be aware that inward investment promotion for Scotland is a shared responsibility between the Scottish Executive and the Department for Trade and Industry.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 994W, on ministerial visits (accommodation), what factors he took into account when deciding not to keep a record of overnight accommodation arrangements or costs; and if he will keep such a record. [77438]

David Cairns: The maintenance of a record of the star rating of the hotels used, or the countries visited, by staff in the Scotland Office is not considered necessary for the effective management of the travel and subsistence regime in the Office or for the proper financial monitoring and control of budgets for this expenditure.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he classifies (a) al-Qaeda operatives based within Afghanistan, (b) al-Qaeda operatives based outside Afghanistan, (c) Taliban forces based within Afghanistan and (d) Taliban forces based outside Afghanistan as (i) insurgents and (ii) terrorists for the purposes of possible engagement by UK forces based in Helmand Province. [74482]

Des Browne [holding answer 8 June 2006]: No such classification is required for the purposes of possible engagement by UK forces in Helmand of the various armed groups operating in the province, which may have criminal, tribal or other (including Taliban or, in some cases, al-Qaeda) allegiances.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the mission of the (a) UK troops and (b) other coalition troops in the Helmand province of Afghanistan. [75910]

Des Browne: UK forces, along with coalition partners, are deployed in Helmand province to form part of the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) expansion into southern Afghanistan. ISAF will work to build security and Government institutions, and to support the Afghan Security Forces in combating insurgents and illegally armed groups. Coalition troops operating under the US-led Operation Enduring Freedom are primarily tasked with conducting counter terrorism missions.

Air Sampling Missions

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records his Department holds of air sampling missions to measure emissions from foreign nuclear weapons testing carried out before 1980 by (a) the Strategic Reconnaissance Force and (b) other units of the Royal Air Force. [77719]

Des Browne: The Defence Science and Technology Laboratory holds historical records relating to the health and safety of crew who carried out foreign nuclear weapons testing air sampling work and the routine radioactive contamination monitoring of high flying aircraft prior to 1980. The information in the records primarily relates to monitoring procedures, and aircraft surface contamination monitoring results.

Armed Forces Pay Review

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the Answer of 17 March 2006, Official Report, column 2514W, on the armed forces pay review, what the (a) current manpower requirement and (b) manning level is as an absolute figure in each of the operational pinch points listed. [64082]

Mr. Ingram: I am withholding the information requested as its release would, or would be likely to prejudice the effectiveness and security of our armed forces.

Body Armour

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training is given to members of the UK armed forces in the use of body armour. [74968]

Mr. Ingram: Body armour is a passive system and therefore training in its use consists of advice on putting it on, adjusting it to fit and maintenance.

Body armour is worn in operational environments and certain training exercises —for example, live firing. In each situation all personnel are advised on how and when it should be worn.

Defence Intelligence Staff

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) permanent staff, (b) contractors, (c) reservists and (d) other staff were employed by the Defence Intelligence Staff in each year since 1997; and what the service breakdown was in each of those years. [76408]

Mr. Ingram: Defence Intelligence Staff manpower figures for 1997 onwards are shown as follows. Data for contractors are not captured and reservist data are not held centrally.

Civilian/service strengths: Chief of Defence Intelligence

Notes:

1. Full-time equivalence counts part-time staff by the number of hours they work as a proportion of their full-time conditioned hours.
2. Numbers are rounded to the nearest hundred.
3. UK Regular Forces includes nursing services, but excludes Full Time Reserve Service personnel, Gurkhas, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment, mobilised reservists and Naval Activated Reservists.

There are 20 or fewer civilian casual staff employed in each year.

The breakdown of Service personnel numbers is only available from 2001.

EU INSPIRE Directive

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the UK's national security of the EU INSPIRE directive; and whether his Department has made representations to the European Commission on this matter. [76681]

Des Browne: The Ministry of Defence has been fully involved in scrutinising the evolving INSPIRE directive for any possible impact on defence and national security. The INSPIRE text adopted as the Common Position on 23 January 2006, was acceptable in this respect. We will, however, maintain our scrutiny in relation to any proposed amendments to the Common Position emerging from the ongoing European parliamentary process.

As the lead Department within Government, DEFRA officials have met with the European Commission on a number of occasions to discuss a wide range of issues, including the British Government's clear and well-known position that INSPIRE should not jeopardise national security, defence and international relations.

European Anti-missile Site

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans NATO has to install an anti-missile site in Europe; what discussions he has had on this matter with (a) the USA, (b) Poland and (c) the Czech Republic; and if he will make a statement. [76610]

Des Browne: NATO is currently examining the implications of a feasibility study into ballistic missile defence for alliance territories and population centres and as yet no plans have been developed or approved. I have not discussed the implications of the study with my counterparts in the USA, Poland or the Czech Republic.

Intelligence Corps

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 19 April 2006, Official Report, column 674W, on military intelligence, if he will make a statement on the work of the Intelligence Corps. [76411]

Des Browne: The Intelligence Corps continues its important work worldwide in providing intelligence and security support to operational commanders throughout the land forces environment at all levels of formation command. It also provides significant resources for defence intelligence and special forces requirements.

Iraq

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his oral answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1183, on Iraq, what the minimum standard is for body armour on land vehicles used by British troops in Iraq. [74273]

Des Browne [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Enhanced Combat Body Armour is currently the minimum standard for British troops operating in vehicles in Iraq. However, two other body armour sets are available in theatre, for use according to the commander's assessment of the nature of the task and the current threat. Enhanced Personal Protective Equipment (known as Kestrel) is used by the drivers of fighting vehicles and by Top Cover Sentries. We are in the process of raising the minimum standard of protection above that provided by Enhanced Combat Body Armour, through the delivery of Improved Performance Body Armour (known as Osprey).

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has established a link between the loss of the Lynx helicopter over Basra in May and missile technology supplied by Iran; and if he will make a statement. [77389]

Des Browne [holding answer 14 June 2006]: The circumstances surrounding the loss of the Lynx helicopter in Basra on 6 May 2006 are currently being investigated by a Board of Inquiry. Once the Board of Inquiry has completed its investigation, a summary of the findings will be placed in the Library.

Iraqi Authority (Arms)

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence further to his Departmental Minute of 15 December 2004, on the gifting of military arms and equipment to the Iraqi interim authority in relation to the 5,666 9mm pistols, what was their (a) cost, (b) model and manufacturer, (c) date of dispatch from the UK and delivery in Iraq, (d) condition, (e) status in relation to arms export controls and (f) country of origin; what UK companies were involved in procurement or transhipment; whether each weapon carried a serial number; and whether he has received any reports of the diversion of these weapons for illicit purposes. [63815]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 18 April 2006]: The Iraqi Security Forces were equipped with 5,666 x 9mm pistols and ammunition at a total cost of £1,292,878 as part of the Project OSIRIS security sector reform project, initiated by the Prime Minister in 2004.

Of these weapons, 2,822 pistols were model 92Fs manufactured by Beretta S.P.A., of Italy. They were procured by the Defence Procurement Agency's Dismounted Close Combat Integrated Project Team. The shipment was received at Heathrow, from Italy, on 24 February 2005. They were then moved to the Ministry of Defence Base Ordnance Depot in Donnington, Shropshire, for inspection before being despatched to Basra, where they arrived on 27 February 2005.

The remaining 2,844 pistols were manufactured by a company whose identity is being withheld. They were imported by a second, separate company—whose name is similarly being withheld—on 18 February 2005, and despatched to Iraq on 23 February 2005. Provision of further detail would be regarded by those concerned as a breach of confidence.

The weapons supplied in both shipments were new, not refurbished. Since it is illegal for an arms manufacturer to produce weapons without details stamped or etched upon them, all the pistols complied fully with international standards, bearing recorded serial numbers.

Each shipment was considered under the Consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria. The weapons were legally gifted to the Government of Iraq. Parliament approved the gifting in principle on 15 December 2004.

As I have sought to make clear in earlier answers on the subject, we have received no evidence of any of these weapons being diverted for illicit purposes.

Prisoners

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many prisoners have been transferred from the custody of UK forces to that of the US in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan in each quarter since 1 January 2002; [73727]

(2) what his policy is regarding the (a) exchange and (b) handing over of prisoners held by UK forces in Iraq and Afghanistan to the custody of US forces in those countries; and to what extent his policy has changed in the last year; [73726]

Des Browne [holding answer 25 May 2006]: In Iraq, following the end of hostilities and the completion of the UK's prisoner release programme in April 2003, a total of 358 prisoners taken into custody by the UK were transferred to US custody at Camp Bucca. With the opening of the UK's Divisional Temporary Detention Facility in December 2003, our records show that they (along with further individuals transferred into US custody in the interim), were either released, or transferred back to UK custody. During 2003, a further six individuals were transferred to US custody in different circumstances. Four individuals, who have since been released, were transferred to US custody and held at Abu Ghraib. Two individuals classified as High Value Targets were taken into custody by the UK and subsequently transferred to US custody. They were subsequently transferred to the jurisdiction of the Iraq Special tribunal, although they remain in US physical custody.

Since December 2003, a further 13 security internees, have been transferred from UK to US custody at various times. All have since been released. Our policy on the transfer of detainees to US custody is to consider each case on its merits taking into account the operational circumstances and appropriate safeguards on their treatment. This policy has not changed over the last year.

In Afghanistan, UK forces operate in accordance with NATO's policy on detention for the International Security Assistance Force, which is either to transfer detainees to Afghan custody as soon as practicable or, if appropriate, to release them. I refer the hon. Member to the answer my predecessor gave on 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 1982, to the right hon. and learned Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram), in which he stated that the UK does not plan to transfer individuals detained in Afghanistan into the custody of US forces. This policy has not changed over the previous year.

Private Military Companies

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on private military companies guarding British bases abroad (a) in total, (b) in Iraq and (c) in Afghanistan in the last year for which figures are available. [75395]

Des Browne: The Ministry of Defence does not contract any private military companies or private security companies, and we do not monitor those employed by third parties except for purposes of deconfliction within the UK area of operations.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Business Education Partnerships

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes have occurred in the level of funding for Business Education Partnerships since the inception of the Learning and Skills Council. [66336]

Jim Knight: We do not fund Education Business Partnerships nationally. However, through the LSC, we annually provide £25 million to support the local delivery of school business links activity. Mark Haysom, chief executive of the LSC has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 19 May 2006:

I write in response to your recent Parliamentary Questions regarding Business Education Partnerships (EBPs).

Firstly, I will answer your question about the future role of EBPs.

EBPs are independent providers. The ways in which they carry out their role now and in the future is a matter for those partnerships themselves. The LSC values the work of the EBPs, evidenced by the significant sums of Learning and Skills Council (LSC) funding which they receive.

There is a huge challenge ahead of us in implementing the Government's 14-19 agenda. This agenda requires high levels of partnerships and collaboration between business, schools and colleges so that all young people are better prepared for the world of work.

A particular challenge is to make sure every young person has access to the new specialised diplomas which are being developed. This challenge is not just to the education service, but also to business and employers to engage and to contribute to what young people learn and experience during their time at school and college. The future funding and organisational arrangements must reflect this changing agenda. For example, the Government have given a significant increase in funds this financial year for enterprise and the development of the vocational curriculum—these funds have been targeted at schools, and not providers. It is for the schools themselves to determine which providers can best meet the individual needs of their pupils in the light of the school's circumstances. I have no doubt that the best providers will continue to deliver high quality provision.

For our part, we are looking at the whole delivery of education business link activity in the context of the developing 14-19 and skills agendas. We plan to consult on our conclusions in the near future.

Clearly, the LSC will need to ensure that its funds and partnership activity can make the maximum impact in delivering the Government's agenda for young people. My colleagues and I plan to discuss further with the national EBP network how the EBPs and the LSC can best work together to achieve this impact.

Regarding your Parliamentary Question about the levels of funding for EBPs since the inception of the LSC. EBPs, alongside other independent providers like Trident and Young Enterprise, receive income from a range of sources, including a substantial share of the LSC's education business link funding.

The LSC receives £25 million from the DfES for education business link activity. This amount has remained the same since the LSC took over the funding of this activity in 2001. As you will see from the figures below, from 2001-2006 the LSC has supplemented this resource with specific LSC funds. The actual amounts allocated for education business link activity by the LSC are as follows:

	£ million
2001-02	28,600,000
2002-03	32,312,085
2003-04	35,320,415
2004-05	36,133,797
2005-06	[1]31,075,965

[1]Provisional outturn, subject to audit review

The LSC values the work of EBPs which have strong partnerships in support of the curriculum offer to young people in schools and colleges.

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the future role for Business Education Partnerships is in developing links with (a) business, (b) the wider community and (c) schools. [66337]

Jim Knight: Business involvement with schools is essential to our education reforms, especially at 14 to 19. Education Business Partnerships, and other intermediary bodies, facilitate support for schools from an estimated 300,000 employers.

The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) are currently reviewing the delivery structure for Education Business Link activities. Therefore, Mark Haysom, chief executive of the LSC has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the Library.

3. 1997-98 figures for authorities subject to local government reorganisation in that year have been estimated, pro-rata to their post LGR figures.
4. Figures reflect relevant sub-blocks of standard spending assessment/education formula spending (EFS) settlements and exclude the pensions transfer to EFS.
5. 2003-04 to 2005-06 figures are provisional as some grants have not yet been finalised/audited.

Nuclear Scientists/Engineers

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to increase the number of nuclear scientists and engineers. [77714]

Bill Rammell: The Government are committed to increasing the number of students taking up higher education courses in mathematics, scientific and engineering disciplines. The 10 year science and innovation investment framework, published two years ago jointly by Treasury, the Department of Trade and Industry and the Department for Education and Skills, sets out a range of measures to develop a strong supply of scientists, engineers and technologists. It is a matter for each individual higher education institution to decide which courses to offer, including whether to offer courses related to nuclear science.

Primary Schools

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether it is his policy that primary schools in England with fewer than 100 pupils should be closed. [76843]

Jim Knight: It is not the Departments policy that primary schools in England with fewer than 100 pupils should be closed. Local authorities are responsible for balancing the supply and demand of places in their areas to ensure schools serve the needs of their local communities and provide good quality education in the most cost effective way. As part of this, they need to determine the numbers and sizes of schools they need, taking into account the views and aspirations of parents and other stakeholders.

Many small schools are also rural schools and there is a presumption against the closure of these schools. Although this does not mean that no rural school will ever close, the case for closure needs to be strong and clearly in the best interests of education provision in the area. Since the presumption was introduced in February 1998 the number of rural schools approved for closure has fallen from an average of 30 a year to six a year. Statutory guidance to school organisation committees and the schools adjudicator also makes clear that they must not assume a school must be of a certain size to be a good school.

Universities (Industrial Action)

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many university students he estimates will be unable to graduate (a) at all and (b) without a full record of performance of marks as a result of the recent industrial action. [76704]

Bill Rammell: Although this dispute was between universities and trade unions, I have kept closely in touch with both sides throughout its progress and consistently urged that the dispute be urgently resolved and the impact on students lifted.

I welcome the agreement reached between the HE employers and unions on pay and the immediate suspension of the university and college union's industrial action. This is good news for staff and students alike. I expect that institutions and staff will work hard to ensure that every student gets their marks and the opportunity to graduate in good time. The employers and UCU have agreed to work together to ensure a quick return to normal business. I can assure the hon. Gentleman that we will continue to monitor closely the situation with regard to any residual effects of the dispute.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the chief accounting officer of his Department. [76790]

Mr. Thomas: Suma Chakrabarti is the Permanent Secretary of the Department of International Development. His qualifications are as follows: New College, Oxford (BA PPE); and Sussex University (MA Econ).

His relevant experience to the work of the Department is as follows:

ODI fellow and economist, Government of Botswana, 1981-84;

Senior economic assistant and economic adviser, overseas development administration (ODA), 1984-88;

Assistant to UK executive director, IMF and World Bank, Washington 1988-1990;

Private Secretary to right hon. Lynda Chalker, ODA, 1990-92;

Assistant secretary, Aid Policy and Resources Department, ODA, 1992-96;

Environment, Transport and Regions Team, Spending Directorate, HM Treasury, 1996-98;

Director, Budget and Public Finances, HM Treasury, 1998;

Director of Performance and Innovation Unit, Cabinet Office, 1998-2000;

Head of Economic and Domestic Affairs Secretariat, Cabinet Office, 2000-01; and Director General for Regional Programmes, DFID, 2001-02.

The accounting officer is a role that the Permanent Secretary combines with his personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the department and for department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The accounting officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified and experienced senior managers such as the finance director.

Departmental Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75236]

Mr. Thomas: HM Treasury made a full statement about the total liability of unfunded public service pension schemes as at 31 March 2005. A technical note was placed in the Library on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-390, following an oral Statement in Parliament by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury. The note provides detailed information about the size and nature of the liabilities and how they are calculated.

The principal civil service pension scheme is an unfunded multi-employer defined benefit scheme. Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual departments, they are estimated for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in Table 1 of the technical note.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many of his staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77422]

Mr. Thomas: As at 31 December 2005, there were 1,659 staff under 55 years of age and 213 staff over 55 years of age employed by the Department for International Development.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people over the age of 55 years were recruited into his Department in each of the last three years. [77423]

Mr. Thomas: Numbers of DFID staff over the age of 55, recruited into the Department in each of the last three financial years, are in the following table.

	Number
2003-04	7
2004-05	11
2005-06	3

Fair Trade

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with retailers on promoting fair-trade products. [76139]

Mr. Thomas: The UK Government are a strong supporter of fair-trade products. They help farmers and other producers earn a decent living and get more of the final value of the product. DFID supports a number of initiatives to help more producers benefit from fair-trade certification. DFID has given over £1 million to the Fairtrade Foundation, including support for new product development and encouraging engagement with UK retailers.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development and I have recently been in written communication with some of the large UK retailers, including Marks and Spencer and Sainsbury's on their fair-trade product development and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development is in contact with them on the related issue of standards and sourcing products in developing countries.

HIV/AIDS

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what progress was made at the most recent UN General Assembly meeting in relation to increased provision of treatment for HIV/AIDS. [75629]

Mr. Thomas: On June 2, the United Nations General Assembly agreed a Political Declaration which provides a political blueprint for achieving Universal Access. It sets out commitments for countries to develop, by the end of 2006, ambitious national plans to scale up towards universal access by 2010. The commitments include:

working towards comprehensive HIV prevention, treatment, care and support, with interim targets for 2008; providing $20 to 23 billion annually by 2010 for AIDS responses; promoting the rights and reducing the vulnerability of sex workers, men who have sex with men, children, women, adolescent girls and drug users;

intensifying efforts to develop new technology especially microbicides and vaccines; ensuring that no credible, sustainable national plan should go unfunded; and strengthening countries' capacity to use the flexibilities within TRIPS because of their importance in protecting public health.

The UK delegation—led by my right. hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development and by the Minister of State for Public Health, including four representatives from civil society, two parliamentarians and one representative from the Overseas Territories—played an active role in the difficult negotiations which led to the agreement of this Declaration. The document broadly reflects the core issues that the UK wanted to see included. We would have preferred to see explicit reference to vulnerable groups—sex workers, men who have sex with men, drug users, prisoners and migrants. But the Declaration does commit to promote the rights of these groups. As such, it presents progress—something which will promote future action towards universal access, and that can be used as the basis for future discussions.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Act of Union (Commemoration)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the Act of Union with Scotland in 2007. [77618]

Mr. Lammy: The Secretary of State has no plans at present to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the Act of Union with Scotland in 2007.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many of her staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77198]

Mr. Lammy: In the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, there are 11 staff over the age of 55 years and 506 staff under the age of 55 years.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into her Department in each of the last three years. [77199]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport is a relatively small department with little external recruitment during the last three years. As the numbers are so small we are unable to reveal the figures on the grounds of confidentiality.

Flag Flying

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many days since May 1997 the St. George's flag has been flown from her Department's buildings. [77751]

Mr. Lammy: The St. George's flag is flown on Government buildings with two or more flag poles on St. George's Day, 23 April.

The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has not flown the St. George's Flag from its building. However, we plan to fly the flag on 23 April 2007.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her Department's policy is on flying the (a) St. George's flag and (b) EU flag from departmental buildings. [77752]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport issues guidance to Government Departments for flying flags on buildings. This instructs all Government Departments in England that have more than one flag pole to fly the flag of St. George on St. George's Day 23 April and the European Flag on Europe Day 9 May, alongside the Union Flag provided the Union Flag is flown in a superior position.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will ensure the Union Flag is flown from her Department's buildings on every day the offices are open. [77753]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport is responsible for issuing rules for hoisting the Union flag on Government Buildings. The rules are approved by the Queen on advice from the Department.

The Union Flag is flown on Government buildings to mark the birthdays of members of the Royal Family undertaking official duties and specific national events including Remembrance Sunday, Europe Day, St. George's Day, Her Majesty's Accession and Wedding Day. The Union Flag is also flown on other occasions—for example, for state visits.

There are no plans at present to change this arrangement. However individuals, local authorities and other organisations can fly the Union Flag whenever they wish, subject to compliance with local planning requirements.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of spending on aerospace on the economy. [77558]

Margaret Hodge: The Department submitted evidence to the Trade and Industry Committee inquiry into the competitiveness of the UK aerospace industry in 2005. The Department's evidence addresses the contribution of UK aerospace to the economy and Government support for the aerospace industry. The DTI's memorandum is available on the Trade and Industry Committee website at http://www.publications.parliament.uk/pa/cm/cmerduid.htm

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with BAE Systems on securing ongoing export contracts for the Brough site; and if he will make a statement. [76612]

Margaret Hodge: None. Primary responsibility for the promotion of export sales of the Hawk military fast jet training aircraft produced by BAE Systems at Brough rests with the Ministry of Defence's Defence Export Services Organisation.

Bankruptcy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in Coventry South have been declared bankrupt in each year since 1997. [70331]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 May 2006]: Regional insolvency statistics are only available on the basis of the locations of Official Receivers offices, each of which cover a group of county courts where the cases are heard and the courts having jurisdiction over these. As such, they are not directly comparable with standard geographies such as government office regions, local authorities etc. Coventry South is best matched to Coventry county court, under the Birmingham B Official Receiver's office. Figures are shown in the following table, but it should be noted that, for the above reasons, these will not be an exact measure of bankruptcies in Coventry South.

	Number of bankruptcy orders made in Coventry county court
1998	69
1999	119
2000	113
2001	147
2002	152
2003	184
2004	203
2005	314

Citizens Advice

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the Statement of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 560, on Citizens Advice, how much funding was received by Citizens Advice directly from the Government in each of the last five years. [73556]

Mr. McCartney: Citizens Advice receives funding from a number of Government Departments. Details can be found in the Citizens Advice's Annual Reports for each year. Copies can be found in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the statement of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 560, on Citizens Advice, how much funding he expects the Government to allocate to Citizens Advice for 2006-07; and whether the Government plans to fund individual citizens' advice bureaux. [73557]

Mr. McCartney: The Department has not yet decided on the level of funding for Citizens Advice in 2006-07. The Government have no plans to fund the core activities of local CAB. That is largely a matter for the relevant local authority. However, from time to time, CAB are awarded contracts to run specific initiatives and schemes such as the recent Face-to-Face debt advice programme.

Consumer Affairs Council

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the Government's position was in the negotiations on the Working Time Directive at the Consumer Affairs Council meeting in Luxembourg on 1 June 2006; what the outcome was of the meeting; and if he will make a statement. [76755]

Mr. McCartney: The Government's policy and negotiating priorities for the new Working Time Directive remain to achieve a solution that retains the voluntary individual opt out from the 48 hour weekly working limit and that addresses the problems caused to Europe's health and emergency services by the European Court of Justice's rulings on the SiMAP and Jaeger cases.

Member states failed to reach political agreement at the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council in Luxembourg. The UK Government tried to find a way forward, but there remained two opposing views.

Fair Trade

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the change in volume of fair trade products sold in the United Kingdom has been over the last three years. [70917]

Mr. McCartney: The volume of Fairtrade certified products sold in the UK has grown by 111 per cent. since 2003, reaching £195 million in 2005. The UK is the largest Fairtrade market across the 20 Fairtrade Labelling Organisation (FLO) participating countries. Particular examples include: sales of Fairtrade coffee in the UK reached £65.8 million in 2005, from £34.3 million in 2003; and Fairtrade bananas are now worth £47.7 million, up from £24.3 million in 2003.

The UK Government support the aims of the Fairtrade movement, and in March 2005 increased its funding to the Fairtrade Foundation, through DfID, by a further £750,000. This brings the Government's total level of support to over £1 million between 2002 and 2007, to raise business and consumer awareness of fairly traded products through educational and promotional activities.

Fire Regulations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what checks are made to ensure that imported furniture, mattresses and fabrics comply with UK fire resistance regulations. [73830]

Mr. McCartney: The Furniture and Furnishings (Fire) (Safety) Regulations 1988 set levels of fire resistance for domestic upholstered furniture, including cover fabrics, and mattresses imported into the UK. These Regulations are enforced by Trading Standards, who have powers to check products and suspend or seize those not meeting the requirements of the Regulations. These powers also allow Trading Standards to prosecute the suppliers of non-compliant products.

Internet Governance Forum

John Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how his Department is preparing to communicate the multi-stakeholder view at the Internet Governance Forum; and what consultation his Department has undertaken on the subject. [75409]

Margaret Hodge: The World Summit on the Information Society, which met in Tunis in November 2005, recommended the creation of an Internet Governance Forum (IGF) to bring together industry, civil society and governments to look at important Internet issues such as freedom of expression and the free flow of information, security and user protection, linguistic diversity, and the digital divide.

In January 2006, DTI hosted a UK consultation on the IGF, and the conclusions of this meeting have been fed into the international consultation and are published on the IGF website (http://www.intgovforum.org/contributions/igf.pdf). The creation of a forum where stakeholders can meet on an equal footing is seen as a positive step: industry, civil society and users working with governments can develop practical ways of addressing concerns on the use and misuse of the Internet. The IGF should be open and inclusive, and focus on a few topics.

We now want industry and civil society to take the lead in preparing for the first IGF meeting in October. I am pleased that Nominet, the registry for dot.uk Internet domain names is organising a first meeting on 4 July 2006 in the Houses of Parliament, bringing together industry, civil society, and government. I hope to be involved in this discussion.

The Oxford Internet Institute is also developing a dialogue on issues on the IGF agenda.

Initiatives like these will help us identify clear ideas and objectives for the IGF and will help UK stakeholders to make a very positive contribution to the discussion.

Personal Debt

Ms Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps regulatory authorities have taken to prevent adverse effects on individuals' credit ratings in cases in which, where the validity of a debt is in dispute, banks sell on the debt to other companies who then refuse to enter into dialogue over the disputed claim. [73840]

Mr. McCartney: Information on credit ratings is kept by the Credit Reference Agencies (CRA) who are under a legal obligation to publish accurate and up-to-date information. If any information is disputed, the individual concerned should write to the relevant CRA. The CRA will then flag the entry in question as a disputed item which should not be relied upon, while raising the matter with the relevant lender in order to reach a view about the validity of the entry.

An individual in dispute about an entry on their credit file can also ask the Information Commissioner to consider the details of their case.

Peugeot

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has had regarding the future of Peugeot in the UK; and where and when those discussions took place. [76997]

Margaret Hodge: DTI has a long history of dialogue with Peugeot in the UK and has had frequent meetings with the company to discuss their UK manufacturing operations. Most recently, the then Secretary of State met the Chief Executive Officer of PSA Peugeot Citroen, Jean-Martin Folz, on 26 April in London. My predecessor met Mr. Folz on 18 April in London. We remain in regular contact with Peugeot at official level.

During a Westminster Hall debate on 13 June, I agreed to meet my hon. Friend and other local MPs to discuss Peugeot and wider manufacturing issues in the Coventry area in further detail.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has had with Peugeot management regarding the trade unions alternative plan. [76998]

Margaret Hodge: My predecessor met the Chief Executive Officer of PSA Peugeot Citroen, Jean-Martin Folz, on 18 April. The then Secretary of State met Mr. Folz on 26 April. The trade unions have kept DTI officials updated on the developments of their counter-proposals, for which we are grateful. HM Government have made clear to Peugeot the importance of open and constructive dialogue, consistent with legal obligations under information and consultation legislation.

During a Westminster Hall debate on 13 June, I agreed to meet my hon. Friend and other local MPs to discuss Peugeot and wider manufacturing issues in the Coventry area in further detail.

Social Enterprises

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many social enterprise advisers there are in (a) Luton and (b) Bedfordshire. [76724]

Margaret Hodge: Research has identified that a range of organisations are taking a leading role in providing support to social enterprises in Bedfordshire and Luton, although it has not been possible to identify exact numbers of specific social enterprise advisors. The organisations identified include:

Chamber of Commerce/Business Link

Voluntary Action Luton

Luton Borough Council

Cranfield Trust

Luton and Dunstable Innovation Centre

Social Firms Eastern Region

University of Luton

Spires Innovation Centre.

The East of England Development Agency's (EEDA) Investing in Communities (IiC) programme and the Social Enterprise Steering Group in Bedfordshire and Luton have recently commissioned a report to review social enterprise activity in Bedfordshire and Luton, which in turn has informed the development of a social enterprise draft action plan.

South West Regional Development Agency

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs the South West Regional Development Agency has created in (a) Swindon and (b) each district council in Wiltshire in each year since 2003. [76985]

Margaret Hodge: I am advised by the South West of England Regional Development Agency that it does not hold information on jobs created by local authority area. As a strategic organisation many of the activities in which it is involved operate at regional level, or across county or unitary boundaries. The Agency reports on a range of outcomes that are directly attributable to its investment in support of projects and activities across the region, one of which is jobs created or safeguarded. The figures for jobs created/safeguarded by the Agency in the region since 2003 are as follows:

	Number
2004-05	6,060
2003-04	6,024
2002-03	6,508

Strawberry Imports

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to impose anti-dumping measures against the import of frozen strawberries from China. [76855]

Mr. McCartney: None. The European Commission is currently investigating a complaint of dumping.

Sun Beds

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment the Health and Safety Executive has made of the safety implications of the use of hired sun beds for use in the home; and if he will make a statement. [77461]

Mr. McCartney: I am advised that there have been no assessments of the safety implications of the use of hired sun beds for use in the home by the Health and Safety Executive.

Supermarkets

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many complaints the Office of Fair Trading has received on breaches of the code of conduct by supermarkets. [71435]

Mr. McCartney: The Office of Fair Trading has received 20 complaints about breaches of the Code since it came into force on 17 March 2002. Those who have complained more than once or have raised more than one complaint about breaches are treated as a single complaint. Those complaining about supermarkets more generally are not included in the figures.

Unscrupulous Lenders

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's recent discussions on strengthening enforcement against unscrupulous lenders. [77544]

Mr. McCartney: The Consumer Credit Act 2006 will improve the regulation and monitoring of consumer credit businesses and extend protections, rights and means of redress for consumers against unscrupulous lenders. Furthermore, the Loan Shark Pilots the Government have funded in Birmingham and Glasgow will enable Trading Standards to prosecute illegal lenders in these areas and gain a clearer understanding of the scope, extent and impact of illegal money lending. Finally, the Financial Inclusion Fund includes £45 million to increase face-to-face debt advice capacity, with particular regard to the needs of vulnerable consumers.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Data Protection

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the statement on 20 November 2005 by a spokesman for her Department on the practice of selling personal data about drivers, what action has been taken to prevent the practice by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency. [76913]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

I refer to my written statements of 2 December 2005, Official Report, columns 50-1WS and 16 February 2006, Official Report, columns 123-4WS.

Consultation concluded at the end of March and I am considering the 126 responses. While I am keen to make an announcement as soon as possible, this is an important and complex matter and I intend to give it full and careful consideration before doing so.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75103]

Gillian Merron: Across the Department for Transport, including its agencies, the number of staff who received markings indicating that performance was not acceptable or that objectives were not achieved were:

2004-05	79	0.7

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport and its agencies have recruited the following number of people over the age of 55 over the last three years:

	Number

Leominster Train Station

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to include Leominster train station on the Access for All Station List; and if he will make a statement. [78366]

Derek Twigg: The Access for All Station List published on 23 March 2006 details the stations that the Government have asked Network Rail to assess for improvement in the first phase of the 10 year Access for All programme up to 2009.

In due course we will draw up a list of stations for the next phase of the programme from 2009-14. Leominster will be assessed for inclusion alongside the other stations which have not been improved as part of the first phase.

M4 Widening

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions are under way on plans for M4 widening schemes. [76963]

Dr. Ladyman: The draft South East Plan contains a proposed infrastructure framework, including a proposal for widening the M4 between Junctions 5 and 8/9. The Highways Agency is in discussion with the South East England Regional Assembly and other regional stakeholders about this.

In the South West the M4 Junction 18 eastbound climbing lane scheme was opened to traffic in November 2005. There are no other widening plans at present, but the Greater Bristol Strategic Transport Study is examining possible widening of the M4 and publication of its recommendations is imminent.

Marine Environment

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria are used to identify Marine Environment High Risk Areas. [77664]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Lady to my answer of 8 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1519-21W to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Andrew George).

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons the Isles of Scilly are no longer a Marine Environment High Risk Area. [77665]

Dr. Ladyman: The Isles of Scilly have never been designated as a Marine Environmental High Risk Area (MEHRA). Although Lord Donaldson's report "Safer Ships, Cleaner Seas" suggested a number of areas that he felt might be identified as MEHRAs, some of these subsequently did not meet the criteria, based on environmental importance along with accident frequency and pollution risk from shipping. Only those areas which scored highly both in terms of environmental sensitivity and in terms of risk from shipping qualified as MEHRAs.

Consequently, the written statement from the former Secretary of State for Transport on 13 February 2006, Official Report, columns 58-59WS, announcing the locations of the MEHRAs, did not include the Isles of Scilly.

Nuclear Waste

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which London railway lines are used for the transportation of nuclear waste. [75851]

Derek Twigg: The Department does not hold this information. The transport of radioactive material by rail is a highly regulated activity that is carried out in accordance with stringent national and international regulations. The intention of the regulatory system is to ensure that these shipments are safe irrespective of the route chose.

Plymouth-Saltash Travel

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average daily flow of passengers was from Plymouth to Saltash in each of the last five years, broken down by mode of transport. [71885]

Derek Twigg: Information for rail is not collected in the form requested. Based on analysis of ticket sales data, the average number of daily passenger journeys made by train from Plymouth to Saltash in each of the last five financial years is estimated to be as follows:

	Journeys
2001-02	14
2002-03	10
2003-04	10
2004-05	9
2005-06	9

The information requested is not available for other transport modes.

TREASURY

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the letter of 12 April from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire on Interest in Possession Trusts. [78041]

Dawn Primarolo: I expect to be in a position to write to the hon. Gentleman in about a week's time in the light of the forthcoming debate in the Finance Bill Committee on inheritance tax provisions to which his letter refers.

Student Loans

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of outstanding student loans that will be written off over the next 30 years; and if he will make a statement. [75865]

Bill Rammell: I have been asked to reply.

Borrowers are required to repay student loans only when their income reaches the relevant income threshold; and loans are written off when borrowers reach the relevant age threshold, after 25 years, become permanently unfit for work, or die.[1]

At the end of the 2004-05 financial year our estimate was that, in England and Wales, £620 million of the £12.4 billion of outstanding income contingent maintenance loans and £420 million of the £1.5 billion of outstanding mortgage style loans would be written off. We do not estimate write offs which will occur specifically within the next thirty years as loans (particularly where borrowers do not reach the threshold) could have a longer lifetime.

[1] Income contingent loans will be written off after 25 years (instead of at age 65) for students receiving them for the first time from September 2006. Mortgage style loans will not be written off while arrears remain outstanding except in the case of death or disability.

Sunscreen (VAT)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost in VAT revenue forgone of reclassifying sunscreen as a preventative medicine rather than a cosmetic. [77526]

Dawn Primarolo: The VAT treatment of sun protection products is no different from the VAT treatment of medicines. VAT is not charged on medicines and sun protection products when dispensed by a pharmacist on the prescription of a registered doctor. When otherwise supplied by retail sale they are chargeable with VAT at the standard rate.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of new tax credit claims, renewals and change of circumstances were decided within five working days of receipt in each year from 2003-04. [75773]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) has Service Delivery Agreement targets for deciding tax credits claims, renewals and changes of circumstance within five working days. The performance for 2003-04 was published in the former Inland Revenue's Annual Report for 2003-04 and HMRC's Annual Report for 2004-05. These Reports are available on the HMRC website, www.hmrc.gov.uk. Indicative results for 2005-06 will be published in the spring Report in due course.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many claims there have been for tax credits in Birkenhead constituency at the latest available date; and how many were (a) overpaid and (b) underpaid. [78022]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 2003-04 and 2004-05 of the numbers of in-work families with tax credits awards, including information on overpayments and underpayments by constituency, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003-04 and 2004-05 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits. Finalised Awards 2003-04 Geographical Analysis" and the "Child and Working Tax Credits. Finalised Awards 2004-05 Geographical Analysis". These publications and provisional estimates for the number of in-work families by constituency with tax credit awards as at selected dates in 2005-06 are available on the HMRC website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-stats.htm

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the average tax credit overpayment in each region of the United Kingdom in 2005-06. [78126]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not available.

Estimates of numbers and values of overpayments or underpayments for 2005-06 awards at 5 April 2006 will not be available until after family circumstances and incomes for 2005-06 have been finalised.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people in Wales have received overpayments in (a) child tax credits and (b) working tax credits in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005; what the average overpayment was to such people; and if he will make a statement; [78289]

(2) how many people in Wales have received underpayments in (a) child tax credits and (b) working tax credits in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005; what the average underpayment was; and if he will make a statement. [78297]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 2003-04 and 2004-05 of the numbers of in-work families with tax credits awards, including information on overpayments and underpayments, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003-04 and 2004-05 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits Finalised Awards. 2003-04. Geographical Analyses" and the "Child and Working Tax Credits Finalised Awards. 2004-05. Geographical Analyses". These publications and provisional estimates for the number of in-work families by region with tax credit awards as at selected dates in 2005-06 are available on the HMRC website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-stats.htm.

We do not produce statistics separately for child and working tax credits.

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many overpayments of (a) child tax credits and (b) working tax credits to people living in Wales were clawed back in (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005; and if he will make a statement. [78298]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available in the format requested.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his latest estimate is of the amount of tax credit overpayments in (a) 2003-04 and (b) 2004-05 which will be recovered in each year from 2004-05 to 2012-13; and if he will make a statement. [78411]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on the 8 June 2006, Official Report, columns 861-62W.

Zimbabwe

Kate Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the value of (a) UK imports from Zimbabwe and (b) UK exports to Zimbabwe (i) was in each of the last three years and (ii) has been in 2006. [77692]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is as follows:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account his Department takes of (a) a local authority's performance in implementing the Hillingdon judgment and (b) the availability of appropriate welfare support when placing asylum-seeking children with local authorities. [76643]

Mr. Dhanda: I have been asked to reply.

The DfES collects annual statistics through the National Data Collection exercise on the number of children, including unaccompanied asylum-seeking children (UASC), who become looked after and the age at which they cease to be looked after. These figures show how local authorities are supporting looked-after children who are UASC.

Neither the Home Office nor the Department for Education and Skills places children with individual local authorities. However, immigration service and National Asylum Support Service officials do make referrals to local authorities of unaccompanied asylum-seeking children who appear to them to be children in need, within the meaning of the Children Act 1989. Where there is any doubt about the identity of the responsible local authority, this takes place in accordance with guidance that has been agreed with the Association of Directors of Social Services (ADSS).

The Home Office in partnership with DfES and relevant local authorities intends soon to consult on how consistent standards for the accommodation and support of unaccompanied asylum-seeking children might best be developed. The Home Office in partnership with DfES and relevant local authorities intends soon to consult on how consistent standards for the accommodation and support of unaccompanied asylum-seeking children might best be developed.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average cost was of detaining an individual in an immigration removal centre for one week in the latest period for which information is available. [76491]

Mr. Byrne: The average direct cost (not including overheads) of holding an individual in an immigration removal centre for one week is £812.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 4 April from the hon. Member for Aylesbury (reference B9272/6) about the application for leave to remain of Mr. S. K. of Aylesbury (case reference K426659). [76345]

Mr. Byrne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the hon. Gentleman on 14 June 2006.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister for Immigration, Citizenship and Nationality will reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby of 10 March in respect of the case of Ms Jane Okah Agwola. [76697]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 13 June 2006]: I replied to my hon. Friend on 14 June 2006.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional probation officers will be recruited in the London area to provide increased supervision of defendants following the implementation of the custody plus provisions of the Criminal Justice Act 2003. [76867]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 12 June 2006]: In September 2004, prior to the start of the Act's implementation, staffing in the London probation area stood at 2,459. By April 2006 it had risen to 2,759. The area is looking at further increases to take account of work arising from the Act and its other responsibilities.

Most of the sentencing provisions in the Criminal Justice Act were implemented in April 2005. We are working towards an implementation date of autumn 2006 for custody plus but we shall not go ahead unless we are satisfied that the national probation service can cope with the additional work.

Defendant Anonymity

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the granting of anonymity to defendants in certain cases in some EU member states and the implications for open justice. [77477]

Mr. Sutcliffe: None. Open justice is a fundamental principle of our criminal justice system which requires no support from comparative research. Nor would research into the practice in other EU jurisdictions necessarily be of assistance in forming a view on this issue, as defendant anonymity needs to be considered in the context of individual countries' criminal justice systems generally.

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department has spent on IT systems in each year since 1997; what the purpose of each system is; what the outturn against planned expenditure of each system was; and what the outturn time for implementation against planned time was. [41322]

Mr. Byrne: Since 1997 the Home Office has spent the amounts in the following table on its IT systems.

The increases over the years reflect an increasing usage of, and reliance on, technology to support all aspects of the Department's business. In addition, step changes reflect increases in scope of the central figures. For example, the creation of the National Probation Service in April 2001 brought probation IT costs within the scope of the Department's IT expenditure for the first time. New major IT contracts in the core Home Office and the Immigration and Nationality Directorate have also affected the profile of expenditure.

Detailed project information on: purpose; outturn against planned expenditure; or outturn time for implementation against planned time, for each IT system cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate costs.

Departmental Security

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which companies have contracts for providing security at his Department's premises. [73669]

Mr. Byrne: The companies which currently have contracts for providing security at the Department's premises are as follows:

Capita
Carlisle Security
Chubb Security Personnel Ltd.
First Security Group
Group four Securicor
ICTS Ltd.
Legion Security
OCS
Pegasus Security Group
Taylormade Investigations Security Services Ltd.

The list does not cover buildings where the Home Office is the minority occupier of premises and a contract has been placed by another Government Department as the major leaseholder with responsibility for perimeter security.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employers in the West Midlands have been prosecuted for employing illegal immigrants in each of the last 10 years. [75378]

Mr. Byrne: The Court Proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform shows that in the last 10 years there has been one prosecution in the West Midlands for employing illegal immigrants and this occurred in 2004.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, of (a) 4 April 2006 on behalf of Tafie Ahmed Saleh (Home Office reference number S1123081, acknowledgement reference B9194/6) and (b) 9 January on behalf of Mr. Tamburai Chirewo and Mrs. Tamari Chirewo (Home Office reference C1140345). [76468]

Mr. Byrne: The information is as follows.

(a) The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to my right hon. Friend on 13 June 2006.

(b) The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to my right hon. Friend on 13 June 2006.

Miscarriages of Justice

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many outstanding applications for compensation are being considered by the Independent Assessor to the Home Secretary on Miscarriages of Justice, broken down by the number of years the case has been under consideration. [76921]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There are currently 27 cases with the Independent Assessor for final assessment of compensation. Of those, two were submitted to him more than two years ago, two others more than one year ago. Those four applications form part of a large number of applications that arose from a series of quashed convictions relating to a wide-ranging fraud case. There are complex and overlapping issues affecting the whole group. All the applicants involved, including those who made final submissions, have been asked for further information in relation to their application. In a number of cases replies have not been received. The remainder were submitted to him within the last 12 months. Of those, 12 were submitted within the last three months, three between three and six months ago, seven between six and nine months, and one, also arising from the complex fraud case referred to, between nine and 12 months.

The four cases referred to the Assessor more than one year ago have all had interim payments awarded by him, and of the remaining 23 which were referred within the last year, 20 have had interim payments.

A further 109 cases have had eligibility confirmed by the Home Secretary. In these cases final submissions have not been made by the applicants and information regarding the level of compensation being claimed is awaited from the applicants or their representatives, before final assessments can be considered by the Assessor.

Mohammed Hussain

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the use of restraint on Mohammed Hussain in Rainsbrook secure training centre between July and August 2005; [77137]

(2) whether oxygen was provided to Mohammed Hussain following an incident of restraint at Rainsbrook secure training centre between July and October 2005; and if he will make a statement. [77138]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Police

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) police officers and (b) police community support officers were employed by each police force in each of the last five years. [75902]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is given in the table. Community support officers were introduced as part of the Police Reform Act 2002 so data are only available from 2003 onwards.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many DNA profiles of individuals (a) under and (b) over 16 years old living in North Somerset are held by Avon and Somerset constabulary; and how many have not been convicted of a criminal offence in each case. [73985]

Joan Ryan: There are an estimated 67,556 individuals who have a DNA profile on the National DNA Database (NDNAD) taken by Avon and Somerset constabulary, of which 1,994 are currently under 16 years of age and 65,562 are 16 years or over (as at 30 May 2006). Information held on the NDNAD is available on a police force area basis only and although the DNA sample in these cases was taken by Avon and Somerset constabulary, the individuals to whom the sample relates will not necessarily be resident in Avon and Somerset.

Data on whether these individuals have been convicted or acquitted of a criminal offence are held on the police national computer (PNC) but not on the NDNAD.

PNC data are available for 60,521 individuals only, of which 1,490 are under 16 years of age and 59,031 are 16 years or over. Of the 1,490 persons who are under 16, 1,243 have not been convicted of an offence and of the 59,031 persons who are 16 years or over, 15,824 have not been convicted of an offence. (It should be noted that for the purposes of these data, cautions are included as non convictions.)

The difference of approximately 7,000 individuals between the NDNAD records and the PNC records is largely accounted for by the fact that, until recently, records for persons who were acquitted of an offence were removed from the PNC, but retained on the NDNAD. It is not possible to provide a breakdown of the ages of these 7,000 who were acquitted as the records are no longer available.

Prisoner Transport

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1220W, on prisoners, (1) how many (a) pregnant and (b) mobility impaired prisoners have been transported in cellular vehicles in each of the last five years; [76434]

(2) how many complaints have been made in each of the last five years about the transportation of (a) pregnant and (b) mobility impaired prisoners; and what the nature was of each complaint; [76435]

(3) on how many occasions in each of the last five years (a) pregnant and (b) mobility impaired prisoners have not been assessed by prison operational managers and health care professionals prior to transportation; and if he will make a statement. [76436]

Mr. Sutcliffe: There is no requirement in the contracts for contractors to record separately the movement of pregnant and mobility impaired prisoners. Information on the transport of pregnant or mobility impaired prisoners in cellular vehicles is not recorded centrally.

There are a number of methods by which prisoners may make complaints. These are to prison staff at the establishment or to the senior operational manager as well as to Prison Service HQ. Complaints may also be made by prisoners under transport to the contractors. It has not proved possible to separate out complaints made by or about pregnant or mobility impaired prisoners from available records.

All prisoners should be assessed as being fit for travel by a health care professional before being transported. Guidance has been issued to all women's prisons to remind them of correct assessment procedures and there is a strong presumption that pregnant prisoners should not travel in cellular vehicles. A similar presumption applies to the transport of mobility impaired prisoners.

Prisons

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to avoid moving prisoners between establishments as a result of overcrowding, with particular reference to those who are participating in education programmes; and if he will make a statement. [77246]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 13 June 2006]: Prisoners are usually transferred when their security category has been changed, to enable them to meet the requirements of their sentence plan, for compassionate reasons, as part of their preparation for release and for operational security reasons. High population levels can also lead to prisoners being transferred to establishments with a greater number of vacancies.

Existing guidance requires prison governors to consider family contact issues and the education and training needs of individual prisoners before moving them, and to move them to prisons which can most suitably meet their work and training requirements.

The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) are developing new learning and skills delivery arrangements. These include plans to ensure educational records are available electronically when prisoners transfer between establishments.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to bring into use temporary pre-fabricated units to address prison overcrowding; and if he will make a statement. [77247]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 13 June 2006]: There are no plans to accommodate prisoners in temporary units such as the modular temporary units used in 2002.

Victims of Crime

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to prevent convicted criminals contacting (a) the victims of their crimes and (b) the relatives of their victims. [76782]

Mr. McNulty: Various arrangements are in place to reduce the risk of unwanted contact from offenders, including:

Victims or their relatives who receive unwanted contact from offenders in custody may contact the National Offender Management Service victims' helpline. Helpline staff will forward concerns to the relevant prison governor to consider and take action as appropriate.

The Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 places a statutory duty on the Probation Service to provide services to victims of crimes committed by specified offenders. Prior to such an offender being released from custody, victims receiving services under these arrangements will be asked if they wish to make representations about conditions that might be attached to an offender's licence. Conditions which relate to victims, might for example, include non-contact with the victim or members of their families or a geographical exclusion zone into which the offender is not allowed to travel. Breaches of these conditions can result in the offender's recall to custody.

Young Offenders

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the 10 to 17-year-olds who received a custodial sentence for breach of an antisocial behaviour order received a (a) concurrent and (b) consecutive custodial sentence for other matters in the period between December 2003 and September 2005; [77715]

(2) how many 10 to 17-year-olds received a custodial sentence for breach of an antisocial behaviour order in the period between December 2003 and September 2005; [77716]

(3) how many (a) antisocial behaviour orders and (b) individual support orders were issued to 10 to 17-year-olds in the period between December 2003 and September 2005; [77717]

(4) how many antisocial behaviour orders issued to 10 to 17-year-olds were breached in the period between December 2003 and September 2005. [77718]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 15 June 2006]: Antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) breach data are currently available for the period from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000.

The number of ASBOs issued at all courts to persons aged 10 to 17, as reported to the Home Office by the Court Service, from 1 December 2003 to 30 September 2005 is 2,085.

Individual Support Orders (ISOs) were introduced under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 as from 1 May 2004 and are available at the magistrates court for ASBOs issued on application only to persons aged 10 to 17. Between 1 May 2004 to 30 September 2005, of the 789 ASBOs issued on application at the magistrates court to 10 to 17-year-olds, 31 persons also received an ISO.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what alternatives to prison for convicted non-violent young offenders are available to the courts. [78652]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The range of non-custodial sentences available to the courts includes Referral Orders and Action Plan Orders for less serious and first time offenders through to the Community Rehabilitation Order and the Supervision Order, which are more robust and to which can be attached the Intensive Supervision and Surveillance Programme (ISSP).

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House which Private Members' Bills were drafted by his Department in each Session since 1997; and which subsequently received Royal Assent. [77840]

Mr. Straw: None.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Leader of the House (1) which Government Bills sponsored by his Department remain to be introduced during the 2005-06 Session; [77841]

(2) which Government Bills sponsored by his Department he has bid for in the next Session of Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [77842]

Mr. Straw: The Queen's Speech of 17 May 2005 and subsequent announcements have set out the Government's legislative priorities for this Session. Any further announcement relating to the legislative programme for the current session would be made at the appropriate time.

As Chair of the Cabinet Committee on the Legislative Programme, I am responsible for discussing with colleagues the Government's legislative priorities for the next Session. The outcome of those discussions will be set out in the Queen's Speech later this year.

Mr. Woodward: We have been facilitating discussions among publishers, authors, the Royal National Institute of the Blind, and the National Library for the Blind on a project to investigate the possibility of transforming published material into formats accessible to the visually impaired.

Currently, a feasibility study is under way and results will be reported back to a Steering Group, chaired by DTI officials, shortly.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what organisations she has consulted regarding the future of the Commonwealth Institute building. [77656]

Mr. Lammy: The future of the Commonwealth Institute building has been the subject of discussions with a number of Government Departments and the Commonwealth Institute. On 6 June I met the chairman and chief executive of English Heritage and my officials have met representatives of the Twentieth Century Society. Additionally representations have been received from a number of other organisations.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 8 June 2006, Official Report, column 788W, on the Commonwealth Institute building, what representations she has received from English Heritage on the future of the Commonwealth Institute building. [77698]

Mr. Lammy: I met the chairman and chief executive of English Heritage on 6 June to discuss the Commonwealth Institute building. During that discussion English Heritage raised a number of concerns. The meeting was constructive and discussions are ongoing.

Departmental Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the Answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1408W, on departmental advisers, what the reason was for the increase in money spent on travel and subsistence for special advisers between (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06. [77195]

Mr. Lammy: The increase in travel and subsistence expenditure over the last year is because the Department gained an additional Special Adviser, making three in total, in connection with the Secretary of State's additional responsibilities for Women, humanitarian assistance and the Olympics.

Ministerial Travel

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent on foreign travel by her Department in each of the last eight years. [76055]

Mr. Lammy: Departmental expenditure for overseas travel and subsistence by officials is shown in the table.

Regarding Ministers' visits overseas, since 1999 the Government have published, on annual basis, the total cost of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. This information is available in the Library. Information for the financial year 2004-05 was published on 21 July 2005, Official Report, 158WS. Information for the financial year 2005-06 is in the process of being collated and will be published shortly.

All official travel is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and Civil Service Management Code.

Olympic Games

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 935W, on the 2012 Olympics, when she expects to announce the constituencies to be visited as part of the 2012 Olympics roadshow. [78116]

Mr. Caborn: As soon as details of the roadshow itinerary are finalised, a list of the locations to be visited will be made available on the Department's website (www.culture.gov.uk). We expect this to be within the next week.

Taking Part Survey

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 11 June 2006, Official Report, column 483-84W, on activity levels, when the new national Taking Part survey first expects to report; and what criteria it will use to make an assessment of participation levels. [78234]

Mr. Lammy: First results from the Taking Part survey were published on the Department's website on 15 December 2005.

To date, three reports have been released on the survey results. These can be accessed at: http://www.culture.gov.uk/global/research/taking_part_survey/survey_ouputs. htm.

Two of the reports released so far have provided provisional baselines on the Department's public service agreement target 3 (PSA3). The third report looked more generally at participation and attendance across activities within the Department's remit.

For the two PSA3 reports participation levels are assessed against the definitions of the PSA3 target agreed with HM Treasury. These differ by type of activity and frequency for each sector. Full details are given in the technical note which is available at http://www.culture.gov.uk/about_dcms/publicservice agreements.htm.

In the third more general report the same criteria have been used except for arts and sports sectors. Full details of this difference are included in the report which was published on 24 March 2006 showing provisional results from the first six months of the 2005-06 survey.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Asylum-seeking Children

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps his Department takes to ensure that (a) the Hillingdon Judgment and (b) Local Authority Circular (2003)13 are applied by local authorities responsible for unaccompanied asylum seeking children. [76641]

Mr. Dhanda: The Department collects annual statistics through the National Data Collection exercise on the number of children, including unaccompanied asylum seeking children (UASC), who become looked after and the age at which they cease to be looked after. These figures show how local authorities are supporting looked after children who are UASC.

Adherence to the framework set by statute, regulations and guidance, including that relating to Local Authority Circular (2003)13, together with making appropriate responses to judicial review and other case law judgments, are matters that are the responsibility of local authorities.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding is available from central Government to support local authorities in the discharge of their obligations towards asylum seeking children. [76642]

Mr. Dhanda: Since 2004-05, my Department established the UASC Leaving Care Grant to assist those authorities facing increased financial pressure arising from the impact of the Hillingdon Judgment. Local authorities which support substantial numbers of such young people are eligible to receive funding through the grant, to assist towards meeting the costs of supporting additional numbers of "former relevant children" under Section 23C of the Children Act 1989.

In addition, the Home Office has, for a number of years, provided specific grant support to local authorities which support unaccompanied asylum seeking children aged under 18.

City Academies

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of children who attended city academies in the latest period for which figures are available had been statemented for special educational needs, broken down by academy; and if he will make a statement. [75371]

Mr. Dhanda: The available information is given in the table.

Final figures for 2006 are expected to be available by the end of June.

[1] Based on a snapshot count of students, as at 1 December each year.
[2] A new method of allocating students to subject groups was introduced in 2002-03, the main effect of which was to increase the number of students allocated to specific named subjects and decrease the number of students allocated to "Combined Subject" courses. This will have contributed to the rise in science enrolments between 2001-02 and 2002-03. Science includes medicine/dentistry, subjects allied to medicine, biological sciences, veterinary sciences, veterinary science, agriculture, physical sciences, mathematical sciences, computer science, engineering/technology and architecture.
[3] The classification of Government Office regions was revised in 2000-01. Merseyside has been included with the north west.

Note:
FE learning aim enrolments on aims classified as being in the 'Science and Mathematics' area of learning are given. Area of Learning is used rather than sector subject area as there are more historical data using this classification. Local office classification is based on the relation between providers and their lead LLSC. Data are not supplied for prior to 2002-03 as the definitions of programme areas and how to count learners changed at that point.

Student Finance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students have contacted the Student Loans Company with queries relating to student loans due to a change in employer in the tax year for each year since 2002; and if he will make a statement. [75321]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is not available. While the Student Loans Company does record information at individual account level, it is unable to break down the total number of contacts from borrowers to this level of detail.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to cut carbon dioxide emissions; and how regularly those steps will be reported on. [77679]

Ian Pearson: We announced on 12 June that we are taking another important step when it comes to greening Government, by committing to make by 2012 the Government office estate carbon neutral and committing to reduce Government's total emissions from buildings by 30 per cent.

This action is consistent with the new UK climate change programme, published in March 2006, which sets out the Government's commitments at international and domestic levels to meeting the challenges of climate change. It also includes a commitment to introduce a new annual report to Parliament on the level of greenhouse gas emissions in the UK and the steps the Government have been taking to reduce these. The first report is expected to be issued in spring 2007.

The UK's climate change programme 2006 is available on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/uk/ukccp/pdf/ukccp06-all.pdf.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he will reply to the letter of 16 March from the hon. Member for Aylesbury to the former Minister of State for Environment and Agri-Environment about climate change on behalf of Mr. T. R. of Princes Risborough. [76342]

Ian Pearson: I apologise for the delay in replying to the hon. Gentleman's letter. A response will be issued shortly.

Departmental Blog

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the start-up cost was for his departmental blog; how much he expects the blog to cost each year; and if he will make a statement. [77140]

Barry Gardiner: The initial start-up costs for the Secretary of State's blog were met by the then Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. Costs of transferring the blog to DEFRA (including design, text and administration changes) have amounted to approximately £1,250. Ongoing costs for hosting and support would amount to some £900 a year on the current basis. There will be further ongoing administrative costs, consisting of a percentage of an existing member of staff's time.

Electrical Goods

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to promote and support the use of dynamic power management devices in fridges, freezers and other electrical household white goods. [76749]

Ian Pearson: The Government are aware that a number of dynamic demand control devices have been or are being developed by manufacturers as a potential means for reducing the peak load demand on the power grid.

We are currently investigating, via a small scale test carried out by the Market Transformation Programme (MTP), what effect these devices have on the operation of cold appliances.

For further information on the MTP, please go to: http://www.mtprog.com/

Fruit and Vegetable Scheme

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the (a) 5 A Day and (b) school fruit and vegetable scheme. [68844]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The annual Food Standards Agency's consumer attitudes survey is used to track 5 A DAY awareness and consumption. The survey shows knowledge of the 5 A DAY message has increased from 43 per cent. in 2000 to 67 per cent. in 2005, while those claiming to have eaten at least five portions of fruit and vegetables the previous day has risen from 26 per cent. in 2000 to 30 per cent. in 2005.

The national foundation for educational research (NFER), in partnership with Leeds University, was commissioned by the Big Lottery Fund to carry out an evaluation of the school fruit and vegetable scheme. Results published in September 2005 demonstrated that children ate significantly more fruit while participating in the scheme. The results showed that increased consumption of fruit was not sustained when children's participation in the scheme came to an end. However, there was some evidence of increased knowledge of healthy eating, particularly in children from deprived areas.

We will be working to integrate the scheme more closely with other healthy eating initiatives in schools, to provide opportunities to maintain the behaviour change achieved by participation in the scheme.

Fungaflor

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when a replacement for Fungaflor will be licensed for use in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [76752]

Ian Pearson: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given on 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 892W.

Home Energy Conservation

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans he has to review the guidelines to energy conservation authorities on complying with the requirements of the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995, as set out in paragraph 9.24 of the 2003 Energy White Paper; and if he will make a statement. [76255]

Ian Pearson: We welcome the progress that local authorities have made in delivering their Home Energy Conservation Act reports to date. However, we recognise that more needs to be done in order to make further progress and have committed to reviewing the existing guidance and identifying how improvements can be made. The review will be launched this summer and will be concluded by the end of this year.

Hydroschemes

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria the Environment Agency uses to assess the environmental consequences of hydroschemes; what conclusion it came to on the Littlecombe site, Dursley; and on what basis. [76042]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency assesses each scheme on its own merits and has produced a guidance document entitled "Hydropower—A Handbook for Agency Staff", which is available to the public on request. It contains guidance for developers on the type of information they should consider as part of their responsibility to take account of the potential environmental impacts of hydroschemes.

The Environment Agency has not reached a conclusion about hydropower at the Littlecombe site, Dursley. Although it has discussed hydropower and what the developers would need to consider, the Agency has not yet received specific details or a consultation.

Water Framework Directive

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made by the Environment Agency in establishing river basin district liaison panels; and who are expected to be appointed as panel members. [74451]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency is in the process of establishing River Basin District Liaison Panels as part of stakeholder engagement and partnership working under the Water Framework Directive. The agency is putting in place one Liaison Panel for each River Basin District in England. Each panel will comprise the key organisations who are responsible for implementation, and others who can represent the public interest and help in driving behavioural change.

Water Services

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to generate competition in water services. [76633]

Ian Pearson: The Water Act 2003 introduced competition in water supply for large users. Licensed water suppliers are now able to compete with statutory water companies to supply customers with a consumption of at least 50 million litres per year. The Act provides a mechanism to alter the customer consumption threshold. A review of the threshold will take place in 2008 to consider the impact of the regime on drinking water quality, environmental protection, customer service and prices for eligible and other customers.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who is responsible for (a) setting leak reduction targets and (b) monitoring performance against those targets in the south east; and what assessment his Department has undertaken of the financial and technical tests used to monitor the performance of water companies. [76634]

Ian Pearson: Leakage targets are set and monitored by the Economic Regulator, Ofwat. They require water companies to compare the cost of reducing leakage and the value of the water saved, including any associated environmental and social costs and benefits.

In March 2003, the tripartite group of Defra, the Environment Agency and Ofwat published the report, "Future approaches to leakage target setting for water companies in England and Wales". This sets out the best practice principles in the economic level of leakage calculation. Ofwat assesses the water companies' economic levels of leakage analyses against these principles.

As well as analysing the companies' economic assessments, Ofwat also monitors their annual performance in managing leakage. This is done through an annual submission to Ofwat known as the June Return. Through this return the companies provide a full reconciliation of how all treated water put into supply is used, including the volume lost to leakage.

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers water companies have to take action against those people who are observed to be wasting water; and whether there are proposals for further such powers. [76743]

Ian Pearson: Water companies have powers under section 75 of the Water Industry Act 1991 and within the Water Supply (Water Fittings) Regulations 1999 to take action if they consider water supplied by the company is being wasted or is likely to be wasted. There are no current proposals for further such powers.

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether provision has been made for transporting excess water in the North to the South and South East. [75373]

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what research his Department has undertaken into the costs of (a) a national grid for water and (b) moving water through river systems; [75357]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the cost of moving water between water authorities. [75358]

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the cost of establishing a national water grid. [75856]

Ian Pearson: The concept of a national water grid has been raised many times in the last 30 years and was has never been considered remotely viable. It was most recently discussed at the Secretary of State's meeting on 1 June with representatives of water companies and the water industry regulators. It was rejected by all those present on the grounds of its disproportionate and unjustifiable cost, both for the environment and for water bills, compared with the benefits such a grid could deliver. This stance was informed by a recent desk study undertaken by the Environment Agency, which will be published later this summer.

A good deal of water is already transferred within water companies' areas of operation to give individual companies greater flexibility to meet local shortages. Longer distance links have long been established between, for example, Wales and the West Midlands and South East Lancashire, the Lake District and Lancashire, and from the Fenland watercourses to Essex.

The Environment Agency, in consultation with Ofwat, is able to propose to a water company that it enters into a bulk supply agreement with another water company, where it is necessary to secure the proper use of water resources.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) maximum usable water volume and (b) actual usable volume for water in each water supply company region was in each financial year since 1997. [76453]

Ian Pearson: The Water Services Regulation Authority (publicly known as Ofwat) publish data annually on the amount of water supplied by water companies.

Maximum usable water volumes are best indicated by the distribution input (total volume of drinking water put into the supply system per day). Actual usable water volumes are best indicated by the water delivered (total volume of drinking water delivered per day). Figures for each water supply company region in each financial year since 1997-98, in megalitres per day, were reported as follows:

Wild Boar

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what his policy is regarding the hunting of wild boar; and if he will make a statement. [75912]

David Miliband: There are no specific legal restrictions on shooting wild boar. However, the person doing the shooting must be authorised to do so on the land concerned, have an appropriate firearms certificate, and comply with other relevant firearms provisions.

Wild boar are feral animals, with general protection under the Protection of Animals Act 1911. This protects captive animals (including animals in traps) against unnecessary suffering, and the Wild Mammals (Protection) Act 1996 offers further protection against specific cruel acts, such as "impaling", "stabbing" or "beating".

A public consultation on future strategies for managing wild boar in England concluded on 6 January 2006. The consultation documents are available on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/consult/wild-boar/index.htm

Responses to the consultation will help to formulate a long term management policy to be announced later this year.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much import duty has been charged on goods entering Ascension Island in each year since 1976. [75457]

Mr. Hoon: Import duty on goods entering Ascension Island has only been levied since the introduction of a system of taxation in April 2002. Since that time total duties collected in each year are as follows:

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Tobacco	0	76,751	79,114	81,007
Alcohol	335,607	246,509	174,910	230,100
Fuel	72,000	73,500	74,165	[1]74,429
Total	407,607	396,760	328,189	385,537
Grand total		1,518,093

[1] 2005-06 subject to year end adjustments.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much export duty has been charged on goods leaving Ascension Island in each year since 1976. [75458]

Mr. Hoon: None. Ascension Island levies no export duty.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Answer of 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 185W, on Ascension Island, if she will place a copy of the Workmen's Protection (Ascension) Ordinance in the Library. [75463]

Mr. Hoon: A copy of the Workmen's Protection (Ascension) Ordinance has been placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many sites on Ascension Island

"no longer necessary for the purpose of the operation of the Long Range Proving Ground", as set out in Article IV (Provision of Sites), point 1, of the Bahamas Agreement 1956, the UK Government have ceased to provide for that purpose since 1976. [75464]

Mr. Hoon: Two. The United States' use of the "National Aeronautics Space Administration" site ceased in the early 1990s. Part of that site was then re-released and renamed in 1997. It was finally relinquished in March 2001.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the acquisitions that have taken place on Ascension Island since 1976 of private property to allow rights of way to the United States Administration as permitted in Article III (Rights of Way) of the Bahamas Agreement 1956. [75466]

Mr. Hoon: There have been no acquisitions on Ascension Island since 1976 of property to allow rights of way to the United States Administration as permitted in Article III (Rights of Way) of the Bahamas Agreement 1956.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many motor vehicles belonging to the United States Administration not used for purposes connected directly with the establishment, maintenance or use of the Long Range Proving Ground have paid taxes or fees relating to registration or licensing for use on Ascension Island since 1976 under Article XIII (Motor Vehicle Taxes) of the Bahamas Agreement 1956. [75467]

Mr. Hoon: None.

Base Leases (United States)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which bases leased to the United States as listed in Treaty Series No. 2 (1941) Cmd. 6259 and Treaty Series No. 65 (1950) Cmd. 8076 are still leased to the United States. [75459]

Mr. Hoon: None. In 2002 the Government and the Government of the United States terminated the 1941 Leased Bases Agreement.

Burma

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to secure a binding resolution on Burma at the United Nations Security Council; and if she will make a statement. [78100]

Mr. McCartney: We support all action by the United Nations which will help initiate a genuine process of democratic reform in Burma. We therefore support current proposals for a substantive discussion of Burma at the United Nations Security Council which we hope will lead to a resolution.

Coalition Information Centre

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many individuals are employed in the Coalition Information Centre; and what the budget was for this unit in each year since 2001. [77726]

Dr. Howells: The Coalition Information Centre (CIC) was formed in October 2001 and later changed its title to the Government Communication and Operations Centre. The unit had nine to 10 staff for most of its existence, rising briefly to some 28 during the Iraq conflict, before being wound up in May 2003. The majority of costs were staff salaries, paid by staff members home departments. Other costs covered accommodation and infrastructure and these were absorbed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Total budgets could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with representatives of the Democratic Republic of the Congo on (a) support for victims of rape, (b) prosecution of rapists and (c) prevention of further rapes. [76826]

Mr. McCartney: The UK frequently raises with the Congolese Government our concerns about wide scale sexual violence in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). In February, we and international partners formally presented President Kabila with a dossier cataloguing major abuses carried out by Congolese armed forces, including rape and sexual violence. We demanded that the perpetrators be brought to justice. A UK-drafted Resolution on DRC adopted at last year's United Nations General Assembly made clear that the Congolese Government must act decisively to reduce sexual violence.

We are supporting humanitarian agencies in providing medical assistance to victims of sexual violence, particularly in Eastern DRC. This includes funding the construction of a new wing at a hospital in South Kivu that treats rape victims. We also support the International Committee of the Red Cross's Gender Based Violence pilot programme. Through our local peace-building programme, we aim to tackle the underlying causes of sexual violence.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in her Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75119]

Mr. Hoon: Under the Department's performance improvement procedures introduced in October 2004, unacceptable performance has to be addressed as soon as it occurs rather than waiting for the appraisal cycle to complete. Central records record cases of poor performance current at the end of the appraisal year. The number of staff who did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report over the past three years was as follows:

	Number of staff	Percentage
2002-03	47	0.7
2003-04	37	0.6
2004-05	21	0.4

Annual report markings for 2005-06 financial year are not yet available.

Rigorous Performance Management is one of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's management priorities. New training for all senior managers in performance management was introduced in the last year.

India

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the attack on two Christian women in Nadia Village, Madhya Pradesh, India by Hindu extremists. [78140]

Dr. Howells: We are aware of media reports of this attack. We understand from our high commission in New Delhi that the Governor of Madhya Pradesh, Dr. Balram Jhakar, met the victims and has asked the Chief Secretary and Director General of Police to send him details of the incidents and a report on action taken. The case has also been registered with the police. Our high commission in New Delhi will continue to monitor the situation.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence there is of continuing direct help from the Government of Sudan to the Janjaweed. [76039]

Mr. McCartney: We believe that the Government of Sudan continues to have close contacts with the leaders of the so-called Janjaweed and to tolerate their activities. The UN Secretary General's report on Darfur on 19 May this year made several references to armed tribesmen supporting the Sudan armed forces in attacks against civilians in Darfur.

Under the Darfur Peace Agreement the Government of Sudan must draw up a plan to disarm the Janjaweed and to implement it witnin six months. We call on them to do so.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to help prevent the spread of Janjaweed attacks from Darfur into Chad. [77694]

Mr. McCartney: We are aware that Chadian rebels and Darfur militia continue to mount cross-border attacks into Eastern Chad from Darfur, which has led to the displacement of 50,000 Chadians. We are also aware of reports of Darfur rebels continuing to be supported by Chad. We are pressing the Government of Sudan to neutralise and disarm the Janjaweed and expel foreign fighters from Darfur as soon as possible, as required under the Darfur Peace Agreement. We are also pressing both Governments to fulfil their obligations under the Tripoli Agreement.

Uganda

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps (a) the Government and (b) the international community are taking towards bringing the conflict in Uganda to an end; and if she will make a statement. [76897]

Mr. McCartney: The UK, along with other members of the international community, is strongly supportive of efforts to resolve the long-running Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) insurgency and address the humanitarian problems in northern Uganda.

The UN has an important role to play. The UK was actively involved in securing the two recent UN Security Council Resolutions, 1653 and 1663, which have condemned the activities of militias and illegal armed groups such as the LRA.

The UK is encouraging the Ugandan Government to accept the appointment of a Special Envoy on the LRA. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development raised this with President Museveni on 16 May when they discussed the role a special envoy could play in achieving greater regional co-operation on the LRA issue.

We have welcomed the establishment by the Government of Uganda of the Joint Monitoring Committee (JMC) to improve the humanitarian situation in northern Uganda. The JMC is currently developing an action plan to take this work forward and our high commissioner in Kampala and Department for International Development Uganda are both closely involved in this.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of the Movement Act in Uganda on (a) the February 2006 multi-party elections and (b) its implication for the Ugandan multi-party political system; and if she will make a statement. [77467]

Mr. McCartney: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 345W, and to the reply given by the former Minister for Trade my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Keith Vaz), on 6 March 2006, Official Report, column 1179W.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response she has received from the Uganda authorities to the written statement of 29 May 2005 regarding (a) establishment of the rules for multi-party competition and (b) separation of the organs of state from the Movement in (i) law and (ii) practice; and if she will make a statement. [77471]

Mr. McCartney: On 29 April 2005 our high commission in Kampala issued a press release which reaffirmed the elements we considered necessary to achieving a legitimate process of political and constitutional change in Uganda. These included establishment of the rules for multi-party competition and separation of the organs of state from the Movement in law and practice.

In that statement we made clear that we were concerned by several aspects of the transition, including that insufficient progress had been made towards establishing a fair basis for a multi-party system. We therefore decided then to withhold £5 million of budget support (out of a total of £40 million for the financial year).

We have not received, nor would we expect to, a formal response to our press release. We have of course maintained a high-level dialogue with the Government of Uganda on all aspects of the transition to a multi-party system in the run up to the multi-party elections in February 2006. I will arrange for a copy of the statement to be placed in the Library of the House.

Whaling

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions (a) she and (b) her predecessor has had with Ministers from countries which are members of the Commonwealth on whaling; and if she will make a statement. [78036]

Mr. McCartney: Whaling is not part of the Commonwealth agenda and was not raised at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting last year.

Australia and New Zealand share the UK's view of whaling and co-operate bilaterally at official level.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Council Tax

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the average level of council tax has been in rural areas in each year from 1997 to 2005. [78207]

Mr. Woolas: The average level of band D council tax in rural areas since 1997-98 is tabled as follows. A district is classified as a rural area if it falls within category "Rural-50" or "Rural-80" of the rural definition and local authority classification published by Defra in 2005 (www.statistics.defra.gov.uk/esg/rural_resd/rural_definition.asp).

1998-99	740
1999-2000	796
2000-01	850
2001-02	904
2002-03	994
2003-04	1,127
2004-05	1,198
2005-06	1,248
2006-07	1,288

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the additional council tax revenue raised by local authorities as a result of setting second home council tax discounts lower than 50 per cent. in 2005-06. [78283]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stafford (Mr. Kidney) on 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1803W.

Fire Services College

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Fire Services College provides (a) training courses and (b) access to the college's library and online information and development resources to fire services in (i) the Crown dependencies, (ii) overseas territories, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) Commonwealth countries; and how much is charged by the college for those services to fire services in each category. [76270]

Angela E. Smith: The primary customer of the Fire Service College is the United Kingdom fire and rescue service. It has provided training to representatives from the categories of countries listed as follows: Crown dependencies and overseas territories, the Republic of Ireland and Commonwealth countries.

Charges for training are a commercial matter for the Fire Service College. It will depend on the number of people to be trained, the requirements of the course and the duration of training.

On-site access to the Library and Information Resource Centre (LIRC) is available to all staff and students (including all overseas students on study courses) of the Fire Service College. The Library and Information Resource Centre has Membership options for UK and Republic of Ireland Fire and Rescue Services, corporate and individual customers, and organisational membership can cost between £260 and £600 per year, depending on the size of the organisation and the services provided. It does not currently offer memberships to other overseas customers.

Foreign Travel

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much was spent on foreign travel by her Department and its predecessors in each of the last eight years. [76935]

Angela E. Smith: The former Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and the new Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) were created following the machinery of government changes on 29 May 2002 and 5 May 2006, respectively. The following table sets out the total expenditure on foreign travel for the former ODPM and DCLG (excluding the Government offices). Details of expenditure by predecessor Departments prior to the 2002-03 financial year could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

2002-03	251,162
2003-04	241,014
2004-05	245,360
2005-06	377,623
2006-07 (to date)	29,129

All travel by civil servants and Ministers is conducted in accordance with requirements of the Civil Service Management Code and the Ministerial Code and Travel.

Housing Development

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to prevent excessive land banking by housing developers. [66426]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Barker Review of Housing Supply considered the issue of land banking in assessing competition in house building, and did not find evidence of excessive land banking by house builders.

The Review did make recommendations designed to make the planning system, and its arrangements for releasing land for housing, more responsive to demand, in the interests of improving housing affordability. Draft Planning Policy Statement 3 published earlier this year is designed to achieve these objectives.

The Office of Fair Trading periodically reviews the house building sector. If there is evidence of anti-competitive behaviour which was against the consumer, including excessive land banking by house builders, OFT may consider the case for a reference to the Competition Commission.

The Department is concerned to ensure that there is proper competition in the house building sector and that land banking or the holding of options do not operate as a barrier to entry. We are continuing to keep this under review to ensure that greater land supply results in increased house building.

Local Strategic Partnerships

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has to increase the powers available to local strategic partnerships. [77107]

Yvette Cooper: LSPs, outside those areas receiving neighbourhood renewal funding, are currently entirely voluntary and therefore do not have any powers of their own.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (now Department for Communities and Local Government) undertook a consultation "Local Strategic Partnerships: Shaping their Future" from December 2005 to March 2006 which looked at the future of all LSPs, focusing on their role, accountability and capacity. As part of this consultation we proposed formalising the role of LSPs and ensuring the involvement of key agencies through establishing duties to co-operate with the local authority on named local delivery agencies. The results of the consultation are now being evaluated and decisions on whether this legislative option will be pursued will need to be taken in due course.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many local strategic partnerships are chaired by (a) an hon. Member, (b) a councillor, (c) a directly-elected mayor and (d) a representative from the (i) public sector, (ii) voluntary sector and (iii) business sector. [77181]

Mr. Woolas: Outside areas receiving neighbourhood renewal funding, LSPs are voluntary partnerships and hence are not monitored on an individual basis by the Department. However, we do evaluate all LSPs on a national basis and therefore are able to give indicative answers to these questions. The last evaluation of LSPs was conducted in 2004 (National Evaluation of Local Strategic Partnerships: Report on the 2004 Survey of all English LSPs ODPM 2005). This indicated the following split in LSP chairs:

	Percentage
Elected members	46
Local authority officers	7
Other public sector agency officers	16
Private sector representative	11
Voluntary and community representative	11

The question as to whether MPs or directly-elected mayors chaired LSPs was not specifically asked.

Portland PR

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what meetings officials in her Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with her Department and agencies for which she has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70042]

Angela E. Smith: There is no record of any meetings between Department for Communities and Local Government Officials and representatives of Portland PR.

Public Sector (Funding)

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from her Department and its predecessor in each of the last five years. [71788]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Communities and Local Government was formed in May 2006. Formerly this Department was the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister which was formed in May 2002.

The following lists in alphabetical order the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest payments from the Department in financial years 2003-04, 2004-05 and 2005-06.

Right to Buy

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance her Department issues to local authorities on whether sections 185 and 187 of the Housing Act 2004 apply to right to buy purchases completed prior to January 2005. [76249]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer12 June 2006]: The Department issued a letter to local authorities on 18 January 2005 providing guidance on the changes to the right to buy under the Housing Act 2004, including the application of sections 185 and 187. No further guidance has been issued.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Gerson Report

Peter Viggers: To ask the Solicitor-General how many civil servants were employed in the Law Officers' Departments before the Gershon Report; what net reductions are proposed in the Gershon Report; how many reductions have been made; and how many civil servants are expected to be employed in the Law Officers' Departments in the Gershon target month of April 2008. [74288]

The Solicitor-General: It is unclear whether the hon. Member includes in his request the CPS. The information requested on the numbers of civil servants employed in the Law Officers' Departments is given in the following table which includes the CPS:

Department	Numbers employed before the Gershon Report	Net reduction proposed in the Gershon Report	Reductions already made	Number expected to be employed in April 2008
Crown Prosecution Service	7,336	0	0	8,249
Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office		Established 18 May 2005[1]
Serious Fraud Office	264	0	0	[2]
Treasury Solicitor's Office (including Attorney-General's Office and HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate)	816	36	10	780

RCPO replaced the former Customs and Excise Prosecutions Office which was required to reduce 10 posts. It achieved this through natural wastage in 2004-05[1]

SFO staff numbers have risen to 330 employees to date in accordance with staffing plans agreed in Spending Review 2004. There was no headcount target for April 2008[2].

The increase in CPS staff reflects agreed additional resources to improve performance by delivering the new statutory charging scheme, the No Witness, No Justice initiative, by recovering more criminal assets and extending the use of CPS advocates in the Crown and magistrates courts.

TSol continues to recruit staff as business demand continues to grow but the introduction of efficiencies ensures that the growth in headcount is lower than the growth in business.

Staff Development

David Simpson: To ask the Solicitor-General what the total cost was of (a) staff away-days and (b) staff team-building exercises in his Department in each of the last three years. [68986]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments are committed to developing their staff to their full potential and to the benefits that are achieved from holding away-days and team-building exercises. However, identifying details of such expenditure for the many offices of the Crown Prosecution Service would incur disproportionate cost. Figures for the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office (RCPO), Serious Fraud Office (SFO), Treasury Solicitor's Department (TSol) and HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate (HMCPSI) in 2003-04 to 2005-06 are shown in the following table.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Access to Work

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much of the Access to Work budget for the last five years has been claimed by organisations in Stoke-on-Trent, North. [68315]

Mrs. McGuire: Access to Work funds individuals and not organisations. The information requested is not available. However, the Access to Work spend for all customers is in the following table.

Access to Work actual spend for all customers in the West Midlands

	Spend in £
2002-03	5,125,978
2003-04	4,859,918
2004-05	5,007,797
2005-06	4,193,397

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much his Department plans to spend on the Access to Work scheme in each year to 2010; [75168]

(2) how he plans to extend the Access to Work scheme. [75170]

Mrs. McGuire: Access to Work spend has increased from £14.6 million in 1997-98 to £59.5 million in 2004-05. DWP has allocated £62 million in 2006-07 for Access to Work, and this programme is now helping some 32,000 disabled people to move into or retain jobs they might otherwise lose because of their disability.

No decisions on funding have been made beyond 2006-07.

Last month I asked Jobcentre Plus to withdraw Access to Work funding in respect of people directly employed by Government Departments. The Departments will still be able to use Access to Work expertise in determining appropriate workplace adjustments, however, the adjustments will be funded from their own resources. This decision will take effect from October 2006 and is in line with practice in my Department since 2003 and with the recommendations of the Prime Minister's strategy unit report 'Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People'.

The savings realised by this change will be re-invested in the programme, and, as a result of this change, support for disabled people will be more greatly focused towards those disabled people who work for small and medium sized employers.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were (a) convicted and (b) acquitted of benefit fraud offences in each of the last three years, broken down by type of offence; how many of those convicted of each type of offence in each year were sentenced to (i) immediate custody and (ii) other disposals, broken down by type of disposal; what the (A) mean average and (B) longest individual custodial sentence imposed in each year was for each type of offence; and if he will make a statement. [73442]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information regarding types of offence, types of sentence and the length of custodial sentences is not available. The available information is in the following table.

Number of people convicted and acquitted of benefit fraud (excluding housing benefit and council tax benefit)

	Convicted	Acquitted

2004-05	8,573	97
2005-06	8,858	136

Fraud Information by Sector (FiBS)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many local authority benefit fraud investigators have (a) commenced and (b) completed the Professionalism in Security Accredited Counter Fraud Officer Scheme. [73443]

Mr. Plaskitt: Up until the end of March 2006, 1,875 local authority benefit fraud investigators had commenced and completed the Professionalism in Security (PinS) training scheme. In addition a further 80 have started but have not yet completed their training.

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73934]

Mr. Plaskitt: In his role as the Department for Work and Pensions Sustainable Development Minister, Lord Hunt of Kings Heath has responsibility for monitoring the Department's compliance with section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000.

The Department is office-based, occupying mostly urban sites. As part of the private finance initiative maintenance of landscapes has been outsourced to our estates partner—Land Securities Trillium.

Initial biodiversity assessments were carried out on all sites within the estate to identify the scope of biodiversity. Further surveys of the more significant sites are currently under way. It has been identified that there is limited potential to significantly increase biodiversity, however working in collaboration with its PFI estates partner a number of measures have been implemented. These include changes to mowing regimes, the introduction of log piles and the increase in leaf mould, on appropriate sites.

Further to this, two sites have been identified where there is more scope to improve biodiversity. Land Securities Trillium have committed £5,000 to implement a number of additional measures.

Land Securities Trillium are fully aware of any legal requirement and obligations contained within the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000.

Carer's Allowance

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 27 March 2006, Official Report, columns 721-22W, on carer's allowance, what the cost to public funds would be if the listed number of recipients of carer's allowance were receiving the standard rate of the allowance, in addition to their basic state pension. [65493]

Mrs. McGuire: Figures derived from new DWP national statistics published on 27 April indicate that in Wales at 30 November 2005, there were some 940 carers aged 60 and over receiving carer's allowance at a non-standard rate. A breakdown of this figure by gender and Welsh parliamentary constituency is in the table. This information was not available for the reply I gave to my hon. friend on 27 March 2006, Official Report, columns 721-22 because the data then available for the numbers of recipients of carer's allowance at 31 August 2005 were rounded to the nearest 100, and this did not permit figures for the recipients of a non-standard rate of the allowance in each constituency to be provided where they numbered fewer than 50. The new statistical data are rounded to the nearest 10 and, as shown in the table, this does permit figures for the recipients in each constituency to be provided where they number five or more. The estimated additional annual cost to public funds of paying the standard weekly rate of carer's allowance to the carers listed in the table, rather than the non-standard rate they are receiving, would be around £1.25 million at current benefit rates.

DWP Information Directorate: Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will change his policy on ceasing carer's allowance on receipt of the state retirement pension at age 60; and if he will make a statement. [77711]

Mrs. McGuire: We have no current plans to change the policy on overlapping benefits in respect of carer's allowance and retirement pension.

It is a basic principle of the social security system that only one benefit at a time can be paid for the same purpose. Even though the circumstances which give rise to entitlement to carer's allowance and state pension are different, they are both designed to provide a degree of replacement for lost or forgone income. Carer's allowance was designed to provide a measure of replacement income where the duties of caring for a severely disabled person prevent the prospect of full-time work and the earnings it would yield. State pension was designed to provide a replacement income in retirement.

Although an entitlement to both benefits will mean that carer's allowance is not payable, or not payable in full, an underlying entitlement to carer's allowance gives access to additional financial support through the carer premium in housing benefit and council tax benefit and since 2003 the additional amount for carers in state pension credit.

Child Support

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will instruct the chief executive of the Child Support Agency to re-investigate the reasons for the reduction in child support paid to Mrs. N Darling of Dunstable; and if he will ask the chief executive of the Child Support Agency to allocate experienced forensic accountants to the case. [76047]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will instruct the Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency to reinvestigate the reasons for the reduction in child support paid to Mrs N Darling of 6 Coombe Drive Dunstable; and if he will ask the Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency to allocate experienced forensic accountants to the case.

As details about individual cases are confidential I have written to you separately about this case.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) fathers and (b) mothers have responsibility for (i) one, (ii) two, (iii) three, (iv) four, (v) five, (vi) six, (vii) seven and (viii) eight or more children in different households for whom there is a maintenance liability. [71471]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the matter for the chief executive. He will write to the right hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. As he is currently on leave, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many (a) fathers and (b) mothers have responsibility for (i) one (ii) two (Hi) three (iv) four (v) five (vi) six (vii) seven and (viii) eight or more children in different households for whom there is a maintenance liability.

Having contacted your office for clarification, we understand that the information you required was the number of non-resident parents by gender, and the number of CSA cases for which the non-resident parent has a liability.

This information is presented in the attached table.

I hope you find this useful.

The number of non-resident parents by gender and the number of cases for which the non-resident parent is responsible; at March 2006.

	Non-resident parent
Cases	Female	Male
1	70,000	1,009,000
2	1,000	47,000
3	—	3,000
4 (or more)	0	—

Notes:
1. The above includes cases that are open and have received a full maintenance calculation, full maintenance assessment or default maintenance decision. Cases where a nil liability has been established are included, but old scheme cases with a punitive Interim Maintenance Assessment are excluded, as are new scheme cases being processed clerically.
2. Volumes are rounded to the nearest thousand. '?' indicates a figure less than 500.

Communication Support Professionals

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what level of proficiency is expected of a sign language interpreter booked through the Access to Work scheme; and what steps his Department takes to ensure that this standard is met; [74545]

(2) what guidelines are issued to Access to Work staff on the provision of communication support professionals for deaf and hard of hearing people; and what steps are taken to monitor their implementation. [74546]

Mrs. McGuire: Each Access to Work application for help with interpreting support is dealt with on an individual basis. Guidance is issued to Access to Work advisers which asks them to take into account the customer's job role, their disability and any other help that might meet their needs at work. An expert assessment is commissioned, should there be any doubts as to what support might be necessary.

Access to Work policy guidance states that where British sign language interpretation is required, that a registered trainee interpreter (who has passed their stage 3) should be provided as a minimum.

All Access to Work business centre managers are routinely asked to ensure that the policy guidance is being adhered to within their teams.

In addition to this, Access to Work policy managers have been working in partnership with the Chief Officers' Group (a network of senior representatives of deaf organisations) to develop guidance on the likely level of qualification an interpreter might need in order to support someone to carry out various work-related tasks. This guidance is in draft format at the moment, but will be finalised and distributed to all business centres during June.

Departmental Annual Reports

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75095]

Mrs. McGuire: The Performance and Development System (PDS) appraisal policy, introduced for the 2003-04 financial year, allows the allocation of a Lower (U) box mark to denote unsatisfactory performance:

In 2004-05, 35 people were awarded a Lower (U) box mark. This represented 0.03 per cent. of the total number of employees (127,828) allocated a box mark in this period.

In 2003-04, 60 people were awarded a Lower (U) box mark. This represented 0.05 per cent. of the total number of employees (131,312) allocated a box mark in this period.

It should be noted that a new DWP disciplinary policy was introduced in October 2004 incorporating amendments to the Employment Act 2002. Previous to this, each of the businesses had their own guidance on disciplinary procedures. It is possible that this change in process may account for some of the change in the numbers allocated Lower (U) between 2003-04 and 2004-05.

Previous to the introduction of PDS, there were several box marking systems in concurrent use in different parts of the DWP. There was not a universally applicable equivalent of the PDS Lower (U) category and, hence, it is not possible to provide comparable statistics for 2002-03.

Departmental Pension Liability

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75237]

Mrs. McGuire: On 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90 a technical note by HM Treasury was placed in the Library of the House following an oral statement in Parliament by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury. This note is a full statement about these liabilities and provides detailed information about the size and nature of the liabilities and how they are calculated.

Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual Departments, they are estimated for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in table 1 of the technical note.

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department were (a) civil servants, (b) contractors and (c) other staff in each year since 1997. [27453]

Mrs. McGuire: The number of civil servants in the Department between 1998 and 2004 can be found at Table C on the Civil Service Statistics which shows permanent staff numbers (FTE basis) in each Department and agency.

Civil Service Statistics 2004 are available in the Library and on the Cabinet Office Statistics website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_of_the_civil_service/statistics/civil_service_statistics/index.asp

The data for 1997 can be obtained from Table C in Civil Service Statistics 2003.

Civil Service staffing trends by Department are now published by the Cabinet Office on a quarterly basis via its statistics website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management_information/statistical_information/statistics/index.asp

The most recent figures reflecting staffing as at 31 December 2005 were published on 7 April 2006.

For ease of reference the figures since 1 April 2002, the first available since the Department's formation in June 2001, are in the following table:

	Number of staff
1 April 2002	125,910
1 April 2003	127,000
1 April 2004	129,200
31 March 2005	121,020
31 December 2005	117,680

Notes:
1. Figures are FTE rounded and include temporary staff.
2. Figures from 2002 to 2004 exclude staff on paid maternity leave.
3. Figures from 31 March 2005 are based on the Office for National Statistics definition.

No central data are held on the number of contractors or agency workers employed by the Department. The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in his Department have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet while at work and (ii) using work telephones to access premium rate numbers in each of the last five years. [68001]

Mrs. McGuire: The information on the number of people disciplined and dismissed for inappropriate use of the internet for the period July 2003 to September 2005 is shown in the following table. No information is available for the period before July 2003.

Number of disciplinary and dismissal actions against DWP employees that were as a result of internet abuse

	Disciplined	Dismissed
July 2003 to December 2003	124	6
January 2004 to December 2004	190	18
January 2005 to December 2005	100	34

No information is held on the number of disciplinary actions or dismissals for using work telephones to access premium rate numbers.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what incentives his Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73104]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department for Work and Pensions' staff are encouraged to set up car sharing schemes; details of the benefits of car sharing and how to start and run schemes are on the departmental intranet. Staff are encouraged to participate in schemes run by other organisations, for example, local authorities.

The Department also offers other incentives to encourage more sustainable forms of travel; these include salary advances for the purchase of season travel tickets and bicycles. Concessionary bus passes are available in some locations and the Department also provides showers and changing facilities at a number of sites.

The Department promotes sustainable travel to work. Sustainable Transport Travel pages are available on the intranet. The travel pages promote awareness of travel options and include a copy of the Departmental Generic Travel Plan. Details of greener forms of transport are also included in the Departmental Induction Pack.

Departmental Targets

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps are being taken to improve reporting of performance against Departmental targets. [76517]

Mrs. McGuire: Performance towards achieving the Department's Public Service Agreement targets, and progress with its efficiency challenge, is reported on twice a year in the spring Departmental Report and the Autumn Performance Report.

This reporting complies with HM Treasury guidelines, and takes account of suggestions for improvement from the Parliamentary Scrutiny Unit, from the Work and Pensions Committee and the National Audit Office.

In addition, the Department reviews the quality of performance reporting on an ongoing basis, and seeks to implement improvements to the accuracy, consistency and coverage of its reporting wherever possible.

Disability Discrimination Legislation

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in making the Department compliant with the provisions of disability discrimination legislation. [75481]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is as follows:

Disability Equality Scheme

One of the main ways DWP is already working towards ensuring compliance with existing and new Disability Discrimination legislation is through publication of its Disability Equality Schemes by 4 December 2006. Businesses and corporate centre directorates will be involving disabled people in developing action plans for tackling problem areas and identifying positive actions to address these. The process to develop our Schemes was formally launched on 12 April 2006 by the Permanent Secretary. We have begun the process of involving both staff and customers in developing our Schemes and are planning a training strategy to ensure our staff are aware of the new legislation.

Equality Impact Assessment

We advise that all parts of DWP undertake to consider the potential impact of policy and services on all equality groups and we are implementing a new impact assessment tool across all diversity areas. We have already undertaken at least three impact assessments taking into account disability, with a number of additional assessments in the process of being completed.

Premises

DWP commissioned public access audits of all its premises used by the public during 2003. The results were used to develop a programme of public access improvements that was implemented in the following year and completed in March 2005, with the exception of a small number of Jobcentre Plus refurbishment programme sites, scheduled for completion in June 2006.

A total of 1,735 buildings were surveyed with access impotents works being undertaken at 1,032 sites at a cost of £4 million. The existing public access provisions are subject to annual review and any future additional requirement is built into the annual maintenance work programmes.

Disability Confident

The Department has worked in partnership with the Employers' Forum on Disability (EFD) in order to address the needs of its disabled customers. In particular, it has contributed, along with other public and private organisations, to the highly acclaimed interactive "Disability Confident" training resource pack.

Reasonable Adjustment pilots

DWP has been running two pilot exercises in the Disability and Carers' Service (DCS) on a revised process for delivering reasonable adjustments. The development of the new process was partly in response to the length of time it took to assess and put reasonable adjustments into place and partly to ensure that the recommended adjustment was the most suitable for that individual. The new process opens formal communication channels between suppliers and so far, the results have been positive. There has been a notable reduction in the time it is taking to achieve a successful outcome.

A third pilot is due to start in Jobcentre Plus shortly. We are already planning national implantation.

Diversity toolkit

We want our staff to understand and embrace diversity. An important part of achieving this has been our Diversity Toolkit.

The Toolkit makes all our diversity and equality information in one place. It sits on our internal website, where staff can work through its training modules at their own pace.

The Toolkit has been commended by the Institute of Welfare and is now being used, not only by them but also by around 70 other organisations, including the Metropolitan Police.

Disability Living Allowance

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the cost of extending entitlement to the higher rate for Disability Living Allowance for mobility to all people of a qualifying age who are registered blind. [75336]

Mrs. McGuire: The estimated cost of extending automatic entitlement to the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance in this way would be about £61 million a year at current benefit rates[1].

[1] The estimate is based on the latest (31 March 2003) figures for the numbers of registered blind people in England, Scotland and Wales and on 100 per cent. data for the numbers of disability living allowance recipients as at November 2005 from the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study.

Forced Sterilisation

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to ensure the inclusion of an article prohibiting forced sterilisation of children with disabilities in the forthcoming UN Convention on People with Disabilities; and if he will make a statement. [74987]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government consider that this matter is already addressed in general terms in the article in the present draft text of the convention concerning respect for home and the family, but would be prepared to consider any more specific proposals put forward during the next negotiating session on the draft convention in August 2006.

Gaming Machines

Mrs. Dean: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of the change in the number of gaming machines manufactured in the UK over the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [77152]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

My officials and I have regular discussions with the key trade bodies representing, and companies from, the gaming machine manufacturing sector.

These discussions provide the opportunity for the Department to gain a good understanding of the gaming machine industry and the issues it is facing. I will shortly be undertaking a fresh round of meetings with the industry.

Gershon Report

Peter Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many civil servants were employed in his Department before the Gershon report; what net reductions are proposed in the Gershon report; how many reductions have been made; and how many civil servants are expected to be employed in his Department in the Gershon target month of April 2008. [74286]

Mrs. McGuire: As set out in the Gershon Review the Department is planning to reduce staff numbers by a net 30,000 full-time equivalents by the agreed date of 31 March 2008 from a baseline of 132,550 as at 1 March 2004. As at 31 December 2005 the reduction achieved was 14,860.

Planned staffing in the Department at 31 March 2008 is 102,550 full-time equivalents.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them was. [73956]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not routinely obtained. In common with all Government Departments, DWP has in place standard pre-appointment checks which are carried out during the recruitment process and which are intended to ensure that the employment status of all applicants is confirmed prior to them being offered a post. These controls also have the effect of deterring prospective applicants who are not entitled to work in the UK. Decisions on the legality of an individual's status would be determined by the immigration authorities. Any information that comes to light during the recruitment process which raises a question about the immigration status of any individual applicant would be dealt with at the time. Where appropriate, authorities would be consulted on individual cases.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2006, Official Report, column 1350W to the hon. Member for Putney (Justine Greening), on incapacity benefit, when he expects his Department to conclude its review of the incapacity benefits caseload forecasts; and whether he plans to publish the forecasts. [73262]

Mrs. McGuire: The latest forecast estimates of the number of incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance claimants, consistent with the best available data, are shown up to 2019-20 in the following table. These forecasts do not take into account any of the proposed policy changes in the recent papers, "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work", or "Security in retirement: towards a new pensions system".

Estimated numbers of working-age claimants of incapacity benefit or severe disablement allowance, 2005-06 to 2019-20

	Thousand Number
2005-06	2,710
2006-07	2,650
2007-08	2,570
2008-09	2,490
2009-10	2,430
2010-11	2,400
2011-12	2,390
2012-13	2,370
2013-14	2,360
2014-15	2,350
2015-16	2,360
2016-17	2,380
2017-18	2,410
2018-19	2,440
2019-20	2,470

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10,000.
2. Figures are forecasts, therefore subject to future revisions.
3. Figures include the impact of the one-third rollout of Pathways to Work and estimates of the impact of equalisation of state pension age on the IB caseload.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many days have been lost to sickness absence in each of the last three years in Jobcentre Plus. [64500]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 20 April 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many days have been lost to sickness absence in each of the last three years in Jobcentre Plus. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The information is in the table.

Number of days lost to sickness absence in Jobcentre Plus

	Working days lost	Working days available	Average working days lost per staff full time equivalent (days)
2003-04	1,055,680	20,721,054	12.7
2004-05	978,869	19,573,156	12.5
2005-06	811,168	19,099,391	10.6

Jobcentre Plus has placed a great deal of emphasis on reducing sickness over several years and we continue to press for further improvement.

I hope this is helpful.

Large Print Materials

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of materials produced by his Department is available in large print. [75480]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department will, on request, supply any of its materials in large print.

Learning Disabilities (Work Opportunities)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the report of the joint Department for Work and Pensions/ Department of Health working group on learning disabilities, "Improving Work Opportunities for People with a Learning Disability". [75081]

Mrs. McGuire: The report "Improving Work Opportunities for People with a Learning Disability" is a report of a working group on learning disabilities and employment. The working group's report is to Ministers and to the Learning Disability Task Force and I expect it to be published shortly.

Poverty

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the Government (a) defines and (b) measures severe poverty; and if he will make a statement. [60606]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Specific information regarding low income for Wales, Scotland and the English regions is available in the latest publication of "Households Below Average Income 1994-95 to 2004-05". The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income.

Our current approach in "Opportunity for all" is to present a range of low-income thresholds (50, 60 and 70 per cent.). This gives an idea of the depth of poverty and it is simple to interpret. Indeed, the incorporation of two different relative low-income thresholds into our new child poverty measure (60 and 70 per cent. of median), together with the absolute tier, further ensures that different depths of poverty will be looked at separately.

We know that there are some anomalies at the very bottom end of the income distribution, due to people misreporting income, to self-employment, and to people on temporary zero income but with high living standards (e.g. students, people taking a career break). These become proportionally more important the smaller the group we focus on. That is part of the reason that, from next year, we will be collating material deprivation data as well, excluding people with low measured income but high living standards.

Sickness/Unauthorised Absence

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the level of (a) sickness and (b) unauthorised absence was in (a) his Department and (b) each of its agencies in each year since 1996-97; what progress has been made in meeting targets for a reduction in sickness and unauthorised absence; and if he will make a statement. [41328]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is as follows.

Days lost to sickness

The information available is contained in the following tables. The figures represent average working days lost per staff year, and have been drawn from the Cabinet Office's annual reports on sickness absence in the civil service. The information for 2005 is not yet available.

The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in 2001. The overall figures prior to this date relate to absence levels in the Department of Social Security and the Employment Service. A comprehensive breakdown of the DSS agencies' figures prior to 2001 is not available.

Table 1: Sickness absence information for the former DSS and ES

Department	1998	1999	2000
Employment Service	—	11.5	11.8
Department of Social Security	10.8	10.9	11.0

Table 2: Sickness absence information for DWP

Business	2001	2002	2003	2004
Appeals Service	—	—	—	—
Child Support Agency	11.0	11.6	13.8	11.6
Disability and Carers Service	—	—	—	—
Employment Service	12.8	13.5	—	—
Jobcentre Plus (Benefits Agency pre-2002)	10.6	10.8	12.0	9.8
The Pension Service	—	—	10.5	9.5
DWP overall	11.1	10.8	11.6	9.6

Since the end of 2004, the Department's internal figures indicate a further reduction of over 12 per cent. This improvement has been achieved by, among other things, increasing staff awareness of the issue and management's commitment to reducing absence levels; greater compliance with revised procedures, which were commended by the National Audit Office; improved management information about the level and type of absences through the introduction of a new computer system.

Days lost to unauthorised absence

The available information is in the following table. Information about unauthorised absences in DWP prior to 2003 is not fully available. The vast majority of these days lost are through industrial action. Days lost for reasons other than industrial action are negligible. If they occur, they are dealt with under the Department's disciplinary procedures.

Table 3: Average working days lost due to all unauthorised absences

DWP business	2003	2004	2005 (end October)
Appeals Service	—	—	—
Child Support Agency	0.01	2.21	0.03
Disability and Carers Service	0.01	1.94	0.03

Disability and Carers Service	0.01	0.02	0.03
Jobcentre Plus	0.01	0.04	0.03
The Pension Service	0.01	0.07	0.03
DWP overall	0.01	0.04	0.03

Special Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [68992]

Mrs. McGuire: Because the specification requires data to be broken down into salary, travelling, subsistence and relocation, from three separate sources we are unable to supply information as this would involve disproportionate cost.

Telephone Helplines

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone helplines his Department sponsors; and how many calls each helpline received in each of the last six years. [42540]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is in the following table:

[1] Calls received is defined as calls offered to helpline sites during business hours. It includes calls that are answered and where the customer abandons the call.
[2] CSA does not hold sufficiently robust information for calls in 2000-02. Figures for 2005-06 are up to the end of December 2005 only.
[3] The Pension Service was launched in April 2002, when the majority of the contact centres/help-lines became fully operational. Appropriate data collection processes were put in place by August 2003; robust data are not available prior to August 2003. The Pension Credit Application Line came into operation in April 2003, data from that date are given in the response.
[4] Not in operation.
[5] There are 37 Jobcentre Plus Contact Centres of which: 27 provide First Contact and Jobseeker Direct services (22 CM5 sites), nine are Employer Direct and one is the National Benefit Fraud Hotline.
[6] Employer Direct was in its development and set up phase during 2001-02
[7] Jobseeker Direct—We do not hold any data for 2000-01 and 2001-02 as during that period the Jobseeker Direct function was being carried out in Districts. 23 sites deliver the Jobseeker Direct function (of these five are Employer Direct sites and two are Residual Jobseeker Direct sites).
[8] First Contact—The First Contact function did not commence until June 2004 therefore there is no data for previous periods. 25 sites deliver the First Contact function.
[9] Prior to 2004-05, National Benefit Fraud Hotline only measured calls answered.
[10] Debt recovery service is not specifically a helpline. Data for 2003-04 is from October 2003 onwards.

UN Draft Disability Treaty

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he has sent officials to participate in negotiations on the UN draft Disability treaty. [75341]

Mrs. McGuire: My Department has led the UK delegation since the start of negotiations in 2002, and officials from my Department and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office have participated in all the negotiating meetings on the draft UN Disability convention.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Government plans to bring forward changes to UK legislation to be compatible with the UN draft Disability treaty. [75296]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government actively support the Draft UN Disability Convention and are playing an active role in its negotiation. When the text is adopted by the UN General Assembly the Treaty will be open for signature and ratification by States. Depending on the final text of the Convention, it is possible that changes to national legislation may be required or that appropriate reservations are in place.

Vaccine Damage Payment Act

Ian Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claims under the Vaccine Damage Payment Act 1979 were made in each year since 2000; and how many were successful. [76172]

Mrs. McGuire: The number of claims received and successful payments made under the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979, in each financial year since April 2000 is as follows:

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Air Industry

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans the Government have for maintaining the UK air industry sector. [76613]

Margaret Hodge: The Government are working in partnership with the aerospace industry to strengthen the UK capabilities in this sector and are implementing the agenda set by the industry-led Aerospace Innovation and Growth Team report in 2003. This set out a vision for the future success of the industry that by 2022,

"The UK will offer a global Aerospace Industry the worlds most innovative and productive location, leading to sustainable growth for all its stakeholders".

The key areas of focus work are on technology, process excellence, skills, and environmental issues.

This implementation work is overseen by the Aerospace Innovation and Growth Leadership Council, which I chair jointly with Mike Turner, CEO of BAE Systems.

More information is set out in the DTI evidence to the Trade and Industry Committee inquiry in March 2005.

In regard to the defence air sector, the recently published Defence Industrial Strategy provided clarity to industry on our military capability requirements, and set out a requirement to work with BAE Systems and key areas of the supply chain to ensure a sustainable long-term industrial base.

Arms Exports

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what checks are made by his Department to ensure that ex-military aircraft transferred to countries subject to a UN arms embargo are not used for military purposes; and if he will make a statement. [77080]

Malcolm Wicks: Ex-military aircraft are rated ML10b under the UK's "Military List". As such, they would only receive a licence for export to an embargoed destination, where permitted by an exception in the embargo for example where they were to be used by UN representatives or peace keeping forces or for humanitarian work. In such cases a risk assessment is made before a licence is granted to verify the stated end-use.

Bonuses

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many non-pensionable bonuses were awarded to members of his staff in each of the last three years; and at what total cost. [73029]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Department of Trade and Industry awards non-pensionable bonuses in two formats:

1. Special bonuses, for exceptional performance in particularly demanding tasks or situations. Staff in receipt of a special bonus may also receive an annual performance award.

2. Annual performance awards, paid to highly successful performers as part of the annual pay award.

The number of staff receiving awards, their financial value and their value as a proportion of the total paybill can be seen in the following table.

Business Closures (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many firms in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) the Peterborough city council area have ceased trading in each year since 1997. [76622]

Margaret Hodge: Value added tax (VAT) registrations and de-registrations are the best official guide to the pattern of business start-ups and closures. DTI data on the number of VAT registrations and de-registrations in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) Peterborough city council area from 1997 to 2004 are shown in the following table. The table shows the number of new VAT registrations, the number of de-registrations and the ratio of de-registrations to registrations in each year are also shown.

VAT de-registrations and registrations 1997-2004

Source:
Business Start-ups and Closures: VAT Registrations and De-registrations 1994-2004, Small Business Service, available at http://www.sbs.gov.uk/vats

In both Peterborough constituency and Peterborough city council area the stock of VAT registered businesses has increased each year since 1997, as registrations have exceeded de-registrations throughout this period.

VAT registration and de-registration data do not capture all business activity. Businesses are unlikely to be registered if their turnover falls below the compulsory VAT threshold, which has risen in each year since 1997. Similarly, businesses that de-register will not necessarily have closed. Only 1.8 million out of 4.3 million businesses (42 per cent.) were registered for VAT at the start of 2004.

Citizens Advice

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to his statement of 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 560, on Citizens Advice, if he will bring forward proposals to ensure that citizens advice bureaux operate in each major town in England. [73503]

Mr. McCartney: There are approximately 450 CAB bureaux in England and Wales and there is at least one in most major towns.

Decisions on whether a town has a CAB is a matter largely for the local authority and the Government have no powers to ensure this.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Minister for Industry and the Regions will reply to the letter of 3 April from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire on the Government's Enlightened Shareholder Value. [78038]

Margaret Hodge: I responded to the hon. Member on 9 June.

Departmental Press Office

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74352]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department collects data, on a voluntary basis, on the ethnic origin of its staff. Such data, relating to small individual business units, are not available for publication for reasons of confidentiality.

Note:

Civil Service Statistics contains information on the numbers of staff who have declared their ethnic background. The latest available information at April 2004 is available in the Library and on the civil service website at the following address:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/index.asp

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into his Department in each of the last three years. [77264]

Jim Fitzpatrick: People over 55 recruited as direct entrants into the Department of Trade and Industry are as follows:

	Age
	56 - 58	59 - 61	62 - 64	Total
2003	2	1	1	4
2004	3	0	0	3
2005	3	0	0	3
2006	1	0	0	1

Energy Bills

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will initiate discussions with domestic energy utilities on ensuring that (a) carbon dioxide emissions from fuel consumption and (b) where appropriate, the fuel mix, is shown on the face of domestic energy bills. [75075]

Malcolm Wicks: Under fuel mix disclosure provisions inserted into electricity supply licences by regulations made under the European Communities Act, suppliers are already required to calculate, and make available to customers, information about the amount of carbon dioxide produced for each kWh of electricity generated. That information may be provided on or with bills. No equivalent provision exists for mains gas. The Energy Review is considering the arguments for requiring more informative bills for domestic gas and electricity customers.

Energy Consumers

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to assist vulnerable domestic energy customers. [78026]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has taken a number of actions to help vulnerable domestic gas and electricity customers. We have liaised closely with energy suppliers on the development of the Home Heat Helpline, a one-stop service providing vulnerable customers and their representatives with the range of help and information available from suppliers and Government. We have worked with Energywatch and Ofgem to encourage customers to use the competitive market to get the best deal. We have successfully promoted the introduction of social tariffs and price freezes for fuel-poor and low-income customers.

DTI's Design and Demonstration Unit, a team of private sector secondees that works in support of Energy White Paper objectives, has designed and delivered projects to provide gas connections to deprived communities, and is now developing community projects utilising renewable technologies.

DTI and the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) share PSA targets in respect of fuel poverty. As part of the Energy Review, DTI is seeking to determine what further measures are needed to tackle fuel poverty.

Estate Agents

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made with his plans for further regulation of estate agents. [77791]

Mr. McCartney: The Government are putting in place arrangements that will secure redress for consumers when they have legitimate complaints against estate agents. My officials are in discussion with the ombudsman for estate agents about approving a redress scheme under the Housing Act 2004 for complaints in respect of home information packs. The Government intend to extend the right of redress to cover all relevant complaints against estate agents throughout the UK at the first legislative opportunity. The Government also intend to introduce other measures to improve the regulation of estate agents that were recommended by the Office of Fair Trading.

Farming

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of farmers who went bankrupt in (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005. [76180]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Official insolvency statistics are available by broad industry sector.

Bankruptcies in the agriculture and horticulture sector in England and Wales are as follows:

	Number
2003	151
2004	204
2005	195

Company liquidations in agriculture and horticulture in England and Wales are as follows:

	Number
2003	52
2004	35
2005	35

Gas and Electricity

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to encourage greater liquidity in the wholesale gas market. [78023]

Malcolm Wicks: Since last summer, the Department and OFGEM have been working closely with the Futures and Options Association (FOA) to identify the reasons for the lack of liquidity in the gas and power markets and to see if there are any barriers the Government could help overcome.

The FOA organised a roundtable on 1 November 2005 and have been taking forward work on a number of priority actions with a particular focus on power:

To establish a Steering Group to assess the viability, and, as appropriate, take forward the establishment of an auction market for the trading of UK power—this is expected to make a recommendation to the industry in the summer with a view to implementing changes before the winter.

To respond to the Government announcement for reviewing energy policy, particularly in the context of appropriate market mechanisms, and to brief MPs on energy issues—the FOA organised a briefing session under the auspices of the Associate Parliamentary Group on Wholesale Financial Markets and Services on 6 March.

The FOA held a further roundtable for investment banks and brokerage houses on 6 June to ascertain their views on the state of the energy market, and what could be done to improve liquidity.

In addition to the work with the FOA, DTI officials have been holding separate meetings with representatives of traders and exchanges to investigate why there are not more players and whether there is anything that could be done to improve the structure of the market.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the impact of gas and electricity prices on public sector expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [78024]

Malcolm Wicks: Preliminary figures from the Office of Government Commerce (OGC) indicate that public expenditure on gas and electricity was between £1.5 and £2 billion in 2003-04. This figure is indicative as it is based on information from a sample of public sector administrations. This information is not regularly updated.

The latest DTI statistics, March 2006 (http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file26972.pdf) indicate that retail prices paid by small industrial consumers—a proxy for the public sector—for gas and electricity increased by 80 per cent. and 53 per cent. respectively, between January 2004 and January 2006.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the impact of gas and electricity prices on UK competitiveness; and if he will make a statement. [78025]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government take the recent increases in energy prices very seriously, and particularly their impact on the competitiveness of UK industry. We have been engaged in continual dialogue with industry to find solutions and mitigate the impacts of high gas and electricity prices. Our discussions with the Energy Intensive Users Group and others have helped us focus our efforts on maximising gas and electricity supplies, improving the operation of the market, encouraging demand side response and pursuing fair access to markets across Europe.

Over the summer we will be pursuing a detailed work plan with Ofgem, national grid, industry and others to ensure we are in the best possible position ahead of next winter. And at a higher level, the new Business Energy Forum will discuss security of supply from a strategic viewpoint.

The impact on UK businesses of increases in gas and electricity prices will depend on a variety of factors, including how much gas or electricity a particular company uses, the degree of their exposure to spot and forward prices and the duration of high prices. It will also be affected by the energy prices paid by their competitors. A further sector-specific issue is whether they are in a competitive market where international trade sets the price or in a sector where prices are determined more locally and rising energy costs could be passed on.

It should be noted that between 1990 and 2004, the relative costs of gas and electricity to UK industry were approximately £8 billion and £9 billion less respectively than their German counterparts. I do however recognise that the UK has seen sharp price rises since then.

Hydroelectricity

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evaluation his Department has carried out of the potential energy generation from the River Severn from (a) incorporating hydroelectric generating equipment at the five existing weirs between Stourport and Gloucester and (b) building five variable height weirs with hydroelectric generating equipment between Bridgnorth and Stourport. [75493]

Malcolm Wicks: In 1987 the then Department of Energy commissioned the University of Salford to undertake a comprehensive assessment of the economic potential for small-scale hydroelectric generation throughout the UK.

The scope of the study extended to sites with installed capacities in the range 25 kW to 5 MW. Further limiting conditions were to disregard sites with hydraulic heads of less than two metres, with existing civil works, or less than three metres with no existing civil works.

The comprehensive results of the study were published in the report "Small Scale Hydroelectricity Generation Potential in the UK" ETSU-SSH-4063 (parts 1-3) a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside his Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in his Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71807]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department has a long term PFI Agreement with its IS/IT partner Fujitsu to supply its desktop services to the Department.

The spend for the last five years with Fujitsu, covering desktop services and application development and support is as follows:

	£ million Amount
2001-02	36
2002-03	35
2003-04	37
2004-05	32
2005-06	30

Responsibility for ICT projects rests with Information and Workplace Services Directorate within the Department. As it is a PFI contract the IT expertise, and associated qualifications, rests with Fujitsu.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was in each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71808]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department has a main Information Technology contract which is a Private Finance Initiative (PFI) Agreement with Fujitsu Services and has been in place for more than five years. The Department has also recently awarded a Competed Services Framework Arrangement to six other suppliers and this will enable an element of competition for future IT projects. To date no significant contracts have been awarded to these suppliers.

For the Department's PFI Agreement with Fujitsu, covering desktop services and application development and support, spend in the last five years has been:

	£ million Amount
2001-02	36
2002-03	35
2003-04	37
2004-05	32
2005-06	30

Mesothelioma

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the House of Lords judgment in the case of Barker v. Corus UK Ltd. on future spending plans of his Department in respect of expenditure on compensation payments for those suffering from mesothelioma. [75765]

Malcolm Wicks: The ruling should enable the Department, in respect of claims against British shipbuilders, to pay our part of any compensation more quickly as we would not have to wait until all insurers had been found and agreed to their share of liability. The wider implications of this judgment are currently under review.

Miners' Compensation

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions his Department has agreed to make compensation payments as an employer through negotiation with a claims handler. [75867]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The Department has Claims Handling Agreements (CHAs) with the Union of Democratic Mineworkers (UDM)/

Vendside for processing vibration white finger and respiratory disease claims. The Department has a further agreement with the UDM for handling hearing loss claims.

We have also received a few claims from other claims handlers which have been handled under the terms of the CHA for claims submitted by solicitors.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the process is by which claimants for coal-related health compensation represented by UDM/Vendside and not by a solicitor can (a) apply for and (b) receive a copy of their claimant file. [75868]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 8 June 2006]: The Department would advise claimants to apply to their representatives for copies of any papers they wish to receive.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which departmental Ministers have met with Vendside Ltd. in each year since 1998. [75869]

Malcolm Wicks: We have clear records of the following Ministers having met Vendside Ltd.: Peter Hain and Brian Wilson on separate occasions in 2001 and Nigel Griffiths in 2004. We cannot be certain that other Ministers did not also meet Vendside Ltd.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has established a procedure for claimants of coal-related health compensation to complain about poor services provided by claims handlers. [76442]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 12 June 2006]: No such procedure has been established. The majority of claims handled by claims handlers are processed in accordance with a Claims Handling Agreement agreed between the Department and the Union of Democratic Mineworkers/Vendside Ltd. We have also received a few other claims from claims handlers which are processed under the terms of the Claims Handling Agreement agreed with solicitors.

Claimants who are unhappy with their representation are free to transfer their claim to an alternative representative. The Compensation Bill currently progressing through Parliament will introduce a regulatory framework for claims handlers.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discounts are available in relation to hotel accommodation used by (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department. [69003]

Jim Fitzpatrick: DTI civil servants and special advisors benefit from discounted hotel accommodation provided through a Cross-Government Hotel Booking Agent Contract.

The Department keeps no record of discounts available in relation to hotel accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers. To provide this information would entail disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Energy

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations he has received from members of the public since 1 January (a) supporting and (b) opposing the extension of nuclear energy generation. [76736]

Malcolm Wicks: Since 1 January, 2006 I have received many representations, in the context of the Energy Review and more widely, on the role of nuclear power.

In relation to the Energy Review consultation, releasing figures for only some of the responses, out of context and without accompanying analysis, has the potential to mislead the public by focusing on the views and comments of only one section of the respondents.

We will publish a summary of the responses to the Energy Review consultation in the coming weeks. The responses are currently being posted in full on the DTI website: www.dti.gov.uk/energy/review.

Petroleum Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of (a) the Petroleum Act 1998 and (b) the Fossil Fuel Levy Act 1998; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of each Act. [77802]

Malcolm Wicks: The Petroleum Act 1998 consolidated previous enactments about petroleum, offshore installations and submarine pipelines. In brief, part I of the Petroleum Act 1998 empowers the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to grant to such persons as he thinks fit licences to explore for, drill for and extract petroleum; Part II applies criminal law to offshore activities; Part III empowers the Secretary of State to control the construction and use of offshore pipelines; and Part IV deals with the abandonment of offshore installations.

The Petroleum Act 1998 is a key part of the regulatory regime that allows the Government to manage the UK's oil and gas resources, with the overall aim of maximising economic recovery. The Government continue to work closely with industry in PILOT, the oil and gas taskforce that I chair, to ensure that we have the licensing, environmental and business frameworks that will attract the investment needed to deliver the North sea's full potential. The operation of the Petroleum Act 1998 naturally forms part of that wider picture, alongside a range of positive initiatives.

The Fossil Fuel Levy Act 1998 (which amended section 33 of the Electricity Act in its original form) was repealed by the Utilities Act 2000, which introduced the renewables obligation. However, provisions dealing with the Fossil Fuel Levy continue in a modified form by virtue of the Electricity from Non-Fossil Fuel Sources Savings Arrangements Orders made in 2000 and 2001. The fossil fuel levy is currently set at zero. The contractual arrangements made under the non-fossil fuel obligation also remain in place by virtue of the NFFO Savings Order. I have received no recent representations about the fossil fuel levy.

Post Offices

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices have closed in (a) Devon, (b) Cornwall, (c) Somerset and (d) Dorset in each of the last five years. [76250]

Jim Fitzpatrick [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The question the hon. Member has asked relates to operational matters for which Post Office Ltd. is directly responsible. However, Post Office Ltd. have provided the following figures relating to the numbers of post office branches in Devon, Cornwall, Somerset and Dorset.

Number of Post Office branches open

	Devon	Cornwall	Somerset	Dorset
2001-02	436	291	218	230
2002-03	425	275	215	224
2003-04	394	264	205	197
2004-05	364	262	195	195
2005-06	358	264	194	187

Information relating to post office branches for each parliamentary constituency is placed in the Libraries of the House on an annual basis.

Ms Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices have (a) opened and (b) closed in Hove constituency since 1997. [76684]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The question the hon. Member has asked relates to operational matters for which Post Office Ltd. is directly responsible. However, Post Office Ltd. have provided the following figures relating to the number of post office branches in Hove constituency.

Post Office branches open in Hove

	Number
2001-02	22
2002-03	20
2003-04	14
2004-05	14
2005-06	14

Note: Data on post offices closed in Hove constituency since 1997 is not available prior 2000.

Information relating to post office branches for each parliamentary constituency is placed in the Libraries of the House on an annual basis.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices have been closed in villages and towns with a population smaller than 10,000 inhabitants in each year since 1997. [78206]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The question the hon. Member has asked relates to operational matters for which Post Office Ltd. (POL) is directly responsible. However, POL have provided the following figures relating to the net reduction in rural Post Office branches by year.

	Net reduction in rural branches
2000-01	441
2001-02	194
2002-03	115
2003-04	149
2004-05	144
2005-06	149

Post Office branches are classified as being in either urban or rural areas, with rural areas being defined as settlements with less than 10,000 inhabitants, this definition follows that of the Countryside Agency and was adopted at the end of 1999-2000 in preparation for the PIU report.

Data on the net reduction in the number of branches in settlements with fewer than 10,000 inhabitants (rural branches) is not available prior 2000.

Public Transport

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75116]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI offers interest free loans to its staff for the purchase of season tickets.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the UK's energy came from renewable energy sources in 2005-06; and what steps his Department is taking to increase the proportion of energy from renewable sources. [77675]

Malcolm Wicks: Full details of generation from renewable energy in 2005 will be published in the Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics on 27 July 2006, a copy of which will be available from the Libraries of the House.

It is currently estimated that 4.2 per cent. of the UK's electricity was generated from all sources of renewable energy in 2005.

The Government's main mechanism for delivering new renewable generating capacity is the renewables obligation (RO). The RO requires electricity suppliers to source an increasing proportion of their electricity sales from eligible sources of renewable energy.

As support to the RO, the Government are also investing around £500 million, between 2002 and 2008, in capital grants and research and development on renewable energy. Money that has already been allocated includes £50 million for the Marine Renewables Deployment Fund and £117 million for offshore wind. The Chancellor also announced in the Budget a further £50 million, on top of the £30 million that I had previously announced, for the Low Carbon Building Programme, which supports microgeneration and energy efficiency measures.

Social Enterprises

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many social enterprises have been taken over by private companies in each of the last five years. [77641]

Margaret Hodge: This is not information that the DTI collects, nor are we aware of any source which records this kind of data.

Telephone/Internet Services

Ms Diana R. Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress in extending choice and competition in telephone and internet services to the residents and businesses of Kingston upon Hull. [72538]

Margaret Hodge: The matter raised is the responsibility of the regulator, the Office of Communications (Ofcom) which is accountable to Parliament rather than Ministers. I have asked the chief executive of Ofcom to reply directly to my hon. Friend. Copies of the chief executive's letter have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Thompson's Solicitors

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many chronic obstructive pulmonary disease cases have been settled by Thompson's Solicitors in (a) North Durham and (b) County Durham. [77804]

Malcolm Wicks: Thompsons solicitors have settled 7,428 chronic obstructive pulmonary disease claims for claimants in County Durham[1] of which 994 were in North Durham.

[1] County Durham is made up of North Durham, North West Durham, City of Durham, Easington, Sedgefield and Bishop Auckland constituencies.

Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department takes on receipt of an HR1 form under the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992. [77909]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Officials check that the employer has complied with the statutory advance notification requirements of 90 days notice of 100 or more proposed redundancies in a 90-day period, or 30 days notice of between 20 and 99 proposed redundancies in a 90-day period. The information is then passed to the relevant local government offices and agencies so that they can take any appropriate measures to assist or retrain the employees in question. Job centre plus offers access to a range of support schemes designed to help those facing redundancy. It provides information on job searching; compiling CVs; further education and training for individuals who need to develop new skills; as well as benefits information. It liaises with the employer and other partners (The Regional Development Agency, the Local Learning and Skills Council (LLSC), the local authority, Chamber of Commerce), to assess the scale of any redundancy situation. If local partners agree it is 'large scale' Job centre plus calls on its Rapid Response Unit, which is a flexible service, tailored to the needs of the particular area, sector and company. The help required is agreed in discussion with the employer, and in liaison with the local government office and the LLSCs.

Venture Capital

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department is taking to increase access to venture capital for manufacturing firms in the North East. [77186]

Margaret Hodge: Manufacturing is still, and will continue to be, a very important part of the UK economy. The importance of manufacturing to the North East of England, and to the whole UK economy, is recognised in the Department of Trade and Industry's Manufacturing Strategy. Launched in 2002 and reviewed in 2004, the strategy sets out the actions needed to create a high value, high skill manufacturing sector capable of introducing new products and processes into our economy, creating new markets, and delivering a huge boost to our growth and prosperity.

Government will continue to work with regional agencies, the business community, trade unions and others to ensure that the region (and the UK) makes the most of the opportunities to shift from low-cost/low added-value manufacturing to a sustainable, high added value, high skill, knowledge-led economy. We will continue to develop policies to achieve the right climate for business growth.

The UK is widely acknowledged as possessing a dynamic and efficient financial market, meeting the financing needs of the majority of businesses. Nevertheless, a small but important minority of innovative, growth-oriented small businesses continue to face difficulties in attracting the funding (particularly risk capital and equity in the £500,000 to £2 million region) that they need to realise their ambitions, providing a case for targeted Government intervention to assist markets where these difficulties create a significant barrier to enterprise and innovation, and hence to productivity growth. Over recent years, the Government have played an important role in ensuring that markets work effectively and that any gaps or weaknesses are addressed. The provision of publicly supported finance schemes (loan, mezzanine and equity) for small businesses has increased significantly over the last few years, increasing access to funding for manufacturing firms and others in order to invest in new technologies and improve productivity.

The Regional Venture Capital Fund (RVCF), an England-wide programme to provide risk capital in amounts up to £500,000, was created to support small growing companies, with £80 million of Government investment attracting a further £155 million from private sector investors. Capital North East (the North East RVCF) was launched in 2002, and the fund totalled £15 million.

The consultation paper "Bridging the finance gap—a consultation on improving access to growth capital for small businesses" published jointly by HM Treasury and SBS/DTI in April 2003 set out what more could be done to ensure that entrepreneurs have access to the finance they need to turn their ideas into thriving businesses. This led to the creation of Enterprise Capital Funds (ECFs), which will invest a combination of private and public money in small high-growth businesses seeking between £250,000 and £2 million of equity finance. Four funds have been approved to date, with the possibility of further funds being announced, and although not targeted specifically at the North East, they will be available to SMEs in the region. North East enterprise agency Entrust is a partner in the Seraphim Capital Fund, one of the successful funds announced last month, and will act to promote and co-ordinate applications from regional companies seeking growth funding.

Among schemes to support social enterprise and growth in disadvantaged areas, the Bridges Community Development Venture Fund is a £40 million, 50:50 partnership between Government and the Venture Capital industry. The fund is targeted at the most deprived 25 per cent. of areas of England and includes a number of North East wards. The Coalfields Enterprise Fund, launched by the Deputy Prime Minister in early 2004, is a venture capital fund specifically set up to finance growth-oriented companies and to encourage entrepreneurship in England's former coalfield areas. Investments are on a 50:50 co-investment basis between £40,000 and £500,000.

The North East Equity Matching Fund (NEEMF) is an innovative and unique venture capital co-investment fund which aims to generate and increase Business Angel activity in the North East of England. NEEMF can match, on a pari passu basis, investments made by private investors or business angels who may not have sufficient resources to wholly fund the business or who wish to spread the risk. The investment range is from £25,000 to £100,000 in the first round with the capacity to aggregate up to £200,000 in a second round after nine months has elapsed. The total equity raised in the initial round must not exceed £250,000. Investments will usually be in the form of ordinary and/or preference shares and will be made at the same time as the private investment. The legal process is aimed at keeping time scales and costs to a minimum.

European funding in the form of the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) is also used to support Venture Capital and Loan Funds (VCLFs) in the region. The North East Co-Investment Fund (CoIF) and the North East Proof of Concept (PoC) Fund are both managed by NorthStar Equity Investors. The Proof of Concept Fund is a convertible loan fund, investing in technology and science based SMEs and in activities leading to SME formation spun-out from the research and business base in the North East of England. The Co-Investment Fund (COIF) is a £23 million venture capital fund that invests alongside private investors in high-growth technology-focused SMEs.

Equity is of course only a part of the overall funding picture and the North East region has also benefited from other publicly supported funds including the North East Investment Fund 3. Launched in 2003, this £18 million fund provides unsecured convertible loans for SMEs.

Women Entrepreneurs

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government have taken to promote venture capital funds for women entrepreneurs. [77640]

Margaret Hodge: The 'UK Survey of SME Finances 2004' identified that gender was not an issue for female entrepreneurs accessing external finance. Among established businesses, women-led businesses seek the same levels of external finance and are just as likely as male-owned business to obtain the finance they sought.

While there is no universal gender issue regarding access to finance, depending upon their personal circumstances, some women do experience problems. In light of this, the SBS Women's Stakeholder Group and RDAs supported a series of regional 'Access to Finance' roadshow events for female entrepreneurs between January and June 2006.

Youth Training

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what regular liaison takes place between his Department and (a) other Government Departments and (b) non-governmental organisations on the training of young people. [77831]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department has regular contact with a number of Government Departments on the training of young people such as Department for Education and Skills, Department for Work and Pensions, HM Treasury, Department for Communities and Local Government, HM Revenue and Customs, Home Office, Department of Health, Ministry of Defence, Department for Environment and Rural Affairs, Cabinet Office and the devolved Administrations.

The Department is also represented on several bodies which cover this area:

Skills Alliance (includes Department for Education and Skills, Department for Work and Pensions and Treasury) which oversees the effective implementation of the Government's Skills Strategy.

Skills Alliance Delivery Group (includes the Learning and Skills Council, Sector Skills Development Agency and Northwest Regional Development Agency) which supports the Skills Alliance in ensuring the effective delivery of the Government's Skills Strategy.

Skills Alliance Social and Economic Partners (includes TUC, CBI and the Small Business Council) which stimulates wider engagement, agrees broad direction, and takes stock of progress on the skills agenda from a strategic perspective. Cross Government Forum for Enterprise whose remit includes finding ways to encourage enterprise learning among young people.

School Science Programme Board.

The Department also has regular contact with a number of other organisations including a wide range of business organisations and science, technology, engineering and mathematics educational organisations, the Learning and Skills Council, Regional Development Agencies, Regional Skills Partnerships, Investors in People, Job Centre Plus, Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, Head Teachers and Industry, Enterprise Insight, National Council for Graduate Entrepreneurship, Sector Skills Councils and Sector Skills Development Agency.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many therapeutic abortions were performed on women in Northern Ireland in each year since 1976, broken down by (a) age of the woman, (b) progress of the pregnancy and (c) health board area. [77495]

Paul Goggins: The Abortion Act 1967 does not extend to Northern Ireland. Consequently the termination of a pregnancy is not permitted except where necessary to save the life of the mother or where continuation of the pregnancy would involve risk of serious injury to her physical or mental health.

Due to the small numbers involved, information on medical abortions cannot be provided broken down by (a) age or by (c) health board of residence as requested without risking the possible identification of individuals.

Information on (b) the progress of the pregnancy is not available centrally.

The following table provides figures for the number of medical abortions recorded in Northern Ireland hospitals for each calendar year from 1995 (the earliest year for which robust data is available) to 2004 (the latest year for which information is available).

Bonfire Safety

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of people who have suffered major burns in the run-up to the bonfire season in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [77343]

Paul Goggins: The following table details the number of admissions to hospital with a primary or secondary diagnosis of burns for each month during 2004-05 (the latest year for which data is available). For the purpose of this answer, any burn that required hospital admission has been deemed a major burn.

It should be noted that any individual could have been admitted to hospital more than once over the course of a year and would therefore be counted more than once in the figures.

The NI Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) is a member of an inter-agency Working Group on Bonfires. This group, which includes representatives from a wide range of statutory bodies, aims to educate people on the dangers of bonfires and to give advice on how to act safely around them. The NIFRS also works closely with Community Safety Partnerships on issues such as this.

Brain Gym

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost to public funds was of implementing the 'brain gym' programme in Northern Ireland's schools in 2005-06. [74693]

Maria Eagle: The Regional Training Unit (RTU) which provides training to the education sector in Northern Ireland offers 'brain gym' training through its summer school programme. In 2005-06 the cost of RTU training from public funds was £5,920.00. None of the education and library boards directly funded the 'brain gym' programme in Northern Ireland's schools in 2005-06. Individual schools may purchase training from their delegated budgets, but to obtain details of any such expenditure on 'brain gym' expenditure could be gathered only at disproportionate cost.

Care Leavers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the new regulations and guidance announced by his Department in Northern Ireland on 25 May 2005 to improve services for young people leaving care. [77310]

Paul Goggins: The Children (Leaving Care) Act (NI) 2002 and supporting regulations and guidance came into operation on 1 September 2005.

The Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) appointed a Regional Implementation Project Officer in September 2005 to contribute to the successful implementation of the Children (Leaving Care) Act, by ensuring that a framework is established to support the development of consistent standards and practices across Northern Ireland, so that young people leaving care are afforded optimal life chances as they make the transition to independent living. A number of working groups are currently working on the implementation of various aspects of the legislation taking account of both the guidance and regulations. A complete baseline analysis of the leaving care population was undertaken at the end of September 2005. This analysis will be repeated at the end of September 2006.

On 8 June 2006, the Department hosted a 'stock take' conference. This provided an opportunity for Health and Social Service Trust leaving and after care teams to share their experience of the new legislation and the implementation process to date. The Department will also host an assessment seminar on the implementation of the legislation in November/December 2006, i.e. roughly one year after the introduction of the legislation. The views of young people affected by the legislation and other stakeholders will be sought on all aspects of the legislation including the operation of the regulations and guidance.

Corporation Tax

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has discussed the impact on business growth in Northern Ireland of different rates of corporation tax between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. [77091]

Maria Eagle: The Secretary of State has discussed with business leaders a range of policy initiatives to stimulate the Northern Ireland economy, including the issue of a reduction in the rate of corporation tax. However, taxation is an excepted matter, which is the responsibility of HM Treasury.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33251]

The constituency background is as follows:

	Leased	Owned
North Down	6	19

East Belfast	10	4
Londonderry	1	0
Lagan Valley	0	2
Mid Ulster	2	0

Fermanagh and South Tyrone	1	0
Strangford	1	8
Total	37	33

The NIO does not hold any land other than the land on which the property is based.

Education and Library Board Expenses

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on (a) travel and (b) attendance for each independent member of the South Eastern Education and Library Board in each of the last five years. [77224]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 365W. Details of the emoluments paid annually by the South Eastern Education and Library Board to its members are published in the Board's annual reports and annual accounts, copies of which are placed in the Libraries of both Houses. These include details of the highest payment for any Board member, the aggregate amount of emoluments, and the number of members who received emoluments falling within a five-band range.

Energy Efficiency

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent in Northern Ireland on raising public awareness of energy efficiency in each of the last five years. [75589]

Maria Eagle: Northern Ireland Government Departments incurred the following expenditure for the promotion of energy efficiency in Northern Ireland over the last five years.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fixed penalty notices for (a) litter and (b) illegal dumping in Northern Ireland (i) were issued, (ii) were paid, (iii) were rescinded and (iv) remained outstanding six months later in each of the last three years. [76646]

David Cairns: The Department of the Environment does not hold information on the number of fixed penalty notices issued for littering. There are currently no legislative powers to issue fixed penalty notices for illegal dumping. However, The Local Government (Northern Ireland) Order 2005 permitted councils to retain receipts from fixed penalty notices issued for littering and dog fouling from 1 December 2005. It also gave the Department of the Environment the power to obtain information on the use of its fixed penalty receipts. Information on the use of the receipts, together with other relevant information, will be requested after the scheme has been operating for one year.

Mental Health

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were diagnosed with (a) schizophrenia and (b) catatonia in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [77363]

Paul Goggins: The number of people diagnosed with (a) schizophrenia and (b) catatonia in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years is not available as some people with such problems are not in contact with healthcare providers in a hospital setting. However, information is available on the number of in-patients in mental health hospitals in Northern Ireland as at 31 March 2003 and 2004, The following table provides figures on the number of such in-patients who had been diagnosed with (a) schizophrenia and (b) catatonia.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) males and (b) females have suffered from (i) severe depressive illness, (ii) catatonia and (iii) a prolonged or severe manic episode in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which information is available, broken down by age group. [77364]

Paul Goggins: Information on the total number of people suffering from (i) severe depressive illness, (ii) catatonia and (iii) a prolonged or severe manic episode is not available as some people with such problems are not in contact with healthcare providers in a hospital setting. However, information is available on the number of in-patients in mental health hospitals in Northern Ireland as at 31 March 2003 and 2004. The following table provide figures on the number of such in-patients who had been diagnosed with (i) severe depressive illness, (ii) catatonia and (iii) a prolonged or severe manic episode. The small numbers involved make it unsafe to disclose the age-group and gender of these diagnostic groups without risking patient confidentiality.

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The cost of overnight accommodation for civil servants employed by Northern Ireland Departments, excluding the Northern Ireland Office, for the period 1 November 2004 to 31 March 2006 is set out as follows:

	UK	ROI	£000 Others
2004-05	139	1.5	1.5
(with effect from 1 October 2004 onwards)
2005-06	276	7.4	8.4

These figures relate only to accommodation booked through the NICS contracted booking agent and do not include any accommodation booked through other channels as to obtain this information would be at disproportionate cost. Costs of accommodation booked through the booking agent prior to 1 November 2004 are not available. Costs by Department are also not available.

The cost of overnight accommodation and subsistence for civil servants employed by the Northern Ireland Office for the period 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2006 is as follows:

	£000 Amount

2004-05	375.5
2005-06	472.3

It is not possible to separate the cost of overnight subsistence and hotel accommodation for NIO civil servants or to split the spend over UK, ROI and others except at disproportionate cost.

(b) The cost of overnight accommodation for special advisers for the period 1 April 2003 to 31 March 2006 is as follows:

Mr. Hanson: Northern Ireland Departments including the Northern Ireland Office use Hotel Booking Agents to book hotel accommodation and on average obtain a 40 per cent. discount.

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department has spent on consultants' fees for the project for a new national stadium in Northern Ireland. [74716]

Mr. Hanson: The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure, together with the Strategic Investment Board (SIB), has spent a total of £205,394.34 (excluding VAT) on consultants' fees for the project for a new multi-sports stadium for Northern Ireland.

Nuclear Emergency Drills

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what nuclear emergency drills involving local authorities and emergency services are planned over the next 12 months. [77348]

David Cairns: Government Departments in Northern Ireland are not planning any nuclear emergency drills involving local authorities and emergency services over the next 12 months.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what role the Government expect nuclear power to play in meeting the future energy needs of Northern Ireland. [76531]

Maria Eagle: The Government's policy in relation to energy in Northern Ireland is contained in the Strategic Energy Framework. The framework does not anticipate nuclear new build in Northern Ireland.

Population Statistics

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons of working age there were in Northern Ireland in each March to May period since 1997; what proportion of those people were (a) in employment, (b) in full-time education or training, (c) unemployed and (d) economically inactive but not in full-time education or training; and if he will make a statement. [76499]

Maria Eagle: The requested breakdown of the working age population in Northern Ireland can be found in the following table. It shows that during the period March-May 1997 to March-May 2005, the working population in NI increased by 59,000, with the proportion of those in employment increasing and the proportion unemployed falling. The proportion in full-time education also showed a slight increase, whereas there was a marginal fall in the proportion who were economically inactive but not in full-time education.

[1] The working age population refers to ages 16-59 for females and 16-64 for males.
[2] Figures relate to the period March to May of each year.
[3] It is possible for persons to be counted under the full-time education category and also under the 'In employment' or 'Unemployed' categories e.g. if a full-time student also has a part-time job. The categories are therefore not mutually exclusive and will total to a figure in excess of 100 per cent.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the Northern Ireland population is aged (a) 65 years and over and (b) 18 to 64 years; and what the forecasts are for (i) 2007, (ii) 2009, (iii) 2010 and (iv) 2015. [77381]

Mr. Hanson: The following table gives the population estimates and proportion of the total population for the year 2004, and projections for the years 2007, 2009, 2010 and 2015, for the Northern Ireland population aged 18 to 64 years, and 65 years and over.

Preventive Health Care

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been allocated to preventive health care for men, with particular reference to early detection of prostate cancer, in each trust area in Northern Ireland over the last three years. [77344]

Paul Goggins: It is not possible to identify the money allocated to preventive healthcare for men in each trust area. Health promotion initiatives such as tobacco and diet control are targeted at men and women.

No specific funding has been allocated by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for the early detection of prostate cancer to each trust.

The National Screening Committee has reviewed the current research evidence and does not recommend screening for prostate cancer. The main reason is that the current tests have limited accuracy and so follow-up procedures could cause harm to healthy men. Men with prostate cancer symptoms are encouraged to seek early advice from their GP. They may ask for a Prostate Specific Antigen (PSA) test. However, to enable them to make an informed decision about the PSA test, they need to know about its limitations and the potential side effects which may occur following surgery, which include incontinence and impotence.

Programme for Building Sustainable Prosperity

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what administrative costs have been incurred by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development in connection with the programme for building sustainable prosperity. [78048]

David Cairns: The Department's administrative costs associated with the judicial reviews by Hillsborough golf club are estimated to be £14,100.

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what legal costs have been incurred by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development in the judicial reviews by Hillsborough golf club in respect of its application for funding under the programme for building sustainable prosperity. [78049]

David Cairns: The Department's fees associated with these legal procedures are estimated to be £52,000.00 excluding VAT.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 455W, on prostate cancer, what percentage of males over the age of 85 years in Northern Ireland are estimated to have prostate cancer. [78119]

Paul Goggins: The following table details information on the prevalence[1] of prostate cancer (ICD-10 C61) by age band in Northern Ireland since 1993.

Prevalence of prostate cancer by age in Northern Ireland 2003

Age	Prevalence of prostate cancer[1]	Male population[2]	Percentage of population living with prostate cancer
59 and under	345	699,777	0.05
60 to 64	400	39,360	1.02
65 to 69	639	32,407	1.97
70 to 74	676	26,067	2.59
75 to 79	484	19,552	2.48

85 and over	124	6,863	1.81
All ages	2,959	836,491	0.35

[1] Prevalence has been estimated by counting the number of patients diagnosed between 1 January 1993 and 31 December 2003 with prostate cancer, who were still alive on 31 December 2003. This may represent an undercount of the actual number of people living with prostate cancer as those diagnosed prior to 1993 and still alive at the end of 2003 are not included.

Road Safety

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on educating children in the safe use of bicycles on roads in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years, broken down by Westminster constituency. [77326]

David Cairns: Education in the safe use of bicycles is included in school-based activities promoted and supported by the Department of the Environment's road safety education officers. Cycling proficiency training is the main focused safe cycling activity. The Department also provides funds to the Road Safety Council for cycling championships.

Information on expenditure is not held by Westminster constituency nor is grant broken down by area. The following table contains the expenditure on cycling proficiency from 2001-02 to 2005-06 by education and library board area and funding to the Road Safety Council for cycling championships from 2003-04 to 2005-06. It does not include costs for road safety education officers' time and travel.

Road Tax

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1647W, on road tax, if he will break down the figures for detections by the number of detections in each of the areas of detection. [77347]

David Cairns: Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland (DVLNI) treats Northern Ireland as one area for the detection of unlicensed vehicles and no geographical breakdown is recorded.

School Governors

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what requirement there is for members of the boards of governors of schools to undergo child protection training. [76624]

Maria Eagle: School governors are not required by law to take up child protection training.

However, it is a duty of the board of governors of a grant-aided school to safeguard and promote the welfare of its registered pupils and to determine measures to be taken at the school with a view to protecting pupils from abuse.

The education and library boards have a duty to provide training for school governors in their responsibilities and this includes child protection. In the interests of child protection the Department has decided that, from 1 September 2006, at least one governor on every school staff recruitment and selection interview panel should be trained in recruitment and selection including child protection issues. It is a matter for each board of governors to invite its members to self nominate for such training.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people from the business sector have applied to become school governors since May 2005. [77096]

Maria Eagle: Complete records of the occupations of those who applied for school governors posts since May 2005 are not readily available. However, the Department has actively encouraged people with management skills e.g. business, financial and personnel management expertise, including those from within the business sector, to come forward to volunteer as school governors.

School Performance

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will update the information in table 5.2 of the Northern Ireland Annual Abstract of Statistics 2005 to show the figures for school performance in different parts of the United Kingdom in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06. [76746]

Maria Eagle: Figures for 2005-06 are not yet available. The requested information for 2004-05 is as follows:

Qualification level	Percentage
Percentage achieving 2+ A-levels A-E
Northern Ireland	97
England	95
Wales	94
Percentage achieving 5+ GCSEs A-C*
Northern Ireland	61

Wales	52
Percentage achieving 5+ GCSEs A-G*
Northern Ireland	89
England	90
Wales	85
Percentage achieving no GCSEs
Northern Ireland	3
England	4
Wales	7

Notes:
1. The Northern Ireland figures exclude special and independent schools and pupils with statements of special educational needs.
2. A-level figures are expressed as a percentage of pupils in the final year of an A-level course in Northern Ireland; as a percentage of all 16 to 18-year-olds in schools entered for at least one A-level in summer of the academic year in England; and a percentage of all candidates entered for two or more A-levels in Wales.

School Suspensions/Expulsions

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children were (a) suspended and (b) expelled from a school in Northern Ireland in the past school term, broken down by education board. [77345]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education does not hold information on suspensions and expulsions for the past school term. The Department gathers statistics on suspensions and expulsions on an annual basis from each of the education and library boards.

The following table details the number of pupils suspended in each education and library board in the 2004-05 school year:

Education and library board	Number of pupils suspended
Belfast	1,100
Western	975
North Eastern	1,333
South Eastern	960
Southern	1,046
Total	5,414

The following table details the number of pupils expelled in each education and library board in the 2004-05 school year.

Education and library board	Number of pupils expelled
Belfast	7
Western	11
North Eastern	26
South Eastern	9

Shadow Councils

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the level of remuneration will be announced for those persons returned to the shadow councils in Northern Ireland in 2008. [76368]

David Cairns: Decisions on remuneration for councillors elected in the 2008 local government elections will be made when there is a clearer picture of the responsibilities of the shadow councils and the governance arrangements under which they will operate.

However, I expect shortly to receive the report from the Councillors' Remuneration Working Group which was established last year and this will inform decisions on the scheme of remuneration for councillors in the current and future systems of local government. It is too early to say when these decisions will be announced.

Smoking

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimated percentage is of (a) under 16-year-olds, (b) 16 to 25-year-olds and (c) over 25-year-olds in Northern Ireland who are smokers, broken down by sex. [78173]

Paul Goggins: The information is not routinely available for the precise age bands requested. Information relating to the percentages of smokers by age and sex, in Northern Ireland, is presented in the table for the following age groups: under 16-years-old, 16 to 24-years-old and 25+.

Sports Council for Northern Ireland

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Sports Council for Northern Ireland has received from (a) the Exchequer and (b) the Lottery in each of the last five years. [77354]

Maria Eagle: The Sports Council for Northern Ireland has received Exchequer and Lottery funding for the last five years as shown in the following table.

Exchequer and lottery funding received by Sports Council for Northern Ireland

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1605W, on staff surveys, why the total number of staff surveys carried out by the Department of the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister increased from three in 2003-04, to (a) 18 in 2004-05 and (b) 14 in 2005-06. [77103]

Mr. Hanson: Business units in the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister have made increasing use of staff surveys as an efficient means of assessing the business needs of the internal users of their services. The majority of the surveys have been conducted electronically and were aimed at obtaining feedback and suggestions on how services could be improved.

Terrorist Prisoners

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in which wing in Maghaberry prison the person convicted in 2005 of the manslaughter of James McGinley is serving his sentence; what his likely release date is; and which terrorist organisation has most members in the same wing. [75503]

Paul Goggins: Bartholomew Fisher, the person convicted in 2005 of the manslaughter of James McGinley is located in separated accommodation in Roe House. His earliest date of release is 19 August 2006. Those held in this accommodation in Roe House are perceived to be affiliated to a range of republican organisations.

Tourism

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans the Northern Ireland Tourist Board has to target potential tourists from the Republic of Ireland during summer 2006. [76365]

Maria Eagle: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board office in Dublin includes a Tourist Information Centre (TIC) and also a Marketing Team. The purpose of the Dublin office is to promote tourism in Northern Ireland to Republic of Ireland (RoI) residents, International tourists holidaying in Ireland, Travel Trade, Business Tourism and RoI Media.

Currently the NITB advertising budget for the Republic of Ireland for 2006-07 is £469,000.

Promotion to potential tourists from RoI during 2006 is already well under way through a series of marketing activities which include:

(a) Tourist Information Centre services—Reservations, Information and Short-Break Brochure promotion;

(b) Travel Trade Assistance, Support and Familiarisation Trips to Northern Ireland;

(c) Consumer Show promotion at various shows throughout Republic of Ireland;

(d) PR which results in press coverage in RoI print media, radio and TV.

The prime vehicle for promotion to RoI visitors during 2006 is via campaigns surrounding the Short Breaks Euro Brochure. This year's Short Breaks brochure is being complemented by a number of tactical marketing campaigns which include promotions via the national RoI press, radio advertising, web promotions, and direct mail etc.

Unemployment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were unemployed in each of the last three years in Northern Ireland. [77349]

Maria Eagle: Estimates of unemployment are produced from the Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey and the latest figures relate to the period February-April 2006. Figures for this period and for the same period in the previous two years can be found in the following table.

Number of people unemployed in Northern Ireland, 2004-06

Reference period	Number unemployed
February-April 2004	39,000

Unpaid Penalties

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total was of unpaid court (a) costs, (b) compensation orders and (c) fines imposed by (i) magistrates courts and (ii) the Crown court in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and what percentage in each category have subsequently been quashed. [76406]

Bridget Prentice: I have been asked to reply.

Detailed accounting records are retained by the NI Court Service for three years only. Information for the last three financial years is set out as follows. Penal sums imposed in one year may be paid in the next following year. Consequently the amount outstanding for each year will include sums which may be paid and sums which may be quashed in subsequent years. Sums cleared otherwise than by payment include those remitted or reduced on appeal, where the defendant served a period of imprisonment in default of payment, or where the police return a warrant to the court unexecuted.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Pensions

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for how many pensions the Department is responsible in relation to people (a) above and (b) below retirement age; and how many of these people previously accrued pension rights at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. [74843]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) is responsible for pension costs for staff leaving on early departure grounds (excluding ill health retirement). DFID is responsible for meeting the full costs of compensation, including the early payment of pensions until age 60.

When staff retire on age grounds their pension costs are met centrally from the outset. We are not therefore responsible for the pensions of any former staff above the retirement age.

We are currently responsible for the pension costs of 67 former members of staff below the pension age, of these three were inherited from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether any building in his Department falls short of disability access regulations. [73001]

Mr. Thomas: Detailed access audits were carried out in 2004; this included suitable and sufficient assessments of the facilities in place and those which needed to be considered to allow all persons to enter, circulate and work safely at DFID premises. This audit was carried out with a wide range of potential users in mind, including persons with mobility and sensory impairments.

The audit addressed the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) 1995, and identified a number of reasonable adjustments to our buildings which have since been implemented. These adjustments have included:

improved disabled wheelchair access, provision of tactile and visual warning signage, and availability of portable induction loops.

Where reasonable adjustments are not possible for structural reasons, a disability management plan has been introduced to address the audit recommendations.

Indonesia

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on delivering aid to Indonesia following the earthquake. [77333]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has been in close contact with EU counterparts since the earthquake in Yogyakarta and Central Java on May 27. DFID officials have participated in frequent co-ordination meetings in Jakarta and Yogyakarta on emergency relief, and are now in regular contact with the European Commission and other member states about longer- term reconstruction needs and the case for financial contributions. The preliminary damage and loss assessment, a joint report by the Government of Indonesia and international partners, was presented to donors on June 14. It provides a basis for longer-term reconstruction and recovery assistance, and ways to deliver this are now being considered. No firm decisions have yet been taken by EU member states on financial contributions to the recovery effort, except by the Netherlands which has announced a contribution of €10 million.

Senegal

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much bilateral aid the United Kingdom is providing to the Republic of Senegal in 2006-07; and how much he expects to be channelled via the European Union. [78069]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government have no bilateral assistance programme with Senegal nor plans to establish one. The UK provided £4.9 million in 2004-05, mainly comprising debt relief and purchases of private equity investments.

DFID assistance is mainly channelled through the EC and other multilateral agencies. The EC allocated €227 million to Senegal from EDF9 funds for the period 2002-07. Given the attribution of assistance channelled through the EC, it is not possible to predict accurately what the UK share will be in 2006-07.

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in the Republic of Senegal. [78397]

Hilary Benn: Localised food insecurity is reported in several parts of Senegal, particularly the poorest Casamance region which is badly affected. Here it has been made worse by fighting in Guinea-Bissau between Senegalese separatist rebels and the Guinea- Bissau army. The World Food Programme estimates that approximately 2,100 people fled the fighting into Casamance, living with family and friends in the city of Ziguinchor. Given the region's limited resources and potentially high flows of additional refugees and displaced people, humanitarian vulnerability and food insecurity could increase if the fighting does not end soon.

DEFENCE

Air Manufacturing Sector

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his strategy is for minimising any adverse impact on the UK air manufacturing sector arising from the proposals within the Defence Industrial Strategy. [76614]

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to minimise the impact of the Defence Industry Strategy in reducing air sector jobs; and if he will make a statement. [76955]

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps the Government are taking to minimise any adverse impact on air sector jobs that may result as a consequence of the proposed re-structuring and rationalisation proposed in the Defence Industrial Strategy; [77537]

(2) what steps the Government are taking to maintain UK capability within the air sector. [77538]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Industrial Strategy identified that once Typhoon and the Joint Combat Aircraft have been introduced into service, there is no requirement for a new-design manned aircraft beyond our extant plans although future procurements of uninhabited and/or manned platforms are envisaged. The consequent long term decline in new programme work is expected to lead to a significant rationalisation of the UK defence aerospace business. That is why MOD is negotiating with BAE Systems on the terms of the business rationalisation and transformation agreement required to facilitate the effective sustainment of the industrial skills, capability and technologies—wherever they may be in the supply chain—that will be important to our ability to operate, support and upgrade our fast jet combat aircraft through life. We aim to work with the company during 2006 to agree the way ahead—and to implement it from 2007.

The MOD is also planning to invest in UAV Technology Demonstrator Programmes (TDP) to better understand technologies that are likely to play an important role in this future military capability. The investment should also help sustain aerospace engineering and design capabilities in the UK, providing further assurance of our ability to operate and support our future fixed wing aircraft. We expect to be in a position to announce the commencement of the TDP later this year.

Army Personnel (Working Hours)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hours were worked per week on average at each regular trained junior rank in the Army in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06. [77130]

Mr. Watson: The Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA) carry out a continuous sample survey of working patterns which provides an estimate of the average working hours per person, per week, for each service, but the sample is insufficient to report on average working hours at the level of detail requested.

The results of the 2004-05 survey gave an estimate of an average of 46.7 "hours worked" per week for all regular trained junior ranks in the Army. Data for 2005-06 are not yet available.

"Hours worked" includes time spent carrying out normal work, secondary duties, compulsory fitness training, organised sports and representational activities, but excludes meal and tea breaks and time spent on call. The figures are not therefore comparable to calculations of "hours worked" in civilian professions.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what the projected capital costs are for the refurbishment of the A-90 and A-45 buildings at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston; [76766]

(2) how much is allocated to each new building project (a) under way and (b) planned in the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston site development strategy. [76772]

Des Browne: Mature costings are not available for these facilities and disclosure would, or would be likely to, prejudice commercial interests.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the projected capital costs are for replacement buildings to house the Core Punch Facility at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston. [76770]

Des Browne: A number of options are under consideration. Mature costings are not available and disclosure would, or would be likely to prejudice commercial interests.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the replacement hydrodynamic testing facility at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston will be complete. [76771]

Des Browne: A number of options are under consideration regarding the replacement hydrodynamics testing facility at the Atomic Weapons Establishment. Completion dates are dependent on the option selected.

Burghfield Facility

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of plans to build a new assembly/disassembly facility at Burghfield. [76765]

Des Browne: A number of options are still under consideration for the maintenance of assembly/disassembly facilities at AWE. No decisions have yet been taken.

Defence Export Contracts

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance his Department is giving to British defence companies in helping them to secure export contracts; and if he will make a statement. [76954]

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what practical assistance the Government are offering to BAE Systems to help secure export contracts. [77536]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) co-ordinates Government support for the export of the products and services of the UK defence industry. DESO brings overseas customers and UK suppliers together and provides an integrated approach to markets. In addition DESO provides professional military support, including demonstrations of equipment being considered by customers and organises visits to the UK by senior government and military personnel from overseas.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department has taken to improve the Defence Medical Services since 1997. [76640]

Mr. Watson: In 1997 the Government announced a foreign policy-led strategic defence review (SDR) to reassess Britain's security interests and defence needs and consider how the roles, missions and capabilities of our armed forces should be adjusted to meet the new strategic realities.

The resulting report, in July 1998, placed a great emphasis on the deployability of our forces, including the requirement to ensure that our armed forces are properly supported in the field—a key aspect of which is the provision of timely, modern and effective medical support.

A medical quinquennial review (MQR) which reported to Parliament in April 2002 developed detailed proposals for the effective delivery of deployable operational medical capability and appropriate, timely health care to maximise the availability of service personnel for deployment.

The MQR identified a need for a much stronger focus on delivery of key outputs, with responsibilities for both central and single service authorities. It recommended new managerial tools (including an annual DMS service delivery plan and a DMS management board) to achieve this.

The MQR also advocated a further strengthening of the partnership between the DMS and the NHS. This was achieved through the MOD and Department of Health signing a formal concordat (in September 2002) at ministerial level and, at official level, the establishment of a MOD/NHS partnership board to oversee effective co-operation.

The MQR also rationalised the existing medical agencies as follows:

An expanded Defence Medical Training Organisation (DMTO), renamed the Defence Medical Education and Training Agency (DMETA), became responsible for all the training and training-related activities of the Defence Secondary Care Agency (DSCA);

Responsibility for the provision of secondary health care to service personnel in the UK, previously handled by DSCA, would now be handled within DMSD;

The Medical Supplies Agency was transferred out of the DMS to become part of the Defence Logistics Organisation.

In terms of improvements to DMS treatment facilities, the DMS no longer run separate military hospitals. The decision was taken to close them because they no longer had sufficient patient volume and case mix to develop and maintain the skills of our medical personnel to the appropriate operational and NHS standards. We created Ministry of Defence hospital units located within NHS hospitals at Birmingham, Derriford, Frimley Park, Northallerton/Middlesbrough, Peterborough and Portsmouth. They provide the most effective way of giving the UK armed forces patients access to the latest advances in medical treatment and the major recent investments in NHS facilities. The integration of service personnel throughout the NHS trust also enables DMS staff to take advantage of NHS expertise and to maintain their own clinical skills in an active, up-to-date environment.

We have also introduced regional rehabilitation units (RRUs). A total of 12 RRUs have been established within the UK, with similar facilities in Germany and Cyprus, to provide assessment and treatment of musculo-skeletal disorders. They were introduced to alleviate pressure on the Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre at Headley Court and to provide more accessible regionally-based facilities. Patients are referred from unit medical facilities, where the simpler injuries would be diagnosed and treated. The benefit is that patients are assessed and treated in a timely fashion and receive the optimal high quality treatment and rehabilitation to maximise functional outcome and return to operational fitness when this is clinically possible. Specifically, the RRU system leads to reduced overall patient waiting times, earlier access to diagnosis and therefore quicker treatment and patient monitoring throughout the rehabilitation programme on an individual basis by physiotherapists and remedial instructors at the RRU. For example, most patients who undergo a simple knee arthroscopic procedure are currently being returned fit for task within four months, and patients who undergo an anterior cruciate ligament repair procedure are being returned fit for task in about seven months.

Additionally, to improve our patient care, in 2005 the MOD set up a Defence Medical Rehabilitation Evaluation Co-ordination Cell to support personnel injured on operations. This improves the co-ordination of care from the point of entry into UK until the individual is returned to full fitness or is medically discharged from the service. It also improves the provision of a clinical assessment and decisions on the most appropriate care from a consultant-led multi-disciplinary team.

With regard to mental health care, an independent review of mental health care provision to the armed forces, undertaken by a leading consultancy in the field, recommended that out-patient care be provided in regional departments of community mental health (DCMH) and in-patient care be contracted out to a suitable independent or NHS provider. We have 15 DCMHs across the UK plus satellite centres in Cyprus, Germany and Gibraltar. The Priory Group won the competition to provide in-patient care. Patients can now be admitted much closer to their home or base.

The MOD recently announced a new mental health care initiative for recently demobilised reservists, which will include the opportunity for a dedicated mental health assessment by appropriately qualified members of the DMS. Details of the programme will be confirmed later this year, including the location(s) at which the assessments will be provided, and the date on which the service will commence.

In terms of operational improvements, DMS support to the deployed force has benefited from investment in modern equipment designed to meet the specific needs of deployed medical capability; this uplift in capability has included the development and deployment of a telemedicine capability, digital imaging, CCAST (critical care aeromedical evacuation support team) and haemostatic products. These improvements have been backed by improved operational training, doctrine and through the lessons learnt process.

There are also three current projects which will contribute significantly to improvements in the DMS:

First, the Managed Military Health System for Force Generation project (MMHS) was conceived to improve the pan-DMS management and delivery of health care (medical and dental) to the armed forces and other entitled personnel. MMHS has the threefold aim of maximising the number of armed forces personnel 'fit for task', contributing to deployed medical operational capability and improving morale in the DMS. The scope of the MMHS project is to cover the UK non-deployed medical capability only, but many of the changes expected from it will beneficially impact on health and health care provision across the MOD including the overseas Commands.

Second, the director general medical operational capability project (DG Med Op Cap) has been set up to determine how to optimise the delivery of medical capability to support operations and ensure the process will deliver continual quality assurance and improvement in clinical output. The intended outcome of this project is the delivery of properly trained personnel with the right equipment and sustainability, to meet the requirements of the front line commanders-in-chief in the most effective and efficient manner.

Third, the defence medical information capability programme (DMICP) is a major business change programme enabled by IT which will provide an integrated health care information system across the DMS, and will also link to the NHS's major new national programme for IT. DMICP will provide many benefits with the overarching benefit being more service personnel fit for task. It will provide DMS doctors and dentists with immediate access worldwide to complete, up-to-date electronic medical and dental records, supported by the latest clinical decision support software and online reference material, giving greater support to service clinicians, analysts and administrators in all aspects of their work. In April 2006 my predecessor announced the award of an £80 million contract which aims to have the first stages of DMICP phased in from the beginning of next year, initially to medical and dental units in barracks, air stations, naval bases, and then, after 2008, on military deployments.

EU Defence

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the European Defence Agency's plans to create an EU defence research budget; and what contribution the UK will make to such a fund. [73162]

Des Browne: There are no plans for the European Defence Agency (EDA) to create an EU defence research budget. The priority for the Government in relation to the EDA is to increase the amount spent on research and technology within Europe not to centralise these resources. The United Kingdom continues to work with the Agency and partner nations to achieve this aim and to ensure that, through mutually beneficial cooperation, we may leverage the maximum value from the money spent in this important area.

EU INSPIRE Directive

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect of the European Union's INSPIRE directive on the security of Royal Navy vessels (a) in port and (b) on deployment. [77794]

Des Browne: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 15 June 2006, Official Report, columns 1384-85W, to the hon. Member for Aldershot (Mr. Howarth).

Fylingdales Radar Complex

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions his Department has held with the US Administration on updating the radar complex at Fylingdales; and if he will make a statement. [77465]

Mr. Ingram: Since the Government agreed in 2003 to the US request to upgrade the early warning radar at RAF Fylingdales, officials have had regular and frequent discussions with their US counterparts about the progress of the upgrade; this continues to be the case.

Hutton Report

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what time of day, and on what day, the press statement from his predecessor, the right hon. Member for Ashfield (Mr. Hoon), on the appointment of Lord Hutton to conduct an inquiry into the death of Dr. David Kelly was (a) cleared for release and (b) released under embargo to the media. [65234]

Des Browne: My right hon. Friend, the Member for Ashfield (Mr. Hoon) did not issue a press statement on the appointment of Lord Hutton while he was serving as the Secretary of State for Defence. A press notice was issued by the Department for Constitutional Affairs on 21 July 2003.

Iraq

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many casualties were treated on Royal Fleet Auxiliary Argus during the period 18 March 2003 to 18 May 2003; and how many of those were classed as injured in combat; [67171]

(2) how many casualties were treated by 202 Field Hospital during the period 18 March to 18 May 2003; and how many were classed as injured in combat. [68478]

Des Browne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Records from these two facilities are currently being cross-checked and verified against our existing records from the Shaibah Facility, Aeromed returns and Notification of casualty reporting. I will write to the hon. Member once this process is complete.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many casualties were treated by 33 Field Hospital in the period 18 March 2003 to 18 May 2003; and how many of those were classed as injured in combat. [69450]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 8 May 2006]: From the 17 March until the 8 April 2003, 33 Field Hospital was deployed in Iraq as the theatre reserve. It then returned to the United Kingdom. We are currently verifying its records for the period it was deployed to Iraq. I will write to the hon. Gentleman once this process is complete.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many injured personnel were treated (a) aboard (i) RFA Argus, (ii) Royal Navy ships and (iii) Royal Fleet Auxiliary ships and (b) in British field hospitals during Operation Telic; and what type of injury each had sustained; [74971]

(2) how many UK personnel injured in Iraq since 2003 were treated by US medical personnel in US facilities; [74972]

(3) how many personnel who served in Iraq have been (a) killed and (b) injured since 2003; [74973]

(4) how many of each type of injury has been sustained by UK forces in Iraq since 2003; [74974]

(5) what steps the Department is taking to collate centrally comprehensive injury figures for personnel involved in Operation Telic; [74975]

(6) what the record of casualties is from Operation Telic. [74976]

Des Browne: As at 28 May 2006, we very much regret that a total of 113 UK military and civilian defence personnel have died, or are missing presumed dead, while serving on Operation Telic since the start of the campaign in March 2003.

Of these, 84 are classed as killed in action, including as a result of hostile action, 29 are known to have died either as a result of illness, non-combat injuries or accidents, or have not yet been officially assigned a cause of death pending the outcome of an investigation. These figures may change as inquests are concluded.

During the period March 2003 to the end of April 2006, the best centrally available, verified, figures show that: around 240 UK military and civilian personnel have been treated at the UK's main Field Hospital in Shaibah for wounds received as a result of hostile action and; up to 4,000 UK personnel were medically evacuated from Iraq from all causes, the majority due to accident, illness, or for routine outpatient activities.

Separate records for the same period from Notification of Casualty reporting (NOTICAS), show that around 40 UK military and civilian personnel have been categorised as Very Seriously Ill/Injured/Wounded (VSI) from all causes, and that around 75 personnel have been categorised as Seriously Ill/Injured/Wounded (SI) from all causes. These figures include some personnel treated for wounds received as a result of hostile action. The figures are only comprehensive, including personnel treated at non-UK facilities, from April 11 2005 onwards. During the early phases of Operation Telic the tempo of operations meant that the paperwork associated with the NOTICAS process was not always completed properly and we cannot be certain our records are complete.

We are working to improve our casualty reporting for Operation Telic. We are currently verifying records from the other Field Hospitals which deployed on Operation Telic including RFA Argus, and are engaging with the US to find out a comprehensive figure on how many personnel were treated at their facilities. As far as we know no UK personnel serving in Iraq were treated on Royal Navy or Royal Fleet Auxiliary ships other than RFA Argus. We are also in the process of transferring the paper records sent back from medical facilities deployed on Telic to the Central Health Records Library.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at which locations British troops are being treated for injuries sustained in Iraq. [76990]

Des Browne: Role 1 Medical Treatment Facilities (providing Primary Healthcare, specialised first aid, triage, resuscitation and stabilisation) in Iraq are at the following locations:

Al Udeid (Aeromedical Evacuation Liaison Officer and Primary Healthcare Nurse)

Baghdad (Aeromedical Evacuation Liaison Officer and Primary Healthcare Nurse)

Basra air station

Seeb (Medical Admin Primary Healthcare and Aeromedical Coordinator)

Tallil (UK Aeromedical Evacuation Liaison Officer deployed to US 2 Medical Brigade)

A Role 2 Medical Treatment Facilities (reception and triage of casualties, resuscitation and treatment of shock to a higher level than a Role 1 facility) is located at Al Muthanna/Al Amarah.

A Role 3 Medical Treatment Facilities (Field Hospital) is located at Shaibah Logistical Base.

Additional medical provision is also available in theatre from coalition forces.

When patients are aeromedically evacuated to the UK, care can also be provided in Cyprus at The Princess Mary Hospital, RAF Akrotiri, if required.

Since 2001, the Royal Centre for Defence Medicine at Selly Oak Hospital, Birmingham, has been the main receiving unit for patients aeromedically evacuated from an operational theatre. Following clinical needs assessment at Selly Oak, if a long hospital stay is expected, patients can be transferred to a hospital closer to their home for less acute treatment, enabling them to be nearer to their family. The decision to do this is based on comparative waiting times and on convenience for the individual patient and their family.

Patients with multiple injuries including amputees and those with brain injury are transferred to Defence Medical Rehabilitation Centre at Headley Court.

Patients with moderate or minor musculoskeletal injuries, who have been assessed and given a working diagnosis and a planned care pathway are referred to the appropriate Regional Rehabilitation Unit at: Aldershot, Bulford/Tidworth, Catterick, Colchester, Cranwell, Edinburgh, Halton, Honnington, Lichfield, Headley Court (near London), Plymouth, Portsmouth, Gütersloh (Germany) and Hohne (Germany).

Patients requiring treatment for a mental health condition are referred to one of the MOD's regional Departments of Community Mental Health at Kinloss, Leuchars, Faslane, Aldershot, Brize Norton, Catterick, Colchester, Cranwell, Marham, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Tidworth, Donnington, Woolwich and Lisburn, or satellite centres overseas.

Patients aeromedically evacuated from Iraq by US forces may be treated at US facilities in Ramstein, Germany, before continuing to Selly Oak for treatment in the normal way.

Personnel who are normally based in Germany and who are injured in Iraq will usually be aeromedically evacuated to the UK in the normal way. If, on subsequent return to Germany, they require follow-up treatment, they are treated at the medical facilities used by the garrisons at Mönchengladbach, Paderborn, Osnabrück, Gütersloh or Hohne.

Nuclear Weapons

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on research into nuclear weapon science in each of the last 20 years. [74426]

Des Browne: A very wide and diverse range of individual research topics might conceivably be interpreted as falling within the scope of the overarching description "nuclear weapons science". Costs are neither collected nor reported in such a way as to enable the compilation of complete, definitive or reliable totals to meet this description. Such figures could be provided only at disproportionate cost, if at all. Overall Ministry of Defence research statisticsare however published annually by the Defence Analytical Services Agency and can be found at www.dasa.mod.uk/natstats/ukds/2005/ukds.htm².

Nyala Armoured Vehicle

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the suitability of the Nyala RG-31 armoured vehicles for use in (a) Afghanistan and (b) Iraq. [76502]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence considered the RG-31, alongside a number of alternatives, to supplement our current fleet of vehicles, but concluded that its size and profile did not meet our needs.

Orion Laser

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the projected capital costs are for the production of the Orion laser at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston. [76763]

Des Browne: Project Orion has a maximum contract value of £183 million against the current contract deliverables.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans there are to co-ordinate Orion laser production with the National Ignition Facility. [76764]

Des Browne: None. Orion is a UK facility.

Parliamentary Questions

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will reply substantively to Question 74482 on the classification of al-Qaeda and Taliban forces as insurgents or as terrorists, tabled for named day answer on 8 June. [77793]

Des Browne: I replied to the hon. Member on 15 June.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to answer question 57160, on defensive aids in Hercules aircraft, tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 6 March 2006. [78398]

Mr. Ingram: I hope to be in a position to answer the hon. Member shortly.

QinetiQ

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stake (a) the Government and (b) Carlyle retains in QinetiQ following the initial public offering in January. [76987]

Mr. Ingram: The successful Initial Public Offering (IPO) of QinetiQ took place on 10 February 2006. The Ministry of Defence (MOD) continues to own 19.3 per cent. of the ordinary shares of the company and the Carlyle Group 10.5 per cent. The MOD has also retained a special share in QinetiQ to protect the defence or security interests of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage interest his Department retains in the profits on future disposal or revaluation of property assets of QinetiQ. [76988]

Mr. Ingram: As part of the Vesting Agreement between the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and QinetiQ in 2001 a Property Clawback Agreement was signed, through which the MOD retained an interest in future profits on disposal of QinetiQ property assets, to ensure that the MOD and therefore the taxpayer, gains from past investment. A summary of this agreement, which extends until 2013, was set out in the QinetiQ Global Offer Prospectus, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House on 26 January 2006 (see p154). Management of the QinetiQ estate is the responsibility of the company.

Royal Ordnance

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will visit the former Royal Ordnance sites at Bridgwater and Chorley to discuss future contracts. [77600]

Mr. Ingram: The Secretary of State for Defence has no plans to visit the BAES Land Systems sites at Bridgwater and Chorley.

Terrorism

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps the UK has taken to combat terrorism in (a) Djibouti, (b) Eritrea, (c) Ethiopia, (d) Kenya, (e) Somalia, (f) Sudan and (g) Yemen as part of the war on terror. [77695]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has not provided bespoke counter-terrorism assistance to Djibouti, Eritrea or Ethiopia.

The EU arms embargo in Sudan and the UN arms embargo in Somalia prohibit the provision of military assistance and training to those countries.

Some counter-terrorism assistance has been provided to Kenya and Yemen as part of HMG's extensive wider engagement with the region. However, I am withholding details of support provided by the Ministry of Defence because its disclosure would be to the detriment of the safety of individuals and to international relations.

HEALTH

Addiction Treatment and Rehabilitation

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding has been provided by her Department for addiction treatment and rehabilitation in each of the last 10 years. [77287]

Caroline Flint: In 2001, the Government introduced the pooled drug treatment budget (PTB) to spend money directly on delivering suitable drug treatment, as well as improving access to treatment for example for offenders via drug intervention programmes, and supporting drug misusers after they come out of treatment, for example aftercare and supporting people.

This funding has increased yearly since the creation in 2001, along with the Government's estimated yearly local mainstream spend. Details are shown in table one as follows.

	PTB	Local funding[1]	Total
2001-02	142	145	287
2002-03	191	131	322
2003-04	236	200	436
2004-05	253	[2]204	457
2005-06	300	[2]208	508

[1] Local authorities, primary care trusts, police and probation.
[2] Estimated.

There is no central funding provided for alcohol treatment. It is the responsibility of the local primary care trusts and their partners to fund the treatment needed for their community. We do not routinely collect data on the amount of funding they have provided for alcohol treatment, so we are unable to provide year on year details. However, the alcohol needs assessment research project, published November 2005 conducted a more in-depth survey for 2005 and reached a conclusion that about £217 million is being spent on alcohol treatment.

Age Adjustment Percentage

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the maximum age adjustment percentage is for areas with a high proportion of people aged over 75 years. [72790]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 17 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1117-18.

Audiology

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce a target to reduce waiting times for digital hearing aids. [75895]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have no plans to introduce a target to reduce waiting times for digital hearing aids.

Information on the 18-week targets, including guidance on the principles and definitions and FAQs: 'Adult hearing services and 18 weeks' is available at:

www.18weeks.nhs.uk.

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to her comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74401]

Caroline Flint: Under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006, all public bodies have a duty to have regard to the conservation of biodiversity in the exercising of their functions. There is no statutory obligation on Departments to monitor the extent to which public bodies comply with this duty. However, we understand the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is working with a wide range of partners to develop guidance for public bodies to support the implementation of this duty and will involve all relevant Departments on the development of guidance.

Care Homes

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action her Department is taking to promote positive public attitudes towards care homes. [70130]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government believes that care homes are one of a range of options that should be available for supporting people with long-term care needs. Most people want to live in their own home for as long as possible. To this end, there has been substantial investment in other care settings, such as domiciliary care and extra care housing. We believe that no one should be admitted into a care home until all other options have been explored and discussed with the service user, their carers and relatives.

However, we recognise that there will always be people who need or want the type of care that only care homes can provide. For them, care in a care home will be best suited to their needs and wishes and care homes offer them a positive choice.

The Government have introduced national minimum standards (NMS) for care homes, domiciliary care and adult placements. The NMS are intended to ensure vulnerable and older people can live in a safe environment, where their rights and dignity are respected and staff are properly trained. All care homes in England are regulated, registered and inspected by the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI). CSCI regulates care homes in accordance with statutory regulations and the NMS. CSCI has strong enforcement powers and will take action to protect the welfare of residents, with the aim of raising the quality of care and level of protection for vulnerable people and ensuring that service users and their families can be confident that their welfare and interests are safeguarded.

Care Proposals

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the criteria in the letter sent to strategic health authority chief executives of 16 February entitled 'Moving care closer to home' apply to mental health and learning disability trusts. [77830]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 15 June 2006]: The White Paper, "Our health, our care, our say", set out a new vision for the future of community health and social care services. Paragraph 6.43 made the following commitment:

> "PCTs taking current decisions about the future of community hospitals will be required to demonstrate to their SHA that they have consulted locally and have considered options such as developing new pathways, new partnerships and new ownership possibilities. SHAs will then test PCT community hospital proposals against the principles of this White Paper."

The Department wrote to strategic health authorities on 16 February reminding them of this commitment and setting out practical arrangements. This letter specifically related to community hospital consultations, rather than those relating to mental health and learning disability trusts.

Cattle

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is her policy that the removal of specified risk material from cattle is a public health protection measure the costs of which should be met by the Government as defined in recommendation 26 of the Meat Industry Red Tape Working Group Report of December 1999. [77721]

Caroline Flint: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is responsible for policy on the financing of official controls on the removal of specified risk material from cattle. The FSA has proposed recently that charges should be phased in to gradually recover from the meat industry an increasing amount of the cost of the controls. The FSA is currently in the process of liaising with stakeholders about this matter following which there will be full public consultation.

Childhood Cocaine Addiction

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have been treated for (a) cocaine addiction and (b) cocaine-related illnesses in each of the last five years. [75071]

Caroline Flint: The Department does not hold this information centrally.

A major national survey conducted with over 9,000 secondary school children aged 11 to 15 showed that in 2005, 2 per cent. of pupils had taken cocaine in the previous year, a figure which has not changed since 2001[1].

[1] "Drug Use, smoking and drinking among young people in England in 2005", National Centre for Social Research/National Foundation for Educational Research.

Childhood Eating Patterns

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research she has commissioned to study influences on childhood eating patterns. [74151]

Caroline Flint: A key component of the "Choosing Health" white paper is the commitment to develop a healthy living social marketing campaign. We have therefore undertaken an intensive desk research project, reviewing published data, alongside research findings from a range of stakeholders including Government, academia, non-governmental organisations and the commercial sector. The next phase in the development of the social marketing campaign involves commissioning quantitative and qualitative research. The plan is for this research to be completed later this year.

Childhood Immunisation

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how primary care trusts are providing childhood immunisation services for families in areas where GPs have opted out of providing them; and if she will make a statement. [72769]

Caroline Flint: If a general practitioner (GP) opts out, then 1 per cent. is removed from the GPs global sum payment. This allows the primary care trust (PCT) to re-provide with another contractor or self-provide.

If a PCT were to re-provide, it would need to specify the performance management of those services. The PCT would be held to account for their performance, through their commissioning arrangements with service providers, by the strategic health authority.

In addition, PCTs could commission a separate local enhanced service, defining the population to be served and routes to achieve uptake.

Supporting local innovation in designing their services, or strengthening existing successes, is a priority for the Department.

Childhood Obesity

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the relationship between childhood obesity and (a) household income, (b) parental education level, (c) hours of television watched per week and (d) hours of sport provided at school per week. [74155]

Caroline Flint: The data draw on statistics from the Health Survey for England (HSE) from 1995 to 2004 and comparative work done by the Joint Health Surveys Unit on behalf of the Department.

Table 1, which represents household income, indicates that there is some social class gradient in childhood obesity but no clear trend. There is more obesity in the two lowest quintiles than the highest.

No data are available comparing obesity prevalence and parents' education levels. However, we can use the national statistics social-economic classification (NS-SEC) which provides a social classification system that classifies groups on the basis of employment relations, based on characteristics such as career prospects, autonomy, mode of payment and period of notice.

Table 2 shows that the children of parents in managerial and professional professions are less likely to be obese than those in semi-routine and routine professions, but there is no clear relationship between obese children and their parent's professions in other categories.

Table 3 illustrates that the upward long-term trends in obesity prevalence coincide with the upward long-term trends in time spent playing digital games, including television watching time. These trends cannot be considered in isolation as other activities, for example the number of children driven to school, which may contribute to obesity will also have changed during this time period.

The Department is aware of the research from North America, which demonstrates calorie consumption increasing with number of hours of television watched.

The HSE measures physical activity levels that are categorised as active (active for 60 minutes per day for seven days in the last week—the Government's recommended levels of physical activity) or insufficiently active (active at a lower level). This classification includes activities such as physical education and school sport, structured and unstructured play in and out of school time and active travel to and from school.

Table 4 shows that there is a weak correlation between obesity and physical activity levels, with small differences in the percentage of obese children classified as active or inactive.

Children's Hospices

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to the written statement of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 10WS, on children's hospices, whether additional funding will be provided for non-hospice-based children's palliative care services; [77451]

(2) when she anticipates funding for children's hospices to start; how much of the funding announced will be distributed in (a) 2006-07, (b) 2007-08 and (c) 2008-09; whether this funding will be sourced from the Department of Health's central budget; which hospices will receive funding; and what the mechanism will be through which the funding will be allocated. [77452]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Children's hospices play a valuable role in the provision of palliative care for disabled children and young people or those with complex health needs and their families and I am pleased that we have been able to provide additional funding to them. But they are only one aspect of children's palliative care. We want to see children and their families have a real choice as to where they receive their care so that they can live as normal a life as possible for as long as possible. Our White Paper, "Our health, Our care, Our say", expects primary care trusts to ensure that the right model of service is developed by undertaking a review to audit capacity and delivery of integrated pathways against national service framework standards and then to agree service models, funding and commissioning arrangements with their strategic health authorities. The White Paper also restates the Government manifesto commitment to increase funding for end of life care which includes palliative care for children and young people. We will make an announcement about funding this manifesto commitment as soon as we can.

We announced that £9 million per year would be available to voluntary children's hospices for the next three years starting from this financial year and it will be centrally funded. This will enable services funded by the Big Lottery Fund to continue, pending the outcome of a review of children's hospice services and their funding arrangements. We will publish funding criteria and arrangements for allocation as soon as possible.

Chlamydia

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of Chlamydia there have been in each primary care trust in each of the last five years. [77149]

Caroline Flint: Data on the number of sexually transmitted infections, including HIV infection are published in Mapping the Issues: HIV and other Sexually Transmitted Infections in the United Kingdom: 2005. The report is available at: www.hpa.org.uk/hpa/publications/hiv_sti_2005/pdf/MtI_FC_report.pdf

A copy has been placed in the Library.

Clinical Negligence

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answers of 4 April 2006, Official Report, column 195W, on clinical negligence, and 25 April 2006, Official Report, column 1080W, on the NHS Litigation Authority, what the reason is for the difference in the answers in relation to whether information on the funding arrangements of claimants is collected by the Litigation Authority. [76306]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 12 June 2006]: My previous reply sought to clarify the position set out in my reply on 4 April 2006 to question 62399 concerning whether information on the funding arrangements of claimants is collected by the NHS Litigation Authority (NHSLA).

The NHSLA record the legal funding arrangements of claimants when legal proceedings are issued. As a defendant organisation, they will not necessarily know about the funding status of claims that are pre-litigation. Claimants are not required to declare funding arrangements until the litigation process is entered. Information held by the NHSLA on the funding arrangements of claimants is therefore necessarily incomplete.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for further guidance identified in the letter sent to strategic health authorities of 16 February entitled "Moving care closer to home"; what impact this will have upon current proposals to reduce provision of community hospitals in Gloucestershire; and how the Secretary of State will ensure that proposals have been fully consulted upon with the people affected by service changes. [76034]

Caroline Flint: The further guidance identified in the letter sent to strategic health authorities (SHAs) on 16 February entitled "Moving care closer to home" will be published in the coming weeks. It will outline the next steps to be taken in relation to the commitments on community hospitals made in the White Paper "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services".

The guidance includes information on patient and public involvement, specifically when making changes to community services. However, the principle that making decisions on local healthcare provision, including the closure of community or cottage hospitals, is a matter for primary care trusts and SHAs will remain.

Complementary Medicine

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what complementary medicine is provided by the NHS; and if she will make a statement; [76802]

(2) if she will estimate how much the NHS has spent on providing complementary medicine to patients in each year since 1997; [76803]

(3) what guidelines are issued to general practitioners concerning referrals to complementary medicine practitioners; and whether there are requirements for the effectiveness of complementary therapies to be scientifically substantiated. [76805]

Caroline Flint: The Government consider that decision making on individual clinical interventions, using either complementary or more orthodox treatments, is a matter for local national health service providers and practitioners. There are therefore no centrally held records on what complementary medicines are provided by the NHS or how much is spent on their provision.

When making any clinical decision, general practitioners are expected to consider safety and effectiveness. In 2000, the Department produced an information pack for both primary care groups and primary care clinicians to provide a basic source of reference on complementary medicine and to support individual clinical judgment.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been funded by the NHS on how cost-effective complementary medicine is; and what the conclusions were. [76804]

Andy Burnham: Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Details of individual projects, including a number concerned with complementary medicine, are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research The register contains no record of NHS-funded research on how cost-effective complementary medicine is.

Computer Sciences Corporation

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the implications of the announcement by the Computer Sciences Corporation of a reduction of 1,200 jobs across the UK on its contract with the NHS in the north west and the north Midlands. [71624]

Caroline Flint: The Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency has sought and received assurances from the Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC) that plans to restructure its workforce in the United Kingdom will have no impact on the company's ability to comply with its contractual obligations as local service provider for the national programme for information technology's north west and west Midlands cluster area.

The company has provided the agency with the following statement:

"CSCs current programme of staff reductions will not have any detrimental impact on CSC's work to support the national programme. CSC is fully committed to the national programme, shares the vision, and is determined to continue building on the successes achieved to date. CSC has further strengthened and enhanced the management team this year and fully expects to see the programme at the forefront of its priorities throughout the lifetime of the contract. CSC believes that this intent is demonstrated by the substantial number of projects already deployed, and the current user base of some 30,000 NHS staff. The head of CSCs NHS programme would be quite willing to meet with the MP for Blackpool South to provide further background and confidence."

Major rollout of new services and systems is well under way in the cluster area, and the pace and scale of deployments continues to accelerate.

Connecting for Health

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) budget and (b) outturn was for Connecting for Health in (i) 2004-05 and (ii) 2005-06; and what the proposed outturn is for 2006-07. [75128]

Caroline Flint: The Department's NHS Connecting for Health agency came into being on 1 April 2005. The agency's primary responsibilities are for delivering the national programme for information technology, and maintaining the critical business systems previously provided to the national health service by the former NHS Information Authority. Outturn running cost expenditure for 2005-06 was £144 million against a budget of £178 million. The equivalent budget for 2006-07 is £168 million.

The pace and scale of deployment of new national programme systems and services is accelerating on a weekly basis, and the budget increase over 2005-06 mainly reflects targets for continuing expansion through the year in support of the Department's plans for developing, procuring and implementing integrated information technology infrastructure and systems in all NHS organisations in England by 2010. In the course of the coming year we anticipate, for example, that choose and book will be effectively deployed, full deployment of release one of the electronic prescription service, further upgrading of NHS care records service software providing ever richer functionality, and complete roll-out of the new broadband connections across the NHS by the end of the financial year.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the progress statistics alongside targets on the Connecting for Health website. [75130]

Caroline Flint: National programme for information technology cluster deployment statistics are already routinely published on the NHS Connecting for Health website, and updated in a form which provides a comprehensive, at-a-glance snapshot of progress to date. They can be found at:

www.connectingforhealth.nhs.uk/delivery/servicemanagement/statistics/service

A summary of NHS Connecting for Health programme and management activity targets is contained in the agency's annual business plan. The 2005-06 business plan is published on the agency website at:

http://www.connectingforhealth.nhs.uk/publications/busplans

A copy of the 2006-07 business plan will be published shortly.

If suggestions are received for publication of further national programme performance statistics, and how these compare with those of other information technology service delivery organisations, they will be considered.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the letter of 4 May 2006 from the hon. Member for Walsall, North concerning constituents. [78029]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A reply was sent on Wednesday 14 June 2006.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of services for people with cystic fibrosis. [77234]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We have made no assessment of the effectiveness of services for those living with cystic fibrosis.

Dentistry

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has received representations from dentists who have not been paid by their primary care trust for work undertaken under a new general dental services contract or a new personal dental services agreement. [76968]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trust (PCT) payment functions for dentistry are exercised on PCTs' behalf by the NHS Business Services Authority (Awdurdod Gwasanaethau Busnes y GIG) Dental Practice Division (BSA DPD). The BSA DPD reports that the vast majority of payments due to dentists since 1 April 2006 have been paid correctly and on the due date. Where dentists have made representations about incorrect or missing payments the BSA DPD has contacted the relevant PCT, checked that the dentist is entitled to payment, and corrected the position.

Detailed Care Record

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will have access to an individual's detailed care record; and across which NHS boundaries. [75133]

Caroline Flint: Local national health service organisations have the responsibility for determining which of their staff may access the detailed care records available within the particular deployment of new information technology systems to that organisation. Sophisticated tools are being developed and provided by NHS Connecting for Health to enable local organisations to restrict access to records to those staff involved in an individual's care in accordance with the guidance provided in the Department's publication "Confidentiality: NHS Code of Practice".

NHS Connecting for Health is implementing e-Government interoperability framework (eGif) level three standards for the registration and authentication of staff. This provides a high level of assurance that only bona fide personnel have access to the care record service. eGif level three requires a face-to-face meeting, and the provision of official documentation and authentication to systems, using a two-factor approach. NHS Connecting for Health use a smartcard and a passcode.

When fully deployed, NHS Connecting for Health-delivered systems will utilise a number of separate mechanisms, including consent/dissent, legitimate relationships, role-based access and sealed envelopes. Consent/dissent provides for patients to formally opt-out of sharing their clinical data. Legitimate relationships restrict access to only those clinicians involved in the patients care. Role-based access identifies the staff role and only allows access to the relevant part of the record, for example, restricting the access a receptionist has to clinical details. Sealed envelopes allow a patient to restrict access further to particularly sensitive parts of their record.

These controls have been designed to put the patient at the heart of care rather than having restrictions based on NHS organisational boundaries.

Initially, as systems begin to be rolled out, access to an individual's detailed care record will still be restricted to the originating organisation. This will gradually be extended to local health communities and eventually across larger areas as the scope of the access controls are extended and the systems capable of utilising them are deployed.

In addition the NHS care record service specifies strict audit requirements that log which individuals have accessed which records. This will provide an unprecedented level of traceability and assurance, and is in very marked contrast to the significant risk of casual and unauthorised inspection associated with current paper-based and electronic systems.

More information can be obtained from www.connectingforhealth.nhs.uk/technical/security.

Drug Addiction

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of how many children aged (a) 0 to 11, (b) 12 to 16 and (c) 17 to 18 years are dependent on (i) cannabis, (ii) nicotine, (iii) heroin and (iv) crack cocaine in (A) England, (B) each English region and (C) the Tees Valley. [73652]

Caroline Flint: The data requested is not collected centrally.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have undergone treatment for drug addiction in programmes designed to get them off drugs entirely and immediately, as opposed to harm reduction and other similar programmes, in each year since the Government's drug strategy was introduced; and how many came off drugs, including substitute prescribed drugs, completely in each year. [71997]

Caroline Flint: Information about drug services is not collected in a way that allows us centrally to identify treatment programmes in England designed to get drug mis-users off drugs immediately as opposed to an approach of harm reduction and stabilisation. The majority of programmes which are designed to get drug users off drugs entirely and immediately are provided within inpatient treatment, but successful completion of an in-patient programme does not necessary mean immediate abstinence from all drugs.

As part of comprehensive local drug treatment provision we would expect there to be a mix of services to meet the individual needs of all drug mis-users. The Government's overall objective has not changed and remains for as many problem drug mis-users as possible to become drug free over time.

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have undergone treatment for drug addiction in each year since the Government's drug strategy was introduced; and how many came off drugs, including substitute prescribed drugs, completely in each year. [71998]

Caroline Flint: The number of individuals recorded as in contact with structured drug treatment services for the past two years is shown in table one:

Table 1

	Number
2003-04	125,545
2004-05	160,450

The 1998-99 baseline against which these figures are calculated is 85,000. The Department's public service agreement (PSA) is to double the numbers in treatment between 1998 and 2008.

The National Treatment Agency (NTA) introduced a revised and more accurate methodology for counting the numbers in treatment in October 2004. Figures are not available on the new methodology for the years 1999-00, 2000-01, 2001-02, 2002-03. Figures will be available for these years later in autumn 2006.

We are unable to estimate how many people have stopped mis-using drugs including substitute prescribed drugs completely, however figures showing those who have successfully completed treatment, having been discharged from inpatient drug treatment services are given in table two. Numbers for years prior to 2003 are not available. Successful completion of inpatient drug treatment programmes may be the first step to achieving long term abstinence, but will not always mean they are off all drugs immediately.

Table 2: Numbers successfully completed treatment of those discharged

Drug Tariff

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reintroduce the Price Increase Mechanism for Part 9 of the Drug Tariff. [77654]

Andy Burnham: We are considering when it will be appropriate to open discussions on the Price Increase Agreement in the light of the continuing overall review of Part IX of the Drug Tariff.

Eileen Trust

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the time plan is for the proposed business plan for the Eileen Trust. [74298]

Caroline Flint: The Eileen and Macfarlane Trusts have requested an increase in their funding. This proposal is still being considered and the Minister of State for Public Health hopes to meet the Chairman shortly.

Electronic Health Records

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what beacon electronic health record sites were established under her Department's Information for Health: an information strategy for the modern NHS 1998 to 2005, published in September 1998; and if she will make a statement. [74064]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 16 May 2006, Official Report, columns 940-1W, to the hon. Member for Northavon (Steve Webb). Beacon sites were those piloted under the electronic records demonstrator and implementation programme.

Emergency Contraception

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) under what powers primary care trusts can make prescription of the morning after pill to children under 16 years without parental knowledge or authority a condition of obtaining a pharmacy licence; and if she will make a statement; [75525]

(2) what advice her Department has issued to pharmacy companies whose policy it is not to prescribe emergency contraception over the counter without prescription to under 16-year-olds; and if she will make a statement; [75526]

(3) which primary care trusts have made the prescription of the morning after pill to children under 16 years without parental authority a condition of granting a pharmacy licence; how many pharmacies have been refused a licence because of their refusal to comply with this condition; and how many (a) appealed against the decision and (b) were successful in such an appeal in the last year for which figures are available. [75527]

Andy Burnham: A primary care trust (PCT) decides applications to provide national health service pharmaceutical services under the NHS (Pharmaceutical Services) Regulations 2005 (SI 2005/641 as amended). Under Regulation 12, a PCT only grants an application if it is satisfied it is necessary or desirable to do so in order to secure the adequate provision of pharmaceutical services in a local neighbourhood. This is known as the control of entry test.

However, under the reforms we introduced in April 2005, certain types of application are exempt from that test (regulation 13), namely:

premises in an approved retail area which is over 15,000 square metres gross floor space and sited away from town centres; premises which the applicant will keep open for at least 100 hours a week; or premises within a new one-stop primary care centre.

It is only in respect of Regulation 13 applications that a PCT can directly specify that a pharmacy provides additional pharmaceutical services, from a list of services set out in the Pharmaceutical Services (Advanced and Enhanced Services) (England) Directions 2005 (as amended). The PCT must have specified what additional services are required in advance of the application. One such service a PCT may specify is the provision of emergency hormonal contraception (EHC) to females of child-bearing age. This is an enhanced service by virtue of Direction 4(1) (k) and possibly (m) if a patient group direction.

It is for the applicant to decide whether or not to make an application under one of these exemptions. If an applicant does not wish to provide the additional services specified by a PCT for an exempt application, it may instead apply to provide services under the conventional route in Regulation 12. This does not allow a PCT to specify additional services that applicants are to provide.

The Department does not collect data on the number of PCTs which have specified the provision of EHC as a required additional service for an application made under Regulation 13, nor the number of refusals of applications by PCTs on these grounds or subsequent appeals. However, The Information Centre for health and social care publishes general data on applications to provide pharmaceutical services and appeals annually. The next bulletin for the year 2005-06 will be published later this year.

The family health services appeal unit of the NHS Litigation Authority (NHSLA) deals with appeals relating to these regulations. The NHSLA produces an annual report every autumn. The website of the appeal unit at www.nhsla.nhs.uk reports details of appeal decisions, of which only one up until May 2006 related to EHC. This appeal was dismissed.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many morning-after pills were distributed by each primary care trust in Gloucestershire in each of the last five years. [77826]

Caroline Flint: The information available is shown in the tables. Information on emergency hormonal contraception (EHC) supplied under a patient group direction (PGD) is not held centrally.

Family planning clinic services for Gloucestershire are provided by Cotswold and Vale primary care trust (PCT). The total number of occasions on which clinics run by this PCT prescribed post-coital contraceptives is published annually but the published figures include some instances where an intrauterine device was fitted. Cotswold and Vale PCT was created on 1 April 2002 and data for 2000-01 and 2001-02 relate to its predecessor organisations providing family planning clinic services, East Gloucestershire National Health Service Trust and Severn NHS Trust.

Food Poisoning

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of cases of food poisoning there have been in each of the last five years. [77282]

Caroline Flint: The number of notified cases of food poisoning in England and Wales reported to the Health Protection Agency (HPA) each year since 2001 is shown in the following table.

Notified cases of food poisoning in England and Wales[1]

	Number
2001	85,468
2002	72,649
2003	70,895
2004	70,311
2005	70,727

[1] http://www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/noids/food_poisoning.htm

Note:
Data for 2005 is still provisional and may be subject to change.

Notified cases of food poisoning do not represent the total burden (or numbers of cases) of food poisoning, but they do provide an indication of changes in trends with time. Notifications of food poisoning are based on clinical findings and/or epidemiological links and there is no obligation to identify the causative organism or the vehicle of infection.

Based on laboratory reports and multiplication factors derived from a large study of infectious intestinal disease the HPA estimated that, in 2003, there may have been as many as 843,049 cases of food borne illness acquired in England and Wales, of which around 253,000 consulted a doctor[1,2]. In that year, only 70,895 cases of food poisoning were notified. The HPA has not carried out a similar estimate for subsequent years.

Food Supplements Directive

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that the Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health defines the distinction between the inclusion in principle of ingredients on the list of ingredients permitted for use under the provisions of the Food Supplements Directive and the subsequent setting of the levels at which such nutrients may be present under the provisions of article 5 of the directive. [76383]

Caroline Flint: The Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health defines the distinction between the inclusion in principle of ingredients on the list of ingredients permitted for use under the provisions of the food supplements directive and the subsequent setting of the levels at which such nutrients may be present under the provisions of article 5 of the directive. The Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health defines the distinction between the inclusion in principle of ingredients on the list of ingredients permitted for use under the provisions of the food supplements directive and the subsequent setting of the levels at which such nutrients may be present under the provisions of article 5 of the directive.

The European Commission reminded the Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health on the 2 December 2005 of the distinction between the inclusion in principle of ingredients on the list of ingredients permitted for use under the provisions of the food supplements directive and the subsequent setting of the levels at which such nutrients may be present under the provisions of article 5 of the directive. This distinction is defined within the Food Supplements Directive 2002/46/EC.

Foster Review

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has received the report of the Foster review of health professions; whether she plans to create a new umbrella regulator for the health professions covered by the Foster review; and what legislative changes would be required to create such a regulator. [77044]

Andy Burnham: I received a draft of the report of the review of non-medical professional regulation on 30 December 2005 and a further draft on 6 March 2006. A statement will be made in due course when the Department's decision on the report is published.

Free Fruit

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the policy of free fruit in primary schools on children's dietary patterns and nutritional intake outside school. [74150]

Caroline Flint: The big lottery fund, who funded the piloting and roll-out of the school fruit and vegetable scheme (SFVS) into six of the nine English regions, commissioned the National Foundation for Educational Research (NFER), in partnership with Leeds University to carry out an evaluation of the SFVS. Results published in September 2005 demonstrated that children ate significantly more fruit while participating in the scheme. Analysis also showed that among those participating in the scheme fruit and vegetable consumption declined at home and increased in school, suggesting that the scheme did not encourage additional consumption outside of the direct influence of the SFVS.

A NOP World survey carried out in October 2003 found that over a quarter of children and their families reported that they were eating more fruit at home after joining the scheme, rising to nearly a third in social class C2DE.

The Department plans to carry out a further evaluation of the SFVS later this year. Monitoring the impact of the scheme on the eating habits of children outside school will be an important component of the evaluation.

GMC's Complaints Mechanism

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what correspondence her Department has had with (a) members of the public and (b) the General Medical Council (GMC) regarding the lack of a right of appeal by patients against decisions made by GMC case examiners following complaints against doctors. [54095]

Andy Burnham: In the nine months to 22 May 2006, 13 items of correspondence relating to this issue were received from members of the public.

The Chief Medical Officer has undertaken a review of matters relating to medical regulation which will address this issue. A statement will be made shortly.

Haemophiliacs

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many haemophiliacs have been infected by (a) hepatitis C, (b) AIDS and (c) both hepatitis C and AIDS as a result of NHS treatment for their illness. [69581]

Caroline Flint: Most patients with haemophilia who were treated with blood products before the introduction of virus-inactivation procedures were infected with the hepatitis C virus.

The number of haemophilia patients infected with HIV/AIDS is 1,243. Most patients infected with HIV were co-infected with hepatitis C.

Health Care (Stroud)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people resident in Stroud were treated at (a) Gloucestershire Royal Hospital, (b) Cheltenham General Hospital, (c) Frenchay Hospital, (d) Southmead Hospital, (e) John Radcliffe Hospital, Oxford, (f) Stroud Hospital and (g) Berkeley Hospital in each of the last five years, broken down by treatment received. [77828]

Caroline Flint: Information on the number of patients resident in Stroud is not available in the requested format. However, information on the count of patients residing in West Gloucestershire Primary Care Trust area, by site of treatment, has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many babies were born at Stroud Maternity Hospital in each of the last three years, broken down by constituency of residence of the mother. [77829]

Caroline Flint: The number of registered deliveries at Stroud Maternity Hospital is shown in the table. However, information on the number of babies born at Stroud Maternity Hospital broken down by constituency is not collected.

Health Professions Council

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the current budget of the Health Professions Council (HPC) is; what plans she has to increase this budget; how many people the HPC employs; whether all professions within the HPC have equal status; and whether professions incorporated into the HPC in the future will have equal status. [76208]

Andy Burnham: The Health Professions Council is a statutory independent body, which is self-funded through registrants' fees. All queries pertaining to its budget, employees and the discharge of its statutory functions should be made direct to the Chief Executive, Marc Seale, at the Health Professions Council, Park House, 184 Kennington Park Road, London, SE11 4BU, 020 7582 0866.

Health Trusts (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the financial position (a) is in 2006-07 and (b) was in 2005-06 of each (i) primary care trust and health trust in Hampshire and (ii) each other health trust used by Hampshire residents. [76609]

Caroline Flint: There are no figures yet available for the financial year 2006-07. The table shows provisional outturn positions for the financial year 2005-06 of each trust and primary care trust (PCT) in the Hampshire and Isle of Wight Strategic Health Authority (SHA) region. It is not possible to identify other health trusts used by residents in Hampshire, as any patient can access any acute hospital in an emergency and the introduction of choose and book means that patients also have access to a wide range of health trusts within England.

Healthy Living Centres

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what arrangements her Department has made to fund the continuing operation of healthy living centres; [76233]

(2) how many healthy living centres were set up with lottery funding; and when the lottery funding will cease in each case. [76234]

Caroline Flint: The continuing funding arrangements for healthy living centres (HLCs) in England are a matter for their local partners, including primary care trusts and local authorities, many of whom do provide resources in cash, or kind, to support them.

In England, 257 grant awards were made by the New Opportunities fund (now the Big Lottery fund) to HLCs. All payments of lottery funding to HLCs will be completed in 2009. I have asked the chief executive of the Big Lottery fund to write to the hon. Member setting out the actual forecast final payment for each HLC.

Hepatitis C

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) financial support and (b) compensation is available to those who have had a hepatitis C infection as a result of a blood transfusion within the NHS but who no longer have the infection. [76550]

Caroline Flint: The Skipton Fund was established in 2004, to administer the ex-gratia payment scheme for people infected with hepatitis C following national health service treatment with blood or blood products. The scheme became operational on 5 July 2004.

People who have cleared the virus as a result of treatment, or who have cleared it spontaneously after a period of chronic infection, are eligible to apply for payment under the hepatitis C ex-gratia payment scheme. People who have cleared the virus spontaneously in the acute phase of the disease are not eligible for payment.

High Voltage Transmission Lines

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies she has commissioned into the health effects of living in very close proximity to high voltage transmission lines; and if she will make a statement. [77040]

Caroline Flint: The Department's radiation protection research programme supports a number of studies investigating the possible health effects of electromagnetic fields (EMF). These range from laboratory work on possible cellular effects to large population studies. A study by Dr. Draper and colleagues of childhood leukaemia incidence and distance from power lines, funded under this programme and published in the British Medical Journal (BMJ) last year, has added to a large existing body of work in this area (BMJ Vol 330, 4 June 2005). In addition to its own research programme, the Department, along with the Health and Safety Executive, has supported the World Health Organisation's International EMF Project since it started in 1997.

The Health Protection Agency's radiation protection division (HPA-RPD) keeps the worldwide research findings on EMF and health under review. In 2004, on the basis of a comprehensive review of the existing body of research to date, the HPA-RPD (previously the national radiological protection board) recommended the adoption of new EMF exposure guidelines in this country. In addition, in view of the scientific uncertainties in relation to power frequency electromagnetic fields, the HPA recommended the Government

"consider the need for further precautionary measures".

They have also noted that the majority of elevated magnetic fields are due to variations in the electricity supply and distribution system, the presence of substations and equipment in the home rather than proximity to high voltage overhead cables.

Practical precautionary measures are now being considered in detail by a stakeholder advisory group (SAGE) that includes the Government Departments, agencies, electricity industry, specialists and public concern groups. Details of the process can be found on the website at: www.rkpartnership.co.uk/sage.

Home Computing Initiative

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) NHS staff and (b) nurses had received equipment under the Home Computing Initiative since the scheme was introduced. [63840]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Hospital Building Projects (London)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the major hospital building projects in London which (a) are under way and (b) have received building permission; and if she will make a statement. [77488]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 15 June 2006]: The major hospital building projects (capital value greater than £25 million) which are under way in London are:

All schemes are required to have secured outline and full planning permission as a condition of approval to proceed to construction.

Indoor Pollution

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of indoor pollution on the population; and if he will make a statement. [75567]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not undertaken a formal assessment of the effects on indoor air pollution on the population. However, the committee on the medical effects of air pollutants (COMEAP) frequently looks at evidence gathered from studies of the effects of indoor air pollution on health. COMEAP has recently published, on its website, a substantial document entitled "Guidance on Indoor Air Quality" which is available at: www.advisorybodies.doh.gov.uk/comeap/PDFs/guidanceindoorairqualitydec04.pdf.

This document reviews the major indoor air pollutants and provides important advice on how to maintain good indoor air quality.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside her Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in her Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71759]

Caroline Flint: The information that follows pertains to the central Department and does not cover Executive agencies, other arm's length bodies or NHS Connecting for Health. A de minimis of £100,000 per annum has been applied.

Since June 2002 the Department has spent a total of £88.42 million with Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC), its information technology (IT) service provider through the information management services agreement. This has included the annual support charges and the cost of the transformation programme. It has also included expenditure, which CSC administer on behalf of the Department, for example BT costs for the wide area network and business ports, and audio conferencing and mobile telephone costs. The remainder of the costs over the five years have been apportioned to project work in support of the integrity and resilience of the infrastructure. These two areas are listed as follows as project and pass through charges. Details of other IT spend, corporate software, telecommunications, the finance system and the web content management system and external hosting are shown in the table.

[2] This contract has just been let and the estimated costs cover the next five years.

The sponsor of major IT projects would always be a member of the senior civil service with several years of experience in dealing with such projects and with IT suppliers. As project sponsor his or her responsibility would be to draw together project boards and project teams of civil servants and/or consultants with both project management and procurement qualifications, for example PRINCE2 practitioners and members of the Institute of Purchasing and Supply. Procurements and implementation of projects are undertaken in line with Office of Government Commerce best practice and European Union procedures as required.

Insulins

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is available to the Department on the use of insulins. [76553]

Andy Burnham: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published a technology appraisal 'Guidance on the use of long-acting insulin analogues for the treatment of diabetes—insulin glargine' in December 2002.

However, the choice of insulin prescribed to a patient is a clinical decision made as a result of a joint decision-making process between the patient and their clinician taking into account all available evidence and the individuals specific clinical needs.

From January 2006, the NICE guidance on patient education has required all primary care trusts to implement NICE recommendations by providing all people with diabetes with high quality, structured education which should include information on insulin use.

Liverpool City Council

Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what resources are being deployed by the Commission for Social Care Inspection to ensure that Liverpool city council social services department complies with national standards of service delivery in (a) care of the elderly and (b) vulnerable adults. [72462]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I understand from the Chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that it does not hold a numerical quantification of the resources involved.

Liverpool social services is currently judged to be a one star council, serving some adults well, with uncertain prospects for improvement.

CSCI undertook a joint inspection with the Healthcare Commission of older people's services in May 2005. It identified key areas of improvement around strategy and needs analysis and commissioning and performance management.

Liverpool council has produced improvement plans, which are being monitored by CSCI through the regular business meeting process with the director of adult social services, senior managers, front line managers and elected members of Liverpool city council.

The joint 'Supporting People' inspection of Liverpool council in June 2004 identified the key areas of development to focus on the improvement of management capacity, commissioning and performance management and partnership and engagement. CSCI is working with partners, including the Audit Commission, to ensure Liverpool council is engaging staff and users in order to positively promote and enhance performance progress.

CSCI, through its regulatory activity, has noted that the council's own regulated services are demonstrating an improvement and that when regulatory requirements are made they are met within the timescales.

Local Improvement Finance Trust Schemes

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the local improvement finance trust schemes undertaken in (a) Forest of Dean constituency and (b) Gloucestershire in each year since the initiative was introduced. [73794]

Caroline Flint: There are no local improvement finance trusts (LIFT) schemes in the Forest of Dean constituency and Gloucestershire. It is for local primary care trusts to decide to seek approval from the Department to establish LIFTs in their areas, and they do this in the light of the health and social care needs of their population. The local primary care trusts have decided not to seek approval to establish LIFTs in their areas.

Management Consultancy

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much (a) Kennett and North Wiltshire primary care trust and (b) West Wiltshire primary care trust spent on management consultancy in each of the last five years. [75863]

Caroline Flint: Detailed information about contracts for management consultants engaged by national health service bodies is not held centrally.

Maternity Units

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times the midwife-led birth unit at Gloucestershire Royal hospital has been closed in (a) 2005 and (b) 2006. [76077]

Caroline Flint: This is a matter for the Chair of Gloucestershire National Health Service Foundation Trust. I have written to Dame Janet Trotter informing her of your enquiry. A copy of her reply will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what grounds it has been decided to propose Stroud Maternity Unit for closure; and what account she has taken of the new payments by results system in making that decision. [76083]

Caroline Flint: Within the framework of the NHS Plan and other national policy documents, it is for local health economies to plan, develop and deliver local services. Decisions on the range of services to be made available or closed in local areas are prioritised and led by local trusts.

Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority has advised officials that a full consultation on health services in Gloucestershire will run from June 12 to 4 September.

Medical Treatment (Under-16s)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will bring forward legislation to require health professionals (a) to attempt to persuade a person under 16 years of age to involve a parent or guardian in any medical treatment and (b) to require a person under 16 years of age who declines to involve a parent or guardian in their medical treatment to sign a waiver form confirming that they have rejected involvement of a parent or guardian; and if she will make a statement. [75528]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The courts have found that children aged under 16 who have sufficient understanding and maturity to enable them to understand fully what is involved in a proposed medical intervention will also have the capacity to consent to that intervention. Departmental guidance states that health professionals should encourage young people to involve their family in decision-making.

Mental Health

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) job losses and (b) ward closures there have been in each mental health trust in England in each of the last five years. [75604]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not routinely collect and hold centrally operational management information on proposals to close wards or change staffing levels. Such decisions are for trusts to determine in partnership with local stakeholders. This Government have given local authority overview and scrutiny committees (OSCs) the power to review and scrutinise health services from the perspective of their local populations. National health service bodies are under a duty to consult OSCs on any plans to make substantial variation to NHS services. Those committees have the powers to refer any proposal to the Secretary of State if they believe the plans are not in the interests of the health service.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding was allocated to each (a) mental health trust and (b) primary care trust in England in each of the last five years. [75605]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department makes revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs), but not to national health service mental health trusts. Allocations were first made to PCTs in 2003-04, but prior to this funding was allocated to health authorities.

Details of revenue allocations to PCTs for 2003-04 to 2005-06 and 2006-07 to 2007-08 have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health patients from (a) Manchester Withington and (b) the city of Manchester have not been immediately admitted on referral to a mental health bed in a Manchester hospital in each year since 1997. [76454]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on current waiting times for mental health outpatient treatment in Barnet. [75998]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not routinely assess waiting times for mental health services in any locality, including Barnet, because waiting time targets only apply to consultant-led services. This includes consultant-led mental health services. However, in mental health, referrals are usually made to the care of a multi-disciplinary team such as the local community mental health team rather than individual consultants. Therefore, the current waiting time targets are not robust indicators of access to mental health services, many of which take place outside the hospital setting.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people with multiple sclerosis are waiting to commence beta interferon and glatiramer treatment; [77293]

(2) how much funding has been provided for beta interferon and glatiramer treatment for multiple sclerosis in each of the last three years. [77294]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Patients with multiple sclerosis, who meet the eligibility criteria set out in Health Circular 2002-04, are able to access treatment with beta interferon and glatiramer acetate through the risk sharing scheme. Information on the number of patients awaiting such treatment is not collected.

The cost of all prescriptions dispensed in the community for England for beta interferon and glatiramer acetate is detailed as follows:

	Glatiramer acetate	Beta interferon
2003	631,321	14,244,221
2004	1,418,911	16,411,143
2005	2,043,707	17,499,572

Information taken from the prescription cost analysis system, supplied by the Prescriptions Pricing Division, which is part of the NHS Business Services Authority, based on an analysis of all prescriptions dispensed in the community for items personally administered in England. Also included are prescriptions written in Wales, Scotland, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man but dispensed in England. This does not cover drugs dispensed in hospitals, or private prescriptions.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of multiple sclerosis sufferers in England are receiving disease modifying therapies; [77700]

(2) how many people with multiple sclerosis in (a) England and (b) Eastbourne eligible for disease modifying therapies under the Association of British Neurologists' guidelines are not receiving them. [77702]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The percentage of people with multiple sclerosis (MS) currently receiving disease modifying therapies is not collected.

The number of people with MS eligible for disease modifying therapies, but not receiving them, is not collected.

National Blood Service

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints her Department received from men who have had sex with men that they were treated disrespectfully by blood donation staff in 2005. [76898]

Caroline Flint: Departmental officials are not aware of any complaints about the National Blood Service in relation to how their staff deal with men who have sex with men, who are excluded from donating blood.

National Centre for Media and Health

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the work of the National Centre for Media and Health. [67387]

Caroline Flint: The National Centre for Media and Health was a "Choosing Health" commitment which is being developed as part of the health social marketing strategy. An independent report commissioned by the Department, which investigates its future role, responsibilities and development will be launched in June 2006.

National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Act

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason section 28 of the National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Act 2002 has not been implemented. [75904]

Andy Burnham: The purpose of section 28 of the National Health Service Reform and Health Care Professions Act 2002 is to provide redress for the way the professional regulatory bodies have carried out any of their functions. Section 28 remains unimplemented to allow regulatory bodies a chance to consider, and amend if necessary, how any function is exercised.

Once the reviews of medical and non-medical professional regulation are published, we will consider the implementation of section 28.

National Programme for Information Technology

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the development of an electronic single assessment process through the national programme for information technology. [74056]

Caroline Flint: The national service framework (NSF) for older people published in March 2001 recommended implementation of a single assessment process by the health and social care professionals involved in the care of each individual. The national programme for information technology included IT support as an additional service for a single assessment process within the contracts let to local service providers. A variety of information systems and tools are available to support this process. Successful local deployments of such systems by national programme suppliers, notably in the programme's north east and eastern clusters, have demonstrated the value of the technology and its potential to support the rapid development of integrated multi-agency working across all client groups.

In addition, the £25 million capital expenditure grant recently paid to local authorities (LAs) by the Department for improving information management made specific reference to the single assessment process. The circular issued to LAs contained the following reference:

> "The integration of social care information is a key requirement in the final phase of NCRS implementation. This will include:
> Electronic implementation of the Single Assessment Process...
> It follows, therefore, that significant benefits will be gained by using the grant to facilitate that integration, in particular preparation for the NCRS implementation ... each local authority would be asked to summarise its spending proposals for 2006-07 and 2007-08, as covered by the extension of the grant. The Department is therefore asking each local authority to submit these proposals..."

A study has also been commissioned into options for national implementation of the electronic single assessment process (e-SAP), including linkage between health and social care systems. Consultation has been undertaken with health, social care and supplier representatives, and a report is due later in 2006.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what compensation has been paid to the NHS for loss suffered due to non-delivery of components of the national programme for information technology. [74059]

Caroline Flint: Many of the components of the national programme for information technology have been delivered to time. There have been some delays to local systems but local plans for deployment of systems and services are subject to regular update and revision by the national health service as well as suppliers depending, for example, on the readiness of NHS bodies to receive them. In general, payment is not made to suppliers until systems have been satisfactorily delivered and have been demonstrated to be safe to use and fit for purpose, and, where appropriate, been the subject of consultation with representatives of end-user groups. In some areas of the programme this process is determining the pace at which development and deployment takes place.

In some instances savings have been achieved by NHS organisations where national programme systems and services have been delivered ahead of time, or additional to those originally planned. Examples include email and new national network connections in many areas, and the benefits of national software licensing arrangements with Microsoft and Novell. There has been no clawback of the savings in these instances. The question of compensation for non-delivery, either to or from the NHS, therefore does not arise in either case.

There was a situation in the early days of the new national network (N3) contract when early milestones were missed and compensation of £4.5 million was agreed with BT. The N3 performance has since recovered and is now ahead of schedule.

Delivery of systems and services to the NHS is generally ahead of schedule in some areas, and, in the context of a 10-year programme, broadly on track in others. Such delays that have occurred have been more than made up for by delivery of projects additional to the original contracted components such as the quality management and analysis system (QMAS), the secure NHSmail email service and payment by results, which are in addition to the original scope of the programme.

Two years since contracts were first awarded, over 50,000 instances of new deployments of all types are currently live in NHS locations in England. 8,800 general practices (28,000 general practitioners (GPs)) are daily using QMAS that pays GPs £600 million a year based on quality outcomes. There are almost 230,000 users registered for access to the NHS care record spine with over 45,000 users accessing every day and around one and a quarter million prescriptions have been transmitted using the electronic transmission of prescriptions system. Over 14,500 secure broadband connections have been delivered, including to almost 10,000 general practice locations, and there are over 175,000 registered NHSmail users, over 79,000 of whom use the system daily.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the speed is of the broadband connection delivered through the national programme for information technology; and what assessment she has made of the optimal access speed. [74062]

Caroline Flint: The new national network (N3) provides connections of 0.5 up to 2 megabits per second (Mbps) of dedicated bandwidth for general practitioner (GP) sites, and of 2Mbps up to 100Mbps for national health service trusts. This can be topped up by local organisations to accommodate local business requirements.

Bandwidth deployed in any particular site depends on the size of the site, and the type of application usage predicted. More than 85 per cent. of GP sites have or are planned to have 1Mbps bandwidth or higher. Around 60 per cent. of NHS trusts have or are planned to have 100Mbps bandwidth.

Research on bandwidth requirements was undertaken with the NHS user community and prospective local service providers as part of the N3 procurement exercise. Results of the research were used as the basis for developing N3 products and services.

N3 deployment is one of the national programme's major success stories. In the two years since it began, over 14,500 installations have been completed at a rate significantly in advance of the original deployment plan. Before N3, only main GP practice sites were connected, the majority at 64kbps and some at 256kbps. None of these had any backup service provided and no branch practices were funded centrally. Trusts were provisioned at one 2mbps connection per trust. Under N3 all GP practice sites are eligible for centrally funded connections, and trusts are provided with a connection per site and receive bandwidth commensurate with their size. In order to provide a standard level of service, the provision of broadband services in some rural communities was accelerated under N3 in order that GPs could benefit from consistent services, regardless of location. The NHS was the first public service organisation to achieve this ambition for equitability of services in rural areas.

All N3 services receive significant backup connectivity, and average service availability across both primary and secondary care sites routinely exceeds 99.9 per cent. It is estimated that the total cost of N3 connections will be at least £800 million less than the provision of the same amount of N3 bandwidth under the old NHSnet contract.

NHS Care Records Service

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to link (a) opticians and (b) dentists to the NHS Care Records Service. [74057]

Caroline Flint: The NHS Care Records Service is the core component of the national programme for information technology. National programme applications are designed to support all the clinical services in and around the national health service, including dentists and opticians. The national programme is on target to achieve full integration of health and social care systems in England by 2010.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to link the Care Records Service to equivalent systems in (a) Scotland and (b) Wales. [74058]

Caroline Flint: The opportunity was provided for the Scottish Executive and the National Assembly for Wales to join the procurement exercise for England but, at the time, they chose not to do so, which is their right under devolved government arrangements. However, through the United Kingdom information management and technology forum, and the national health service information standards board, national programme officials work closely with officials in the Scottish Executive, the National Assembly for Wales, and the Northern Ireland Office to ensure common standards and interoperability of clinical information systems. Details of the output based specification, standards and message specification, used in England have been made available to other jurisdictions. The NHS care records service is being designed and developed in accordance with international and European Union-wide standards which have been adopted by the UK e-Government interoperability framework (e-GIF).

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health professionals are registered to access the NHS Care Records Service; and how many staff she expects to have access when the system is fully operational. [75439]

Caroline Flint: Local national health service organisations have the responsibility for determining which of their staff may access the care records available within the particular deployment of new information technology systems to their organisation. Only those people involved in the care of the patient will have access to patient information, and the level of detail to which they have access will be appropriate to their role. The NHS care records service registration authority is responsible for registering and verifying the identity of NHS staff who need to use the NHS Care Records Service (NHS CRS) and related systems and services. The number having access when the service is fully deployed across the NHS will be determined by the operational and professional needs of NHS organisations and their staff. Access to these systems and services, and the patient information they contain and use, is controlled by smartcards with identification and passcode, superior to a chip and pin credit card. Registration authorities locally issue smartcards to authorised staff with an approved level of access to patient information. As at 31 May 2006, there were over 230,000 users registered to access the NHS CRS.

NHS Direct

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether NHS Direct is funded out of the connecting for health budget; [66726]

(2) how NHS Direct generates revenue. [66727]

Caroline Flint: NHS Direct is funded by the Department for its core national services and for specific national projects such as the development of its NHS Direct interactive television services.

The nationally provided choose and book appointments line, which is currently solely provided by NHS Direct, is funded out of Departmental central budgets. To 2005-06, this has been funded from Connecting for Health monies. In 2006-07, the appointments line will be funded out of Departmental central budgets.

NHS Direct is able to generate local income by competing to provide services for primary care trusts and others. These may be either nationally enhanced services where it is national policy to involve NHS Direct such as call handling and clinical assessment for out-of-hours care or locally enhanced services to meet specific local needs such as pre-hospital screening.

NHS Finance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the restrictions are on primary care trusts releasing money ring-fenced for premises development; and if she will make a statement. [72735]

Caroline Flint: Primary care trusts have the responsibility to plan, develop and improve services to meet the needs of local people and to decide how available funding should best be spent. Investment in premises improvement will be considered alongside other priorities.

Funding that has been ring-fenced as grants to third parties, including primary care premises, must be spent for the purpose for which they were ring-fenced.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the mechanism is by which (a) primary care trusts and (b) NHS trusts report deficits to their strategic health authorities; how these deficits are monitored; and what the trigger is for bringing in a turnaround team. [76035]

Andy Burnham: In order to monitor the implementation of turnaround plans for organisations within the turnaround cohort, the turnaround national programme office at the Department has developed a fortnightly reporting process which will capture, for example, the following information: risks/issues during implementation; progress against milestones; overall financial performance against plan: for example cost savings achieved; monthly run rate information[1]; year to date/outturn performance; and forecast full year deficit.

Following an independent baseline assessment of organisations with some of the largest deficits, 98[2] organisations were identified as those with significant deficits. These organisations, also known as the turnaround cohort were categorised in terms of their support requirements as follows:

Category 1: Immediate priority. Urgent intervention required to drive turnaround.

Category 2: Additional expertise/resource needed to support turnaround.

Category 3: Drive/focus. Maintain high priority of actions.

Category 4: Encourage to share what works and deliver easy wins.

Category 1 and 2 organisations were expected to secure additional turnaround support in order to assist them in the development of robust credible turnaround plans. Strategic health authorities (SHAs) and chief executives of organisations retain the responsibility for financial recovery. Over and above the central expectation for additional turnaround support for categories 1 and 2, triggers to fund external turnaround support are determined locally.

All national health service trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) are required to submit financial forecasts to the Department on a monthly basis. SHAs may have additional reporting requirements.

[1] Monthly balance of income and expenditure (run rate balance).

[2] There are 102 (48 trusts and 54 PCTs) statutory organisations within the turnaround cohort but Ipswich PCT and Suffolk Coastal are under joint management and are treated as one organisation, as are Fareham and Gosport PCT and East Hampshire PCT, and three Cumbrian PCTs.

NHS IT Programme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what penalty charges have been levied on suppliers to the NHS IT programme, broken down by (a) company and (b) the part of the programme. [75031]

Caroline Flint: Under the terms of the contracts let by NHS Connecting for Health, the agency which is delivering the national health service national programme for information technology, a significant proportion of the completion risks have been transferred to the supplier. Payment to the supplier depends on system deployment, which incentivises deployment. NHS Connecting for Health has retained extensive rights under its contracts to defer payments, receive compensation for missed milestones and, if necessary, to terminate contracts, for failure to achieve the required performance levels.

In the early days of the new national network (N3) contract some early milestones were missed and clawback of £4.5 million was agreed with BT. N3 performance has since recovered and is now ahead of schedule.

Relevant contractual levers have also been applied on a number of other occasions where local service providers have failed to meet specified performance or deployment activity.

While not classed as penalty charges, these sanctions have been in the form of the withholding of payments.

NHS Performance

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her oral statement of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 253, on NHS performance, in which areas of NHS activity the £765 million surplus that has reduced the gross NHS deficit from £1.27 billion to £512 million arose; and if she will make a statement. [77065]

Andy Burnham: The national health service is not only delivering more and improved health services, but also a much better quality of care for patients. Some NHS organisations were able to deliver these improvements and deliver a surplus for 2005-06. There are a wide range of service improvements that trusts made irrespective of whether they were in surplus.

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her oral statement of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 253, on NHS performance, on what basis the gross deficit of £1.27 billion for the NHS financial year 2005-06 was calculated. [77066]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 13 June 2006]: The gross surplus is the aggregate of surpluses reported in the provisional unaudited outturn figures for 2005-06 by all national health service trusts, primary care trusts and strategic health authorities.

NHS Projects

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether NHS health (a) promotion and (b) prevention projects planned for the 2005-06 financial year have been (i) withdrawn, (ii) cut and (iii) postponed until the 2006-07 financial year. [51938]

Caroline Flint: The "Choosing Health" White Paper, published in 2004, sets out the Government's key programme of measures to promote health and prevent disease by supporting the public to make healthier and informed choices.

A delivery plan was published in 2005 following publication of the "Choosing Health" White Paper. This sets down plans for delivery against all "Choosing Health" commitments. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Obesity

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for (a) Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and (b) Education and Skills about reducing obesity in (i) schools and (ii) young people; and if she will make a statement. [68842]

Caroline Flint: The childhood obesity public service agreement (PSA) "to halt the year-on-year rise in obesity in 2 to 10 year olds by 2010" is jointly held by the Department, Department for Education and Skills (DfES) and Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS). Mechanisms are in place to ensure that contributions from relevant government departments are properly co-ordinated and discussed at official and ministerial level. These include the Obesity Programme Board, which meets quarterly and includes senior departmental officials from Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, Treasury, DfES, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, Food Standards Agency, and DCMS. The cross-Government Ministerial Committee on Domestic Affairs sub-Committee on Public Health has the obesity PSA as a standing agenda item at each of its regular meeting.

I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1204W.

Occupational Therapy

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the current (a) average and (b) longest waiting time for assessment for occupational therapy over the last three years; [77288]

(2) how many patients are currently awaiting assessment for occupational therapy. [77289]

Andy Burnham: The information requested is not available centrally.

The major employers of occupational therapists are the national health service and local authorities (LAs). In the NHS it is for primary care trusts, in partnership with strategic health authorities, LAs and other stakeholders, to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services. LAs directly employ occupational therapists and the delivery of the service will be determined by the employing authority. A number of LAs are in discussion with their NHS partners regarding the integration of occupational therapy services, however this information is not available centrally.

Osteopathy

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the basis is for the proposed changes to the regulation of osteopaths; and if she will make a statement. [76209]

Andy Burnham: The Government have made no proposals at this point for changes to the regulation of osteopaths. The recent review of non-medical professional regulation, which has reported to Ministers, looked at the need for change in the regulation of all non-medical professions. A statement will be made in due course when we reach our decisions on this review.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the budget for the General Osteopathic Council is publicly funded. [76170]

Andy Burnham: The General Osteopathic Council is self-funded through registrants' fees. No proportion of the budget is publicly funded.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what weight the Foster Review has given to the Government's principles of better regulation in considering the future regulation of osteopaths. [76171]

Andy Burnham: The Government's five better regulation principles require regulation to be proportionate, accountable, consistent, transparent and targeted. These principles underlie the review of non-medical professional regulation, which includes the regulation of osteopaths.

Parliamentary Questions

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer question numbers (a) 57781 and (b) 57782 tabled on 7 March and question numbers (c) 58559 and (d) 58560 tabled on 9 March. [73585]

Caroline Flint: Answers were given on 7 June.

PFI Projects

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the remaining stages are of each private finance initiative hospital project yet to reach final close; and whether additional stages are required to complete these projects which were not required for projects already completed. [70161]

Andy Burnham: The remaining stages of each private finance initiative (PFI) hospital project yet to reach financial close are shown in the table.

We announced on 26 January that all trusts with PFI schemes with an expected capital value of greater than £75 million would need to reconfirm their plans. This an additional check put in place to ensure that all schemes properly take account of the current reforms to the NHS such as choice, a movement of services into primary and community settings, the new financial regime as well long-term affordability, assumptions on efficiency gains and income growth.

Primary Care Trusts

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which primary care trusts are operating panels to review GP referrals to consultants; and if she will make a statement. [68238]

Caroline Flint: The information about which primary care trusts are operating referral panels is not held centrally.

The Department is clear that referrals to community-based clinical assessment services, and other such centres, should happen only where it adds genuine clinical value for patients.

Sexual Health

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated to the sexual health sector in each of the last five years. [77150]

Caroline Flint: In February 2005, individual primary care trusts (PCTs), including those covering the London area were notified of their choosing health revenue allocation. In 2006-07, £91.5 million has been allocated to PCTs for sexual health modernisation which includes funding for Chlamydia screening, contraception and abortion services and a further £111.5 million will be allocated in 2007-08. In addition, a further £15 million genito-urinary medicine capital was allocated in 2005-06 and a further £25 million in 2006-07.

Data on spend on sexual health services in each PCT is not collected centrally.

Sheppey Community Hospital

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new x-ray scanner will be (a) installed and (b) operational at Sheppey Community Hospital. [77614]

Caroline Flint: This is a local matter. However, the Kent and Medway Strategic Health Authority has advised that the new x-ray scanner at Sheppey Community Hospital is due to be installed during the week commencing 19 June 2006. Following installation, it is anticipated that the x-ray scanner will be operational within three weeks.

Sickle Cell Anaemia

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people diagnosed with sickle cell anaemia there are in (a) England and (b) London. [72319]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not collect this information.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) received information on which aims to develop a cure for sickle cell anaemia; and if she will make a statement. [72320]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The main agency through which the Government supports medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC is an independent body which receives its grant-in-aid from the Office of Science and Innovation, part of the Department of Trade and Industry.

The MRCs current portfolio in this area includes a £1.25 million programme on inherited blood disorders; this includes sickle cell anaemia.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. Details of individual projects, including a number concerned with sickle cell anaemia, are available on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

St. Mary's Hospital, Stannington

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when St. Mary's Hospital, Stannington, Northumberland, closed; what the cost of maintaining and securing the buildings and grounds of the hospital was in each of the last five years; and what steps she plans to take to expedite the disposal of the hospital estate. [76202]

Ms Rosie Winterton: St. Mary's Hospital, Stannington, which forms part of the Secretary of State for Health's residual estate, closed in 1996.

The cost of security and maintenance, to ensure that the intrinsic value of the buildings on the site is maintained, in each of the last five years is:

	Cost (£)
2001-02	[1]135,000
2002-03	142,500
2003-04	160,200
2004-05	165,600
2005-06	165,250

[1] Estimated.

The site has been sold, subject to planning consent being granted. The prospective purchaser's planning application was refused on appeal in May 2006. Options that will achieve an early sale are currently being considered.

Stroke/Heart Attacks

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) stroke and (b) heart attack patients have died on the way to hospital in an ambulance in each of the last five years; and how long the journey was in (i) miles and (ii) minutes on each occasion. [77609]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Tobacco Purchasing

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will publish the consultation on raising the age limit for the purchase of tobacco products. [74121]

Caroline Flint: The consultation on raising the age of sale for tobacco products will be published shortly.

Treatment Costs

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost to the NHS of comparable procedures undertaken in (a) NHS hospitals and (b) independent sector treatment centres. [72762]

Andy Burnham: Value for money of the independent sector treatment centre (ISTC) procurement has been ensured by running a robust and competitive procurement process, and by benchmarking procedure prices between contracts and comparing them to the national health service equivalent cost and the prices paid by the NHS to the independent sector under spot purchase arrangements.

Across the full period of the wave 1 ISTC contracts, the average percentage cost compares favourably with the historical cost to the NHS of spot purchasing from the independent sector.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the average cost to the NHS of a case of active tuberculosis disease in each of the five years. [75367]

Caroline Flint: The exact costs of treating people with tuberculosis are not routinely collected, and treatment costs can vary widely from patient to patient.

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the cost benefits of early and accurate diagnosis of (a) latent tuberculosis and (b) active tuberculosis disease. [75366]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not undertaken a formal cost benefit analysis on the benefits of early and accurate diagnosis of latent or active tuberculosis (TB) disease.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) published a clinical guideline on the diagnosis and management of TB, and measures for its prevention and control in March 2006. NICE made recommendations about the effectiveness, including cost effectiveness, of diagnostic tools for early and accurate diagnosis of latent TB and active TB. The clinical guideline and associated reports are available on NICE'S website at:

WALES

A5 (North Wales)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to tackle the impact on road traffic in England of the long-term closure of the A5 in North Wales; and what information he has received about when it is likely to open again. [78430]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Assembly Government took the decision to close a short section of the A5, between Ty Nant and Dinmael, in the interests of public safety. The Assembly Government are continuing to work with local authorities, business and tourist representatives to minimise any adverse effects.

I understand that remedial works could take around six months to complete, depending on site conditions. However, the meantime, urgent steps have been taken to provide an alternative route to alleviate pressures. As a result, the old A5 was re-opened to vehicles not exceeding 7.5 tonnes on 16 June.

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77302]

Mr. Hain: No. The Wales Office records total hospitality costs, which will include any spending on alcohol.

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many working days were lost to his Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to the Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [78079]

Mr. Hain: Since 2004 the Wales Office has formed part of the Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) for sickness monitoring purposes. Prior to 2004 it was included with those of the National Assembly for Wales.

Figures regarding sickness absence are contained in the annual report, "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service", published by the Cabinet Office. Reports for each year since 1999 are available in the Library and on the civil service website at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/occupational_health/publications/index.asp

The figures relating to the Wales Office are not available separately, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will estimate the pension liability of the Law Officers' Departments over the next 30 years. [75240]

The Solicitor-General: The pension liabilities of the Crown Prosecution Service, Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office, Serious Fraud Office and Treasury Solicitor's Department (including HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate and the Attorney-General's Office) are not estimated by individual departments. Civil service pension liabilities are estimated for individual pension schemes as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per scheme given in Table 1 of the technical Note by HM Treasury, placed in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90, following an oral Statement in Parliament by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Payment Schemes

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of compiling, printing and posting the leaflet Single Payment Scheme: Additional Cross-compliance Requirements; and whether there are plans to issue further single payment scheme publications in the current financial year. [76649]

Barry Gardiner: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has not issued a publication entitled the Single Payment Scheme: Additional Cross-compliance Requirements. RPA did publish recently a supplement of the Cross Compliance Handbook for England 2006, for which the cost of compiling, printing and posting was £85,871.00.

There are plans to produce a 2007 version of the Cross Compliance Handbook for England, incorporating any new statutory management requirements that have to be implemented under EU Regulations and a 2007 supplement for the current Set aside Handbook and Guidance.

Rural Payments Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will ensure that those claimants whose 2005 single farm payment claims were paid after 31 March 2006 receive their 2006 single farm payments before those whose 2005 claims were paid before 31 March 2006. [73219]

Barry Gardiner: No. This would not ensure the optimal and earliest delivery of the maximum subsidy to claimants. Priorities will therefore be drawn up with the view to maximising payments as early as possible within the regulatory payment window, starting on 1 December 2006.

Timber

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether he maintains a register of central Government building and refurbishment projects in relation to ensuring compliance with the Government's timber procurement policy. [76283]

Barry Gardiner: The Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs does not hold a register of central Government building and refurbishment projects. There is an annual Sustainable Development in Government report in which Departments are encouraged to report their timber purchases as appropriate.

Wildlife and Countryside Act

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when he plans to consult on the Joint Nature Conservation Committee's proposed list of bird species to be included on schedule 4 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. [78793]

Barry Gardiner: I will be making an announcement shortly.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Battery Recycling

Norman Baker: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission whether plans are in place to introduce battery recycling facilities on the parliamentary estate. [76279]

Nick Harvey: Batteries from electrical equipment owned by the two Houses are stored for collection by a contractor for recycling. It is intended to extend this facility in due course to all used batteries on the estate and this will be publicised to Members and staff when more details are available.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Chief Accounting Officer of the House. [76864]

Nick Harvey: Section 3 (2) of the House of Commons (Administration) Act 1978 gives the Commission power to appoint an Accounting Officer responsible for accounting for the sums paid out of money provided by Parliament for the service of the House of Commons. The current Accounting Officer is the Clerk of the House and Chief Executive of the House of Commons Service, Roger Sands, who has been in that position since January 2003. The details of his qualifications and career in the House of Commons Service are available in a number of reference books. In common with other Accounting Officers, he has undertaken the centrally provided training given to Accounting Officers on their appointment. He is assisted in the discharge of his Accounting Officer responsibilities by appropriately qualified and experienced staff in the Directorate of Financial Management.

Officers of the House (Accommodation)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission what accommodation is made available to Officers of the House; and if he will make a statement. [76939]

Nick Harvey: Officers of the House who are provided with residential accommodation are the Clerk of the House, the Serjeant at Arms and the Speaker's Secretary.

Security

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer of 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1907, on security (Abingdon Street barrier), if he will place in the Library a copy of the review; what representations he has received about the review; what the cost was of undertaking the review; when he expects a final decision to be made about the arrangements at the steel barrier; what complaints the Commission has received about the waterproof equipment issued to officers working at the steel barrier in Abingdon Street; and if he will make a statement. [75634]

Nick Harvey: The review consists of an ongoing process rather than a written report. Regular meetings are held involving the management of the security team and those representing both police and security officers. The purpose of these meetings is to keep under continual review all matters relating to the steel barrier, with a particular emphasis on operating guidelines and the health, safety and welfare of staff operating the system. It was through this process that the issue of improved clothing was identified, and is being provided following discussions with uniform specialists within the Metropolitan Police Service.

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how often and for what length of time (a) police officers and (b) security officers are required to serve at the steel barrier in Abingdon Street; whether there are plans to increase these duties; what representations the Commission has received from (i) the Police Federation and (ii) others representing police officers and security officers on the matter; and if he will make a statement. [75935]

Nick Harvey: I understand that the overall hours worked at the Corus barriers by police and security officers are in line with other posts where there is limited protection from the elements. It is not the practice to give rostering details of security staff. These working arrangements continue to be discussed between the security team management and those representing both police and security officers. The Commission has not received any representations from either the Police Federation or others on this matter. Recognising the nature of these duties, the parliamentary authorities have been very supportive of reducing the operating hours of the scheme where possible; for example, during each parliamentary recess.

Mr. Amess: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many (a) police officers and (b) security officers were on (i) short-term and (ii) long-term sick leave after a period of service at the steel barrier in Abingdon Street in each week since October 2005; and if he will make a statement. [75936]

Nick Harvey: I understand that a total of two police officers and one security officer have reported sick following alleged incidents while operating the Corus barriers which began in October 2005. The total number of days lost to sickness is 157. All these incidents occurred within the first three months of operation of this scheme. Regular risk assessments and health and safety advice from both the House authorities and the Metropolitan Police Service have resulted in the introduction of additional safety measures which appear to be working effectively.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Chief Accounting Officer of the Electoral Commission. [76720]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission does not have a "Chief Accounting Officer". The Electoral Commission's Accounting Officer, who is designated by the Speaker's Committee in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000, is Peter Wardle, the Commission's chief executive. Mr. Wardle has a Bachelor of Arts degree. Before becoming chief executive of the Electoral Commission in December 2004 he had been a senior civil servant for 10 years, including periods as Principal Finance Officer at the Cabinet Office and Director of Strategy and Planning at the Inland Revenue.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Rwanda

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what response his Department has made to requests for support for the witness protection programme in Rwanda. [77710]

Hilary Benn: Rwanda's Prosecutor General is seeking support to establish within the national Public Prosecution Service a protection service for victims and witnesses of crime, including genocide survivors who may be at risk of harassment and intimidation. The Director of the Survivors' Fund UK, a British NGO, has also discussed with me the need for witness protection in Rwanda. The Public Prosecution Service has an important role to play in ensuring that the rights of Rwanda's citizens are protected and that they have access to justice.

DFID's office in Rwanda has been in discussion with the Prosecutor General and is currently assessing how best to support the national victim protection service. The United Nations Development Programme is already providing modest support for this and it will be important to ensure that any DFID funding complements and does not duplicate existing funding. On this point, the DFID office is currently taking forward discussions with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP). DFID's response will depend upon the outcome of these discussions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Review

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether UK companies would be obliged to report on (a) relationships with suppliers in Zimbabwe and (b) their own operations in Zimbabwe under the provisions of the proposed Business Review contained within the Company Law Reform Bill. [77688]

Margaret Hodge: Under clause 399 of the Company Law Reform Bill, all companies, apart from small companies, will continue to be required to produce a Business Review, in accordance with the EU Accounts Modernisation Directive. Information on the company's relationships with suppliers and on their operations wherever located must be included in the Review to the extent necessary to provide a balanced and comprehensive analysis of the company's business consistent with the size and complexity of the business.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to what extent the Business Review provided for in the Company Law Reform Bill will oblige UK companies to report on their operations in states which the UK Government consider to be perpetrating abuse of human rights. [77689]

Margaret Hodge: Under clause 399 of the Company Law Reform Bill, all companies, apart from small companies, will continue to be required to produce a Business Review, in accordance with the EU Accounts Modernisation Directive. Information on the company's operations wherever located must be included in the Review to the extent necessary to provide a balanced and comprehensive analysis of the company's business consistent with the size and complexity of the business.

Company Law Reform Bill

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the likely monetary effects on British business following amendment of the Company Law Reform Bill in the House of Lords. [78567]

Margaret Hodge: The Regulatory Impact Assessment for the Company Law Reform Bill was updated after the Bill was brought from the House of Lords (24 May 2006) to reflect the amendments that had been made to the Bill since introduction. The Bill is expected to bring savings for business of some £250 million a year, of which £100 million will be for small businesses. As well as the direct savings, the Bill is also expected to lead to indirect benefits, through improved performance, for example through encouraging good practice in company decision-making.

The direct costs associated with the Bill are expected to be in the range of £8 million to £47 million. The majority of these costs (£6 million to £36 million) are associated with opposition amendments to the "Exercise of Members' Rights" provisions made in the House of Lords. The Government intend to reconsider these during the consideration of The Bill in the House of Commons.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Chief Accounting Officer of his Department. [76839]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Departmental Accounting Officer, and Permanent Secretary, is Sir Brian Bender. His academic qualifications are a BSc and PhD in Physics. He has no professional accountancy qualifications. He has been a Permanent Secretary and Departmental Accounting Officer since 1999, in four Departments: the Cabinet Office (1999-2000), Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (2000-01), Defra (2001-05) and DTI since October 2005.

The Accounting Officer is a role that the Permanent Secretary combines with his personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the Department and for department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The Accounting Officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by the Director General of Finance and Strategy.

The current Director General of Finance and Strategy is Mark Clarke. He has an MA from Oxford University in Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE). He qualified as a Chartered Accountant in 1979 with Arthur Andersen and Co., and is a fellow of the Institute of Chartered Accountants (FCA). Since 2000 he has held Finance Director roles within Barclays, Abbey and Bank of Ireland, where he was UK Finance Director. From 1995 to 2000 he was a Director in the management consultancy practice of PricewaterhouseCoopers, specialising in financial management, performance management and business effectiveness. He joined DTI in June 2006.

Energy Bills

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what the Department's projections are for (a) commercial, (b) retail, (c) household and (d) manufacturing energy bills in January (i) 2007, (ii) 2008, (iii) 2009, (iv) 2010 and (v) 2015; and if he will make a statement; [78287]

(2) what the Department's projections are for average commercial (a) gas and (b) electricity prices in January (i) 2007, (ii) 2008, (iii) 2009, (iv) 2010 and (v) 2015; and if he will make a statement. [78288]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI does not project energy bills or prices for the commercial, retail, household or manufacturing sectors.

The DTI does make a range of assumptions regarding the likely path of future fossil fuel prices (oil, coal and gas) when undertaking forward-looking analysis and these are illustrated in the recent paper on UK Emissions projections. This is available at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/environment/projections/recent/page26391.html.

Energy Provision

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much public subsidy was given to the (a) nuclear, (b) oil, (c) gas, (d) coal and (e) renewables generating industries in each of the past 30 years. [68029]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested is as follows:

Nuclear

Available figures for nuclear subsidies are given in the following table. Figures are based on the premium received by Nuclear Electric plc over and above the market price for electricity in the period 1990-96. Figures dating back to 1974 could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

	£ million
1990-91	1,265
1991-92	798
1992-93	864
1993-94	895
1994-95	892
1995-96	699
1996-97	0
1997-98	0
1998-99	0
1999-2000	0

With the exception of British Energy, there have been no public subsidies to the nuclear generating sector since privatisation. In terms of British Energy, a loan facility was provided to the company in 2002 to support it through its restructuring. This loan was re-paid in full with interest in December 2003 and no further drawings can be made. As a result of the restructuring which completed in January 2005, the Government have taken direct financial responsibility for BE's historic spent fuel liabilities. The following payments have been made since restructuring to meet those historic spent fuel liabilities:

2004-05—£185 million;

2005-06—£189 million.

The Government are also underwriting British Energy's decommissioning fund to the extent that its liabilities outweigh its assets. In return, the company is making enhanced payments into the fund. On current valuations, the assets of the fund exceed the liabilities.

Oil and gas

I am not aware of any subsidies to the oil and gas generating industries over the last 10 years. Further, historic, information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Coal

I am not aware of any subsidies to the coal generating industries over the last 10 years. Further, historic, information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Renewables

Information on how much was spent by Government on renewable energy research, development, dissemination and demonstration, between 1989 and 1997, was published by my hon. Friend, the then Energy Minister to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker), on 24 March 2000, Official Report, column 715W.

The statistics indicate that investment in renewable energy remained broadly unchanged between 1989 and 1996 at under £26 million a year. This compares to Government spending of around £500 million in renewables and other low carbon technologies between 2002 and 2008. The Chancellor also recently announced in the Budget a further £50 million, on top of the £30 million that I had previously announced, for the Low Carbon Building Programme, which supports micro-generation and energy efficiency measures.

Further, historic, information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Interconnector

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much electricity has been inputted through the inter-connector with France in each of the last five years; and what percentage of total UK electricity supply electricity so inputted represents. [78171]

Malcolm Wicks: The available information is as follows:

	Electricity exported from the UK via the interconnector with France (GWh)	Electricity exported from the UK to France as a percentage of UK electricity production	Electricity imported into the UK via the interconnector with France (GWh)	Electricity imported into the UK from France as a percentage of UK electricity supply
2001	193	0.1	10,563	2.7
2002	621	0.2	9,042	2.3
2003	2,873	0.8	5,000	1.2
2004	728	0.2	10,027	2.5
2005	765	0.2	11,159	2.7

Wylfa Nuclear Power Station

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Department will announce whether the life of Wylfa nuclear power station will be extended beyond its planned closure date of 2010; and if he will make a statement. [78286]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) has responsibility for the decommissioning and clean up of the UK's historic nuclear legacy including that of the Magnox nuclear power station at Wylfa. The NDA's current expectation as set out in its approved Strategy is that Wylfa will close at the end of 2010. However, my Department has asked that the NDA consider the options for running Wylfa beyond that date. The NDA is producing a report on the options which it will in due course publish.

DEFENCE

Aircraft Carriers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his latest estimate is of the date when a firm order will be placed for each of the future aircraft carriers. [77391]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 June 2006]: The future aircraft carrier (CVF) programme is in its demonstration phase. This will develop and deliver a mature design; provide a more detailed cost definition; further reduce risk within the programme; and produce a contractual framework that will allow a decision to be made to commit to manufacture. Only when we are satisfied that all this work is sufficiently mature will the main investment decision be taken and orders placed.

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) his Department and (b) its (i) executive agencies and (ii) non-departmental public bodies use the services of private debt collectors. [71065]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Bills Agency, which carries out accounts payable and receivable functions for the Ministry of Defence and its executive agencies, does not use the services of private debt collectors in its debt collection process. Although the Department sponsors six executive NDPBs, these are all independent charities and it is therefore a matter solely for these bodies as to whether or not they use the services of private debt collectors.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the chief accounting officer of his Department. [76792]

Mr. Watson: The Principal Accounting Officer of the Ministry of Defence is the Permanent Secretary, Bill Jeffrey. His degree is in Mathematics (BSc (Hons)) and he has experience at senior levels in several Government Departments, including in posts with substantial financial responsibilities.

Accounting Officer is a role that the Permanent Secretary combines with his personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the department and for department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The Accounting Officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified and experienced senior managers.

Foreign Travel

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on foreign travel by his Department in each of the last eight years. [76057]

Mr. Watson: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Since 1999, the Government have published, on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. This information is available in the Library. Information for the financial year 2004-05 was published on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 158WS. Information for the financial year 2005-06 is in the process of being collated and will be published shortly.

All travel is conducted in accordance with the guidelines set out in the Ministerial Code, the Civil Service Management Code and Joint Service Publication (JSP) 800.

Indonesia (Training Courses)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to provide (a) training courses to military personnel from Indonesia and (b) other forms of military and security co-operation to that country; and if he will make a statement. [78372]

Mr. Ingram: Following the Prime Minister's visit to Indonesia in March 2006, a joint statement was issued with the President of Indonesia on our bilateral relations in the round. This welcomed

> "the launch of a new modern defence and security relationship to address contemporary challenges, from co-operation on counter-terrorism and maritime security to UK support for Indonesia's security sector reform process".

Consequently, and in consultation with other Government Departments, the MOD has offered training courses to Indonesian military personnel in the following subjects during the current financial year.

Peace Support Operations.

Managing Defence in a Diplomacy.

Various subjects at the Royal College of Defence Studies.

Jungle Patrolling.

Maritime Exclusive Economic Zone management.

Other forms of military and security co-operation undertaken this financial year include a programme of two-way senior officer visits, support to the development of Indonesia's Security Sector Strategy, and a visit by HMS Westminster to Jakarta.

Iraq

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he was first informed that 'wetting' was official policy for dealing with looters in Basra; who authorised this policy; and if he will make a statement. [77184]

Mr. Ingram: The practice of 'wetting' is not, and has never been, official policy for dealing with looters in Basra.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for Ministers of State in his Department on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69109]

Mr. Watson: Under the terms of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, departments are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. This information, which is available from the Library of the House, includes accommodation costs. The actual cost for overnight accommodation for each of the Defence Ministers while on foreign visits in each of the last three years could be calculated only at disproportionate cost. When the Defence Ministers are overseas, including when visiting the armed forces, they frequently stay in an official residence or as a guest of the Commanding Officer of the military establishment. In such instances no accommodation costs are incurred.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions Ministers of State in his Department stayed overnight in (a) five star, (b) four star and (c) three star hotels on foreign visits in each of the last three years. [69110]

Mr. Watson: No information is held regarding the star rating of the hotels used by Defence Ministers. The choice of hotel is determined by best value for money based on advice from the British Embassy in the country being visited. Under the terms of the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, departments are expected to make efficient and cost-effective travel arrangements. Since 1999 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. This information is available from the Library of the House.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of his private office staff is (a) male, (b) female and (c) disabled. [69117]

Mr. Watson: The ratio of staff in the private office of the Secretary of State for Defence is 45 per cent. male and 55 per cent. female. The overall ratio for the private offices of the other Defence Ministers is 66 per cent. male and 33 per cent. female. These figures exclude special advisers.

The percentage of disabled staff in the private offices is not available as a declaration of disability in Ministry of Defence by an individual is on a solely voluntary basis and made in confidence.

RAF Menwith Hill

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on security patrolling of the roads around RAF Menwith Hill by the Ministry of Defence Police Agency in each year since 2003. [76295]

Mr. Ingram: The approximate totals spent by the US authorities on security patrolling of the roads around RAF Menwith Hill by the Ministry of Defence Police are set out in the table on a year by year basis:

2003-04	531,000.00
2004-05	560,000.00
2005-06	608,000.00

Service Allowances

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria must be met for members of the armed forces to be able to claim longer separated service allowance. [77612]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 15 June 2006]: Regular service personnel in the Royal Navy (RN) and Army are able to claim longer separated service allowance (LSSA) as follows:

when they have been in receipt of full-time regular pay for 12 months or more;

when, if serving accompanied at their permanent duty station, they are away from their spouse or registered civil partner. (This does not apply if both are serving personnel; in this instance both are eligible to claim LSSA when they are serving apart from each other);

when they spend periods of 10 consecutive days or more away from their permanent duty station on temporary duty, operations or exercises, and when they are posted unaccompanied to a designated LSSA payment area. Designated areas include the Falkland Islands, Ascension Island and Diego Garcia. MOD can also include areas in support of United Nations or national operations as required.

Regular service personnel in the Royal Air Force (RAF) are no longer able to claim LSSA; since the roll-out of joint personnel administration (JPA) to the RAF, they are eligible instead for longer separation allowance (LSA).

Full-time reserve service and volunteer reserve service personnel of all three services, non-regular permanent staff and additional duties commitments personnel are eligible to claim LSSA once they have either received a second year bounty or completed 12 months full-time service, provided they meet the remaining eligibility criteria as set out above. (Full-time service usually results either from previous regular service or from mobilisation).

In addition, RAF volunteer reserve personnel are entitled to claim LSSA for attendance at their annual two-week camp, provided they meet all other qualifying criteria. As part of the harmonisation of allowances across the services, this entitlement will be removed when RAF reservists transfer onto JPA (currently scheduled for 1 April 2007) and become eligible for LSA.

TRANSPORT

Boatmaster's Licence

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of the likely impact on (a) volunteers and (b) the general public's use of small boats of the operation of the boatmaster's certificate scheme. [78072]

Dr. Ladyman: The regulatory impact assessment for the new boatmaster's licence regulations is available in the Libraries of both Houses. In the regulation of public safety there is no distinction made between the requirements for commercial passenger operators and those in the voluntary sector.

There is no impact on the general public's use of small boats, as the regulations do not apply to pleasure vessels.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which individuals and organisations are on the Steering Group overseeing the introduction of the revised boatmaster's licence. [78073]

Concessionary Travel Scheme

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who the initial recipients will be of the additional funding for the new national concessionary travel scheme announced by the Chancellor in March. [78506]

Gillian Merron: No decisions have been taken yet on how the national scheme will be delivered in 2008. The Department for Transport will be working with representatives from the bus industry, local government and other interested parties to consider the best framework for delivering the improved concessionary fares entitlement.

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many appeals have been lodged with him by bus operators against concessionary travel schemes introduced in 2006; which concessionary travel authorities' schemes have been appealed against; and when he will (a) consider and (b) decide each appeal. [78507]

Gillian Merron: 60 appeals have been lodged with the Secretary of State against the following concessionary travel schemes introduced on 1 April 2006:

Bedfordshire County Council
Bristol City Council (on behalf of Bath and North East Somerset, South Gloucestershire, and North Somerset)
Cherwell District Council
City of York Council
Devon County Council
Dorset County Council
East Sussex County Council
Essex County Council
Gloucestershire County Council
Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Executive

Redditch Borough Council
South Oxfordshire District Council
South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive Suffolk County Council
Warwickshire County Council
West Midlands Passenger Transport Executive
West Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive Wiltshire County Council

The legislation does not specify any time limit for reaching a decision on appeals. The Secretary of State will consider and determine the appeals within a reasonable timeframe.

M25

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps will be taken to alleviate congestion and inconvenience to road users between junctions 27 and 30 of the M25 when the planned expansion and widening begins. [78869]

Dr. Ladyman: Road users of the M25 between junctions 27 and 30 already experience congestion and delays, especially during peak times. The objectives of the widening are to improve journey time reliability and provide drivers with smoother, less stressful and safer journeys.

During normal daytime operations the traffic will have, at least, the existing number of lanes in both directions. At most locations this will be three lanes in both directions. To allow safe construction at difficult locations the number of lanes may be reduced for limited periods at night and at weekends.

During construction, lane widths will be narrower and the hard shoulder will be used as a running lane. The use of a lower speed limit will help traffic flow smoothly through the roadworks area. A breakdown service, free to the road user, will be provided and CCTV cameras will monitor traffic to enable rapid clearance of any breakdowns.

Works will be placed on hold during the period for the Olympics.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the expansion and widening of junction 25 of the M25 to be complete. [78873]

Dr. Ladyman: The scheduled completion date of the M25 junction 25 eastbound improvement and Holmesdale tunnel refurbishment is November 2007.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects completion of the M25 Holmesdale Tunnel refurbishment; and how much the project will cost. [78874]

Dr. Ladyman: The scheduled completion date of the M25 Holmesdale Tunnel refurbishment is November 2007. The approved budget of the scheme is £75.1 million.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the planned dates are for the expansion and widening of the M25 between junctions (a) 5 and 7, (b) 1b and 3, (c) 23 and 27 and (d) 27 and 30. [78875]

Dr. Ladyman: The widening of three of the sections, that is (a) junctions 5 to 7, (c) junctions 23-27 and (d) junctions 27-30, will be delivered within a Design Build Finance and Operate (DBFO) contract, which also includes widening of the M25 between junctions 16 and 23. The widening of these sections will be phased over approximately 10 years, scheduled to commence in 2008. The phasing of the works is to be determined with the successful bidder. From the work we have done so far we believe the section between junctions 16 and 23 will be the first to be widened.

The widening of the section between junctions 1b and 3 is being delivered through the same early contractor involvement contract that is delivering the adjacent A2/A282 improvement. The widening of M25 junctions 1b and 3 will start in 2007, subject to completion of any statutory processes and availability of funding and take about 18 months to complete.

Weymouth Relief Road

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what role the South West regional assembly will play in determining the priority given to building the Weymouth relief road. [78432]

Dr. Ladyman: The South West regional assembly was one of the principal organisations which contributed to the advice provided by the south west region in January 2006 on the priority that it attaches to major transport schemes in the south west including the Weymouth relief road. The advice included proposals for the delivery timescales for transport schemes within the indicative regional funding allocation for the south west. We are currently considering this advice and hope to announce our response to it before the summer recess.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total UK expenditure on capacity-building of the Afghan Government, including strengthening democratic institutions, was in each year since 2002. [78797]

Dr. Howells: The total UK expenditure on capacity building of the Afghan Government, including strengthening democratic institutions, since 2002 can be broken down as follows:

Financial year	£ million
2002-03	26
2003-04	100
2004-05	108
2005-06	71

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her US counterparts regarding proposals to start poppy eradication with crop-spraying planes in Afghanistan; and what the Government's policy is regarding this issue. [78798]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no discussions with her US counterparts regarding proposals to crop-spray in Afghanistan. The Government of Afghanistan's eradication policy, as set out in the National Drug Control Strategy, is based on ground based eradication targeted where there is access to legal rural livelihoods. The UK has no plans to undertake or support aerial eradication.

Eradication on its own will not solve the drugs problem in Afghanistan. It is a useful deterrent where there is access to legal livelihoods. But tackling the drugs trade requires a range of activities including arresting and convicting the traffickers who profit from the trade, and putting in place the development programmes which enable farmers to move away from growing poppy. That is why the UK is spending £270 million over a three-year period on supporting the Government of Afghanistan's National Drug Control Strategy.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the most recent assessment is of progress in encouraging farmers in the Helmand Province in Afghanistan to grow alternative crops; and if she will make a statement. [78799]

Dr. Howells: The Department for International Development (DFID) has a number of programmes which seek to provide economic alternatives to farmers who grow poppy in Helmand Province. When in Afghanistan last week, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development announced a UK contribution of £30 million over the next three years in Helmand. However, whether farmers choose to pursue alternative livelihoods to poppy in Helmand also depends on effective law enforcement and a credible threat of eradication. That is why the UK is supporting the multifaceted approach set out in the Afghan National Drug Control Strategy. We believe that the focus on the four key priorities—targeting the trafficker, strengthening livelihoods, reducing demand and developing effective institutions will together have a greater impact on the drug trade.

In terms of measuring the impact of the Government of Afghanistan's National Drug Control Strategy in changing farmers' behaviour, Afghanistan has a poorly developed data collection and management system. DFID is working closely with the Central Statistics Office of the Government of Afghanistan to put in place mechanisms to ensure we are able to do this. These efforts should start to bear fruit over the next few months. This will allow us to make more robust assessments about the progress we are seeing in changing the behaviour of those farmers that currently grow poppy.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations she has made to her Afghan counterpart concerning reports that the Afghan Government have started remobilising militia groups to fight the Taliban; what her assessment is of those reports; and if she will make a statement. [78800]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Defence Secretary raised the issue of armed militias during his call on President Karzai on 13 June 2006. He received assurances from President Karzai that the Afghan Government did not intend to remobilise militias. President Karzai explained the Afghan Government's plans to establish community police units under the control of the Ministry of Interior to help deliver stability in some rural areas. Our ambassador in Kabul regularly discusses security matters with the Afghan Government and will continue to monitor the situation closely.

We recognise there is a need to increase the capacity and effectiveness of the Afghan National Army and the Afghan National Police, and the UK and the international community are playing an active role in supporting the establishment of effective Afghan security forces.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total UK expenditure on Afghan (a) police equipment and (b) salary payments has been since January 2006. [78912]

Dr. Howells: The UK does not make direct salary payments to the Afghan National Police (ANP). However, the UK contributes to the Law and Order Trust Fund for Afghanistan (LOTFA) which supports salaries and the purchase of equipment for the Counter-Narcotics Police of Afghanistan. The UK's total contribution to LOTFA last financial year 2005-06 was £1.5 million. There has been no UK expenditure on equipment for the ANP since January 2006.

Burma

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries have supplied military equipment to Burma in each of the last three years. [78098]

Dr. Howells: Comprehensive information on international exports of military equipment to Burma is not available. There is currently no international mechanism that provides the fully comprehensive data required for a full assessment. However, the UN Register of Conventional Arms does provide information covering those countries who have submitted returns. Further information is available on the UN website at:

http://disarmament.un.org/cab/register.html

The EU maintains an arms embargo against Burma and a ban on the supply of equipment that might be used for internal repression.

Guantanamo Bay

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information the Government have sought from the United States Administration in respect of the (a) cause and (b) circumstances of the deaths of three detainees held at the Guantánamo Bay military detention centre; and what information has been provided. [78060]

Dr. Howells: The United States Government have told us, as they have also announced publicly, that they will conduct an investigation into the deaths of the three detainees. We welcome that decision and look forward to hearing the results of the investigation.

Iraq

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's role is in the demobilisation of militia groups in Iraq; and if she will make a statement. [78801]

Dr. Howells: The new Iraqi Government are currently considering their approach to the demobilisation of militia groups. We are ready to help with this effort and hope that other members of the international community will do likewise.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's role is in increasing Iraqi capacity to house the detainee and prisoner population. [78906]

Dr. Howells: The UK has deployed in Iraq a team of HM Prison Service officers who work with the UK military and international donors to assist and advise the Iraqi Correctional Service (ICS) in southern Iraq. Since 2003, the team has helped the ICS to increase capacity significantly by building new prisons and refurbishing and extending existing ones, including providing separate facilities for women and juveniles.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the UK is providing to the new Iraqi Government in the Constitution Review process. [78908]

Dr. Howells: The Iraqi Government will lead this process with support from the UN. We are in contact with them and stand ready to assist. We hope others in the international community will also stand ready to help through the UN as and when required.

Israel

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters in respect of (a) Israel's possession of nuclear weapons and (b) the prospects for Israel joining the Nuclear Non-Proliferation treaty were raised during her meeting with her Israeli counterpart on 12 June. [78061]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary did not discuss the prospects for Israel signing the Nuclear Non-Proliferation treaty (NPT), or Israel's possession of nuclear weapons, during her meeting with Israeli Foreign Minister Livni.

We have on a number of occasions called on Israel to accede to the NPT as a non-nuclear weapon state and also to the Chemical Weapons Convention, and will continue to do so.

Michael Shields

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she has taken to assist the transfer of Michael Shields from Bulgaria to the UK to serve his sentence of imprisonment; and if she will make a statement. [78508]

Dr. Howells: We fully support Mr. Shields' request to be transferred back to the UK and have advised Mr. Shields and his family on the procedures involved. Officials from our embassy in Sofia have discussed Mr. Shields' transfer with the Bulgarian Ministry of Justice, most recently on 9 June, and will continue to monitor the situation closely. Consular staff are also in contact with the Prisoner Transfer Section of the Home Office to facilitate Mr. Shields' return.

Pakistan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the Pakistan authorities on the abduction of Christian children from their villages in the Punjab, Pakistan, by the militant Islamic group Jumait-ud-Dawa. [78045]

Dr. Howells: We are aware of the report in the Sunday Times of 21 May 2006 that Jamaat-ud-Daawa are involved in the abduction of Pakistani Christian children. Our high commission in Islamabad is currently looking into this. We have not so far raised the question with the Pakistani authorities.

Venezuela

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what level UK/Venezuela counter-narcotics co-operation is undertaken; and what recent assessment she has made of its effectiveness. [78057]

Dr. Howells: The UK co-operates closely with the Venezuelan authorities and law enforcement agencies at all levels as well as with other international partners to combat drug trafficking and strengthen institutions in the fight against illicit drugs and international organised crime. I hope to travel to Venezuela later this year. UK support for Venezuelan anti-narcotics operations has recently led to several seizures of illicit drugs and associated arrests.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Best Value Performance Indicators

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Audit Commission has amended its methodology for assessing Best Value Performance Indicator 199 in the last 12 months. [78378]

Mr. Woolas: The Audit Commission has not amended its methodology for assessing Best Value Performance Indicator 199 in the last 12 months.

Building Regulations

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many private sector providers of building regulation enforcement have been debarred from that role for poor performance in the last five years. [75666]

Angela E. Smith: The Construction Industry Council (CIC) acts as the Department for Communities and Local Government "Designated Agent" for the purpose of examining, approving and maintaining standards for approved inspectors. No approved inspectors have been removed from the CIC's register for poor performance in the last five years.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment has been made of the performance of (a) public and (b) private providers of building regulation enforcement in enforcing energy conservation measures. [75673]

Yvette Cooper: The primary responsibility for compliance with the Building Regulations, including those dealing with energy efficiency, rests with those carrying out the building work. The Department for Communities and Local Government has made no formal assessment of the effectiveness of building control in this respect. However, operational and performance issues are discussed with representatives of building control bodies and are the subject of advice from the statutory advisory committee. My officials have played a key role in supporting an industry initiative to develop building control performance indicators and revised performance standards, due to be launched soon. In the context of a strategic review of the regulations, we will be exploring the options for improving compliance.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many complaints she has received about the operation of Part P of the Building Regulations since it was reformed; which organisations have written to her opposing those changes; and if she will make a statement. [75983]

Angela E. Smith: Part P was reformed by way of an amendment to the Building Regulations (SI 2006 No. 652) on 6 April 2006. During April and May, the Department for Communities and Local Government received around 200 inquiries about Part P. The majority asked for further information or clarification, while around 10 per cent. were general complaints. The Department is aware of only one letter from an individual complaining specifically about the amendment, and a letter in February from the Electrical Safety council opposing the proposed changes.

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what prosecutions have taken place for non-compliance with sustainable building regulations. [77036]

Angela E. Smith: As building control is a fully devolved service under the Building Act 1984, no central records are kept of prosecutions arising from non-compliance of any building regulation.

Canvey Island

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when she expects to announce her decision on the establishment of a parish council for Canvey Island. [77628]

Mr. Woolas: It is expected that a decision on the establishment of a new parish and parish council for Canvey Island will be announced shortly.

City Region Meetings

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans she has for her Department to organise further city region meetings. [78362]

Mr. Woolas: As part of the Government's work on cities and towns, last year Ministers held summits with each of the eight core cities: Birmingham, Bristol, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Nottingham and Sheffield. This year, Ministers have held summits with smaller cities and towns: with Regional Cities East on 10 March; with Central Lancashire on 15 May; with Coastal Towns on 16 May; and with Tees Valley and Hull and the Humber on 22 May. We plan to hold two further summits this year, one with towns and cities in the South-West and the second with towns and cities in the Midlands and South-East (the "Growing Places" summit). We also plan to hold two mini-summits, in Stoke-on-Trent and in York. The dates of these four events have not been finalised.

Following the summits of last autumn, the eight core cities were asked to develop business cases for their areas, setting out their vision and related barriers and enablers. Birmingham and Manchester have presented these to Ministers and further presentations for the remaining six cities are planned or expected during this and the next few months.

The Secretary of State will also be attending the Core Cities annual summit, in Bristol on 26-27 June.

Civil Servants (Expenses)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what criteria must be met for civil servants in her Department to claim back or have paid for them overnight accommodation in London; and what criteria applied to civil servants in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. [78274]

Angela E. Smith: Staff who work in the Department for Communities and Local Government may claim overnight subsistence if they stay away from home overnight on official business away from their normal workplace. Subsistence covers a period of 24 hours to meet the actual receipted costs of meals and accommodation. There are different indicative ceilings for night subsistence in London and elsewhere. Current indicative rates for London are £95 per night. The same criteria applied to staff working in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Construction Industry Council

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what responsibility she has for the Construction Industry Council; and if she will make a statement. [77792]

Angela E. Smith: I have no direct responsibility for the Construction Industry Council (CIC) although the Department for Communities and Local Government use them as agents to help us appoint private sector approved inspectors for building control. CIC is an independent representative forum for the professional bodies, research organisations and specialist business associations in the construction industry.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Chief Accounting Officer of her Department. [76820]

Angela E. Smith: My Department's Permanent Secretary, Peter Housden, is the Principal Accounting Officer.

The Accounting Officer is a role that the Permanent Secretary combines with his/her personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the Department and for Department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The Accounting Officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified experienced senior managers.

The Department is currently in the process of recruiting an experienced Director of Finance with a recognised accountancy qualification in line with Treasury Guidelines.

The Department's accounting teams are led by a qualified accountant.

Fire Service

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps she is taking to encourage more (a) women and (b) ethnic minority candidates to apply to join the Fire Service; what questions are asked of applicants to assess commitment to equality and diversity; what measures she has put in place to ensure more (i) women and (ii) ethnic minority staff have access to senior positions; what targets have been set for representative numbers of women and ethnic minorities within the whole service; and if she will make a statement. [77424]

Angela E. Smith: The Fire and Rescue National Framework set out the Government's commitment to achieve greater diversity within the fire and rescue service. We are supporting the service to build a more diverse work force, including women, ethnic minorities and other under-represented groups.

On 16 May I announced the launch of a national awareness raising advertising campaign aimed specifically at women to encourage them to consider a career as a firefighter. We have developed national firefighter selection tests with the aim of ensuring fairness and consistency in selection procedures across the service. The new process will require all applicants to be asked to demonstrate their commitment to equality and diversity in their responses to questions at the application form, written test and interview stages. These are designed to identify that they understand and respect diversity and have a fair and ethical approach to others.

The repeal of the Fire Services (Appointments and Promotion) Regulations in October 2004 has enabled people to apply to join the fire and rescue service at any level in the organisation, including strategic management. In addition, recruitment, retention and career progression targets for women and ethnic minority staff have been set for every fire and rescue service.

The existing targets strategies have been reviewed and a new strategy will be published in 2006 following consultation with stakeholders.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the Fire Services College charged each brigade in Scotland for providing (a) training courses and (b) access to the college's library and online information and development resources in each of the last 10 years. [76269]

Angela E. Smith: Information on the provision of training and library services by the Fire Service College is only available for the past five years. The amount charged by the College to Scottish Fire and Rescue Services is as follows:

Governance

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what progress has been made with her Department's consultation on the governance arrangements for local areas. [76982]

Mr. Woolas: We have been engaged in a wide-ranging debate with local government and other stakeholders about local governance and will set out our policy proposals in the forthcoming White Paper which we intend to publish shortly after the summer recess.

Green Public-Private Partnerships

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans there are to review and revise the publication 'Green Public-Private Partnerships.' [77037]

Angela E. Smith: There are currently no plans to update the publication 'Green Public Private Partnerships'.

Licensing Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many temporary event licences have been issued under the Licensing Act 2003 by Castle Point borough council since that Act's implementation. [77630]

Mr. Woodward: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not held centrally.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will attend the St. Mary's Church charity fund raising proms night on 15 June to observe the effect of the operation of the Licensing Act 2003. [77642]

Mr. Woodward: I am the Minister responsible for the Licensing Act 2003 and associated policy and I have therefore been asked to reply.

I was travelling abroad on 15 June and would not therefore have been able to attend this event.

We are currently monitoring and evaluating the impact of the Licensing Act 2003 nationally, but it is too early as yet to draw firm conclusions.

Local Authority Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans her Department has to review the limits on political activity for local authorities' staff. [76191]

Mr. Woolas: Our Discussion Paper, "Standards of Conduct in English Local Government", published on 15 December 2005, included our proposals for changes to the legislation on the political restrictions relating to local government employees. This followed consultation on a review of the regulatory framework governing the political activities of local government employees in 2004.

Local Government

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what procedures are followed in respect of elections for new parish councils; and if she will make a statement. [77629]

Mr. Woolas: The procedures that should be followed in respect of elections for new parish councils are set out in the Local Government and Rating Act 1997 and associated published guidance.

District Councils should consult locally with interested parties on the electoral arrangements of new parish councils and then submit proposals on these to the Electoral Commission. If the Electoral Commission decides to implement proposals for new parish council electoral arrangements it does so by order at approximately the same time as the Secretary of State makes an order for the creation of a new parish.

Ministers' Offices

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which Ministers in her Department have private offices in 26 Whitehall. [78335]

Angela E. Smith: None of the Ministers in the Department for Communities and Local Government has a private office in 26 Whitehall.

National Travel Scheme

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent guidance she has given to (a) bus operators and (b) local authorities in Hampshire for the administration of the National Travel Scheme for the elderly and disabled, with particular regard to clarifying the conditions on which free travel is given. [73587]

Gillian Merron: I have been asked to reply.

No decisions have been taken yet on how the national scheme will be delivered in 2008. The Department for Transport will be working with representatives from the bus industry and local authorities to consider the best framework for delivering the improved concessionary fares entitlement.

Sheltered Housing

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations she has received on the effects of the introduction of steady-state contracts on charities providing supported sheltered housing and care; and if she will make a statement. [76254]

Mr. Woolas: We continue to receive representations about a wide range of issues relating to the Supporting People Programme. This includes the 1,000 plus responses to the recent Supporting People consultation which ran between 15 November 2005 and the end of March 2006.

A number of these representations did contain references to new Supporting People contracts.

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many working days have been lost to the Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to the Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [77758]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government was created on 5 May 2006 and its predecessor, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister, was created on 29 May 2002. The number of days lost due to sickness and costs are contained in the annual report "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service" published by the Cabinet Office. Reports for 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003 and 2004 are available in the House of Commons Library and on the Cabinet Office website at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/conditions_of_service/publications

Supported Housing

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many units of building-based supported housing were replaced by floating support in 2005-06. [76227]

Mr. Woolas: Supporting People administering authorities provide DCLG with quarterly information about the number and types of services and units. This allows us to identify numerical changes over time in the services provided, but it does not allow us to identify either the reason for any change or whether changes are linked. As such, it is not possible for DCLG to identify from information held centrally the extent to which any changes in service provision arise from the replacement of building-based supported housing by floating support.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1444W, on the Valuation Office Agency, whether the Valuation Office Agency's council tax automated valuation model holds (a) data from the index of multiple deprivation and (b) crime statistics in any form. [78247]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency's (VOA's) automated valuation model (AVM) neither (a) uses nor (b) holds data on these matters.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how the 10,000 neighbourhoods in the Valuation Office Agency's automated valuation model were designated; and whether they correlate with existing territorial classifications. [78255]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) has identified approximately 10,000 localities for use within its automated valuation model (AVM). Each locality represents a geographic area within which domestic property prices are influenced by the same or similar market forces. The extent of each locality was determined, and then refined during the AVM analysis process, by experienced chartered surveyors employed within the VOA using their market and valuation knowledge. The VOA has not tested the extent to which locality boundaries correlate with existing territorial classifications although localities do not extend beyond local authority boundaries for operational reasons.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the technical limit is of the number of photographs that the Valuation Office Agency's digital photography application can hold. [78324]

Mr. Woolas: There is no technical limit on the number of photographs that can be held by the Valuation Office Agency's digital photography application.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the name is of the Valuation Office Agency's digital photography application. [78325]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency's digital photography application is a bespoke application, written in ORACLE 9i software, and is simply referred to as "Digital Photography".

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Valuation Office Agency uses geocodes in its automated valuation model. [78380]

Mr. Woolas: The Valuation Office Agency (VOA) uses only the National Land and Property Gazeteer "x, y co-ordinates" for spatial coding in its automated valuation model (AVM). No geocode data on proximity to geographic features or facilities is used.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Valuation Office Agency's Automated Valuation Model uses census data. [78654]

Mr. Woolas: No.

HEALTH

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what information and advice is given to women following an abortion; and if she will make a statement; [75534]

(2) what research her Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake to ascertain what counselling is given to women seeking an abortion; and if she will make a statement; [75644]

(3) what advice her Department issues to women contemplating an abortion; and if she will make a statement. [77597]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not undertaken research to ascertain what counselling is given to women seeking an abortion and has no plans to do so. In addition, the Department has not issued advice to women contemplating an abortion. A number of organisations do produce patient leaflets on this issue including the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (RCOG) and the Family Planning Association.

The RCOG's evidence-based guideline "The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion (2004)" gives recommendations to commissioners and service providers on the information to be given to women contemplating an abortion, following an abortion and on women's counselling needs.

Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health will be abolished. [78446]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The abolition of the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health (CPPIH) will require the passing of primary legislation to repeal the provisions set out in statute for CPPIH to exist. Therefore, the date on which CPPIH is abolished is dependent on parliamentary time, and the passage of legislation.

Diabetes

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 11 January 2006, Official Report, column 720W, on diabetes, what assessment she has made of the impact of mandatory National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines on diabetes issued to primary care trusts since January 2006; and if she will make a statement. [70668]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on the impact of the mandatory National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines on diabetes issued to primary care trusts since January 2006 is not held centrally.

Genito-Urinary Services

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the Genito-Urinary Medicine Services Review of Watford General Hospital and St. Albans City and District Hospital commissioned by her Department; and if she will make a statement. [77820]

Andy Burnham: The Medical Foundation for AIDS and Sexual Health (MedFASH) is currently undertaking a national service review of capacity in Genito-Urinary Medicine (GUM) commissioned by the Department.

I understand that MedFASH has now completed the review of Watford General Hospital and St. Albans City and District Hospital and the report has been circulated to all relevant stakeholders. The findings are for strategic health authorities in conjunction with primary care trusts to implement locally.

Once the national review of all services is completed, a summary report will be published and placed in the Library.

Haemophilia

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2006, Official Report, columns 1013-14W, on haemophilia, (1) when she expects developments with regard to the Department's consideration of the Macfarlane Trust's submission; [78804]

(2) whether she plans to meet the chairman of the Macfarlane Trust. [78805]

Caroline Flint: The Minister for Public Health plans to meet the chair for the Macfarlane Trust on 12 July and the Macfarlane Trust's submission will be discussed. An earlier date was offered.

Health Services (Gloucestershire)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will meet the Overview and Scrutiny Committee in Gloucestershire to discuss issues arising from the review of health services there. [78714]

Caroline Flint: Avon, Gloucester and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority launched its formal consultation on 12 June on "The Future of Healthcare in Gloucestershire Proposals for Developing Sustainable NHS Services" which will conclude on 4 September. Should the members of the overview and scrutiny committee feel that at the end of the consultation they have issues to raise they have the power to make a formal referral to Secretary of State.

Honeybourne Centre

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Honeybourne Specialist Rehabilitation and Recovery Centre in Cheltenham opened; and how much the project cost. [77002]

Caroline Flint: Within the framework of the "NHS Plan" and other national policy guidance, local national health service organisations are responsible for planning and developing health services for their local population.

Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority has advised that the Honeybourne Specialist Rehabilitation and Recovery Centre in Cheltenham opened in September 2005, and that the project cost £1,078,000.

NHS Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS organisations did not achieve their cash releasing efficiency savings targets in 2005-06; and by what margin in each case. [67939]

Andy Burnham: Information specific to cash releasing efficiency savings at national health service organisation level is not held by the Department.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of planned savings each (a) primary care trust and (b) NHS trust within the Avon, Gloucestershire and Wiltshire Strategic Health Authority has to make as part of the operating framework requirements laid down by that strategic health authority; and what percentage that figure represents of the turnover of the trust in each case. [78713]

Caroline Flint: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 8 June 2006, Official Report, column 835W.

Operations (Day Cases)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why her Department's Autumn Performance Report 2005 (Cm 6704) states that 70 per cent. of planned procedures now take place as day cases (p. 16), when the data placed in the Library relating to the answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1117W, on operations, implies that the proportion of procedures performed as day cases has been at 50 per cent. since 2002-03. [73870]

Andy Burnham: The data from the Department's Autumn Performance Report 2005 are for elective activity, which includes waiting list, booked and planned admissions. The data in the answer of 17 May include all elective and non-elective operations including emergency admissions, which reduces the day case rate.

Overview and Scrutiny Committees

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the process for overview and scrutiny committee reports to the Department of Health; what action she takes in the light of such a report; and what powers she has to order an independent inquiry into the proposals that (a) a strategic health authority, (b) a primary care and (c) an NHS trust including foundation trusts produce. [75992]

Andy Burnham: The Local Authority (Overview and Scrutiny of Health Scrutiny Functions) Regulations 2002 provide for an overview and scrutiny committee to refer a case to the Secretary of State where the committee considers that consultation has been inadequate or the proposal is not in the interests of the health service in its area. The Secretary of State will consider the referral alongside information provided by the local national health service and departmental officials. The Secretary of State may ask for independent advice on the referral, which may be from the independent reconfiguration panel or a different source. Where the proposal relates to an NHS foundation trust, the overview and scrutiny committee refers the case to Monitor, who may also seek independent advice.

Parliamentary Questions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer question 72961 on the Black and Minority Ethnic Mental Health Network. [78715]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A reply was given on 14 June 2006, Official Report, column 1283W.

PCT/Hospital Trust Boards

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ex-health service employees sit on the boards of (a) primary care trusts and (b) hospital trusts. [78143]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not available centrally.

Primary Care Trusts (Hertfordshire)

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the two new primary care trusts to be introduced to cover Hertfordshire will (a) be run by separate management teams and (b) be headed by separately appointed chairmen and chief executives; and if she will make a statement. [78021]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 16 June 2006]: Currently, the Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire Strategic Health Authority (SHA), which will form part of the new East of England SHA with effect from 1 July, is in discussions with stakeholders, including all local Members of Parliament, about shared management options for the two new primary care trusts (PCTs) in Hertfordshire.

No decisions will be taken until that process has been completed.

Each PCT will retain its own board with its own chair.

South Central SHA

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where the offices of the new South Central Strategic Health Authority will be located; and whether they will be operational by 1 July. [78566]

Caroline Flint: This is a local matter. However, the Thames Valley Strategic Health Authority (SHA) has advised that a final decision on the location of the office for the new SHA for South Central has not yet been made. On 1 July, the South Central SHA will continue to operate from three existing offices in Southampton, Winchester and Oxford.

Velcade

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress has been made on (a) the licensing of Velcade and (b) access to Velcade for patients; [77226]

(2) if she will make a statement on the availability of Velcade. [77295]

Andy Burnham: Velcade was granted a European Union-wide marketing authorisation in April 2004. The current licensed indications are mono-therapy for the treatment of progressive multiple myeloma in patients who have received at least one prior therapy and who have already undergone or are unsuitable for bone marrow transplantation.

Preparatory work on the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) appraisal of Velcade has commenced and I understand that NICE will publish a timescale for completion of this work in due course.

In 1999, the Department issued Health Service Circular 1999/176, which asks national health service bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE has not yet been issued. These arrangements should include an assessment of the available evidence. There is no bar on clinicians prescribing drugs that have not yet been appraised by NICE.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Casinos

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with (a) the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and (b) the Department for Communities and Local Government on (i) the planning process for, (ii) the economic impact of and (iii) the social impact of new casinos. [77064]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has worked very closely with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and now the Department for Communities and Local Government in respect of a range of issues concerning the new casinos permitted under the Gambling Act 2005. This includes, for example, the production of the "Casinos: National Policy Statement" (December 2004) which addresses planning, regeneration and social issues and the amendments to the Use Classes Order to make casinos a sui generic use, which was brought into effect at the beginning of April 2006.

Commonwealth Institute Building

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to bring forward legislation to delist the Commonwealth Institute building. [77657]

Mr. Lammy: Given the Commonwealth Institute's unique role as an international and inter-governmental organisation whose future is of concern to all 53 Commonwealth countries, Government are considering whether special measures are appropriate in relation to the Commonwealth Institute building. Discussions are continuing across Government and it would be inappropriate for me to comment further at this stage.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will answer the letter of 26 April from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Mr. L. Bosch. [77589]

Mr. Woodward: I understand my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State replied to my right hon. Friend's letter on 9 June 2006.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will obtain a reply on behalf of the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton to the letter of 9 May to the Chief Executive of Television Licensing with regard to Mr. P. Hartley. [77627]

Mr. Woodward: TV Licensing operates as agent for the BBC, which as television licensing authority has responsibility for administering and enforcing the licensing system. I have therefore asked the BBC's Head of Revenue Management to look into this matter for my right hon. Friend.

Digital Switchover

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to ensure that digital television is made accessible to those who are partially sighted. [77257]

Mr. Woodward: With the availability of audio-description services, digital technology can greatly enhance the enjoyment of television by blind and partially sighted people. But we are aware that some of them might need extra help in selecting, installing and using the digital equipment. This is why the Government have announced assistance schemes for people aged 75 and over, people in receipt of disability living allowance or attendance allowance, and the people registered as blind. I can confirm that people who are registered as partially sighted will also be eligible for the schemes. I refer the hon. Member to the answer of 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2101W, for more information on the schemes.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps have been taken to ensure inclusion of blind and partially sighted people in progress towards digital switchover. [76555]

Mr. Woodward [holding answer 13 June 2006]: With the availability of audio-description services, digital technology can greatly enhance the enjoyment of television by blind and partially sighted people. But we are aware that some of them might need extra help in selecting, installing and using the digital equipment. This is why the Government have announced assistance schemes for people aged 75 and over, people in receipt of disability living allowance or attendance allowance, and the people registered as blind. Member to the answer of 14 March 2006, Official Report, column 2101W, for more information on the schemes.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will increase audio description targets to at least 20 per cent. to ensure greater inclusion of blind and partially sighted people in the digital switchover. [77383]

Mr. Woodward: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Foyle (Mark Durkan) on 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 943W.

Gambling Act

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding the Government are providing to local authorities to cover the (a) implementation costs and (b) ongoing costs associated with the Gambling Act 2005; and whether the New Burdens principle applies. [78301]

Mr. Caborn: The Spending Review 2002 included provision for a number of new burdens on local authorities during the spending review period, including the set up costs of the licensing scheme to be established under the Gambling Act 2005. The funding was included within general grant. This is unhypothecated provision and local authorities are responsible for decisions on the use of that funding.

The net additional cost to local authorities of the ongoing costs associated with the Gambling Act 2005 will be met from the fee arrangements. The Department will consult fully on the fees that local authorities may charge with a view to these fully meeting their efficient costs.

Ice Rinks

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many publicly-funded ice rinks there are in England. [77575]

Mr. Caborn: There are 40 ice rinks in England of which 18 are in public ownership.

Library Closures

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many libraries have (a) closed, (b) been scheduled for closure and (c) opened in each local authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78074]

Mr. Lammy: The table shows the change in the number of static public libraries in England, grouped into bands by opening hours, over the last five years and, for context, the comparable figures for 1997-98. The same information for each of the 149 library authorities in England can be found in the Public Library Statistics published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy. Copies are held in the House of Commons Library.

I welcome the opening of Gloucestershire county council's two new libraries in Dursley and Longstevens.

Licensing Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many licences have been issued in respect of charity fund-raising events which did not provide alcohol since the implementation of the Licensing Act 2003; and if she will make a statement. [77659]

Mr. Woodward: This information is not held centrally.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent consideration she has given to seeking to amend the Licensing Act 2003 to allow 'cumulative effect' to be considered in licensing decisions. [78402]

Mr. Woodward: The cumulative impact of multiple licensed premises on crime and disorder has always been, and continues to be, a matter which licensing authorities are entitled to take into account when representations are made to them about applications for the grant or variation of a premises licences or club premises certificates. This was confirmed by the decision of Mr. Justice Beatson on 11 April 2006 in the unreported case of R (J D Wetherspoon plc) v. Guildford borough council. The Government therefore have no plans to amend the Licensing Act 2003 for this purpose.

Listed Buildings

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether primary legislation is required to delist (a) the Commonwealth Institute building and (b) other Grade II* listed buildings. [78148]

Mr. Lammy: Primary legislation is not required to delist Grade II* listed buildings. Buildings can be removed from the statutory list if the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport considers, having consulted with her statutory advisers, English Heritage, and others as appropriate, that the building no longer has special architectural or historic interest. This is not the case with the Commonwealth Institute. Due to the unique and wider considerations which apply to the Commonwealth Institute, the Government are considering whether special measures are appropriate in this case. No decisions have yet been taken.

London Olympics

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the London Olympics on (a) Stroud and (b) the South West, with particular reference to (i) events, (ii) use of training facilities and (iii) opportunities for tourist visits. [77824]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has not made a specific assessment of the impact to Stroud, or the South West, of holding the 2012 Olympic Games in London.

However, the 2012 games will have a positive impact on investment, tourism and business opportunities across the UK, and will be a boost in our drive to create a healthier and more active nation.

Each region has been asked to develop a plan to ensure that they take full advantage of these benefits.

With close proximity to London and the Weymouth and Portland Sailing Academy in neighbouring Dorset as the venue for all the 2012 sailing events, the games will be a terrific boost for Stroud and all the South West.

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many working days were lost to her Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to her Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [77254]

Mr. Lammy: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Sick absence figures are contained in the annual report Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service published by the Cabinet Office. Table A of the report gives details of both the average working days absence per staff year and the number of staff years on which that calculation is based on. The most recent report for the calendar year 2004 was announced by ministerial statement on 15 November 2005, and copies placed in the Library of the House. This report and those for 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 are available on the Cabinet Office website at: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/occupational_health/publications/index.asp.

TV Licence

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to compensate those who will lose the value of the stamps on a television licence savings card because they were unable to transfer to a new savings card by 31 July. [77825]

Mr. Woodward: The BBC, as television licensing authority, is responsible for administering both the savings stamp scheme and the new savings cards. I understand from the corporation that savings stamps will remain redeemable from TV Licensing without limit of time. Holders of savings stamps will not therefore lose their savings in the event of delays in transferring the balance to a savings card.

Whole Sport Plan

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 946W, on the Whole Sport Plan, how much of the £158.5 million has been spent; how much is allocated to each of the 34 priority and development sports; and how much is allocated to each of the other 12 sports. [78233]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 16 June 2006]: Of the £158.5 million so far committed by Sport England through Whole Sport Plans £65.3 million has been spent to date.

Of the £158.5 million a total of £157 million has been committed to the 34 priority and development sports and £1.5 million has been committed to 12[1] other sports.

The table shows a breakdown of funding 'committed' and 'committed in principle to each sport.

£27,571,000 through the New Opportunities Fund School programme.

£2,659,007 through the Community Club Development Programme.

£1,418,900 through the Community Sports Coaches Scheme, with a further £1 million of partnership funding, which has helped to appoint 74 community coaches in West Yorkshire.

Mr. McFadden: Information on ethnicity is collected on a voluntary basis.

Unfortunately, on this occasion, I am unable to provide the information.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Chief Accounting Officer of her Department. [76817]

Hilary Armstrong: The Accounting Officer for the Cabinet Office is the Cabinet Secretary, Sir Gus O'Donnell KCB.

Sir Gus has a first class honours degree in economics from the University of Warwick and an M. Phil in economics from Nuffield College, Oxford. These courses covered a wide range of subjects, including accountancy. He also worked as a research assistant on a project to show the impact of various methods of adjusting companies' financial accounts to allow for the effects of inflation. He then spent four years lecturing in economics and econometrics at the University of Glasgow.

Sir Gus has served as permanent secretary to HM Treasury (2002 to 2005), Managing Director, Macroeconomic Policy and International Finance (1999 to 2002) and as Director of Macroeconomic Policy and Prospects (1998 to 1999). He has also worked as the UK's executive director to the IMF and World Bank (1997 to 1998) and as Head of the Government Economics Service, the UK's largest employer of professional economists (1998 to 2003): He has undertaken training throughout his career in a wide variety of subjects, including management and leadership.

Accounting Officer is a role that the permanent secretary combines with his/her personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the Department and for Department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The Accounting Officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified and experienced senior managers.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of her staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77269]

Mr. McFadden: The number of people over the age of 55 years recruited into the Department in each of the last three years are shown in the table.

	Number of staff
2003-04	16
2004-05	19
2005-06	16

Foreign Travel

Philip Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on foreign travel by her Department in each of the last eight years. [76053]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office Resource Accounting System does not hold information on overseas travel by officials detailed to the level that is required to answer this question, and it could be answered only at disproportionate cost.

Since 1999 the Government have published, on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. This information is available in the Library. Information for the financial year 2004-05 was published on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 158WS. Information for the financial year 2005-06 is in the process of being collated and will be published shortly.

All foreign travel under taken by Ministers and civil servants is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by her Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature was of the charges brought against them. [73953]

Mr. McFadden: No illegal immigrants have been employed directly by the Department.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) which Government Bills sponsored by her Department are still to be introduced during the current Session; and when, and into which House, each will be introduced; [77500]

(2) what plans she has for legislation in the next Session of Parliament; and if she will make a statement. [77501]

Hilary Armstrong: I refer the hon. Member to the response given by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House of Commons on 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1431W.

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many working days were lost to her Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to her Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [77256]

Hilary Armstrong: Information on working days lost per employee due to illness in the Cabinet Office and its agencies is published each year in "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service". The latest publication for calendar year 2004 was announced by ministerial statement 15 November 2005 and copies were placed in the Libraries of the House. The following table details the approximate total cost of working days lost to the department and its agencies in years 1997 to 2004.

Cabinet Office and agencies are committed to managing sick absence effectively by making sure that managers proactively manage sickness absence and that they have the tools and training to do so.

	Working days lost per employee	Average basic salary (£)	Estimated cost of total days lost (£)
1997	6.6	15,155	932,214
1998	6.1	15,480	945,938
1999	6.8	15,550	971,398
2000	4.6	15,850	838,717
2001	5.7	16,400	838,411
2002	4.8	16,980	940,375
2003	4.2	17,770	1,034,924
2004	3.6	18,890	957,496

Notes:
1. The figures are based on Cabinet Office and the agencies that were attached to the Department and reported returns at the time of each report.
2. The estimated cost of total days lost is based on the average annual salary figures used in the report "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service".

Wage and Administration Expenditure

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on (a) wages and salaries and (b) total administration of the (i) Cabinet Office, (ii) Prime Minister's offices and (iii) Central Office of Information in each year since 1996-97, including the estimated outturn for 2005-06; and what the planned expenditure is for (A) 2006-07 and (B) 2007-08. [73539]

Hilary Armstrong: The Prime Minister's office is an integral part of Cabinet Office and is included in this response.

Copies of these reports are available in the Library and the reports for 2000-01, 2003-04 and 2004-05 are available on the Cabinet Office website at http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/reports/annualreport/index.asp.

2005-06 figures are subject to final audit, but are estimated to be:

	£000
Wages and salaries	101,400
Administration costs	167,700

On a like-for-like basis, planned expenditure in 2006-07 and 2007-08 is expected to be at a level similar to 2005-06, other than for the effects of inflation and Cabinet Office's continuing strive for efficiency. However, wages, salaries and total administration costs are likely to vary as a result of machinery of government changes.

Details of wages, salaries and total administration costs for the Central Office of Information for the years 1996-97 to 2004-05 are contained in COI's annual report and accounts, (pages 5, 6, 6, 7, 22, 32, 41 and 42 respectively) which are available in the Library on the COI website, at: http://www.coi.gov.uk/aboutcoi.php ?page=56.

2005-06 figures are subject to final audit, but are expected to be:

	£000
Wages and salaries	22,480
Administration costs	37,008

On a like-for-like basis, planned expenditure in 2006-07 and 2007-08 is expected to be at a level similar to 2005-06, other than for the effects of inflation and COI's continuing efficiency target to reduce the unit cost of output by 2.5 per cent. per annum. However, wages, salaries and total administration costs will increase because of the transfer of Directgov and the Media Monitoring Unit from Cabinet Office to COI from 1 April 2006.

TREASURY

Capital Gains Tax Taper Relief

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the revenue implications of abolishing capital gains tax taper relief and reducing the annual exempt amount for individual and trustees to (a) £500, (b) £1,000 and (c) £2,500 in each year from 2004-05 to 2009-10 while simultaneously reintroducing indexation linked to (i) the consumer price index and (ii) the retail price index; and if he will make a statement. [76887]

Dawn Primarolo: Broad estimates of the yield of abolishing capital gains tax taper relief and reducing the annual exempt amount for individual and trustees to (a) £500, (b) £1,000 and (c) £2,500 for the 2006-07 while simultaneously reintroducing indexation linked to either the consumer or retail price index are available in the following table.

Annual exempt amount	Additional revenue (accruals £ million)
£500	3,500
£1,000	3,000
£2,500	2,300

The figures are consistent with the assumptions made in Budget 2006 on future asset prices, and take into account the likely taxpayer behavioural responses to the tax change. The Annual Exempt Amount for Trusts is assumed to be half that of individuals. Figures for other years are not available.

Data Protection

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 175W, on the Data Protection Act, how many responses to requests to HM Revenue and Customs for information under the Data Protection Act 1998 were completed (a) within 40 days, (b) between 40 and 59 days, (c) between 60 and 100 days and (d) over 100 days after receiving the original letter in each of the last five years; and how many are outstanding. [77765]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs was created in April 2005.

	Number
(a) 2005	21,985
(a) 2006[1]	9,141
(b) 2005	810
(b) 2006[1]	552
(c) 2005	373
(c) 2006[1]	160
(d) 2005	95
(d) 2006[1]	43
(e) 2005	3
(e) 2006[1]	0

1 To date.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 175W, on the Data Protection Act, what procedure HM Revenue and Customs uses to respond to requests for information under the Data Protection Act 1998; and what steps the Department takes to ensure that responses to such requests are completed within 40 days. [77766]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs includes training on Data Protection issues for all staff as part of their compulsory induction training. HM Revenue and Customs has a dedicated network of subject access officers who trace, retrieve and copy the personal information requested. These officers attend a mandatory interactive, training workshop where advice and guidance is provided on handling subject access requests as well as information about the principles of the Data Protection Act itself.

An on-line training package is available for all staff to use and a data protection intranet website provides day to day advice on handling subject access requests as well as all aspects of DP legislation.

A central team acts as the central point for logging all subject access requests. This team collates and issues all the information and by maintaining regular contact with the offices holding the data, ensures that as far as possible all responses are dealt with within the prescribed legislative time frame.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 177W, on the Data Protection Act, when redactions made to documents to be disclosed following a request under the Data Protection Act 1998 are made whether a record is kept of (a) who made each redaction and (b) why it was made in the case of (i) HM Treasury and (ii) HM Revenue and Customs. [77767]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is as follows:

(a) Records are not routinely kept of the name of the officer who made each redaction.

(b) Redactions are most commonly made to protect personal data belonging to another individual; because the data do not constitute the data subject's personal data; to safeguard the accurate assessment and collection of taxes.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 177W, on the Data Protection Act, what the minimum font size is in which documents held in electronic form are made available by (i) HM Treasury and (ii) HM Revenue and Customs for disclosure under the Data Protection Act 1998 are printed in relation to HM Treasury's policy to provide enlarged print size for the partially sighted. [77768]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury and HM Revenue and Customs have a policy to provide enlarged print size on request to assist those with visual impairment. HM Revenue and Customs standard is font size 11 although slight variance may occur from system to system. In addition, the font size of documents which have been electronically scanned reflects the font size of the original(s).

Devolved Countries and Regions

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the responsibilities and operational duties are of his Department's devolved countries and regions team. [78220]

Mr. Timms: The devolved countries and regions team advises Treasury Ministers on a range of issues including matters in relation to the devolved Administrations and English regional bodies.

Doha Development Round

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the concordat of the G8 meeting in St. Petersburg on the Doha Development Round, what discussions he plans to have with (a) Commissioner Mandelson, (b) the director general of the World Trade Organisation and (c) Ambassador Susan Schwab on (i) agricultural subsidies, (ii) non-market access and (iii) designation of import/export sensitive commodities. [77699]

Ed Balls: As the Chancellor set out in his statement to the International Monetary and Financial Committee on 22 April 2006, the international community must grasp the opportunity presented by the Doha Development Agenda of world trade talks to achieve an ambitious outcome, by the end of 2006, that will make a real contribution to poverty reduction.

The need for a fairer trading global trading system was a key message of the UK presidency reflected in the communiqués of the G8 Finance Ministers in June 2005, the G8 Heads of State at Gleneagles in July 2005 and G7 Finance Ministers in December 2005. G8 Finance Ministers reiterated this message in their June 2006 communiqué, where they agreed:

> "on the importance for global growth of an ambitious outcome from the Doha Development Round and recognise that urgent progress is needed for its achievement. Many developing countries also need substantial aid for trade to help them take advantage of general trade liberalisation".

As set out in the 2006 Budget, the UK Government continue to work with fellow EU and WTO member states towards an ambitious and pro-development conclusion to the Doha Round that would: substantially increase market access for developing countries; substantially reduce all trade-distorting domestic support; and provide effective special and differential treatment to enable developing countries to capture the gains from trade. All WTO members need to maintain commitment to the Round so that we can deliver on the promises of Doha without lowering the level of ambition.

To this end Treasury Ministers and officials have conversations and discussions with a wide range of organisations and individuals as part of the process of policy development, analysis and delivery.

Domestic Building Renovations (VAT)

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he applied to the European Commission by the 31 March 2006 for a reduced rate of VAT on repair and renovation work for domestic buildings. [78429]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government chose not to apply to the European Commission for this reduced rate.

Government Spending

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what total Government spending was in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [78105]

Mr. Timms: Total public spending that can be identified as benefiting a particular country or region for 2000-01 to 2005-06 is published in table 7.1 of Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses (PESA) 2006 (Cm6811). Public spending can be split into that which can be identified as benefiting a particular country or region and that which is for the benefit of the UK as a whole, for example defence spending. Therefore, the figures in PESA 2006 do not represent total public spending, which is not available by country.

Lifetime Savings Scheme

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider the merits of a lifetime savings scheme for all individuals which would start with an element of child benefit and develop with significant tax benefits later in working life. [78450]

Ed Balls: The Government seek to promote saving and asset ownership for all, from childhood, through working life and into retirement. In keeping with this lifecycle approach, the Government aim to support:

saving for children, through the Child Trust Fund, which promotes saving and financial education and will ensure that in future all children have a financial asset at age 18; saving throughout working life, through individual savings accounts, which provide accessible, tax-free savings; and saving for retirement, in particular through pensions tax relief.

In addition, through the Saving Gateway, the Government are exploring the use of matching to promote saving among those that do not usually save.

Lyons Review

Mr. Willis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with Sir Michael Lyons on his review of local government taxation; and if he will make a statement. [78030]

John Healey: Treasury Ministers and officials have discussions with a wide range of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy analysis, development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussion.

Sir Michael Lyons' work into the function of local government, its future role and how it is funded in England is independent. Sir Michael published an Interim Report in December 2005 and a paper covering the role and function of local government in May 2006. He is due to make his final report to Ministers by the end of December 2006.

National Insurance

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been notified that they have incomplete national insurance contribution records in each year since 1997. [78000]

Dawn Primarolo: National insurance deficiency notices for the six-year period from 1996-97 to 2001-02 were issued in a single exercise. A total of 10,021 million notices were issued in the period October 2003 to September 2004. It is not possible to break this figure down into individual years.

3,785 million notices were issued for 2002-03 tax year and 3,278 million notices were issued for 2003-04 tax year.

National Savings

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was lent to the Treasury by National Savings in each year since 1997. [78368]

Ed Balls: None. NS&I products are liabilities of the Exchequer, which meets its related obligations to lenders, and which are administered by NS&I.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rate of interest the Treasury pays National Savings. [78374]

Ed Balls: The Treasury does not pay interest to National Savings & Investments (NS&I). NS&I products are liabilities of the Exchequer, which meets its related obligations, including interest payments, to lenders, and which are administered by NS&I.

Pensions

Jenny Willott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate the Government have made of the amount of (a) income tax and (b) national insurance contributions that would be paid by the 125,000 people who lost occupational pension rights from schemes that started to wind up before 6 April 2005 if the Government restored 100 per cent. of their lost pensions; and if he will make a statement. [78413]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to estimate the amount of income tax that would be paid, as we do not have any information on the income distribution of people affected. No national insurance contributions would be paid.

Poverty (Wirral, West)

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures his Department has taken to reduce poverty in Wirral West since 1997. [78381]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury has, in partnership with other Government Departments, tackled poverty and promoted economic opportunity through:

promoting macroeconomic stability;

supporting work for those who can and ensuring that work pays, through the New Deals, a national minimum wage and the working tax credit;

providing financial support for groups at particular risk of poverty, such as child benefit and the child tax for families, and the pension credit for pensioners.

Across the UK, these measures have helped lift more than a million people out of poverty since 1997. Tax credits are benefiting more than half a million families in the North West region, and in Wirral South claimant unemployment has fallen by half, youth unemployment has fallen by 75 per cent. and long-term unemployment has fallen by 89 per cent.

Premium Bonds

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what returns the average investor could expect from Premium Bonds in each year since 1997. [78367]

Ed Balls: The average return to investors from Premium Bonds in each year since 1997 are set out in the following table.

	Expected annual return for average investor[1] (percentage)
1997	4.79
1998	5.00
1999	3.77
2000	4.02
2001	3.85
2002	2.51
2003	2.30
2004	2.64
2005	3.14

Scottish Executive

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department's (a) efficiency reviews, (b) public service agreements and (c) spending reviews are applied to the block grant allocated to the Scottish Executive. [78199]

Mr. Timms: The Scottish Executive is responsible for setting its own targets for efficiency and public service delivery in devolved areas. Changes to the Scottish Executive departmental expenditure limit are determined in accordance with the Treasury publication 'Funding the Scottish Parliament, National Assembly for Wales and Northern Ireland Assembly—a Statement of Funding Policy'. The latest edition was published in July 2004.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) procedures and (b) conventions are applied to the treatment of funds drawn down to the Scottish Consolidated Fund and subsequently (i) underspent and (i) overspent by the Scottish Executive. [78218]

Mr. Timms: Section 10 of the Treasury publication "Funding the Scottish Parliament, National Assembly for Wales and Northern Ireland Assembly—a Statement of Funding Policy" details the arrangements that are in place for the handling of end year flexibility, breaches of departmental expenditure limits and the management of cash balances.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions (a) officials and (b) Ministers in his Department have had with the Scottish Executive on the treatment of underspends in the Scottish Consolidated Fund and its future distribution. [78219]

Mr. Timms: Treasury Ministers and officials meet with the Scottish Executive from time to time to discuss matters of common interest.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters have been received by the Tax Credits Office in each month since October 2005; and if he will make a statement. [75002]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 7 June 2006]: The volumes of items of post[1] that HM Revenue and Customs' Tax Credit Office (TCO) received in each of the months since October 2005 was around:

[1] These will include changes of circumstances and renewal forms.

	Items received

October	281,000
November	241,000
December	215,000
2006
January	211,000
February	233,000
March	257,000
April	167,000
May	254,000

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the accuracy level of tax credits processing was in each year since 2003-04; and if he will make a statement. [75772]

Dawn Primarolo: For 2003-04, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 11 July 2005, Official Report, column 698W.

Performance for 2004-05 was published in the departmental accounts for the year ended 31 March 2005 which are available on the HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) website at: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/reports.htm.

Indicative results for the Department's performance for 2005-06 will be published shortly in HMRC spring departmental report 2006.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he has made of the reasons for the tax credit overpayments in 2004-05; how many of these involved official error; and if he will make a statement; [76416]

(2) how many tax credit overpayments involving official error have been made since April 2003; and in how many of these cases the overpayment has been written off. [78151]

Dawn Primarolo: For information on number of overpayments involving official error, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 12 January 2006, Official Report, column 772W.

For causes of overpayments I refer the hon. Member to my written statement of 5 December 2005, Official Report, columns 55-56WS.

The amount of 2003-04 overpayments written off due to official error can be found in the Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report on the Accounts of the Inland Revenue 2004-05, which is available on the HMRC website: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/ir-report2005.pdf

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) which of the recommendations made by the Parliamentary Ombudsman in her report on Tax Credits: Putting Things Right had been (a) implemented, (b) accepted but not implemented, (c) rejected and (d) considered for implementation by 31 May 2006; and if he will make a statement; [76427]

(2) if he will make a statement on plans to implement the recommendations in paragraph 5.17 of the Parliamentary Ombudsman's June 2005 report on tax credits. [76428]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC have responded positively to the Ombudsman's report. For example:

HMRC have improved guidance to staff on the availability of interim payments.

Suspension of recovery on disputes was introduced in November 2005.

A revised award notice including a single page check sheet to help claimants with their award notice were introduced from April 2006. The check sheet includes a section on overpayments and highlights the availability of additional tax credits payments.

The Code of Practice on overpayments (COP26) was revised earlier this year and now provides a clearer statement of what is meant by the reasonableness test in official error cases.

From November 2006 the tax credits computer system will limit any in year adjustment to the cross year recovery limits as detailed in COP26. The Tax Credit Office have a manual process to effect requests in the interim.

In respect of recommendation 10, current policy is for overpayments to be written off where there was a mistake by HMRC and it was not reasonable for the claimant to have spotted the error. The Government believe this strikes the right balance between being fair to those claimants who have been paid the incorrect amount and being fair to the taxpayer in general.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff were employed by (a) the tax credits office and (b) the tax credits hotline in each month from September 2005 to March 2006; and if he will make a statement. [62787]

Dawn Primarolo: For the number of full-time equivalent (FTE) staff employed in Tax Credit Office (TCO) at the end of September 2005, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1326W.

(a) The number of FTE staff in post in the TCO at the end of October 2005 to the end of February 2006 inclusive was around:

Tax Revenue

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the tax revenue from (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last three years. [78106]

Mr. Timms: As taxes are often collected centrally and cannot usually be directly attributed to countries within the UK, only a limited amount of estimates are available.

HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) publishes regional and country information for stamp duties and estimates for income tax, which are available on their websites:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/stamp_duty/table15_2_october04.pdf

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_distribution/menu-by-year.htm#311

The Scottish Executive produce estimates of tax revenues attributable to Scotland in their publication 'Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland'. These are published at:

Unclaimed Assets

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether further legislation will be required for the use of unclaimed assets for charitable and other purposes. [77703]

Ed Balls: The Government reported in the Budget that the banking industry has set in train work to develop a scheme to enable unclaimed assets to be reinvested in society. The industry's steering group is currently considering issues of definition, reuniting and operation and distribution. The Government are clear that such a scheme needs to be consistent with retaining the rights of owners to reclaim assets at any time and, with this in mind, is assessing the legal and accounting issues involved. This work is ongoing.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Valuation Office Agency has purchased (a) software and (b) consultancy services from the company CDC Ltd. in the last five years. [78317]

Dawn Primarolo: The Valuation Office Agency has not purchased (a) software or (b) consultancy services from the company CDC Ltd. in the last five years.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the documents produced by the Valuation Office Agency Director of Modernisation for the Institute of Revenues, Rating and Valuation conferences in (a) Spain in February 2005 and (b) Blackpool in May 2006. [78319]

Dawn Primarolo: No documents were produced by the Valuation Office Agency's Director of Modernisation for the IRRV conference Spain in February 2005. However, some slides were used at this presentation and a copy of these has been placed in the Library. He did not attend the IRRV conference in Blackpool in May 2006.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many full-time equivalent communications, public relations and marketing staff were employed by the Valuation Office Agency at each grade in each year since 2001. [78341]

[75207]

Bill Rammell: There are five HE institutions in the North East: Durham University, Newcastle University, The University of Northumbria at Newcastle, The University of Sunderland and the University of Teesside. The available information is shown in the following tables:

Headteachers

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) highest and (b) average gross salary for headteachers is in a (i) secondary and (ii) primary school in Castle Point. [77631]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not available.

Overseas Students

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many overseas students were studying at English Universities in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) subject and (b) country of origin. [77335]

Bill Rammell: The available information has been placed in the House Libraries. The data in the tables has been taken from the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) student record where the method of recording subject of study was revised in 2002/03, hence figures for 2002/03 onwards are not comparable to earlier years.

Pupil Exclusions

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many pupils have been reinstated into schools by the independent appeals panel after being permanently excluded for violent conduct in each of the last three years. [78145]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not held centrally. The appeals data provided to the Department do not include the reason for the exclusion. The latest available information on appeals against permanent exclusion from school for any reason is given in the table.

Safety Equipment (Schools)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken to ensure the installation of appropriate safety equipment within schools, with particular reference to steps taken at the construction stage. [77860]

Jim Knight: Overall responsibility for installing safety equipment lies with the Employer, under the requirements of the Health and Safety at Work etc Act, 1974. In the case of community schools, community special schools, maintained nursery schools, pupil referral units and voluntary controlled schools the employer is the local authority. For foundation schools, foundation special schools, voluntary-aided schools and some independent schools, the employer is usually the governing body of the school.

The employer has the duty to prepare the overall health and safety plan, ensure its implementation and monitor it. Local authorities have the powers to delegate more detailed planning to schools if they wish, but continue to have ultimate responsibility. The plan is enforceable by the Health and Safety Executive who can take action against the employer.

At construction stage responsibility for planning and specifying appropriate safety equipment, which meets required standards, lies with the employer and their agents (architects or equivalent professional consultants). The responsibility for ensuring equipment is installed accordingly and is working correctly on completion lies with the contractor.

Science Teaching

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps he is taking to broaden the curriculum for the teaching of science. [77713]

Jim Knight [holding answer 15 June 2006]: From September 2006, we are introducing a revised key stage 4 programme of study which focuses on scientific literacy. It will maintain the breadth, depth and challenge of the current curriculum while giving teachers greater flexibility to provide for the wide range of students' interests and aptitudes.

We are making similar changes to the key stage 3 science curriculum which will commence in September 2008.

Sex Education

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken (a) to improve sex education and (b) to increase awareness of sexual health issues in schools. [77620]

Mr. Dhanda: We are committed to helping schools improve their delivery of this important area of the curriculum. In addition to the Department's 'Sex and Relationship Education Guidance' (2000) which includes guidelines on the coverage of sexual health issues, all teachers of SRE are encouraged to undertake the Government funded certificate in personal social and health education (PSHE). The certificate supports standards in the delivery of PSHE teaching including sex and relationship education and is also open to community nurses. To date, over 2,000 teachers and nurses have been certificated under the programme.

The Department has also recently announced the launch of a subject association for PSHE. The association will provide a central support network for teachers giving them a focal point to receive advice, gather and share examples of good practice and promote existing guidance, on all areas of PSHE, including SRE and sexual health.

In 2006-07, the National Healthy Schools programme, a key programme for driving up standards in PSHE, will also benefit from increased funding (£12.4 million). Healthy Schools must demonstrate that they have a sex and relationship education programme in line with DfES guidance.

Teachers have also been given a package of support from the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority. This has included guidance on assessment to help schools evaluate what young people are learning through PSHE as well as units of work on SRE.

Tuition Fees (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was paid in tuition fees by students in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) Peterborough city council area in each year since fees were instituted. [77913]

Bill Rammell: Students on full-time undergraduate courses and their families are expected to make a contribution towards the cost of their tuition based on household income. Students from lower income backgrounds are wholly or partially exempt from paying tuition fees.

The amount of private contributions to tuition fees by students from Peterborough local authority in academic years 1999/2000 to 2003/04 are given in the table.

Contribution from students paying all or part of their tuition fees

Academic year	£ million
1999/2000	0.5
2000/01	0.8
2001/02	0.8
2002/03	0.9
2003/04	1.0

Source:
Student Loans Company (SLC)

Data in the answer cover the period from 1999/2000 to 2003/04. Data for 2004/05 onwards are not available as student applications from Peterborough were processed by another local authority (Cambridgeshire), and can not be disaggregated.

Contributions towards tuition fees of up to £1,000 were introduced in academic year 1998/99 but, as that year was treated as a transitional year, data are not available on the same basis as subsequent years.

Academic years 1999/2000 and 2000/01 contain two and three cohorts respectively of students subject to the new student support scheme.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Audiology

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost of providing a digital hearing aid on the NHS is in the Province including (a) assessment, (b) fitting, (c) follow-up and (d) purchase of the aid (i) to the NHS and (ii) to the patient. [77239]

Paul Goggins: The answers to (a), (b) and (c) cannot be provided because the information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The cost of purchasing a digital hearing aid (DHA) varies depending on the specification. The majority of DHAs provided cost between £56 and £270. There is no cost to the patient.

Bullying in Schools

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many incidents of bullying of children have been reported in the last financial year (a) at primary schools and (b) in post primary education, broken down by (i) board area, (ii) category of bullying and (iii) type of location of incident. [77356]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education does not collect the information requested.

Information about the scale and nature of bullying in Northern Ireland schools is contained in a research report published in October 2002. A research briefing summary is available on the Department's website at:

The Department has recently commissioned updated research into bullying, in all its forms, and the results are expected to be ready for publication by mid 2007.

Businesses

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to help businesses become more innovative since 31 May 2005; and how many businesses in Northern Ireland have been assisted in this way over the period. [77097]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment continues to work with all Departments and Invest NI to ensure the delivery of 'think/create/innovate—the Regional Innovation Strategy for Northern Ireland', which seeks to develop the region's innovation economy. A formal review of 'think/create/innovate' is currently under way, the outcomes of which will contribute to the identification of the key priorities for Northern Ireland's R&D and innovation system during the period 2006-10.

In the period 1 June 2005 to 31 May 2006, Invest NI supported 180 research and development projects which offered grant of £11.86 million against total project costs of £31.35 million. Invest NI also delivered £12.3 million assistance against total project costs of £60.8 million to support a further 308 projects across a range of process, strategy and innovation programmes. 131 businesses were also offered grant of £1.5 million to improve their use of information communication technology and implement new e-business processes and 126 businesses received assistance to enter/develop new markets under the Explorers/Connections programmes.

Recognising the importance of best practice, Invest NI also supported 71 Business Improvement Training agreements, visited 419 companies to provide tailored ICT advice, provided 104 companies with ICT demonstrations, responded to 480 requests for technical advice, conducted 430 intellectual property searches, and delivered 514 portions of HR advice and guidance.

Invest NI also delivered £2.5 million to business in respect of 10 existing letters of offer under the Centres of Excellence programme.

In March 2006, Invest Northern Ireland hosted its first ever Innovation Week with the theme of 'Think Different Grow Fast.' 16 events were delivered across Northern Ireland which attracted more than 1,000 business representatives.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many meetings Ministers have attended with (a) senior departmental officials and (b) business leaders in Northern Ireland to discuss how best to help Northern Ireland businesses become more innovative since 31 May 2005. [77098]

Maria Eagle: In keeping with the ethos of the Economic Vision and the Regional Innovation Strategy for Northern Ireland, the importance of innovation as a driver to the Northern Ireland economy is a key component of the activities undertaken by the NI ministerial team and their respective Departments.

For instance, during the period in question, Ministers took part in 12 company visits at which they promoted the continued need for innovation as key to company competitiveness. Innovation has also been a key feature of a recent trade mission to India.

Innovation has also been a topic for discussion raised by Ministers at various networking events hosted by Northern Ireland's business representative organisations, in addition to being the subject of a number of key note addresses, including the recent International Creative Clusters conference which took place in Belfast in October 2005.

At a strategic level, Ministers and senior departmental officials for the Departments of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, Employment and Learning and Regional Development regularly participate in Economic Development Forum (EDF) meetings at the Northern Ireland Office at which they discuss many of the issues of importance to Northern Ireland's social and economic development, including a quarterly report by the EDF Innovation Sub-Group.

More generally, Ministers meet on a regular (usually weekly) basis with senior officials from their departments to discuss key policy and operational issues. The Regional Innovation Strategy for Northern Ireland has the ownership of all Departments and is a key influence underpinning departmental activities.

Census

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 8 June 2006, Official Report, column 798W, on the Valuation and Lands Agency, how many census output areas there are in Northern Ireland. [78321]

Mr. Hanson: The 2001 census results in Northern Ireland were reported for 5,022 census output areas.

Consultants

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria and procedures he uses when selecting consultants for publicly-funded work. [77377]

Mr. Hanson: The procedure for the appointment of consultants for work within Northern Ireland Departments is based on a competitive process and is governed by the rules set out in the Government Accounting Northern Ireland manual (GANI) and the Public Contracts Regulations 2006.

Where expected spend is not above European Union procurement thresholds, Departments will comply with the principles set out in GANI.

Where spend is expected to be above European Union procurement thresholds in addition to complying with GANI, Departments will comply with the procedures set out in the Public Contracts Regulations 2006.

The criteria used for awarding a public contract will be based on the offer which is the most economically advantageous from the point of view of the contracting authority; or offers the lowest price.

Cross-border Action

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action each relevant Department of the Northern Ireland Administration has taken since his announcement with the Irish Minister for Foreign Affairs in December 2005 of cross-border action for the north-west region. [75421]

Mr. Hanson: Following our statement in December 2005, the Irish Minister for Foreign Affairs and I announced the establishment of a North West Gateway Initiative on 2 May. This comprises a framework of elements aimed at addressing various problems and offering solutions on a co-ordinated basis across the region. Work at departmental level, North and South, includes the commencement of a non-statutory development framework for the north-west on which consultation with key stakeholders is planned at an early stage; and a seminar involving further and higher education and business interests is being held later this month to consider how best to utilise education and training resources to enhance the skills profile of the region.

The National Roads Authority in the South and Roads Service in Northern Ireland are in discussion aimed at identifying potential improvements to the roads' network for the north-west and both Finance Departments have invited the Special EU Programmes Body to assist in the development of strategic proposals which could be considered under the new round of EU Structural Funds.

On economic development, skills and employment, the respective agencies are working together on action plans in their respective areas, e.g. trade and investment promotion (IDA/EI/INI/ITI), tourism (Tourism Ireland/NITB/Failte Ireland), skills/training (FAS/DEL), education, innovation and business development. This work will draw on the joint economic study exploring further opportunities for North-South economic co-operation. It will also build on a range of existing initiatives such as Innovation North West Ireland, Destination North West, the North West Business and Technology zone, North West Region Data Capture project and others. On telecommunications, the issue of open access is being further investigated in the context of the wider needs of the region and, in particular, the completion of telecoms requirements for the cross-border technology park.

A round of consultations between the joint group of officials established earlier this year to assist in maximising the potential of the north-west region and key stakeholders took place on 12 June. It is envisaged that the group will hold further consultations as work progresses.

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from his Department in each of the past five years. [71773]

Mr. Hain: The following information represents the 10 non-public sector entities that have received the largest total sum of payments from the Northern Ireland Office in each of the past five years:

Child Sexual Abuse

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what treatment and services are available to children and young people in Northern Ireland who have been victims of sexual abuse. [76400]

Paul Goggins: Medical services for child victims of sexual abuse are provided by community paediatric medical staff or by paediatricians in a hospital setting and are subject to formal protocols.

Victims may also be referred for counselling/psychotherapy services. These are delivered by:

- health and social services trusts, mainly through primary care mental health services, mainstream psychiatric services, and specialist children's services;
- voluntary organisations; and
- independent providers.

In addition to the resources allocated for the delivery of these services by HSS trusts, Government support voluntary organisations working with victims of sexual violence through the provision of grant funding.

Departmental Pensions

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in each Department in Northern Ireland, including the Northern Ireland Office, have (a) applied to buy added years and (b) are currently paying for added years to be added to their pension arrangements. [77311]

Mr. Hanson: The table details the number of staff in each Department in Northern Ireland, including the Northern Ireland Office who have applied to buy added years and those who are currently paying for added years to be added to their pension arrangements.

Information on Agencies sponsored by Departments is included with the Department unless separately identified.

Figures relating to the Northern Ireland Office include both members of the Northern Ireland Civil Service and the Home Civil Service working in that Department.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1977W, on departmental staff, what criteria for the award of non-consolidated bonuses were used in (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06; and what assessment he has made of the (i) average size and (ii) number of such awards in those years. [77218]

Mr. Hanson: The criteria for the award of all non-consolidated bonuses used between (a) 2004-05 and (b) 2005-06 were unchanged in that they were entirely performance related. The number and size of the bonuses available each year therefore vary according to performance of staff and to the budget available.

The increase in the overall value in bonuses awarded in 2005-06 as compared with previous years is due to an increase in the value of non-consolidated performance bonuses paid to non-industrial staff below senior civil service level as a result of the 2005-06 pay settlement. This reflects Government pay policy to reward higher in-year performance through the award of non-consolidated bonuses.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of staff in each Department in Northern Ireland, including his Office, are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77314]

Mr. Hanson: The following table details Northern Ireland Civil Service staff in post (permanent and casual) as recorded in the December Quarterly Employment Survey (QES) for the 11 Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much each Department under his authority spent on travel expenses in each of the past five years. [77353]

Mr. Hanson: The following table provides a breakdown of the costs for each financial year from 2001-02 to 2005-06 for the 11 core NICS Departments and the Northern Ireland Office.

Costs include all travel by standard mileage rate, public transport rate, air, rail, sea, bus and cycle travel. Figures also include car parking, passenger and equipment allowances.

Approximately 85 per cent. of DARD's travel expenditure is in relation to mileage. DARD employs a large number of professional staff (e.g. veterinary surgeons, agricultural inspectors) whose duties require them to travel within rural communities.

Deprivation

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of the population in each Northern Ireland (a) constituency and (b) council area has been assessed as living in the most deprived areas of Northern Ireland in each of the past five years. [77308]

Mr. Hanson: The Northern Ireland Multiple Deprivation Measure 2005 reports detailed levels of deprivation in small areas throughout Northern Ireland. The following tables give the percentage of the population in each (a) parliamentary constituency and each (b) local government district who live in the most deprived small areas in Northern Ireland.

As these figures are derived from a specific research project, figures for previous years are not available

Farming

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers in Northern Ireland are registered as (a) dairy farmers, (b) beef farmers and (c) mixed farmers; and how many were registered in (i) 2003-04 and (ii) 2004-05. [78512]

David Cairns: Farmers are not registered in Northern Ireland by the type of farming they practise. Rather, farms are classified for statistical purposes as belonging to one of several standard types. Information on the number of farms in relevant categories, and for the most recent three-year period available, is presented in the following table:

Farm type	2003	2004	2005
Dairy	4,425	4,201	4,058

Finucane Inquiry

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will establish a public inquiry into the murder of Pat Finucane in line with the terms recommended by Judge Cory. [76620]

Mr. Hain: The Government announced in September 2004 that steps would be taken to facilitate the establishment of an inquiry into the death of Patrick Finucane with all the powers and resources necessary to fulfil its task. The Government are clear that an inquiry established under the Inquiries Act 2005 meets the requirements set out by Judge Cory in his report into Patrick Finucane's death.

Freedom of Information

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate how many (a) health Department and (b) NHS personnel in the Province are employed on processing requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. [77240]

Paul Goggins: Four staff in the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and 30 staff in health and personal social services bodies are involved in processing requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000. In addition, in order to respond to particular requests for information, these staff are assisted, as appropriate, by staff from across the Department or the health and personal social services bodies. Information is not available on the amount of time spent on processing freedom of information requests but it represents only a small proportion of the total working time of the staff involved.

Hillsborough Castle

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total budget has been for maintenance of the grounds and buildings of Hillsborough Castle in each year since 1998. [74688]

Mr. Hain: In addition to providing overnight accommodation for myself, the facilities at Hillsborough Castle are also used to provide official hospitality and overnight accommodation for members of the Royal Family, visiting dignitaries and diplomats. Other activities at the Castle include departmental meetings, the annual Garden Party and citizenship ceremonies. In addition to its use by the Northern Ireland Office and other Government Departments, charities and local community groups can request to use the facilities, generally for fundraising purposes, and the Castle and grounds are open at certain times of the year for guided tours. We are able to provide only figures for the last five financial years; these figures include the cost of gardening staff, and major and minor works projects, in addition to routine maintenance.

	Costs (£)
2005-06	675,883.37
2004-05	455,229.05

ICT Sector

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Department for Employment and Learning has spent on training in information and communication technology (ICT) skills in each of the past five years; what measures the Government are taking to encourage graduates to work in the ICT sector; and if he will establish a dedicated fund to encourage growth in the ICT sector. [76221]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Employment and Learning spent the following on training on information and communication technology skills in the past five years:

Total ICT funding

	Amount (£)
2004-05	17,122,478
2003-04	21,154,350
2002-03	19,613,027
2001-02	9,509,116
2000-01	9,881,950

The vast majority of the funds spent (£70,337,817 from the academic year 2000/01 to 2004/05) is in respect of further education. The remainder comprises Management Development (£6,669,954) and Sectoral Development (£273,150). These figures exclude funding to universities for ICT courses. The Department provides a recurrent grant but it is the institutions themselves which allocate funding to subject areas.

The Department funds foundation degrees and other higher education courses delivered in the further education sector in order to encourage students to enter the ICT sector at intermediate level.

In implementing its Skills Strategy for Northern Ireland, the Department places importance on determining the skills needs of each sector. E-Skills, the Sector Skills Council for the IT industry, has carried out research into employer needs, supply and demand and emerging gaps and this analysis of skills gaps has been published. The Department has also commissioned E-Skills to carry out an additional specialist project which specifically focuses on the demand for graduates in the industry. Also Invest Northern Ireland has been jointly involved with the Department in providing projections of the number of graduates likely to be needed for forthcoming emerging employment opportunities.

Alongside this research, the Department in co-operation with the Association of Northern Ireland Colleges and local employers, is developing a short-term course for graduates from a variety of disciplines to enable them to avail themselves of increasing employment opportunities in the ICT sector. This will provide an immediate response to the ICT sector employers' concerns, while longer term need is determined.

There are no plans to establish a dedicated fund to encourage growth in the ICT sector. Invest Northern Ireland already encourages the growth of the sector through a programme of support for indigenous companies and through foreign direct investment. In addition to this individual company support, Invest Northern Ireland also undertakes a number of sector specific initiatives to ensure the continued development of the ICT sector in Northern Ireland.

Local Community Funding

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which areas of Northern Ireland will receive local community funding during 2006-07; and how much each area has been awarded. [78561]

Mr. Hanson: I recently announced that the local community fund was to be relaunched. The fund will spend £4 million over the next two years in the 11 per cent.-20 per cent. most disadvantaged communities as measured by the Noble Index 2005. The Department for Social Development is currently finalising the targeted areas and allocations for 2006-08 and hopes to be able to make a further announcement in July.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much general grant was received by each local authority in Northern Ireland in (a) 2005-06 and (b) 2006-07. [77220]

Long-Term Care

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of people in Northern Ireland who have had to sell their family homes in order to provide funds for long-term care in each year since proceedings in the case of Pamela Coughlan v. the NHS were completed. [78448]

Paul Goggins: The Department does not collect information on the numbers of people who sell their homes to realise the funds required to pay for long-term care and has not made an estimate of such house sales for each year since the judgment in the case of R. v. North and East Devon health authority ex parte Pamela Coughlan was handed down by the Court of Appeal in July 1999.

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will bring forward amending legislation to end the requirement on those who enter long-term care to sell their family home in order to fund such care. [78449]

Paul Goggins: There is no legal requirement for those entering long-term care to sell a family home to fund their care. Following an individual financial assessment to calculate how much each individual can afford to pay towards the cost of their care, it is entirely a matter for each individual and their advisors to decide how best to meet any charges. Current Northern Ireland legislation provides a 12-week disregard of the value of a residents home following permanent admission to a care home. I am not, however, proposing to promote amending legislation to exclude totally the value of a resident's family home from the assessment of each individual's resources.

Long-term Unemployed

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland are defined as long-term unemployed, broken down by (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area; and what measures the Department for Employment and Learning has in place to encourage long-term unemployed people to return to education. [75424]

Maria Eagle: The number and percentage of long-term unemployed from the claimant count in April 2006, broken down by (a) parliamentary constituency and (b) district council area, are shown in the following tables.

The Department for Employment and Learning has introduced a number of policies and initiatives in the further and higher education sectors, to widen access and increase adult participation in vocational education and training; the target group includes the long term unemployed.

These measures include an expansion of courses for those returning to learning; the allocation of additional funding to support provision from non-statutory providers and support measures to provide help to students who are deterred from enrolling in further education because of financial hardship or other difficulties. In 2005-06 this support to students totalled over £2.5 million. There is also an entitlement to free professional and technical courses, for all full-time students, aged 19 and over.

Within higher education, the Department has set a target of progressing year on year towards fair access to HE by 2008. The Widening Participation Strategy has included the setting of an annual target to increase representation of people from lower socio-economic classifications.

The Department also provides a number of targeted programmes to assist those who are out of work move towards, and return to the labour market. This includes a suite of new deal programmes where eligible participants may access short accredited training courses or three units of a National Vocational Qualification (NVQ). The purpose of this provision is designed to assist people find jobs and help them stay and progress in employment through training and work experience.

Neighbourhood Partnerships

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which consultants have been selected to assist with the visioning and action plans for Neighbourhood Partnerships. [77225]

Mr. Hanson: MacBride International was successful in winning the contract to provide consultancy support to seven Neighbourhood Partnerships to assist them with their vision and action planning process.

Noise Nuisance

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints were made about noise levels to each district and borough council in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years; and on how many occasions each council took steps to reduce the noise level. [77306]

David Cairns: District council noise complaint statistics have been collected by the Department of the Environment since 2004, therefore only two years of data is currently available.

In 2003-04, district councils received a total of 8,397 complaints about noise. During the same period a total of 307 noise abatement notices were issued and seven prosecutions were taken by council officers.

In 2004-05 the number of noise complaints received by councils totalled 10,047. During the same period a total of 340 noise abatement notices and 17 prosecutions were taken by council officers.

A breakdown of the statistics by district council is contained in an annual report published by the Department. The reports for 2003-04 and 2004-05 can be accessed on the Environment and Heritage service's website at http://www.ehsni.gov.uk/environment/noise/noisestats.shtml The report for 2005-06 is presently being compiled and will be published by 31 August 2006. Copies of this report will be placed in the Library.

PSNI

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Police Service of Northern Ireland officers have been injured as a result of gunshot wounds while policing parades in Northern Ireland in each of the past 10 years. [65334]

Paul Goggins: The PSNI advises that while figures can be provided on the number of police officers injured in shooting incidents, it is not possible to specify if the injury was sustained as a result of policing a parade. The overall figures for the number of officers receiving gunshot wounds are as follows:

	Number
1996	4
1997	7
1998	1
1999	0
2000	0
2001	2
2002	1
2003	2
2005	0

Note:
2005 statistics are provisional and may be subject to minor amendment.

Public Bodies (Funding)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was allocated to the (a) Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission, (b) Northern Ireland Equality Commission, (c) Northern Ireland Parades Commission and (d) Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland in each year since the inception of each. [34556]

Mr. Hanson: For the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland, Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission and the Office of the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland, this financial information can be found in the Cabinet Office annual publications "Public Bodies 1999 to 2005", all of which can be accessed online at: www.civilservice.gov.uk/other/agencies/public_bodies/index.asp "Public Bodies 2006" is in preparation and will be published later this year.

Since its inception, similar information for the Parades Commission for Northern Ireland has appeared in its annual reports, copies of which are held in the Library. From 2005, it has also been published in Cabinet Office's "Public Bodies".

Information for all four bodies for 2004-07 are as follows:

	Government funding
Public body/NDPB	2004-05	2005-06	2006-07
Equality Commission for Northern Ireland	6,779,490	6,806,000	6,515,000
Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission	0,970,000	1,450,000	1,475,000
Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland	7,150,000	7,636,000	7,923,000
Parades Commission for Northern Ireland	1,154,000	1,273,000	1,335,500

Renewable Energy

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the energy consumed by each Northern Ireland Department came from renewable sources in the last 12 months. [77046]

Mr. Hanson: In the year ending 31 March 2005 (the last complete year for which data is available) the amount of electricity coming from renewable sources consumed by Northern Ireland Departments was as follows:

Department	Percentage
Agriculture and Rural Development	2.79
Culture, Arts and Leisure	0
Education	8.41
Enterprise, Trade and Investment	6.94
Environment	12.73
Finance and Personnel	15.87
Health, Social Services and Public Safety	13.83
Regional Development	12.55
Social Development	14.61

The table does not include the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister or the Department for Employment and Learning as these Departments are accommodated in buildings shared with other Departments.

Road Safety

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he (a) is taking and (b) plans to take to increase the seatbelt-wearing rate in Northern Ireland over the next five years. [77379]

David Cairns: The Department of the Environment already develops seatbelt campaigns, supported by the Police Service of Northern Ireland, to ensure that all vehicle occupants are aware of the need to wear seat belts. The Department's Road Safety Education Officers provide teaching resources, training and support and liaise with teachers in all schools in Northern Ireland to ensure that children are encouraged to wear seatbelts.

Measures planned to increase the seatbelt wearing rate in Northern Ireland are:

New primary road traffic legislation on which the Department has consulted will be introduced in due course. This includes making the failure to wear seatbelts an endorsable offence.

Consultations have taken place on Directive 2003/20/EC, including proposals to require seatbelt wearing on buses and coaches where they are fitted and the use of child restraints in cars and goods vehicles. The Department plans to make an announcement on the way forward over the next few weeks.

A new publicity campaign highlighting the dangers of not wearing seatbelts is planned for September.

Special Scientific Interest Areas

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are in place for visits by Environment and Heritage Service officials to ensure that areas of special scientific interest in private ownership are not being compromised. [78174]

David Cairns: The Department of the Environment has a statutory responsibility to ensure that areas of special scientific interest (ASSIs) are afforded protection from damage and that they are managed in a manner that will secure their scientific interest. Accordingly, in normal circumstances, EHS conducts one integrity monitoring visit annually and one condition monitoring visit every six years. If a breach of legislation is suspected, entry onto the land will be required immediately.

Restorative Justice

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of plans for the introduction of community-based restorative justice schemes. [76298]

Mr. Hanson: I refer the hon. Member to my statement on community-based restorative justice made on 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 98WS.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1605W, on staff surveys, for what reason the number of staff surveys conducted in Northern Ireland Departments increased between 2003-04 and 2005-06. [77219]

Mr. Hanson: The following table details the increase in staff surveys undertaken by the 11 core NICS Departments and the Northern Ireland Office between the financial years 2003-04 and 2005-06.

There is no single reason for the increase in staff survey numbers. There is no set number of surveys that Departments are required to carry out in any given year. The increase in surveys reflects the growing focus on measuring internal service provision, staff communication, workplace health and working toward best practice in people management.

Stormont

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has (a) to restore, (b) to catalogue and (c) to make information available about the historic artefacts associated with the Stormont Estate not on public view. [74741]

Mr. Hanson: The artefacts are the responsibility of the NI Assembly. None are in need of restoration. A catalogue of the artefacts is available from the Office of the Keeper.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the (a) safety and (b) quality of the storage of the historic artefacts associated with the Stormont Estate; and what assessment he has made of the need for specialist conservation of such material. [74742]

Mr. Hanson: The majority of artefacts belonging to the Assembly are safely stored in the artefact's store in Parliament Buildings. The remaining artefacts are safely stored in DFP stores in Belfast. Specialist conservation is not required for any of these artefacts.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to return the historic artefacts associated with the Stormont Estate to Parliament Buildings. [74743]

Mr. Hanson: The majority of the historic artefacts are already stored in Parliament Buildings. There are currently no plans to return remaining artefacts to Parliament Buildings.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland where the historic artefacts associated with the Stormont Estate are stored; and whether they can be loaned to museums. [74744]

Mr. Hanson: The majority of items are kept in the artefact's store, Parliament Buildings and the remaining items are stored at DFP stores in Belfast. Any request from a museum to borrow an artefact would be given due consideration.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a catalogue for visitors of artefacts kept on the Stormont Estate. [74811]

Mr. Hanson: There are currently no plans to publish a catalogue of artefacts kept on the Stormont Estate however a catalogue of Parliament Buildings artefacts is available from the Office of the Keeper.

Theft

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many convictions there were in Northern Ireland in connection with theft from retail outlets in (a) 1995 and (b) 2005. [76366]

Mr. Hanson: The number of convictions for shoplifting is included in the table. Data for 2003 are the most up-to-date available at present. It should be noted that data are collated on the principal offence rule, thus only the most serious offence with which an offender is charged is included.

Winter Fuel Payments

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pensioners received winter fuel payments in (a) East, (b) South, (c) West and (d) North Belfast in each of the last two years for which figures are available. [78754]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Number of winter fuel payments

Parliamentary constituency	2003-04	2004-05
Belfast East	17,593	17,334
Belfast North	16,725	16,212

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

County Court Judgments

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 May 2006, Official Report, column 732W, on county court judgment records, what advice was (a) sought and (b) received on the commercial implications of the existing provision of services in relation to the register of judgments orders and fines of the county court. [77941]

Ms Harman: No such advice has been sought or received. However, independent advice was sought and received in 2004 on the Department's procurement options, the associated risks, the timing of any competition and what it must do to prepare for one.

Departmental Annual Report

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what research her Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake into the reasons for the slippage against Target 5, Measure 1 set out on page 134 of the departmental annual report (Cm 6820); and if she will make a statement. [77529]

Bridget Prentice: This particular component of the shared target with the Home Office measures the time taken to remove detained, non-suspensive claimants whose applications have been certified as clearly unfounded and whose appeal rights against the refusal to grant asylum can only be brought from outside the United Kingdom once removal has taken place.

The Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) of the Home Office has confirmed that a dedicated resource is in place to analyse the quality and timeliness of the non-suspensive appeal (NSA) process and to address issues and difficulties that arise within the process.

Electoral Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many electors were registered in each constituency in the year (a) before and (b) after single signatures for registration were introduced. [21770]

Mr. Hanson: I have been asked to reply.

The table shows the number of people registered to vote in each Westminster constituency in Northern Ireland in the years 2001 and 2002, either side of the introduction of individual registration in 2002.

The significant drop in the numbers registering was largely due to the fact that pre-2002 voters were given a year's grace before their names were removed if they did not re-register. The Electoral Fraud Act 2002, which introduced individual registration, was also successful in eradicating duplicate entries and phantom names on previous registers. The register used for the May 2005 general election showed a total number of 1,148,486 people registered.

Homes (Repossession)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many court orders have been issued for the repossession of homes in each London borough in each of the past five years; and if she will make a statement. [75696]

Ms Harman: The following table shows the number of mortgage possession orders made in all London county courts in the last five years.

These figures do not indicate how many houses have been repossessed through the courts, since not all the orders will have resulted in the issue and execution of warrants of possession.

The civil procedure rules state that all claims for the repossession of land must be commenced in the district in which the land is situated. However, county courts' jurisdictions are not coterminous with London borough boundaries, and therefore any single court's repossession actions are likely to relate to homes in a number of different boroughs.

John Muhia

Clare Short: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the case of John Muhia (Home Office ref. M746233) is subject to reconsideration; and if she will make a statement. [77929]

Bridget Prentice: The asylum appeal of Mr. John Muhia is listed for reconsideration by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (AIT) on 3 July 2006.

Looked-after Children

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she plans to take to ensure (a) the implementation of the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry Report on Care of Young People and (b) regular inspections of services for looked-after children in the Isle of Man. [77605]

Ms Harman: The Inquiry Report on Care of Young People on the Isle of Man and the regular inspections of service there, are for the authorities in the Isle of Man.

Magistrates (Retirement)

Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the retirement age is for magistrates. [77940]

Ms Harman: The retirement age for magistrates is 70, with two exceptions. First, if a magistrate is a chairman of the bench when he or she reaches 70, he or she need not retire until the year as chairman has ended. Second, if a magistrate is adjudicating in a case which is in progress on the day he/she reaches 70, the Lord Chief Justice may, with the concurrence of the Lord Chancellor, direct that the magistrate need not retire until the case has ended.

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many working days were lost to her Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to her Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [77255]

Vera Baird: The Department records the average number of sickness absence days per employee each year, and these are published annually by the Cabinet Office in the annual "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service" report. The figures that follow are extracted from data held by the DCA for 1997 and 1998, and from the Cabinet Office annual reports, which can be found for the years 1999 to 2004 on the Civil Service website at:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mini-motorbikes

12. Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to tackle antisocial behaviour involving motor vehicles, with particular reference to mini-motorbikes. [77882]

13. Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to tackle illegal and antisocial behaviour involving unlicensed mini-motorbikes and motorbikes. [77883]

Mr. McNulty: The Government are aware of the problems associated with motorbike misuse, in particular miniature motorbikes. There is now a range of tools and powers in place to deal effectively with this problem and we are actively encouraging their use.

These specific powers enable immediate action to be taken against antisocial riders, ensuring that communities do not have to suffer prolonged misery caused by the antisocial use of mini-motorbikes.

The Home Office is producing a guidance document to help practitioners.

Violent Crime

14. Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of conviction rates in cases involving violent crime. [77884]

Mr. Sutcliffe: In 2004, 55 per cent. of those violent offences proceeded against resulted in a conviction. There were 93,735 violent offences that were proceeded against in 2004, of which 51,415 resulted in a defendant being found guilty.

Occasional Sales

15. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the Kent County Council Act 2001 and Medway Council Act 2001 on occasional sales. [77885]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Report on the Kent Acts concluded that advance notice of occasional sales was helpful in planning operational activity. We will be seeking further evidence from police forces, local authorities and others when we consult on whether the regulatory aspects of the Kent Acts have wider application.

Safer Neighbourhood Teams

16. Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with introducing safer neighbourhood teams. [77886]

Mr. McNulty: By April 2007, neighbourhood policing will have been introduced to every community in England and Wales, delivering increased patrolling and visibility, and ensuring that local officers are more accessible to local people. Every community will have its own dedicated neighbourhood policing team by April 2008.

Police

17. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will meet representatives of the Essex Police Authority to discuss the future of the police service in Essex. [77887]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, has made it clear that he believes the establishment of strategic police forces through the merger of existing police areas is the basis for a reformed, fully effective police service in the future and in particular is the necessary step to enhance the stability of local neighbourhood policing. To that end, I recently met Lord Hannington, Chair of Essex county council to discuss the issues for the Essex area. I can assure you that there is no question of any intent to ride roughshod over concerns raised and I welcome a meeting with representatives from Essex Police Authority.

18. Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the merger of local police forces. [77888]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, has made it clear that he believes the establishment of strategic police forces through the merger of existing police areas is the basis for a reformed, fully effective police service in the future and in particular is the necessary step to enhance the stability of local neighbourhood policing. To that end, my right hon. Friend recently met the Chair of the Cleveland Police Authority to discuss the issues for the Clevelnd area.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests were made by police officers in each year since 1997; and what the average number of arrests per police officer was in each year. [74589]

Mr. McNulty: Information on persons arrested for recorded crime (notifiable offences) can be found in Table AA of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Arrests for Recorded Crime (Notifiable Offences) and the Operation of Certain Police Powers under PACE, England and Wales" which is available on the Research and Development Statistics website www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pubs stastistical. Copies are also available in the Library.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police recruits have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed during their period of training in each police force in each of the past five years; and what percentage this represents of the total number of recruits in each year. [77428]

Mr. McNulty: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for judicial review of his decisions on the amalgamation of police forces have been made; and if he will make a statement. [77894]

Mr. McNulty: West Mercia and Cleveland police authorities have made applications for judicial review on the Home Secretary's announced intentions. An application has also been received from West Midlands council. We are of course disappointed with the authorities' and councils' decision to go down the path of judicial review. We encourage them to use the opportunity for continued dialogue that has just been announced. Beyond that, it would not be appropriate to comment further on a matter that is before the courts.

Foreign Criminals

19. Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign criminals are detained in immigration detention centres; and if he will make a statement. [77889]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As of 10 June 2006 there were 450 detainees accommodated within immigration removal centres who are recorded as having previously served a term of imprisonment.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign national prisoners originally released without consideration for deportation were subsequently deported in the last five years. [77893]

Mr. Byrne: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and his predecessor have provided regular statistical updates to the House on the number of cases where foreign national prisoners were released without proper deportation consideration. In particular I refer the hon. Gentleman to the most recent written ministerial statements of 15 and 23 May 2006. We will continue to update the House on the 1,019 cases as we work through them and urgently recheck the information we hold to ensure that any further information we provide to the House is as accurate as possible. We aim to provide a further update by the end of June.

Neighbourhood Policing Schemes

20. Mr. Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of neighbourhood policing schemes. [77890]

Mr. McNulty: Earlier this year we published research evidence that showed that neighbourhood policing can deliver significant improvements in crime reduction, perceptions of crime and antisocial behaviour, feelings of safety and public confidence in the police. (The National Reassurance Policing Programme—Home Office research findings number 272.)

In the trial, the reduction in the number of victims of crime was twice as high, and public confidence in the police increased five times as much in the wards with neighbourhood policing activity compared with similar wards without.

Police Cells

21. Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the availability of police cells of the appropriate standard to detain suspects prior to court appearance. [77891]

Mr. McNulty: Section 35 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 requires that the chief officer for each police area shall designate the police stations in his or her area which shall be used for the purposes of detaining arrested persons. It is the duty of the chief officer to designate police stations appearing to him or her to provide enough accommodation for that purpose.

Offending Rates

22. Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce offending; and if he will make a statement. [77892]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government have taken positive action to reduce offending. Our strategy includes tackling drug misuse, focusing on prolific and other priority offenders and reducing re-offending. Our vision for reducing re-offending is set out in the five-year strategy for protecting the public and reducing re-offending published in February.

Adult Learners Week

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employees of his Department attended events during the 2006 Adult Learners Week. [75394]

Mr. Byrne: 1,368 Home Office employees attended events during the 2006 Adult Learners Week. This comprised 333 staff from the core non agency, non IND Home Office and 1,035 from IND.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps he plans to take to ensure that local authorities monitor and act on public concerns over antisocial behaviour; [77143]

(2) if he will take steps to make local authorities more accountable to communities when responding to persistent antisocial behaviour and community safety problems. [77144]

Mr. McNulty: A key element of the Government's respect programme is to ensure that all communities see and expect a robust response to antisocial behaviour. We have introduced the necessary tools and powers and expect local authorities to use them where appropriate. This Government have introduced a mandatory antisocial behaviour and respect outcome to all local area agreements (LAAs) to ensure that local authorities monitor and act on public concerns over antisocial behaviour. From April 2007 all areas will be covered by such an agreement. The respect programme is also about empowering the public to hold their leaders to account and have their say about the issues that matter most to them. We will ensure that senior representatives of all crime and disorder reduction partnerships hold regular 'face the people' sessions to promote greater accountability and visibility in local services. The Government are committed to introducing a 'community call for action', a power that will give local communities a formal way to request and ensure that action is taken by the police, local authorities and others in response to persistent antisocial behaviour or community safety problems, where action is not already being taken.

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many antisocial behaviour orders were applied for by (a) each local authority, (b) the police, (c) social landlords and (d) housing action trusts in Dudley since 1 April 1999; [77146]

(2) how many (a) criminal antisocial behaviour orders and (b) antisocial behaviour orders have been secured by courts in (i) Dudley and (ii) the West Midlands since the introduction of the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003. [77330]

Mr. McNulty: From 1 April 1999 to 31 May 2000 antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) data were collected by aggregate numbers only by police force area. Since 1 June 2000, from copies of the orders received, we are able to determine the type of applicant for ASBOs issued on application. The number of ASBOs issued on application, as reported to the Home Office by the Courts Service, from 1 June 2000 to 30 September 2005 (latest available), wherein restrictions are imposed in the local government authority area of Dudley metropolitan borough council (MBC) is 15. All were applied for by Dudley MBC.

The Police Reform Act 2002 gave authority to the courts, from 1 December 2002, to issue ASBOs, in addition to the sentence, following conviction of a criminal offence. The available information is given in the table.

Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued at all courts, as reported to the Home Office by the Court Service, by area and type, from 1 December 2002[1] to 30 September 2005 (latest available)

Number

	On application	On conviction	Total
West Midlands	113	340	453
Of which:
Dudley MBC	11	15	26

[1] Prior to this date ASBOs could be issued at the magistrates court on application only. The Police Reform Act (2002) gave authority to the Crown court and the magistrates court to issue an ASBO following conviction for a criminal offence. For comparison purposes all data given in this table are for the period 1 December 2002 to 30 September 2005.

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take to publicise action taken to tackle antisocial behaviour to members of the public in Dudley. [77329]

Mr. McNulty: The respect programme places the emphasis on local agencies to use the tools and powers they have been given to tackle antisocial behaviour and its causes. The Government are determined that people should be confident that their local agencies will respond appropriately to antisocial behaviour. The roll-out Neighbourhood Policing teams and the increase in the number of Police Community Support Officers mean that there are more resources than ever before on the streets to make this happen. This, coupled with new and existing powers, will mean that there is no excuse for inaction.

Through the Respect Academy programme, we are also outlining clearly how important communications, accountability and visibility are for public services in tackling antisocial behaviour. Getting the public to make demands on local agencies for action on antisocial behaviour and disrespect is an important part of sustaining these changes. It is essential that the public feel empowered to play their part in tackling antisocial behaviour through greater awareness of the powers available to them and their local agencies. We want to encourage people to come forward, complain and take a stand. The Respect "Taking A Stand" awards and action days held nationwide will continue to stimulate public debate about acceptable behaviour and inform antisocial behaviour practitioners about local activities. We will also ensure that public services can be held to account and deliver on local priorities by introducing regular and systematic "face the people" briefing sessions, involving senior representation from the police and local authorities. Dudley metropolitan borough council (MBC) has taken a number of steps to ensure that action to tackle antisocial behaviour is well publicised throughout the borough. Dudley Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) publishes and distributes two quarterly newsletters, "Dudley Together" and "Home Affairs" to all households and tenants. The local press also publicises details of antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) and dispersal notices and most Dudley MBC Neighbourhood Managers hold local community safety forums to inform the community about initiatives and on-going action to reduce antisocial behaviour.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of people who have been made subject to an antisocial behaviour order were in receipt of housing benefit when the order was imposed. [77709]

Mr. McNulty: Information collected centrally for statistical purposes does not identify if an antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) recipient is in receipt of housing benefit.

Asylum/Immigration

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) suicides and (b) incidents of self-harm there have been in each immigration holding, reception and removal centre in each of the past five years. [75368]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that there have been two deaths in the immigration removal estate in the last five years where the Coroner has recorded a verdict of suicide, at Haslar on 31 January 2003 and at Dungavel on 23 July 2004. We await the Coroner's verdict in a further five cases of apparently self-inflicted death. Details of these are:19 July 2004 at Harmondsworth, 7 November 2004 at Colnbrook, 27 June 2005 at Campsfield House, 15 September 2005 at Yarl's Wood, 19 January 2006 at Harmondsworth. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers who have been detained and subsequently granted temporary release have absconded in each of the past five years. [75788]

Mr. Byrne: This information could be published only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent estimate has been made of the number of asylum seekers who have been (a) refused asylum and (b) removed from the United Kingdom in each year since 1999; and if he will make a statement [75919]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the refusal and removal of asylum seekers is published quarterly and annually. Copies are available from the Library of the House and on the Home Office research development and statistics directorate website at http://homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many illegal immigrants were found at each of the main ports of entry to the United Kingdom in each year since 1998; and how many were found in total in each year. [76268]

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much compensation was paid out to asylum seekers by the Government in each of the past five years. [74169]

Mr. Byrne: Compensation paid by the immigration and nationality directorate to asylum seekers is not separately identifiable from the total of compensation paid to all members of the public.

Automatic Number Plate Recognition

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evaluation he has made of the effectiveness of automatic number plate recognition technology on the detection and prevention of crime. [76930]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office has made £32.5 million capital funding available to the Police Service over a two-year period (2005-07) for the development of automatic number plate recognition (ANPR). This investment addresses the fight against serious and organised crime, terrorism, volume crime and road traffic offending.

The Home Office has commissioned an independent evaluation of the national roll out of ANPR that is due for publication shortly. The report covers a period when ANPR is being mainstreamed in all police forces within England and Wales. The evaluation is expected to show that benefits have accrued as forces gain experience of operating ANPR in conjunction with the National Intelligence Model to target the detection and prevention of crime. Evidence from the previous 'Project Laser' pilot evaluations concluded that officers involved in ANPR achieve more arrests and contribute more offences brought to justice than those involved in general policing.

The ANPR Evaluation Report is due for publication in July 2006 and will be circulated to ANPR stakeholders and a copy will be placed on the Home Office website. (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk)

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73942]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office has taken a number of steps to benefit biodiversity. A national Biodiversity Action Plan (BAP) has been introduced across the public sector operated prisons estate, primarily an overarching document covering its designated sites, which encompass seven SSSIs, one NNR and RAMSAR site and a site within a National Park (HMP Dartmoor). There are now six individual designated sites which have their own BAPs, a further 11 locally biodiversity significant sites also have BAPs and a pilot scheme for eight inner-city/urban BAPs is being implemented. Further plans are now being incorporated that will see biodiversity management plans rolled out across the remaining public sector prison estate.

As well as a BAP network the public sector Prison Service has in place a Statement of Commitment for biodiversity and a Statement of Action for biodiversity which were signed by the director general Phil Wheatley in March 2003. Also supporting this the Prison Service has set up a strategic biodiversity group which involves a "central partnership" incorporating representatives from English Nature, the Wildlife Trusts, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds and the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers.

In support of this work the Prison Service has carried out biological surveys at 21 biodiversity significant sites to identify local flora and fauna for action. The service has now put in place over 43 habitat and species action plans involving over 20 separate lead partners.

In recognition of the work that has been carried out on the prison estate operated by the public sector, in 2005 the Prison Service won the Liveable City award for biodiversity. The Sustainable Development Commission has commended these examples of biodiversity good practice.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to him comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74402]

Mr. Byrne: DEFRA is working with a wide range of partners to develop guidance for public bodies to support the implementation of this duty and will involve all relevant Departments on the development of guidance.

British Citizens (Overseas Conviction)

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many British citizens convicted of imprisonable offences abroad were deported back to the UK in (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005. [76869]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate does not hold any records on the number of people convicted of imprisonable offences abroad who have been deported back to the UK. Anyone encountered by the Immigration Service being deported back to the UK is referred to the police.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many community support officers have been recruited in (a) Gloucestershire and (b) Stroud in each year since the scheme was introduced. [77822]

Mr. McNulty: The following table gives details of the number of police community support officers (PCSOs) recruited by the Gloucestershire Constabulary in 2003-04 and 2004-05. Information for 2005-06 is currently being collected and validated. Recruitment information is available only at force level. The table also shows the number of PCSOs employed by the force and for the Cotswold and Stroud Division, of which Stroud is part.

Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many domestic violence incidents dealt with by police in the past five years involved disputes regarding child contact. [76728]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many domestic violence incidents dealt with by police in (a) England and Wales, (b) Luton and (c) Bedfordshire in the past five years the children concerned were on the child protection register. [76729]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Equatorial Guinea

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what stage the investigations by the Metropolitan police anti-terrorist branch into the attempted coup in Equatorial Guinea and the involvement of Greg Wales, David Tremain, Eli Calil and others has reached. [68319]

John Reid: The conduct of any criminal investigation is a matter for the police. It is the Government's policy not to comment on such matters.

Home Detention Curfews

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners released on home detention curfew have been recalled to prison in each year since 1999, broken down by reason for recall. [76918]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the number of persons recalled to prison from home detention curfew between 1999 and 2004, by reason for recall, can be found in table 10.7 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 17/05: Offender Management Caseload Statistics, England and Wales, 2004. Copies of this publication can be found in the House of Commons Library.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional safeguards he will put in place relating to trafficked children in the Action Plan for Taekling Human Trafficking. [76676]

Mr. Coaker: The Government are currently considering the responses to its consultation on its proposal to publish a National Action Plan for Tackling Human Trafficking. A summary report of responses will be published on 21 June 2006. Whilst a range of views were presented on tackling issues around child trafficking, the Government will fully consider these responses before it decides whether additional safeguards to protect trafficked children are needed. It aims to produce a final UK Action Plan later this year, after further discussions with stakeholders and other Government Departments and agencies, in order to build upon the proposals for action set out in the consultation paper.

Mr. Walter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) crisis centres and (b) safe houses there are in England and Wales where child victims of trafficking can find refuge. [76841]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 15 June 2006]: We are not aware of there being any safe houses specifically for accommodating victims of child trafficking. However, there are accommodation facilities in many locations that will cater for children in need who it is believed may have been trafficked. Planning for children's services is carried out on a locality basis throughout the UK. It is the statutory duty of local authorities under the 1989 Children Act to ensure that safe arrangements are in place to look after individual children at risk, including children from abroad.

It is also the responsibility of the local authority to assess any risk of harm and to arrange for the provision of a suitable range of accommodation for all the children in their area. Any lone child in the UK in contact with any statutory or child welfare agency will be urgently referred to the appropriate local authority. The Home Office National Asylum Support Service (NASS) reimburses local authorities who receive unaccompanied asylum seeking children (UASC) into their care with a total of £140 million p.a. Partnership plans to provide safer arrangements for children who have been trafficked are being incorporated in a Home Office/DfES joint review of how local authorities accommodate children from abroad.

The review will aim to deliver improvements by ensuring UASCs are placed in local authority areas where specialist services are in place—including local authority social workers who can recognise and deal appropriately with UASCs who may have been trafficked to the UK. The review is also designed to increase specialisation, end inconsistencies in treatment and enable the retention and development of expertise.

Illegal Immigration

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 737W, on illegal immigration, what charges were imposed on the air and sea carriers; which carriers were charged; and what penalties were imposed on the carriers. [76936]

Mr. Byrne: Under section 40 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 (as amended by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002), air and sea carriers are liable to a fixed charge of £2,000 for each inadequately documented passenger brought to the UK. In 2005, 2,472 charges were imposed on 157 different carriers. I am unable to disclose details of individual carriers for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) posts, (b) full-time equivalent posts and (c) vacant posts there were at each civil service grade in the immigration and nationality directorate on the most recent date for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [75162]

Mr. Byrne: The information is set out in the following table:

Table: Staff breakdown by headcount and full-time equivalent (FTE)

Mr. Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Lin Homer was appointed director general of the immigration and nationality directorate; where the application for the job vacancy was advertised; how many applications were received for the position; and who made the final decision on the successful candidate. [75849]

Mr. Byrne: Lin Homer was appointed as director general of the immigration and nationality directorate on 27 May 2005 and took up post on 1 August 2005. The post was advertised in the national press including

The Sunday Telegraph, The Observer, The Guardian and The Daily Telegraph. It was also advertised on the Home Office jobs database and the civil service recruitment gateway. There were 40 applicants who responded to the advertisement. The appointment was approved by the Prime Minister with the agreement of the Home Secretary, on the recommendation of the head of the home civil service.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what standard checks are made by the immigration and nationality directorate on its employees' right to work. [76194]

Mr. Byrne: A range of pre-appointment checks are conducted for prospective employees including nationality and residence verification, immigration record checks and national security vetting.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many joint meetings between the officials of the immigration and nationality directorate and Jobcentre Plus have taken place over the past five years. [76195]

Mr. Byrne: Officials, at a variety of levels and locations, in the immigration and nationality directorate meet with their counterparts in Jobcentre Plus on a regular basis. There is no central record of the number or content of these meetings so it is not possible to state how many have taken place over the Past five years.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of staff at the immigration and nationality directorate have been found not to have valid leave to remain in the United Kingdom in each of the past five years. [75202]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 June 2006]: The Department's records show that one member of staff of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate was detected as not having valid leave to remain in the United Kingdom in 2004.

Invest to Save

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to meet (a) officials of local authorities and (b) other stakeholders in receipt of Invest to Save funding to discuss future funding of current projects when initial Home Office financing ends; and if he will make a statement. [75956]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 June 2006]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has no current plans to visit any Invest to Save Budget (ISB) projects or to make a statement. However, he strongly supports the objectives of the ISB programme to create sustainable improvements in the capacity to deliver public services in a more joined-up manner. An example of a project that has continued to receive funding from the Home Office is the joint working pilot between the National Missing Persons Helpline and the Metropolitan police from ISB round four.

Knife Crime

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to reduce the incidence of knife crime in Peterborough constituency; and if he will make a statement. [77663]

Mr. McNulty: On 24 May, working closely with ACPO, we launched the first nationwide knife amnesty in 10 years. Cambridgeshire Police are participating in this amnesty, which provides an opportunity for the safe disposal of unwanted knives and sharp instruments. The amnesty highlights the dangers of carrying knives particularly to young people. The amnesty runs until the end of June, following which police will undertake robust enforcement as well as educational and other programmes.

The Violent Crime Reduction Bill, currently before Parliament, includes measures to reduce knife crime, including the introduction of a new offence of using someone to mind a weapon; raising the age at which someone can be sold a knife from 16 to 18; and providing powers for head teachers to search pupils for weapons. We are also working closely with community organisations, providing support through the Connected Fund for gun, knife and gang related projects and supporting organisations such as Be Safe, which runs a programme of education for young people on the risks of carrying knives.

Mosques

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to support mosques in preventing their use by extreme fringe groups. [74901]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 6 June 2006]: A public consultation on taking powers to intervene in places of worship threatened by extremist activity concluded that self regulation was usually effective. Government have provided encouragement and support to the creation of a Mosques and Imams National Advisory Board. It is expected to be launched in late June.

National Asylum Support Service

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) properties and (b) bed spaces are available for use under National Asylum Support Service contracts, broken down by local authority; how many of these were (i) occupied and (ii) unoccupied at the end of March 2006; and what the mean cost was of each (A) bed space and (B) property as at the end of March 2006, broken down by local authority. [71917]

Mr. Byrne: Under its new accommodation contracts the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) no longer procures or maintains properties or bed spaces.

Neighbourhood Charters

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that the neighbourhood charters will be delivered by service providers. [77328]

Mr. Woolas: I have been asked to reply.

As set out in the respect action plan, published in January 2006, we want to give every area the chance to have a neighbourhood charter. We intend to set out further detail about this in the Local Government White Paper.

Paladin Recommendations

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing the Paladin recommendations proposed by the Metropolitan Police in 2003, with particular reference to the issue of unaccompanied minors entering the UK through London Heathrow. [74836]

Mr. Byrne: Since publication of the report we have made significant progress. In particular the immigration and nationality directorate's (IND) children's taskforce is tackling a number of the recommendations. These include:

the provision of guidance to staff on identifying and dealing with children in need; developing processes for working with other agencies on child protection issues;

the provision of specialist training for IND staff;

identifying ways to improve information received from abroad, child protection officers are now based at Heathrow airport and both child protection officers and social service staff are based at the Croydon asylum screening unit to ensure a more joined up approach.

Parliamentary Questions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to questions by the hon. Member for Selly Oak (a) 23089, tabled on 25 October, on identity cards, and (b) 20867, tabled on 18 October, on passports. [52459]

Joan Ryan: I answered my right hon. Friend the Member for Selly Oak's question in relation to passports (20867) on 27 February 2006, Official Report, column 95W. her question in relation to identity cards (23089) was answered on 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 829W.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to question 63206, tabled by the hon. Member for Isle of Wight on 29 March 2006. [73790]

Mr. Byrne: I replied to the hon. Member on 6 June 2006, Official Report, column 268W.

Police Information

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance was in operation in 1994 regarding the storage and destruction of information by police forces relating to detected crimes; [76145]

(2) under what circumstances police forces may destroy historic information relating to detected crimes; [76146]

(3) what guidance he has issued on the length of time that data collected by police forces relating to detected crimes should be held before being destroyed. [76147]

Mr. McNulty: No central guidance was in operation in 1994 concerning the storage and destruction of information relating to detected crimes. Forces were, however, subject to the relevant legislation that was in place at that time and may have issued their own internal guidance. A Code of Practice on the Management of Police Information (MOPI) was published in July 2005 and came into effect in November 2005. This requires police information to be periodically reviewed and consideration given to its disposal or retention in line with criteria set out in guidance. Guidance to accompany the Code of Practice, agreed with the Information Commissioner, was published in March 2006. This requires that information be deleted where there is no longer a policing purpose for retaining it, i.e. it is no longer necessary; it is no longer adequate or up to date; or it is excessive or not proportionate to the risk.

The guidance states that all records will normally be held for a minimum of six years, but lists a number of issues that forces should consider when deciding whether to retain records for longer. The MOP guidance states that historical data—which it defines as anything recorded prior to the date that the guidance came into effect—must be reviewed when the subject of a record comes to police attention, and that resources dedicated to reviewing other historical records should focus on information relating to certain public protection matters.

Retention of information must also be in line with relevant legislation including the Human Rights Act 1998, the Data Protection Act 1998, the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 and the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Prisons

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been held in crowded conditions in each month since November 2004; and what percentage of the total prisoner population this represents in each case. [77078]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The table shows the number of prisoners and the percentage of the total prisoner population held in crowded conditions in England and Wales, since November 2004.

Number of prisoners that have been held in crowded conditions in each month since November 2004 and the percentage of the total prisoner population this represents in each case

March 2006	18,199	23.6
April 2006	18,210	23.7
May 2006	18,874	24.3

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the prison population has been in each of the last five years. [77154]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Information on the number of prisoners held in prison establishments from 1994 to 2004 can be found in table 8.1 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 17/05: Offender Management Caseload Statistics, England and Wales, 2004. Copies of this publication can be found in the House of Commons Library. The prison population on 30 June 2005 was 76,190.

Probation

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) number of staff and (b) financial resources required to implement end to end offender management in the probation service; and if he will make a statement. [77077]

Mr. Sutcliffe: We expect offender management to be resource-neutral over the long- term, with any costs balanced by savings arising from the benefits of the system. There will be start-up costs in 2006-07 and 2007-08, totalling some £8 million, before full-savings start to be seen. The costs translate into around 90 posts in 2006-07 and 120 in 2007-08.

Probation Hostels

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 July 2005 to the hon. Member for Winchester, Official Report, column 1506W, on probation hostels, how many places were available in probation hostels in England and Wales on the latest date for which figures are available; and how many were occupied by high risk offenders on that date. [76914]

Mr. Sutcliffe: As at 28 February 2006, 2,163 bed spaces were available in generic approved premises, formerly bail and probation hotels. Of these, 1,256 were occupied by offenders who were assessed as high or very high risk of harm to the public. The figures do not include data for the newly opened prospects hostels which are a specialist resource for offenders with substance misuse problems.

Reoffending Target

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department is on track to meet its public service agreement target of reducing reoffending by five per cent. by 2006. [76899]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The latest formal assessment on progress is set out in the Home Office Autumn Performance Report 2005 (Cm 6707). Since this assessment juvenile reoffending results from 2004 have been made available. The report shows the reoffending rates within one year for juvenile offenders who receive pre-court disposals, non-custodial disposals and those released from custody in the first quarter of 2004. The results show a 3.8 per cent reduction in reoffending when compared with the same period in 1997 and a reduction of 1.4 per cent. when compared with 2000. The full results are available on line at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs06/hosb1006.pdf. The Government remain committed to reducing reoffending by 5 per cent. by 2006 and to further reductions in the future.

Shoplifting

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps his Department is taking to promote collaboration between police forces in England and Wales and private security offices based in retail stores to help reduce incidents of shoplifting; [77458]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to reduce shoplifting in retail stores; [77459]

(3) how many people were (a) arrested and (b) convicted for shoplifting in the South Wales police area in each of the last two years. [77457]

Mr. McNulty: Most recent figures held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of defendants found guilty of shoplifting in the South Wales police force area in 2003 and 2004 are 1,671 for 2003 and 1,712 in 2004. The information requested on arrests is not available centrally. There are a number of ways in which private security offices may engage with local police forces. Usually this is through active involvement with crime reduction partnerships, many of which are tailored specifically to address the needs of the business sector. The Home Office has supported the work of the British Retail Consortium in developing business crime reduction partnerships, and has provided over £900,000 of funding for them to set up and run the Action Against Business Crime (AABC) Group. This group provides central co-ordination and support for a national network of business crime reduction partnerships in town centres, shopping centres and industrial estates across England and Wales in their work to prevent business crime. The Home Office also encourages businesses to set up 'Business Watch' schemes in their area, or to consider involvement in the business improvement district (BID) scheme. There is an accredited Business Crime Partnership in the 'Safer Swansea' Community Safety Partnership. One of the first actions of the partnership was to set up a panel which included local businesses and independent members to consider whether those caught shoplifting should be banned from the city centre shopping area. The scheme has been successful and will be rolled out to other retail sites in the borough. Additionally, South Wales police have been actively promoting the ShopWatch scheme in Swansea, which encourages shop staff to train as special constables in their area of employment.

Stop and Search Records

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what (a) computer systems and (b) databases of the Metropolitan police stop and search records are maintained; and if he will make a statement. [69795]

Mr. McNulty: The Commissioner is responsible for the day-to-day operational management of the force. I will therefore redirect the hon. Lady's query to the Metropolitan Police Service.

Yarl's Wood Detention Centre

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much it cost to keep (a) a child and (b) a family of two adults and two children in Yarl's Wood detention centre for one week in the last 12 months. [75893]

Mr. Byrne: Services at Yarl's Wood are provided by private contractors and as such the information requested is strictly commercial and confidential.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Benyon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when the 77 outstanding applications from Zimbabwe for indefinite leave to remain under the UK Ancestral Visa Route which have been awaiting the outcome of the recent fraud inquiry will be processed. [76974]

(2) To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the 12 applications from Zimbabwe for indefinite leave to remain under the UK Ancestral Visa route which have been refused were refused because of fraud. [76975]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that 52 applications for indefinite leave to remain under the UK Ancestral Visa route remain under consideration. Completion dates depend on the time required for proper and thorough scrutiny. Our database does not provide details of individual reasons why cases have been refused.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the number of people who are entitled to, but not receiving (a) pension credit, (b) income support, (c) housing benefit, (d) council tax benefit and (e) other benefits; and if he will make a statement. [75826]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer I gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for North Tyneside (Mr. Byers) on 3 March 2006, Official Report, column 1034W.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the planned end-date is for the Benefit Processing Replacement Programme (Watch 2); and what the planned (a) level and (b) timetable of relevant capital expenditure is. [72234]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Mel Groves:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the current planned end date for the Benefits Processing Replacement Programme (WATCh2); and what is the planned level and timetable of relevant capital expenditure. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Acting Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

A Departmental Investment Committee recently approved funding for the completion of the WATCh2 Projects and for the Benefits Processing Replacement Programme (BPRP) to develop its overall scope and delivery timetable by June 2006, having regard to overall business priorities including the impact of the recently announced Employment and Support Allowance.

Furthermore an independent review has been commissioned by the Permanent Secretary to examine the Department's integrated programme. It is expected that recommendations from this review will influence the decision for further investment in BPRP. Until such work has been completed we are not in a position to confirm the overall BPRP delivery timeline, nor the planned level and timetable of relevant capital expenditure.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress is being made in improving processing times for disability benefit claims. [77622]

Mrs. McGuire: Processing times for disability living allowance (DLA) and attendance allowance (AA) claims have improved steadily over the last four years. For DLA, it has gone from 42 working days in 2002-03, to 34.5 working days in 2005-06. For AA claims, it has gone from 24.2 working days in 2002-03 to 17.9 working days in 2005-06.

The Disability and Carers Service has achieved this by identification, development and sharing of best practice, the continued exploitation of information technology, and the streamlining of business processes. This has secured continuous improvement in our service delivery to customers together with improved efficiency.

The average processing time for incapacity benefit claims for the year ending March 2006 was 16.3 days, against a benchmark of 19 days. From April 2006, incapacity benefit processing times have been incorporated into a new Jobcentre Plus target covering processing times for incapacity benefit, jobseeker's allowance and income support. Performance for incapacity benefit in April 2006 was 17.3 days against a target of 18 days.

Jobcentre Plus has a programme of work to improve the way that it processes all benefit claims. It is addressing variations in processing times in specific locations and taking action to clear backlogs.

For industrial injuries disablement benefit, the Department aims to clear 90 per cent. of claims within 175 days. For the year ending March 2006, 96.1 per cent. of claims were processed within 175 days. In April 2006, 97.6 per cent of claims were processed within 175 days.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of (a) the percentage of housing benefit claimants whose 2005-06 payment was higher than that for 2006-07 and (b) the savings accrued to his Department from the changes. [75359]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of incapacity benefit recipients in (a) Coventry, South and (b) the West Midlands region had a full medical examination in each of the last five years. [77623]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to reply to the recommendations contained in the Work and Pensions Select Committee Report on Incapacity Benefits and Pathways to Work. [76122]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We intend to respond to Third Report of the Work and Pensions Select Committee session 2005-06 on Incapacity Benefits and Pathways to Work within two months of its publication in line with the Government's commitment on responses to Select Committee reports.

Biological Diversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department plans to take to monitor the extent to which public bodies which report to him comply, from October, with their duty to conserve biodiversity in exercising their functions, under section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006. [74393]

Mr. Plaskitt: Under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act 2006, all public bodies have a duty to have regard to the conservation of biodiversity in the exercising of their functions. There is no statutory obligation on Departments to monitor the extent to which public bodies comply with this duty. However, we understand Defra is working with a wide range of partners to develop guidance for public bodies to support the implementation of this duty and will involve all relevant Departments on the development of guidance.

Building on the New Deal Programme

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent progress has taken place in the development of the building on new deal programme. [69446]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We are still considering the timing of implementation of the building on new deal pilots.

Child Poverty

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans the Government have to review the way they measure child poverty and those who qualify as the poorest within the category of families living below 60 per cent. of median income since publication of the most recent figures on child poverty. [67282]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Our long-term strategy to meet the child poverty target remains as set out in 'Opportunity for all' and in the Child Poverty Review, which was published alongside the 2004 Spending Review White Paper.

A consultation around measuring child poverty was published in 'Measuring Child Poverty' in December 2003. This outlines the Government's measure of UK child poverty for the long term and will be used to measure progress against the 2010 target.

This consists of:

Absolute low income—to measure whether the poorest families are seeing their incomes rise in real terms;

Relative low income—to measure whether the poorest families are keeping pace with the growth of incomes in the economy as a whole; and Material deprivation and low income combined—to provide a wider measure of people's living standards and includes a higher low-income threshold of 70 per cent. of median income.

From next year, we will be collating those material deprivation figures. The material deprivation tier will not only give a wider measure of people's living standards, but it will also capture elements of persistent and severe poverty, as highlighted in the final conclusions of the child poverty consultation.

We remain firmly committed to our challenging goals to halve and then eradicate child poverty, and we are not resting on our laurels. We are currently re-examining our strategy for meeting the 2010 target, including a reinforcement of our labour market policies, complemented by increases in tax credits, and further improvements in public services.

Child Support Agency

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the current backlog is of child support cases waiting to be assessed. [75806]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. Given that he is currently on leave, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the current backlog is of child support cases waiting to be assessed.

In March 2006, there were around 304,000 cases that had yet to receive an assessment or calculation.

Please note that this number is different from the total number of cases waiting to be cleared, which stood at 333,000 in March 2006. This is because new scheme cases are only considered cleared when they have received a calculation and have a payment schedule in place. In March 2006, there were around 29,000 new scheme cases that had received a calculation, but were awaiting a payment schedule.

Although the total volume of uncleared cases fell by 8% between January 2005 and March 2006, the Agency recognises that this remains unacceptably high. The Agency therefore has a 2006/07 target to ensure that, by March 2007, the volume of new scheme uncleared applications outstanding at March 2006 is reduced by 25%.

I hope you find this helpful.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many applicants under the old Child Support Agency system have applied to be transferred to the new system; [75808]

(2) what the cost would be of transferring all applicants under the old child support system to the new system; and if he will make a statement. [75809]

Mr. Plaskitt: There is no provision for applying for transfer from the old to the new child support schemes and for that reason information is not available. Legislation only allows transfer if a case has prescribed links to a new scheme application.

The cost of transfer would depend on the volume of cases transferred, which in turn will be impacted by the date of transfer. This is because old scheme cases are continuously reducing in number as a result of both natural attrition and reactive (linked case) conversion.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents assessed under the old system of child support are still making payments to their children. [75812]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. Given that he is currently on leave, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many parents assessed under the old system of child support are still making payments to their children.

The Agency records information in terms of cases rather parents. My answer is therefore provided on this basis.

At the end of March 2006, there were 305,000 old scheme cases on the old computer system (CSCS) where a Full Maintenance Assessment had been carried out, and a positive maintenance liability had been established. Of these:

Payment was received in 152,000 cases.

A further 61,000 cases had a Maintenance Direct arrangement in place. This means that although the Agency has established the appropriate amount due, the non-resident parent will pay the parent with care directly, without the need for the Agency to collect money.

In addition, there were 86,000 old scheme cases where a Full Maintenance Assessment had been carried out, and a positive maintenance liability had been established that were operating on the new computer system (CS2). Of these:

Payment was received in 34,000 cases.

A further 9,000 cases had a Maintenance Direct arrangement in place.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a further statement on progress towards overcoming the computer problems at the Child Support Agency. [76461]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, if he will make a further statement on progress towards overcoming the computer problems at the Child Support Agency.

The new child support scheme was introduced on 3 March 2003. It has been well publicised that there has been a number of technical problems with the performance of the new computer system (CS2) from this date.

A great deal of work has been carried out over recent years to improve the stability of the new computer system (CS2) and operational performance has improved to the point where contracted service levels are now consistently being met.

We are making good progress to remedy the remaining problems with the new computer system and future IT releases are planned during 2006 and 2007 to resolve various system performance issues and build on the improvements already made. In addition there are a number of planned enhancements to the computer system that form part of the programme to implement the three-year Operational Improvement Plan.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many non-resident parents receiving benefits which the Child Support Agency has a claim against, are not paying the minimum payment required under the new scheme. [76834]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to my right hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many non-resident parents currently receiving benefits which the Child Support Agency has a claim against, are not paying the minimum payment required under the new scheme.

The Agency records information in terms of cases rather parents. My answer is therefore provided on this basis.

In order to obtain the benefit status of non-resident parents associated with new scheme cases, it has been necessary to match data from the Agency's administrative systems with data from the benefit records system administered by Jobcentre Plus. The latter set of administrative data is published quarterly, and the latest information available is for November 2005.

At the end of November 2005, there were 70,000 new scheme cases involving a non-resident parent (NRP) in receipt of Income Support, Jobseeker's Allowance or Incapacity Benefit in which maintenance was due. Of these, maintenance was not received from 38,000 cases.

It should be noted that there are also a small number of Non Resident Parents (the number of which cannot be quantified) who receive other benefits against which the Agency has a claim; namely—Retirement Pension, Pension Credit, Bereavement Allowance, Widowed Parents Allowance/Pension, Incapacity Benefit, Carer's Allowance, Severe Disablement Allowance, Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit, Maternity Allowance, War Disablement or War Widows Pension, also certain training allowances. However, it is not possible to provide information on maintenance collected from these cases.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency cases remain to be transferred from the old scheme to the new scheme. [76835]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to my right hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds dated 19 June 2006:

In reply to your recent parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive. Given that he is currently on leave, I am responding on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many Child Support Agency cases remain to be transferred from the old scheme to the new scheme.

At the end of March 2006 there were 923,000 old scheme cases. There were 600,000 cases on the old computer system (CSCS). There are 322,000 cases on the new computer system (CS2); these are cases that have been reactively migrated due to being linked to the new scheme cases.

Of those old scheme cases that had been reactively migrated from the old system to the new system, we estimate that around 41,000 cases had relevant links to the new scheme cases and have now been converted. We estimate that a further 48,000 cases also have relevant links and are currently awaiting conversion.

I hope you find this helpful.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Child Support Agency is able to require mobile telephone companies to make known the addresses of parents not paying child support. [76940]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 13 June 2006]: Client address details held by mobile phone companies are classed as 'communications data' under the Regulations of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 (RIPA) and can only be disclosed to an authorised body within this legislation and in relation to a specific statutory purpose. The Child Support Agency is not a RIPA authorised body and is therefore unable to request such information.

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the companies which were paid consultancy fees by his Department in 2005-06; how much each was paid; and what each of the companies was used to accomplish. [69702]

Mr. Jim Murphy: A list of companies and the total expenditure on consultancy fees paid by the Department in 2005-06 will be available in July 2006. However, the Department is unable to provide details of each individual engagement the company was used for without a clerical examination of all records and this would incur disproportionate costs.

Correspondence

Mr. Clope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when his Department will respond to the letter of 12 August 2005 to the office at Cotlands Road, Bournemouth about Mrs. M. Hind. [67702]

Mr. Plaskitt: A reply was given to the hon. Member on 15 May 2006.

Departmental Computer Security

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the security of chip and PIN access to his Department's computer systems; and how many breaches of that security there have been since its introduction. [75028]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Department does not offer a "Chip and PIN" service for access to the Department's computer systems. The term "Chip and PIN" is normally used in the context of high street retail purchases.

Payments made to citizens via post offices can be made using a "Chip and PIN" capability, but this is managed by a third party.

Access to internal departmental systems is controlled using a desktop smartcard infrastructure which is a completely separate device to that used to enable citizen payments. The DWP security incident recording database records details of incidents investigated by DWP. There are no incidents recorded where the "Chip and PIN" security has been compromised.

Disabled Job Seekers

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what help is available to disabled job seekers from disability employment advisers and other Jobcentre Plus staff relating to job application forms. [75479]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide my hon. Friend with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what help is available to disabled job seekers from disability employment advisers and other Jobcentre Plus staff relating to job application forms. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Any disabled customer having difficulties in filling in an application form can ask their adviser for assistance. If the adviser is unavailable someone else will be found to assist the customer.

If appropriate, advisers can refer customers to New Deal for Disabled People Job Brokers or to Programme Centres which offer help tailored to participants' individual needs. Programme Centre provision is designed to help participants improve their jobsearch skills and increase their chances of finding a job. This can include help with letters of application, application forms, CV preparation, preparation for interviews and mock interviews. Job Brokers can provide similar assistance.

I hope this is helpful.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has spent on the provision of free television licences for over 75-year-olds in each of the last five years. [77532]

James Purnell: The information is in the following table.

	Expenditure (£ million)
2001-02	368
2002-03	385
2003-04	410
2004-05	435
2005-06	461

1. These are UK figures.
2. Figures are the amounts paid to the BBC and exclude administration costs.
3. Figures rounded to the nearest million pounds.

Job Outcome Targeting

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the introduction of job outcome targeting. [76516]

Mr. Jim Murphy: A new Job Outcome Target was introduced for Jobcentre Plus from 10 April 2006 replacing the previous Job Entry Target.

This target was announced in a Written Ministerial Statement on 30 March 2006 and detail of the new Job Outcome Target is contained in the Jobcentre Plus Business Plan which was placed in the House of Commons Library on 30 March 2006.

Jobcentre Plus

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what audits have been conducted to evaluate the accessibility of JobCentre Plus premises for disabled people at (a) Burslem and (b) Hanley offices; and when such audits were undertaken. [68314]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking what audits have been conducted to evaluate the accessibility of Jobcentre Plus premises for disabled people at Burslem and Hanley offices; and when such audits were undertaken. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

As part of the process to convert Jobcentres to Jobcentre Plus offices an 'accessibility evaluation' is carried out when we consider the design of the office. When planning a new office or new layout, we take full account of the Disability Discrimination Act and ensure any recommendations, such as ramps or automatic doors, are built into the final design of the office. All of our new, purpose built offices comply with building regulations that cover all access issues.

We carried out audits at Cannon Street, Hanley and Burslem Jobcentres in December 2003 following the creation of Jobcentre Plus. Any adjustments recommended at that time were considered alongside our roll out plans for conversion to Jobcentre Plus offices, taking into account the Disability Discrimination Act requirements. We completed an audit at our office in Stafford Street, Hanley in June 1999 and all resulting recommendations were implemented.

As you know, our office in Stafford Street, Hanley is to become a Benefit Delivery Centre and will not be open to the public. The Jobcentres in Cannon Street, Hanley and Burslem are due to close when our new purpose built Jobcentre Plus office in Huntbach Street, Hanley opens in 2007.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how Jobcentre Plus handles the requirements of jobseekers who have difficulty in using the telephone. [76316]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how Jobcentre Plus handles the requirements of jobseekers who have difficulty in using the telephone. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

As part of our service modernisation we encourage all new claims to be made over the telephone. However we recognise this is not suitable for everyone. We have put alternative arrangements in place, including a face-to-face interview at the local Jobcentre, or a home visit if this is more appropriate.

Additionally, we can arrange for a third party/nominated advocate to represent the customer on the telephone. For people who are deaf or hard of hearing, a Textphone/Minicom service is available, or we can arrange for a British sign language interpreter to be present at a face to face interview.

These alternative arrangements are set out in our leaflet, 'Jobcentre Plus?Our Service Standards', a copy of which is enclosed.

All Jobcentre Plus staff should receive diversity and equality training and this ensures that they are aware of these options.

Jobcentre Plus is about to commission a programme of research to look at whether certain groups, such as customers with specific physical and/or learning difficulties have problems making contact. The results of this research will be available by early summer 2007.

I hope this is helpful.

New Deal for 50 Plus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on recent changes in the financing of the New Deal for 50 Plus scheme; and what assessment he has made of levels of participation in the scheme since the changes were introduced. [69277]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Since its introduction in April 2000, the only significant change that has occurred to New Deal 50 plus funding was in April 2003 when the New Deal 50 plus Employment Credit, paid by Jobcentre Plus, was replaced by the 50 plus element of the Working Tax Credit, paid by H.M. Revenue and Customs. Incorporating the in-work incentive for over-50s into the tax credit system ensured that those households on the lowest income received the most support, rather than flat-rate payments being made regardless of personal circumstances.

Until March 2003, Employment Credit payments formed the bulk of the New Deal 50 plus programme spend, together with the New Deal 50 plus in-work Training Grant. In 2003-04 the programme spend for New Deal 50 plus still included the remaining Employment Credit payments but, by the 2004-05 financial year, all the New Deal 50 plus Employment Credit starts had completed and all that remained was the spend on the training grant.

Centrally recorded data on starts to the New Deal 50 plus programme are only available from January 2004 onwards. Information before this is not available as the data were not centrally held.

From the start of the programme to February 2006, New Deal 50 plus has been successful in helping more than 150,000 people into jobs.

Parental Support

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the potential cost savings which would result from reducing the maximum age of the youngest child entitling lone parents to receive income support to (a) 15, (b) 14, (c) 13, (d) 12 and (e) 11 years in each financial year from 2005-06 to 2009-10. [75429]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Information is not available from which to make such an estimate.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will reply to Question 63316 from the hon. Member for Portsmouth South, tabled on 29 March 2006, on Post Office Card Accounts. [78095]

Mr. Plaskitt: A reply was given to the hon. Member on 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 922W.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average size of the caseload for personal advisers will be once Pathways to Work is fully rolled out. [77241]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 13 June 2006]: The information requested is not available.

Personal adviser caseloads vary according to the adviser's knowledge and experience of advisory work and the client group. Therefore decisions about an indicial Adviser's caseload can only be decided at local level.

We want to ensure Pathways to Work advisers focus their efforts on helping and supporting people on incapacity benefits into work. Managers in current Pathways to Work pilot areas regularly monitor adviser caseloads to ensure they are manageable and enable customers to maximise their work opportunities. This will continue when Pathways is rolled out nationally.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will break down by main budget heading the £360 million annual cost to roll-out Pathways to Work. [77242]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 13 June 2006]: The £360 million is to cover a range of welfare reforms as set out in the Green Paper, primarily Pathways to Work. We are committed to rolling out Pathways to Work across the country by 2008. We will also seek to ensure our proposals deliver the service in innovative and more cost-effective ways as we roll out to the rest of the country, learning from the experience of Jobcentre Plus and the private and voluntary sector. We are currently working through the specific detail of the funding plans for Pathways, which we will share more widely in due course.

Pension Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners he estimates were entitled to pension credit in (a) 2003-04, (b) 2004-05 and (c) 2005-06; how many were receiving the pension credit in each year; how many (i) are entitled to and (ii) are receiving the credit in 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [70284]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested. Information that is available is as follows.

Table 1 contains estimates of eligibility in 2003-04 and 2004-05 and projected estimates of eligibility in 2005-06 and 2006-07.

Table 1: Number of pensioners estimated to be eligible for pension credit

	Numbers eligible (million)
2003-04	3.8 to 4.3
2004-05	3.7 to 4.2

Table 1: Number of pensioners estimated to be eligible for pension credit

	Numbers eligible (million)
2005-06	3.8 to 4.3
2006-07	3.8 to 4.3

Notes:
1. Estimates of the numbers eligible are given as ranges in order to account for possible biases inherent in estimates from data that is less than perfect. They also take account of the effects of sampling variation.
2. Estimates cover all those aged 60 and over in the private household population of Great Britain. The data source is the Family Resources Survey.
3. As pension credit was introduced mid-way through 2003-04, estimates of the numbers entitled in 2003-04 are only based on six months' data, and should therefore be treated with caution.
4. For the purposes of this analysis, the unit of analysis is the benefit unit. This is either a single person aged at least 60 years old or, if a couple, both will be termed pensioners if one is aged at least 60 years old. This is consistent with both the definition used in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-up" publications, and with the fact any individual aged 60 or over is entitled to pension credit.
5. The data source for eligibility estimates is the Family Resources Survey. Estimates of eligibility for 2005-06 and 2006-07 are based on the Family Resources Survey data for 2003-04 and 2004-05, with incomes and benefits projected forward into the future in order to estimate the eligibility for each pensioner household on the survey. They are calibrated to the 2004-05 National Statistics estimates of non-eligibility to pension credit, which adjust 2004-05 Family Resources Survey data to take account of possible biases in reporting.
6. The latest estimates of the take-up of pension credit can be found in the DWP report entitled "Pension Credit Estimates of Take-Up in 2004/2005". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.
7. Estimates have been rounded to the nearest hundred thousand.
8. Projections of eligibility may be adjusted following publication of future editions of the National Statistics take-up estimates.

Table 2: Number of pensioners receiving pension credit in 2003-04 and 2004-05

	Numbers receiving (million)
2003-04	2.5
2004-05	2.6

Notes:
1. The numbers receiving in 2003-04 and 2004-05 are derived from the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study, and relate to the average number of recipients over the period. They are consistent with the figures used to calculate National Statistics estimates of take-up, and so exclude cases in non-private households, and take account of any backdated awards that were paid in respect of 2004-05. Estimates presented here will therefore differ from other published sources.
2. Projected take-up figures are indicative only and not comparable to the published take-up figures for 2003-04 and 2004-05, which include backdated awards of pension credit. Forecasts of future recipients are based on extrapolation of administrative data from the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study. 3. The latest estimates of the take-up of pension credit can be found in the DWP report entitled "Pension Credit Estimates of Take-Up in 2004/2005". Copies of the publication are available in the Library.
4. Estimates relate to private households only.
5. All figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred thousand.

Current forecasts suggest that around 2.5 million pensioners may be in receipt of Pension Credit in 2005-06 and around 2.7 million in 2006-07. However, these projections are indicative only and do not include adjustments for backdated awards so are not directly comparable with the take-up estimates for 2003-04 and 2004-05.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the take-up rate of pension credit was among pensioners in Newport, East in (a) 2003-04 and (b) the latest year for which figures are available. [77903]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested. Estimates of eligibility, and therefore of take-up, are not available below the level of Great Britain. Actual figures for receipt of pension credit at constituency level are available.

The number of households in receipt of pension credit in Newport, East is in the following table.

	Household recipients
November 2003	2,570
November 2004	3,380
November 2005	3,540

Notes:
1. Caseloads are rounded to the nearest 10.
2. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.
3. Recipients are those people who claim pension credit either on behalf of themselves only or on behalf of a household. This number is equal to the number of households in receipt of pension credit.

Pensions

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his oral statement of 25 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1648-70, on pensions reform, whether the Department plans to seek to recover pension monies from private companies whose financial dealings were a major contributory factor in the collapse of an occupational pension scheme. [76829]

James Purnell: Legislation provides that, when a salary-related occupational pension scheme winds up, any deficiency in the pension fund becomes a debt on the employer. This is designed to improve the protection offered to scheme members when these events occur. It provides a mechanism for the trustees to be able to take action to pursue the debt. It also means that employers will be liable for a debt should the scheme be underfunded. The legislation is not intended to prejudice any other remedy the trustees may have in respect of any deficiency in the scheme's assets.

The Government believe that solvent employers should ensure that there are sufficient funds in schemes which are winding up to meet the full costs of the rights accrued by scheme members. Regulations came into force on 15 March 2004 that introduce a "full buy-out" requirement to ensure that where a scheme is wound up and its sponsoring employer is solvent, the scheme members are more likely to receive the pensions they expect. Trustees can utilise the regulations if their scheme started to wind up on or after 11 June 2003. From 15 February 2005, regulations introduced a "full buy-out" requirement for schemes whose sponsoring employer became insolvent.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the total cost of full compensation for those covered by the recommendations in the Parliamentary Ombudsman's report "Trusting the pensions promise". [77338]

James Purnell: The estimated cost of full compensation for those covered by the Ombudsman's report was published in the Government's response to that report, laid before Parliament on Tuesday 6 June. This document may be found in the Library.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of private sector employees with final salary pension schemes in (a) 1997 and (b) 2005. [69458]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available for 1997 and 2005. The following table shows the estimated number of private sector employees who are members of defined-benefit pension schemes since 1991:

	Number of active members of defined-benefit schemes, (million)
1991	5.5
1995	5.1
2000	4.6
2004	3.6

Notes:
1. All figures are estimates and are taken from the Government Actuary's Department Occupational Pension Scheme Survey, years 2004, 2000, 1995 and 1991. 2004 is the latest year for which data are available. The coverage of the survey is the UK.
2. Defined-benefit schemes are schemes where all the benefits (other than benefits secured by additional voluntary contributions) are on a defined-benefit basis. Such benefits are most commonly based on factors such as earnings or length of service. The survey does not separately identify final salary schemes, which are a type of defined-benefit scheme.
3. Estimates include both open and closed schemes.
4. Private sector schemes are those schemes which are not classified as public sector by the Pension Regulator.

Personal Capability Assessment

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the revised Personal Capability Assessment for incapacity benefit will apply to existing claimants who are subject to an ad hoc case check as referred to on page 48 of the Green Paper, "A New Deal for Welfare". [75384]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The consultation exercise on the Green Paper ended on 21 April and we will be announcing our proposals shortly.

Post Office Card Accounts

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what occasions (a) officials from his Department and its agencies and (b) persons acting on their behalf have undertaken cold-calling exercises to members of the public (i) asking for their bank details, (ii) encouraging them to switch their Post Office card account to a bank account and (iii) discouraging them from having a Post Office card account; how many members of the public were called for each purpose; and who authorised the making of such calls. [73877]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department for Work and Pensions ran a number of small-scale Post Office card account pilots between 13 February and 10 March 2006. The pilots tested various approaches to moving people from having their benefit or pension paid into a Post Office card account to payments into a bank account.

The pilots were authorised by Ministers. I informed the House of the pilots in a written answer on 15 February 2006, Official Report, column 2187W. They were fully in keeping with the contract between my Department and Post Office Limited which states: "The POCA is intended to be an interim step for Account Holders who will be encouraged by both parties to migrate to Bank Accounts which provide services and opportunities not available through the POCA". I have also placed a copy of the relevant part of the contract in the Library.

The pilots involved:

not promoting the option to open a new Post Office card account for around 3,000 customers making a new claim for jobseeker's allowance, state pension or pension credit; writing to around 25,000 customers paid by Post Office card account asking them to supply account details. This pilot involved some follow-up telephone calls to check if customers had received their letter and to see if they had any questions or needed help or support to open a new account; and writing to around 1,500 customers who have one benefit paid into a Post Office card account and another into a bank account saying that we intended to pay both their benefits into their bank account.

A month on to after the pilots had finished we re-contacted around 350 people across the three pilot groups to learn more about their experience.

We have just finished evaluating the results and have shared the results with Post Office Limited. I will place a summary report of the findings in the Library shortly.

Prison Release

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action his Department is taking to improve the job prospects of those recently released from prison. [76514]

Mr. Jim Murphy: We offer support to offenders in a number of ways to improve their job prospects. Employment and benefit surgeries in prisons provide prisoners with interviews with Jobcentre Plus advisers prior to release to discuss employment and training opportunities. Our Freshstart programme guarantees a pre-arranged interview for prisoners who wish to claim Jobseeker's Allowance as soon as possible on release at which jobs, training and benefits are discussed.

Offenders, together with others facing the most severe disadvantage in the labour market, are included in one of the priority groups within the Jobcentre Plus target and performance structure. This ensures our advisers are encouraged to provide particular help and support to people who have additional barriers to work. Because of their disadvantage in the labour market, offenders can also gain early entry into our new deal programme, which can provide them with the training and skills needed to get a job.

Our progress2work LinkUP programme is designed to help those with multiple disadvantage, including offenders and ex-offenders, overcome the particular employment barriers they face. Jobcentre Plus advisers and other relevant agencies refer customers to specialist providers who work with prisons and local probation services to encourage offenders to make use of their services. The programme helps people get and sustain employment and is currently available in 15 Jobcentre Plus districts. We expect provision to be available in a further six districts by the end of the summer.

In partnership with the Home Office and the Department for Education and Skills, the December 2005 Green Paper, 'Reducing Re-offending Through Skills and Employment', announced proposals for further work. For example, working with local employers to help offenders into jobs, and supporting Jobcentre Plus to focus on helping offenders into work rather then placing them on benefits.

Shared Care Orders

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many parents in England are under a shared care order; [76133]

(2) how many parents under a shared care order are required to pay maintenance. [76134]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 13 June 2006]: This information is not available. However in March 2006 around one in five cases with a calculation on the new child support scheme report that there is shared care of a child (of at least one night a week).

Social Fund

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many telephone calls have been (a) answered and (b) missed by the new telephone hotline service for social fund loans in the south-west since its inception; how urgent inquiries are dealt with; and why the service is not free to the user. [72365]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning how many telephone calls have been (a) answered and (b) missed by the new telephone hotline service for Social Fund in the South West since its inception; how urgent enquiries are dealt with and why the service is not free to the user.

Jobcentre Plus in the South West Region do not currently operate a hotline for the Social Fund. The South West region is planning to centralise Social Fund processing in Bristol. Some limited centralisation has already taken place, including moving the processing of Social Fund claims from customers living in Gloucestershire to Bristol.

Customers living in Gloucestershire who want to apply in person for a payment from the Social Fund normally approach their local Jobcentre office in the first instance. Staff at the Jobcentre will then telephone the Social Fund team in South Bristol. There are 10 extensions available for Jobcentre Plus staff to call, however if staff have problems getting through the customer may be given the direct telephone number to try again later.

Although direct calls to these numbers by customers is not free there are plans to introduce 0800 and 0845 numbers in 2007 as part of the centralisation of Social Fund work.

If customers wish to apply for a Crisis Loan for living expenses from the Social Fund they can do this in person at their local office by completing an application form, a decision is usually made on the same day.

I hope this is helpful.

Women Pensioners

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many women in Coventry, South he estimates will be entitled to a full basic state pension by 2025. [77621]

James Purnell: The information is not available in the format requested. However, under our proposals, we estimate that almost 5.5 million women in Great Britain will be entitled to a full basic state pension by 2025.

Worklessness (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for addressing worklessness in Liverpool, Riverside. [74557]

Mr. Jim Murphy [holding answer 5 June 2006]: Since 1997, claimant unemployment in Liverpool Riverside has fallen by 38 per cent. the number of lone parents on benefit has fallen by 24 per cent and the number of incapacity benefits recipients has begun to fall. The New Deal has helped nearly 5,000 into work. However we recognise that there is more to do, in Liverpool Riverside and the country as a whole.

Our recently published Green Paper 'A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work' sets out our Cities Strategy proposals for piloting new initiatives to help local organisations work together to improve economic regeneration through skills, employment and health. From 2007, the 'Cities' pathfinders will be charged with increasing employment and reducing social exclusion in our most deprived communities. Each area will be asked to develop a consortium with a shared interest in working together to raise employment rates and improve the economy. This may include local authorities, employers, learning and skills councils, regional development agencies, primary care trusts and Jobcentre Plus. The key aim of this initiative will be to provide solutions that offer the maximum degree of flexibility, so that local areas can provide local solutions to local problems.

This approach will provide a real focus for local efforts to help people move back into work, so that the current patchwork of programmes and support, provided by a number of organisations can be delivered in a more integrated, individually-focused and locally responsive way.

Youth Unemployment (Hartlepool)

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to reduce youth unemployment in Hartlepool constituency. [77185]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Our welfare to work programmes have been successful in substantially reducing youth unemployment and, since 1997, long-term youth unemployment has been virtually eradicated. In addition, youth claimant unemployment is close to its lowest level for 30 years. In Hartlepool, youth unemployment has been cut by 32 per cent. since 1997 and long-term youth unemployment by 75 per cent.

Our New Deal for Young People programme continues to contribute to this success, having already helped more than 666,000 young people into work, including 2,320 in Hartlepool, 84 per cent. of whom have gained sustained employment.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Child Care

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what steps he is taking to promote choice and diversity in the provision of pre-school child care; and if he will make a statement; [78575]

(2) what steps he is taking to assist local authorities to deliver affordable pre-school child care; and if he will make a statement; [78576]

(3) what steps he is taking to increase parents' access to flexible pre-school child care; and if he will make a statement. [78577]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The Government are committed to maintaining a diverse and vibrant child care market where providers from the private, voluntary, independent and maintained sectors work together in support of children and families. The new duties in the Childcare Bill will require local authorities to assess child care needs within their area, find out what parents want, and try to meet their needs. This will deliver choice and maintain diversity, responding to the needs of parents who—perhaps because they work atypical hours—are looking for flexible child care.

All three and four-year-olds are currently entitled to 12 and a half hours of free early learning and child care, and by 2010 this will have increased to 15 hours. Parents will be able to use the free entitlement flexibly enabling them to balance work and family life more effectively. From later this year pathfinders will test delivery mechanisms to ensure that parental demand for increased flexibility can be met without driving smaller settings out of business. The findings from the pathfinders will inform the roll out of the extension in hours and flexibility by 2010.

The duty in the Childcare Bill to secure sufficient child care which is eligible under the child care element of the working tax credit will help to improve the affordability of child care by providing greater access for families to the financial support available through the tax credits system. During 2005-06, the level of investment in the child care element of the working tax credit was more than £2.4 million a day, benefiting around 356,000 families. This year the maximum proportion of costs that can be claimed through tax credits increased from 70 per cent. to 80 per cent. We are also tackling high child care costs in London through a pilot programme being run jointly with the London Development Agency and the Greater London Authority which will deliver an additional 10,000 child care places for families on lower incomes.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will recommend Hertfordshire's model for the delivery of Phase 2 child care centres to other county councils and public sector providers; and if he will make a statement. [78578]

Beverley Hughes [holding answer 19 June 2006]: I understand that Hertfordshire county council is still developing its children's centres implementation plan. Each local authority has strategic responsibility for developing children's centre services in its own area. We have issued guidance to help local authorities do this, including examples of good practice. However, detailed plans will be based on an individual authority's own assessment of the needs of children under five and their families in the area, including the levels of disadvantage they face.

Head Teachers

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) head teachers and (b) deputy head teachers have taken early retirement in each of the past three years. [78574]

Jim Knight [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The information is not available in the format requested.

The following table provides the number of teachers in the leadership group, comprising head, deputy and assistant head teachers, who have retired early (defined as before the normal pension age of 60) on premature, actuarially reduced (ARB) or ill health grounds in each year from 2002-03 to 2004-05, the latest information available.

Higher Education

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applicants aged (a) 21 to 25 and (b) over 25 had applied for courses in higher education institutions in (i) 2003-04, (ii) 2004-05, (iii) 2005-06 and (iv) 2006-07 in the April before the start of each academic year; and what the percentage change was in each year. [76271]

Bill Rammell: The available figures are shown in the table. They are taken from press releases issued by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) in April each year which summarise applicant numbers as at 24 March, for each of the age bands of under 21 years, 21-24 years, and over 24 years. The figures reinforce our view that the long-term trend of increasing university applications will continue. There was a larger than expected increase in the number of applicants for entry in 2005 and although the number of applicants for 2006 are down compared to 2005, they are above the numbers for 2004 entry. We experienced a similar dip in applications in 1998 when tuition fees were introduced, but numbers returned to their usual levels the following year and continued upwards thereafter. We expect this to be the trend going forward.

Post-16 Learning (Medway Towns)

Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what Government funding has been made available for post-16 learning in the Medway Towns local authority area for each year since 1997, broken down by education provider; and how many young people in the area have attended courses providing key skills for employability. [78273]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) allocated nearly £108 million to providers in the Kent and Medway area for 2005/06, an increase of more than 5 per cent. compared to 2004/05. This does not include the funding for work based learning or Personal Development and Community Learning (formerly Adult and Community Learning). Information on the individual funding allocations for providers dating back to 2001 is available from the LSC website. Since 1997 this funding has increased nationally by around £2.5 billion—equivalent to 48 per cent. in real terms.

Training for key skills is provided through the Key Skills Support Programme and aimed at post-16 learners. Up to September 2004, a total of 940,000 key skills qualifications had been awarded to over 570,000 individual learners.

Research Assessment

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether he plans to hold research assessment exercises in 2008. [77908]

Bill Rammell: On 13 June, as part of the launch of the Government's consultation on future arrangements for higher education research assessment and funding, I announced that the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise would proceed as planned. The panels responsible for assessing individual subjects will be able to make greater use of research metrics alongside or instead of academic peer review if they deem this appropriate, provided that this would not place new data collection burdens on institutions.

University Admissions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of A-level students from the London borough of Havering secured a place at university in 2004-05. [75453]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is not held centrally.

In 2004 there were 1,419 16 to 18-year-old A-level candidates in maintained schools and colleges in Havering local authority.

The latest available figures on participation in higher education by local authority were published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) in January 2005. The report, "Young Participation in England", shows participation rates for young people who enter higher education aged 18 or 19, disaggregated by local authority, for the years 1997 to 2000.

The figures for Havering local authority, and the comparable figures for England, are shown in the table. HEFCE have not produced figures beyond 2000.

Young participation rate (YPR (A)) in higher education in the UK

	1997	1998	1999	2000
Year cohort aged 18 in Havering (Number)	2,850	2,970	2,890	2,750

The Department uses the Higher Education Initial Participation Rate (HEIPR) to assess progress on increasing first-time participation of English students aged 18-30 in higher education towards 50 per cent.: the latest provisional figure for 2004/05 is 42 per cent. The HEIPR is not calculated at local authority level.

University Applications

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many university applications have been made by students in the London borough of Havering in each year since the introduction of tuition fees; and if he will make a statement. [75446]

Bill Rammell: The information requested is not held centrally.

The available information covers the number of actual entrants to higher education, from the London borough of Havering, and is given in the table.

DEFENCE

African Union

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has made to (a) African Union member states, (b) the United Nations and (c) NATO regarding African Union troops' rules of engagement. [66720]

Mr. Ingram: Her Majesty's Government has made no recent representations to African Union member states, the United Nations or NATO regarding African Union troops' rules of engagement.

Army Continuous Attitude Survey

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors were taken into account when deciding to omit from the Army Continuous Attitude Survey September-December 2005 (a) question 61a, (b) question 63a and (c) question 66 included in the June-September 2004 survey. [78131]

Mr. Watson: Questions 61a and 63a were removed from the survey because they were not providing an accurate measure of the levels of discrimination and bullying in the Army, or of the Army's commitment to issues of equality. They asked whether individuals believed that bullying and discrimination exists rather than whether they had direct experience of such incidents. Responses were therefore likely to be influenced by factors such as anecdotal evidence, media coverage and popular opinion as opposed to personal knowledge. Other questions related to direct experience remain.

Question 66 was replaced by question 39c to give the respondent more opportunity to explain their reasons for not making a formal complaint and to provide a richer source of data for analysis.

Army Recruitment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications to join the Army were made in each year since 1998; and how many applicants were successful in each year. [78771]

Mr. Watson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer he was given on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 2110, for figures covering the period 1998-99 to 2004-05. Figures for 2005-06 are detailed in the following table.

	Number
Applications	36,430
Enlisted	11,450

Note:
Figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

BAE (Kuwait Contracts)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) contracts and (b) variations of contract his Department has entered into with (i) BAE and (ii) its subsidiaries in respect of work carried out in Kuwait between 1 January 2003 and 30 June 2003. [78235]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 16 June 2006]: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff in his Department did not achieve an acceptable mark in their annual report in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represented of the total number of staff in each case. [75105]

Mr. Watson: These issues are dealt with at local level and to obtain this information from each unit would incur disproportionate cost. However, for those staff covered by the MOD main pay deal (around 66,000 staff) this information is captured at the end of the staff reporting year to inform pay rises.

Figures for the last three years for which figures are available are:

	Number
2002-03	[1]40
2003-04	64
2004-05	120

[1] Excluding industrial staff who were not recorded in this year.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77275]

Mr. Watson: The number of staff who are under and over 55 years of age on 1 January and 1 April 2006 are shown as follows.

Headcount strength of staff under/over 55 years of age

	January 2006	April 2006
Under 55	70,780	69,690
Over 55	19,000	18,940
Unknown[1]	20	30
Royal Fleet Auxiliaries[1]	2,350	2,340
Locally engaged civilians[1]	16,150	16,790
Departmental total	108,300	107,800

[1] information on the date of births of a small number of records, the Royal Fleet Auxiliaries and locally engaged civilians are not available centrally.

Note:
The values and totals are rounded separately to the nearest 10 and the sum of the rounded data may not equal the rounded sum.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into his Department in each of the last three years. [77276]

Mr. Watson: The number of people over the age of 55 years that have been recruited into the MOD in each of the last three years is shown as follows.

	2003-04	2004-05	Headcount 2005-06
Under 55 when recruited	8,640	6,780	4,410
Over 55 when recruited	940	690	410
Unknown[1]	20	20	10
Departmental total	9,600	7,490	4,830

[1] A small number of staff have no date of birth recorded.

Notes:
1. The values and totals are rounded separately so the sum of the rounded values may not equal the rounded sum.
2. These values exclude Royal Fleet Auxiliary and locally engaged civilians.

Gurkhas

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many casualties were sustained by Gurkhas serving with British forces in each campaign in which Gurkhas served since 1976. [72089]

Mr. Watson: The information is not held centrally. We are consulting potential sources of information and I will write to the hon. Member.

Home Working

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in his Department have been enabled to work from home in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [67986]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence does not collect these statistics centrally and they could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the Department promotes and supports a wide range of non standard working patterns, including home working, and encourages managers to accommodate staff requests to work differently whenever it is possible.

Met Office Reports (Oxfordshire)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library reports from the Meteorological Office on the weather in Oxfordshire on (a) 15, (b) 16, (c) 17 and (d) 18 July 2003. [76407]

Mr. Watson: A summary of the weather in Oxfordshire on the days concerned, together with supporting data, will be placed in the Library of the House.

Parliamentary Questions

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the reasons were for the delay in answering parliamentary question (a) 69450 tabled on 3 May 2006, (b) 68478 tabled on 2 May 2006, (c) 67171 tabled on 26 April 2006, (d) 65234 tabled on 19 April 2006 and (e) 65233 tabled on 19 April 2006 by the hon. Member for Lewes; and when he expects to answer each question. [78238]

Des Browne: Parliamentary questions 69450, 68478, 67171 and 65234 were answered on the 16 June 2006.

I will answer 65233 shortly.

Private Office Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been paid in (a) salary, (b) travelling expenses, (c) subsistence allowance and (d) removal expenses to special advisers in his private office in each of the last five years. [69114]

Mr. Watson: Since 2003, the Government have published on an annual basis the names and overall cost of special advisers, including the number in each pay band. For information relating to the 2004-05 financial year I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158-61WS. Information on special advisers for the last financial year is currently being collected and will be published in the normal way when it is ready.

Travel and subsistence expenses could be provided only at disproportionate cost. There are no records of removal expenses raised against any special adviser working in the Ministry of Defence during the period in question.

QinetiQ

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total cost was of the legal and advisory fees incurred in the sale of QinetiQ to Carlyle, broken down by year in which they were incurred; and what proportion of the total cost was incurred by (a) his Department, (b) QinetiQ and (c) Carlyle. [76986]

Mr. Ingram: The sale of a stake in QinetiQ to The Carlyle Group was completed in February 2003. Starting in 1998, the overall PPP process included: options studies and public consultation; the division of DERA into QinetiQ and Dstl; the formation of QinetiQ as a limited company; the conduct of the competition resulting in the selection of Carlyle as MOD's Strategic Partner; and the completion of the legal negotiations and due diligence process necessary to complete the transaction. Work on many of these activities was conducted in parallel and they have not been separately costed.

MOD's total expenditure on advisers throughout these stages of process was approximately £17.5 million over 5 years. This includes a cost of approximately £9.2 million for legal advice, broken down by financial year as shown in the following table.

Cost of external legal advice to the MOD on the QinetiQ PPP prior to the sale to Carlyle

Financial year	£ million Amount
1999-2000	0.4
2000-01	0.7
2001-02	2.3
2002-03	4.5
2003-04	1.3

The remaining £8.3 million covered a range of specialist financial, accounting, banking and other technical advice. In order to provide appropriate incentives, a significant proportion of this total was paid on completion of the sale as a success fee, and was calculated as a percentage of the value achieved at sale. Consequently, it is not possible to accurately attribute these costs across individual financial years.

In addition to these fees, Dstl incurred £1.6 million of general advisory costs and £0.25 million of legal costs relating to its formation.

The legal and advisory costs incurred by QinetiQ and The Carlyle Group are a matter for those two organisations.

RAF Menwith Hill

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have been stopped and searched at RAF Menwith Hill by the Ministry of Defence Police Agency in each year since 2000. [76293]

Mr. Ingram: The details of how many people have been stopped and searched at RAF Menwith Hill jointly by the Ministry of Defence Police and North Yorkshire Police (NYP) are set out as follows. Such data is not held prior to September 2001.

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many working days were lost to his Department and its Executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to the Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [76893]

Mr. Watson [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The following tables show the rates of worker sickness absence for non-industrial and industrial civil servants, and the cost of that absence for non-industrials, in the Ministry of Defence since 1997.

	Sickness absence rate[1] working days per FTE	Sickness absence working days	Sickness absence cost (£ million)[2]
1997[3]	8.4	573,000	38.59
1998[3]	8.6	571,000	39.28
1999[4]	8.1	538,700	37.23
2000[4]	7.9	520,100	36.64
2001[5]	[6]—	[6]—	[6]—
2002[4]	7.3	465,240	35.11
2003[4]	7.6	480,980	37.99
2004[4]	7.3	469,120	39.39
2005[3]	7.4	475,170	—
Financial year
2005-06[3]	7.3	464,270	—

[1] Sickness absence rates are based on FTE working days lost. For example, if a part-time employee (working 50 per cent. full-time hours) is sick for seven calendar days, this is five working days lost and 2.5 FTE working days lost.
[2] Sickness absence costs for 1997 to 2004 are based on a Cabinet Office defined average daily salary rate for civilian non-industrial staff multiplied by the number of sickness absence working days lost. Comparable salary rates are not available for 2005 or the financial year 2005-06.
[3] Rates are from the Annual Report "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service" which is published by the Cabinet Office.
[4] Rates for 1999 to 2004 are from UK Defence Statistics 2005 table 2.36 and are for calendar years (1 January to 31 December). The rates shown have been formed using a standardisation technique which involves adjusting unreasonably long absence lengths and removing obviously incorrect records.
[5] There is no sickness absence information for non-industrial Ministry of Defence staff available for 2001 for data quality reasons.
[6] No reliable data available.
Note:
Excludes non-industrial Ministry of Defence staff in trading funds and Royal Fleet Auxiliaries.

	Sickness absence rate[1] working days per FTE	Sickness absence working days
1997[2]	[3]13.7	337,100

2005-06[4]	11.6	170,740

[1] Sickness absence rates are based on FTE working days lost. For example, is a part-time employee (working 50 per cent. full-time hours) is sick for seven calendar days, this is five working days lost and 2.5 FTE working days lost.
[2] Sickness absence records for industrial staff are not as robust as for non-industrial staff and the early years are marked as provisional.
[3] Provisional.
[4] Rates for 1999 to 2004 are from UK Defence Statistics 2005 table 2.36 and are for calendar years (1 January to 31 December). Rates for calendar year 2005 and the financial year (1 April-31 March) for 2005-06 are calculated on a consistent basis and will appear in UK Defence Statistics 2006. The rates shown have been formed using a standardisation technique which involves adjusting unreasonably long absence lengths and removing obviously incorrect records.
[5] There is no sickness absence information for industrial Ministry of Defence staff available for 2000 for data quality reasons.
[6] No reliable data available.
Notes:
1. Excludes industrial Ministry of Defence staff in trading funds and Royal Fleet Auxiliaries.
2. Consistent salary rate information for industrial staff are not available on a compile basis to non-industrial staff above to allow the calculation of the cost of their sickness absence.

Territorial Army Commission

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of training courses for a Territorial Army Commission have been cancelled during university holidays because of lack of numbers in the last two years. [78217]

Mr. Watson: Between September 2004 and March 2006, three TA officer training modules which coincided or partially overlapped with the university holidays were rescheduled or cancelled due to lack of numbers. This represents 1.8 per cent. of TA officer training modules over the period. A further three modules were cancelled which did not coincide with university holidays.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance is provided by her Department for the training of (a) members of the judiciary and (b) the police force in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [75064]

Margaret Beckett: Working with Italy, which retains the international lead on judicial reform in Afghanistan, and other international partners, the UK is helping Afghanistan establish a functional, accessible, equitable and sustainable justice system.

The UK has provided US$500,000 in support of the United Nations Development Programme "Strengthening the Justice System of Afghanistan" (SJSA). The SJSA programme is helping the Government of Afghanistan restructure the justice system to bring it into compliance with the constitution; rehabilitate judicial infrastructure; strengthen service delivery capacity of justice institutions and justice professionals; promote rule of law and improve access to justice. This programme supports the Government of Afghanistan's "Justice for All" Action Plan which provides the basis for the reform of the Justice Sector over the next twelve years.

Through the Global Opportunities Fund, the UK has also funded the Bar Human Rights Committee to deliver training to key actors in the legal sector. The training, delivered in April 2006, to staff from the Ministry of Women's Affairs, Ministry of Justice, Afghan National Police and the Lawyers Association of Afghanistan focused on the re-establishment of the rule of law, women's access to justice, and human rights in international and domestic law.

Germany is responsible for co-ordinating international assistance to the Afghan government's police reform programmes. Since 2002, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has administered almost £5 million in support of these programmes through the Department for International Development/Ministry of Defence/FCO funded Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP). In financial year (FY) 2002-03 the GCPP Afghanistan Strategy contributed around £112,000, in 2003-04 £2.5 million, in 2004-05 £1.6 million and in 2005-06 £760,000. This has funded two UK police trainers at the Kabul Police Academy (2002-06), five UK mentors at the Regional Police Training College in Mazar-e-Sharif (2004-06) and the creation of a Crime Scene Investigation team in Kabul (2003-05). In FY 2006-07 the GCPP will continue to support police reform through the appointment of a Senior Police Adviser to the UK-led Provincial Reconstruction Team in Lashkar Gah. The Adviser's role will include the provision of support to local police and justice officials in Helmand as well as identifying ways in which the UK can provide assistance to support the German and US police programmes.

The UK has also allocated £15 million in FY 2006-07 towards counter-narcotics law enforcement in Afghanistan. This funding will help support the Counter-Narcotics Police of Afghanistan, the lead drugs law enforcement agency, and the Afghan Special Narcotics Force (ASNF) through training, mentoring and equipping personnel. The ASNF has caused significant disruption to the drugs trade, forcing traffickers to move drugs in smaller quantities. The ASNF is playing an important role as part of the wider Afghan law enforcement effort against illegal drugs.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the progress in the training of (a) members of the judiciary and (b) the police force in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [75065]

Margaret Beckett: Italy has been leading the international community's effort on judicial reform. Training members of the judiciary has been a central focus and progress has been made. Over the past four years a series of training programmes funded by the international community has seen over 600 Afghan judges, prosecutors and lawyers, of whom 42 were women, undergo specialised legal training. These programmes are set to continue with further projects delivering training in legal aid, criminal and commercial law, technical assistance, financial crime, juvenile crime and gender justice to senior judges, law graduates and government officials.

Despite these efforts Afghanistan's justice system still lacks sufficiently qualified officials, adequate legal education and the necessary administrative tools and physical infrastructure. The UK will continue to support both the Afghan Government and our development partners in reforming Afghanistan's justice sector.

Germany has been leading efforts to train and reform the Afghan national police with assistance from the US. Since August 2002, there have been some considerable achievements. Over 50,000 police of all ranks and branches have been trained at the re-established Police Academy and at five regional training centres. A pay and rank review is under way aiming to reduce the current top-heavy structure and raise police salaries in order to attract the best candidates. An international conference on border management and police was co-hosted by Afghanistan and Germany in Qatar in February. It endorsed the findings that replenishment of the Law and Order Trust Fund, used to partly fund police salaries, was critical to the success of police pay and rank reform. We support this finding and the valuable work that the international community, in particular Germany and the US are putting into police training and reform.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what funds her Department has provided to support the training of the police force in Afghanistan in each year since 2002; and if she will make a statement. [75067]

Margaret Beckett: Since 2002, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has administered almost £5 million in support of the Afghan Government's police reform through the Department for International Development/Ministry of Defence/FCO funded Global Conflict Prevention Pool (GCPP). In financial year 2002-03 the GCPP Afghanistan Strategy contributed around £112,000, in 2003-04 £2.5 million, in 2004-05 £1.6 million and in 2005-06 £760,000. This funding has seen two UK police trainers at the Kabul Police Academy (2002-06), five UK mentors at the Regional Police Training College in Mazar-e-Sharif (2004-06) and the creation of a Crime Scene Investigation team in Kabul (2003-05).

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the (a) Secretary of State for International Development and (b) the Secretary of State for Defence regarding the security situation in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [75072]

Margaret Beckett: There are regular meetings at ministerial and official level between the three departments on a range of issues relating to UK support to help establish a stable and prosperous Afghanistan. The security situation remains central to these discussions.

Our dialogue ensures the UK's efforts in Afghanistan remain on track. The recent deployment of a fully-integrated multi-disciplinary military/civilian mission to Helmand Province demonstrates the importance of a continued cross-government approach.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total UK expenditure on reconstruction assistance for Afghanistan has been since 2002; and if she will make a statement. [75073]

Margaret Beckett: Since financial year 2001-02, the UK has committed over £1 billion in development assistance to Afghanistan. This includes the most recent pledge of £500 million in development aid made at the London Conference on Afghanistan in January 2006.

The UK is the second largest bilateral donor to Afghanistan behind the United States. We also remain the largest contributor to the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund, having committed £295 million between 2002-08.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the reduction in the volume of the poppy harvest which will result from the work of the British and coalition troops in Afghanistan in each of the next four years. [76136]

Dr. Howells: UK forces in Afghanistan are deployed under the international security assistance force (ISAF) and are not there to take direct action against the drugs trade. They will contribute to the broader counter-narcotics effort by providing the secure environment in which the rule of law can be applied, reconstruction can take place and legal rural livelihoods can be developed. ISAF forces will be able to help with the provision of training to Afghan counter-narcotics forces and will, within means and capabilities, provide support to their operations. They will also help the Afghan Government explain their policies to the Afghan people.

Sustainable drug elimination strategies take time. Bringing about a sustainable decrease in poppy cultivation requires a range of activities including arresting and convicting the traffickers who profit from the trade, and putting in place the development programmes which enable farmers to move away from growing poppy. That is why the UK is spending £270 million over a three-year period on supporting the Government of Afghanistan's National Drug Control Strategy.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of (a) reports of detainee abuse and (b) extra-judicial police actions in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [78910]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Annual Human Rights Report states that Afghanistan remains a country of concern for human rights reasons. We continue to receive reports of detainee abuse and extra-judicial action throughout Afghanistan. While the Afghan Government have made real progress in improving human rights, they currently lack the resources and capacity to deal with all the challenges they face.

The Afghanistan Independent Human Rights Commission (AIHRC), established in June 2002, is an autonomous institution within the Afghan Government set up to monitor human rights abuses and implement transitional justice. It continues to work closely with the Government of Afghanistan and international partners to combat the culture of impunity that has existed in Afghanistan and led to past human rights abuses. Since its inception the Commission has closed some 40 private jails; has had 1,600 people, who were being held illegally, released from prison, and managed eight workshops for prison governors on human rights. Its work is helping the country make a full transition to stability and peace based on democracy and human rights. I am pleased to be able to tell the hon. Member that the UK recently committed US$1 million in funding to the AIHRC.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total UK expenditure on (a) poppy eradication and interdiction, (b) law enforcement and (c) support of alternative livelihoods has been in Afghanistan in each year since 2003. [78911]

Dr. Howells: Over financial years 2003-04 and 2004-05, the UK allocated the following amounts to poppy eradication, law enforcement and interdiction, and alternative livelihoods in Afghanistan:

£ million

	Financial year
	2003-04	2004-05
Eradication	1.33	2.25
Law enforcement and interdiction	3.6	8.6
Alternative livelihoods	5.8	10.7

As interdiction and eradication are separate strands of work the figures are not combined; interdiction figures are combined with law enforcement.

A written ministerial statement providing a breakdown of the £87 million spent over 2005-06 will shortly be released. Over 2006-07, £91.7 million will be spent by the UK on counter-narcotics in Afghanistan.

Amazon Deforestation

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans she has for the funding by the UK Government of the Amazon Deforestation Soya Certification project. [78896]

Mr. McCartney: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is providing a total of £239,880 over three years, from its Global Opportunities Fund, for the Amazonian Deforestation Soya Certification project in Brazil. This comprises:

2004-05	82,360
2005-06	78,760
2006-07	78,760

The project is co-funded by 'The Nature Conservancy do Brasil' and aims to help combat deforestation by developing and implementing an independent certification scheme for "forest-friendly" soya, modeled on advances in timber certification in the Amazon, and thematic certification, such as dolphin-friendly tuna.

Burma

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the reported use of forced labour of prisoners in Burma. [78096]

Mr. McCartney: We are aware of reports of the use of forced labour by prisoners in Burma. However, we are unable to confirm the extent of the practice as diplomats and non-governmental organisations are not allowed access to prisons to verify this.

We condemn the use of all forced labour and fully support the efforts of the International Labour Organisation to put a permanent end to the practice.

I raised the use of forced labour and our concerns about the general treatment of prisoners with the Burmese ambassador on 15 June 2006.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the comments made by European Commission staff to MEPs on 21 November 2005 that a UN Security Council Resolution on Burma would not be helpful to (a) the UK position and (b) the EU common position on Burma. [78142]

Mr. McCartney: The European Commission has taken no position to date on any proposal for a UN Security Council Resolution on Burma. At the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 12 June, the Dutch Minister of Foreign Affairs proposed that the EU support current US-led efforts to secure a Security Council Resolution. Neither the Commission nor any member state spoke against the proposal, which we fully support.

China

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Chinese Government regarding the treatment of animals in China's animal markets. [78434]

Mr. McCartney: The Government take animal rights in China very seriously. We regularly raise the treatment of animals with the Chinese Government, most recently during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's visit to China in November 2005, as the then Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs. We also welcome the work that non-governmental organisations undertake with the Chinese authorities to improve standards of animal welfare and to gradually build support for animal welfare issues there.

Family Planning

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on which occasions (a) the UK has voted against and the US has voted for and (b) the UK has voted for and the US has voted against the adoption of measures relating to abortion and family planning related issues by the United Nations since 1997. [77135]

Dr. Howells: Abortion and family planning related issues crop up explicitly and implicitly in a wide range of UN bodies e.g. the General Assembly's Third and Second Committees, the Commission on Human Rights, the Commission on the Status of Women, the Commission on Population and Development, the United Nations Population Fund Executive Board, the World Health Assembly, General Assembly special sessions on e.g. HIV/AIDS and on Children.

Within those bodies, abortion and family planning related issues arise in a number of resolutions, often unexpected ones.

Generally speaking, most resolutions on family planning related issues in the UN are passed without a vote.

Few UN resolutions explicitly mention "abortion". Much of the debate in New York has centred on the phrase "sexual and reproductive health services". The US often makes an explanation of position after the adoption of such resolutions, to the effect that they do not recognise abortion as a method of family planning or support abortion in their reproductive health assistance.

Given the aforementioned factors, specifying those occasions on which there have been votes, and which way the US and UK have voted, would incur disproportionate costs.

Guantanamo Bay

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the comments by US officials that three prisoners detained by the United States at Guantanamo Bay committed suicide as a public relations gesture. [78926]

Dr. Howells: The President of the United States has expressed serious concern about the deaths of three detainees at the Guantanamo Bay detention facility. We would share his sense of concern and await the results of the investigation into those deaths that has been promised by the US Government.

Iraq

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK contribution is to the fund provided by the European Union to the Iraqi Government; and if she will make a statement. [75069]

Margaret Beckett: On 22 May 2006, the European Commission announced its intention to allocate €200 million to Iraq for 2006 to build the capacity of Iraqi Ministries and institutions, to assist the constitutional review process, and to promote good governance and the rule of law. This new contribution comes on top of the €518 million provided between 2003 and 2005. The UK share of these contributions is 17.5 per cent.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her EU counterparts about the setting up of a European Commission presence in Baghdad; and if she will make a statement. [75144]

Margaret Beckett: At the 2 November 2004 General Affairs and External Relations Council, EU Foreign Ministers invited the Commission to enhance as appropriate, and with due regard to security, its presence in Baghdad. The Commission intends to open an office soon, which will be based initially in the British embassy in Baghdad. My officials are in close contact with the Commission to finalise the details.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's role is in restoring the Iraqi oil infrastructure; and if she will make a statement. [78905]

Dr. Howells: UK-sponsored experts and advisers have worked alongside Iraqi, US and World Bank colleagues to help Iraq consider its options to restore its oil infrastructure. UK Trade and Industry has played a role through a UK-Iraq Joint Board on Learning in the Oil Sector. This aims to help repair some of the skill and knowledge gaps in the sector, including the training of English language trainers for the oil industry.

The Government stand ready to further assist the Government of Iraq to restore its energy sector as required.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what technical assistance the UK is giving to the development of the judicial system and the training of judges in Iraq. [78907]

Dr. Howells: The United Kingdom offers a wide range of support to the Iraqi justice system, including:

training over 260 Iraqi judges, prosecutors, lawyers and justice department officials in human rights, international humanitarian law and independence of the judiciary. This has included training Iraqi trainers to implement humanitarian law training in Iraq; contribution to an international fund that meets the cost of international advisers to the Iraqi High Tribunal, recruited by the tribunal to provide advice on international law in the trial of Saddam Hussein and members of his former regime;

supporting the development of judicial networks, in particular of young lawyers, in association with the Iraqi Bar Association; offering support and assistance to help ensure the Central Criminal Court of Iraq has the capacity to uphold the Rule of Law.

The United Kingdom also supports the European Union's integrated Rule of Law Mission, training senior officials from Iraq's judicial, police and correctional services in the UK. The courses expose participants to UK working practices, methods of cooperation across the Rule of Law sector, and the importance of an overall approach which integrates respect for human rights.

Israel

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the British Government's policy is on Israel's withdrawal from the West Bank to the 1967 borders and from its settlements within the West Bank; what the Government's policy is on Israel's policy of unilateral withdrawal; and if she will make a statement. [78621]

Dr. Howells: It remains our position that all Israeli settlements in the Occupied Territories are illegal and that there should be no expansion of/or construction within settlements, in line with the Roadmap.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister made clear that the priority now is negotiations. These are manifestly the best way to move this process forward. But if negotiations do not take the process forward then other ways to move it forward will have to be found. It is the role of the international community to give negotiations the best chance of success.

We remain committed to the vision of two states, Israel and Palestine, and the establishment of a just and lasting peace.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the shelling of the Beit Lahia beach in the Gaza Strip by Israeli artillery; and what assessment she has made of the effect of the incident on the middle east peace process. [76927]

Dr. Howells: Israel has denied responsibility for the deaths of seven Palestinians on 9 June. However, we remain concerned that Israel's response to rocket fire from the Gaza Strip should be proportional. We call on Israel to ensure that civilians, particularly children, are not harmed. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed this matter with Israeli Foreign Minister Livni on 12 June. We also continue to call for an end to rocket fire from the Gaza Strip on Israeli targets and for calm in the occupied territories. We support President Abbas's efforts to restore order, using legally constituted security forces.

Laos

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the Laos authorities on the case of the 10 North Korea refugees held in Luang Prabang detention centre in Laos, who may be handed over to the Chinese authorities. [78904]

Mr. McCartney: We understand the 10 Democratic Peoples Republic of Korea refugees detained in Laos have been released.

Latin America

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of embassy closures on UK influence in Latin America. [78056]

Mr. Hoon: All decisions on our overseas network have been based on the need to align our resources with our priorities, to maximise efficiency and ensure that the UK has a cost-effective and flexible network of overseas representation. The UK continues to engage actively with Latin American Governments, with Ambassadors and their teams making regular visits where we do not have resident representation. We have also appointed honorary consuls in each of these countries. The UK and Latin America share many values and international concerns and I have no doubt that our strong links will continue.

Palestine

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1808W, on Palestine, what factors are being considered in the review of the EU Police Mission in the Occupied Territories; and if she will make a statement. [75070]

Margaret Beckett: The EU Police Mission in the Occupied Territories is under close review to ensure that it complies with the Quartet's conditions on providing assistance to the Palestinians. The European Commission and member states are in close contact with the Mission, and an EU working group scrutinises the Mission's regular reports. In addition, there will be a formal six-month review in July 2006.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her assessment is of the implications of the recent decision by the European Parliament to proscribe the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam; and if she will make a statement. [73719]

Margaret Beckett: We welcome the EU's decision to list the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) as a terrorist organisation. The EU listing procedure is a means by which EU member states work together collectively to fulfil their obligations under UN Security Council Resolution 1373 to freeze the assets of terrorists without delay. The EU has repeatedly urged the LTTE to change their ways, to turn away from violence, return to the negotiation table and pursue peace through political means. It is hoped the listing will help the LTTE to see that they need to change their ways and move away from their path of violence. At the same time, the EU has asked the Government of Sri Lanka to rein in other paramilitary groups from carrying out attacks in Government-controlled areas. The only way forward in the conflict is a negotiated settlement that satisfies the concerns and legitimate aspirations of all Sri Lankans and preserves democracy in Sri Lanka.

Vietnam

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the Vietnamese Government to call for the release of imprisoned Hmong Protestant leader Ma Van Bay. [77919]

Mr. McCartney: We, with our EU partners, raise human rights issues with the Vietnamese Government at every suitable opportunity. We raised the case of Ma Van Bay, with our EU partners, in Hanoi in May. The EU expressed subsequently our concerns regarding this case to the Vietnamese Government at the latest meeting of the EU-Vietnam Human Rights Dialogue in Hanoi on 14 June. We, with our EU partners, will continue to press the Vietnamese to respond to our concerns regarding this case.

Whaling

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times (a) she and (b) her predecessor met representatives from the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to discuss whaling over the last 12 months. [78034]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 June 2006]: There have been no ministerial discussions between the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on this issue. Officials from both the Departments, however, work closely throughout the year to ensure our policy on whaling is communicated to countries that are currently members of the International Whaling Commission and to those who have an interest in cetacean conservation. We will continue to work together on these important issues.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs with which countries (a) she and (b) her predecessor has discussed whaling over the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [78035]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 16 June 2006]: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not discussed whaling with any country in the last 12 months. Every year, in advance of the annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission (IWC), the Foreign and Commonwealth Office issues lobbying instructions to its missions to seek support from their host countries for the UK's position on whaling. The prominent role we play within the IWC ensures no country can be in any doubt as to the importance we attach to whale conservation.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Electoral Commission Staff

Mr. Pickles: To ask the hon. Member for Gosport, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission how many (a) public relations and (b) marketing staff the Electoral Commission employs; what the annual wage costs were for staff in each category in the last year for which figures are available; and what the (i) job titles and (ii) functions are of each of these staff. [78294]

Peter Viggers: The Electoral Commission informs me that it does not categorise its staff in this way. However, it employs 10 staff whose duties it considers to fall, in whole or in part, within the two areas referred to. They consist of four press officers, two staff dealing with parliamentary affairs, and four staff working on voter information campaigns. Their total annual wage costs in 2005-06 were £116,404, £62,892 and £108,129 respectively.

I have asked the Electoral Commission to write to my hon. Friend with the full details of the job titles and functions of these staff, and to place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

ADMINISTRATION COMMITTEE

Broadcast Proceedings

David Lepper: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he will make a statement on the changes recommended by the Committee to the rules on broadcasting proceedings of the House and on filming and photography within the precincts. [79009]

Mr. Doran: The Committee has recently made a number of recommendations on changes to the rules on broadcasting proceedings of the House and on filming and photography within the precincts. Mr. Speaker has agreed to these changes being made on a trial basis. The Committee will consider in December whether to recommend that they be made permanent.

From the return of the House in October, and for a trial period, a greater variety of shots of proceedings in the Chamber will be allowed than is the case at present, including a greater use of reaction shots in order to illustrate the mood of the House, and the provision of a low-level atmospheric sound-feed during divisions rather than the current complete silence.

From the same time, BBC Parliament will be released on a trial basis from the undertaking previously given to the Broadcasting Committee, to carry live Commons Chamber coverage regardless of proceedings at the same time in the House of Lords, on condition that the freedom to select proceedings in the Lords should be used only sparingly, and that Mr. Speaker should be consulted in such cases. A reporter voice-over will also now be permitted during divisions.

Two new interview points have been identified within the precincts: in the south west corner of Westminster Hall once the current works there have been completed, and on the Green in New Palace Yard, subject in the latter case to a permit from the Serjeant at Arms. Filming pieces to camera of a presenter walking across Central Lobby will also be permitted before 9 am on non-sitting days, similarly subject to a permit from the Serjeant at Arms.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

TRANSPORT

Antisocial Behaviour (Trains)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many antisocial behaviour orders have been applied for by the British Transport police in the last 12 months, broken down by (a) Government office region and (b) constituency. [77786]

Derek Twigg: The British Transport police (BTP) have provided the following information on the number of antisocial behaviour order applications recorded by BTP Area; data is not collected by Government office region or by parliamentary constituency.

Between 31 May 2005 and 1 June 2006 the following number of antisocial behaviour order applications were made by the BTP:

BTP area	Applications
London North	7
London South	32
London Underground	32
North East	8
North West	1
Scotland	0
Wales and Western	0

Car Sharing

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what help the Department is giving to car-sharing schemes. [77812]

Gillian Merron: Through the local transport planning system and other initiatives, the Department encourages local authorities to set up authority-wide car share schemes and to promote car sharing as part of site specific workplace travel plans.

The Highways Agency is implementing workplace travel plans on the strategic road network and piloting the use of dedicated car share lanes.

Crossrail

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect on the cost of the Crossrail project of re-using (a) the Farringdon to Moorgate section of Thameslink and (b) the disused Moorgate to Liverpool Street mainline station link. [78613]

Derek Twigg: I understand from Crossrail London Rail Links Ltd (CLRL) that reusing the section of Thameslink running from Farringdon to Moorgate for operational purposes would involve bringing the tunnel up to the surface near Farringdon and returning below ground near Moorgate. This is considered impractical, given that there is not sufficient space for tunnel portals in these areas. Therefore, CLRL has not carried out a cost assessment of this option.

CLRL have informed me that they are not aware of a disused mainline station link running from Moorgate to Liverpool Street.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps will be taken to ensure that listed buildings located at the sites of proposed Crossrail stations are not (a) damaged and (b) demolished. [78614]

Derek Twigg: We have sought to avoid adverse effects on listed buildings wherever practicable. However, the construction of Crossrail would result in the demolition of two listed buildings and the modification of a further thirteen.

We are in the process of negotiating agreements with English Heritage and the relevant local authority, as appropriate, for those listed buildings that are affected by Crossrail works. These agreements will describe the mitigation required at each location. Impacts from construction works on any listed buildings which are not covered by a separate agreement would be controlled via mechanisms set out in the environmental minimum requirements that will be set for the project. Potential settlement impacts are dealt with in Crossrail's settlement policy.

For further information please see information paper 'D18–Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas' at:

http://bilddocuments.crossrail.co.uk/80256FA10055060F/pages/informationpapers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the estimated cost of the Crossrail project is in each year to completion. [78620]

Derek Twigg: The Parliamentary Estimate of Expense, submitted with the Crossrail hybrid Bill, estimates the total cost of Crossrail at £10.292 billion in Q1 2002 prices. It is not possible at this stage to make reliable estimates of the likely annual cost.

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether (a) his Department and (b) its (i) executive agencies and (ii) non-departmental public bodies use the services of private debt collectors. [71076]

Gillian Merron: The services of private debt collectors are not used by the Department, its executive agencies nor its non-departmental bodies. However, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is to launch a nine-month trial from 26 June 2006 for the use of private debt collectors to recover unpaid continuous registration penalties.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Chief Accounting Officer of his Department. [76840]

Gillian Merron: The Principal Accounting Officer for the Department for Transport is its Permanent Secretary, Sir David Rowlands KCB, who has a BA (Hons) Philosophy Politics and Economics (Oxon).

Principal Accounting Officer is a role that the permanent secretary combines with his personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the department and for Department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The Principal Accounting Officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified staff and experienced senior managers such as the finance director.

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77418]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport does not keep a separate record of the amount spent annually on alcohol for hospitality purposes. Expenditure in the Department is conducted in accordance with the principles of Government accounting. The Department's policy on hospitality is set out in its staff handbook, which advises that, on each occasion, careful consideration should be given to the need, form and extent of hospitality and whether if it can be justified. Staff are prohibited from claiming alcohol under the Department's travel and subsistence arrangements.

First Capital Connect

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations his Department has received from First Capital Connect regarding fares on its services. [78624]

Derek Twigg: The Department has received no recent representations from First Capital Connect on fares.

Flag Flying

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure the Union Flag is flown from his Department's buildings on every day the offices are open. [77738]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport follows the rules and guidance on flag flying issued by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. These rules are approved by the Queen on advice from the Department. There are no plans at present to change the number of days flags can be flown from Government buildings.

Government Vehicles

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Government (a) have agreed and (b) plan to introduce a procurement policy aimed at ensuring that from 2008 the average level of carbon emissions from motor cars it purchases or leases will not exceed 140g per kilometre. [75619]

Dr. Ladyman: On 12 June 2006 Government launched new targets for sustainable operations on the Government estate, alongside the Sustainable Procurement Task Force Action Plan. The target for reducing carbon emissions from road vehicles used for Government administrative operations is 15 per cent. by 2010-11, relative to 2005-06 levels.

Great Western Route

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will investigate the reasons for (a) recent delays on the Great Western route and (b) track performance problems in hot weather. [78031]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 19 June 2006]: I have held meetings with First Great Western and Network Rail to assess performance. Joint action plans are in place between Network Rail and FGW to address performance issues. These are monitored monthly.

Whether to impose temporary speed restrictions during spells of hot weather is a matter for Network Rail to judge in line with its normal operating procedures.

Industrial Action (Railways)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many working days on the rail network were lost to industrial action in the last 12 months, broken down by region. [77781]

Derek Twigg: The Department does not keep a record of days lost to industrial action as industrial relations are a matter between individual employers and employees.

Invalid Carriages

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many recommendations of the Final Report for the Review of Class Two and Class Three Powered Wheelchairs and Powered Scooters (invalid carriages) published in July 2005 have been implemented; and if he will make a statement. [76464]

Gillian Merron: We are considering the recommendations made in the report from Transport and Travel Research Ltd. fully before taking any action on the recommendations.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) which Government Bills sponsored by his Department remain to be introduced during the 2005-06 Session; [77845]

(2) which Government Bills sponsored by his Department he has bid for in the next Session of Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [77846]

Gillian Merron: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Leader of the House of Commons (Mr. Straw) on 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1431W.

Leominster Station

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria he used in deciding not to include Leominster train station on the Access for All station list. [77672]

Derek Twigg: The criteria used for prioritising stations to receive accessibility improvements as part of the Access for All programme were published in the Railways for All Strategy; a copy of which is available in the House Library.

M25

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of the merits of charging for use of the M25. [78860]

Dr. Ladyman: No specific assessment has been made of the merits of charging for use of the M25. The Road Pricing Feasibility Study, published in 2004, considered the merits of a possible future national road pricing system for all roads including the motorway network.

Passenger Focus

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to restructure Passenger Focus. [78431]

Derek Twigg: We have no plans to restructure Passenger Focus.

Reduced Fare Tickets

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is towards train operators who intend to limit the use of (a) cheap day and (b) other reduced fare tickets between 1630 and 1900 to and from London; and if he will make a statement. [77468]

Derek Twigg: Off-peak fares are unregulated, which means operators are free to create fares, withdraw fares, set prices and any time restrictions on a commercial basis, to fill spare off-peak capacity.

Roads

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what work is scheduled to improve the condition of the (a) A12 and (b) A127. [78623]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the carbon dioxide impact of each road scheme which he has approved since 2000 through the local transport plans. [75929]

Gillian Merron: The Department considers carbon dioxide impacts of road schemes as part of the normal major scheme approval processes. However, information on the carbon dioxide impact of each road scheme approved since 2000 through local transport plans could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has held with ministerial colleagues on the removal of roadside distractions. [77939]

Dr. Ladyman: No recent discussions at ministerial level have been held on this subject.

Rochdale/Oldham Loop Line

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to claw back funding from the operators of the Rochdale/Oldham Loop Line following reductions in services over the last four years. [76668]

Derek Twigg: Northern Rail operates services between Manchester and Oldham/Rochdale. The level of service which Northern Rail operates between these locations is in line with that required by its franchise agreement.

Rural Transport Services

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many rural bus services have (a) stopped and (b) been suspended indefinitely in each year since 1997. [78204]

Gillian Merron: The total numbers of local bus service cancellations is given in the following table. It is not possible to identify which of the services cancelled were rural bus services.

	Total number of bus service cancellations	Total number of new services introduced
1997-98	4,283	5,081
1998-99	4,385	5,813
1999-2000	6,224	4,718
2000-01	4,533	4,746
2001-02	3,947	5,108
2002-03	3,420	4,537
2003-04	3,271	4,581
2004-05	3,190	4,562
Total	33,253	39,146

Note
GB figures, taken from Traffic Commissioner annual reports

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus passenger miles in rural areas were undertaken in (a) 1997 and (b) 2005; and how many of these were supported by public funds. [78205]

Gillian Merron: The Department does not hold information on passenger miles for all rural areas in the form requested, and it is not possible to identify total local authority support for rural services. However, in 1998, in recognition of the particular needs of rural areas, we introduced specific funding for the support of rural bus services through the Rural Bus Subsidy Grant (RBSG). The grant is distributed to local authorities on the basis of their rural population. Total grant for England has risen from £32.5 million in 1998 to £54.3 million in 2006. The grant has provided for over 2,000 new and enhanced services.

Sex Offenders Register

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether provisions exist to prevent people on the Sex Offenders Register from being allowed on to the Register of Approved Driving Instructors. [79112]

Dr. Ladyman: We currently do not check the Sex Offenders Register for Approved Driving Instructor (ADI) applications. Later this year, the Driving Standards Agency (DSA) will introduce enhanced Criminal Records Bureau checks for all applicants and those already on the register.

In the meantime, one of the conditions for registration is that the applicant is a 'fit and proper' person to have his name entered in the ADI register. As part of that assessment each applicant is required to declare any unspent convictions. The ADI registrar, in considering whether the applicant is 'fit and proper' takes account of character references and any declared convictions. Extracts of relevant court proceedings are considered where appropriate.

Should the registrar become aware of anything, including convictions, that would call into doubt a registered ADI's fitness then he can initiate proceedings to remove them from the register.

Special Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 25 May 2006, Official Report, column 1957W, on special advisers, how much was spent on travel and subsistence for special advisers between (a) July and December and (b) December 2005 and the end of the financial year. [77417]

Period	Travel and subsistence costs (£)

All official travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code and the Civil Service Management Code.

Swindon-Cheltenham Railway Line

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to re-signal the railway line from Swindon to Cheltenham. [77811]

Derek Twigg: Any plan to re-signal this route is an operational matter for Network Rail and their recently published business plan included £118 million to be spent on signalling on the Great Western Mainline as a whole over the next 3 years.

Weymouth Relief Road

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he has approved the building of the Weymouth Relief Road; [77774]

(2) what funding has been allocated for building the Weymouth Relief Road in each of the next 10 years. [77776]

Gillian Merron: The Weymouth Relief Road was provisionally accepted for funding through the Local Transport Programme with an agreed contribution of £54.567 million in December 2003, subject to Dorset county council completing the relevant statutory processes and complying with the conditions in our offer of funding.

In July 2005 we invited the South West region to provide advice on the priority it attaches to major transport schemes in the South West, including the Weymouth Relief Road, within an indicative Regional Funding Allocation up to 2015-16. We hope to announce our response to this advice before the summer recess.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans the building of the Weymouth Relief Road to start; and when it is scheduled to be completed. [77775]

Gillian Merron: Dorset county council, as the promoting authority for this scheme, is responsible for its delivery including completion of the necessary statutory procedures and compliance with the Department's major scheme requirements. We hope to respond before the summer recess to the region's advice on their priorities and suggested funding timescales for this and other schemes within the indicative Regional Funding Allocation for the South West.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

BBC

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with the management of the BBC as part of the charter renewal process regarding the proposed re-location of BBC departments to Manchester. [78147]

Mr. Woodward: The Department has held numerous discussions with the management of the BBC on a wide range of issues as part of charter review, including on the BBC's proposals to move a significant amount of production outside London, particularly to the north west of England. The Government welcome the BBC's proposals in principle, subject to proper consideration of value for money.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will announce the new BBC licence fee settlement; and if she will make a statement. [77534]

Mr. Woodward: The BBC's current licence fee settlement runs until the end of financial year 2006-07. The Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the television licence fee to apply from April 2007. It will announce the outcome later this year.

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what account she will take of HM Treasury's forecast rate of growth of household income in determining the BBC's request for a licence fee increase of 2.3 per cent. above inflation; [78112]

(2) what account she will take of the licence fee increase agreed in 2001 in determining the appropriate level of the BBC licence fee in the future; [78113]

(3) how she plans to determine affordability in setting the appropriate future level of the BBC licence fee; [78114]

(4) what account she will take of commitments to ensure (a) efficiency savings and (b) the prevention of inflation of staff and talent costs at the BBC in determining the future level of the BBC licence fee. [78232]

Mr. Woodward: The Government are currently conducting a funding review to determine the level of the licence fee to apply from April 2007. All relevant factors will be considered as part of the review.

Commonwealth Institute Building

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department has plans to bring forward legislation relating to the Commonwealth Institute building; what meetings (a) she and (b) her officials have had to discuss delisting of the Commonwealth Institute; and who attended each meeting. [78379]

Mr. Lammy: Given the Commonwealth Institute's unique role as an international and inter-governmental organisation, whose future is of concern to all 53 Commonwealth countries, Government are considering whether special measures are appropriate in relation to the Commonwealth Institute building. No decisions have yet been taken.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had two meetings with representatives of the Commonwealth Institute. A cross-government working group, which included representatives from the Commonwealth Institute, the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, The Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Department for International Development, Department for Education and Skills, and No. 10 met on a number of occasions to discuss Government support for the Commonwealth Institute. The group received advice on the planning process from the then Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which Minister in her Department is responsible for monitoring her Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if she will make a statement. [73947]

Mr. Woodward: Under Section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, Ministers and Government Departments have a duty to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity. This has been replaced by a similar provision under Section 40 of the Natural Environment and Rural Communities Act which comes into effect on the 1 October 2006. There is no statutory duty to monitor compliance with this duty.

I have responsibility within the Department for sustainable development issues. We have taken a number of steps to benefit biodiversity including:

Signing up to the biodiversity target under the Framework for Sustainable Development on the Government Estate.

Continuing to support the work of the Royal Parks Agency, delivered through their biodiversity management plans for each of the eight royal parks.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the chief accounting officer of her Department. [76823]

Mr. Lammy: The permanent secretary, Dame Sue Street, is the accounting officer for DCMS, has an MA degree and her professional career spans over 30 years in the public and private sector. The accounting officer is a role that the permanent secretary combines with her personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the Department and for Department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The accounting officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified and experienced senior managers including the chief operating officer who has a degree in economics and is an associate member of the Chartered Institute of Management Accountants.

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by her Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77197]

Mr. Lammy: Expenditure in the Department is conducted in accordance with the principles of Government accounting as well as the Department's internal guidance, including that on hospitality.

In line with this, the Department maintains records of expenditure on overall hospitality. The costs associated with expenditure on alcohol are met from within constraints of delegated divisional hospitality and are not separately identified. I have no plans to record these separately.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what preparations are being made to celebrate Her Majesty the Queen's Diamond Jubilee in 2012. [78586]

Mr. Woodward: Guidance to local licensing authorities on this matter was issued as part of the guidance issued under Section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003, published in July 2004.

Goodison Report

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many of the recommendations of the Goodison report she has implemented; which recommendations relating to direct taxation she has implemented; and what plans she has to implement the recommendations not implemented to date. [78308]

Mr. Lammy: The Goodison report contains a total of 45 recommendations. Of these, 29 recommendations are directed at a range of bodies, including: my own Department; the various funding bodies; the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council (MLA—formerly Resource); the Arts and Humanities Research Council (formerly—Arts and Humanities Research Board); the Trustees of the National Heritage Memorial Fund/ Heritage Lottery Fund; HM Revenue and Customs; and 16 recommendations relate to taxation and so are a matter for the Treasury.

The key areas in which the Goodison Report has been implemented are as follows:

the Renaissance in the Regions programme for regional museums has been extended to all nine English regions; annual funding for the National Heritage Memorial Fund will increase to £10 million in 2007-08; and

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) which Government Bills sponsored by her Department remain to be introduced during the 2005-06 session; [77833]

(2) which Government Bills sponsored by her Department she has bid for in the next session of Parliament; and if she will make a statement. [77834]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House of Commons (Mr. Straw) on 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1431W.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will issue guidance on the licensing requirements for garden fetes and similar events held solely for the purpose of raising money for good causes which include an element of live music and charge a fee for entrance, but at which no alcohol is provided and there is no element of private gain. [77658]

Mr. Woodward: I see no requirement for guidance to licensing authorities covering the circumstances described, since the provision of entertainment at a garden fete or similar event held for charitable purposes is not 'regulated entertainment' for the purposes of the Licensing Act 2003. Such an event would therefore be exempt from the requirement for a licence, unless the intention was to apply some or all of its proceeds for the purposes of private gain or to undertake the sale or supply of alcohol.

London Bombings (Assembly Report)

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what response she has made to the recommendations aimed at her Department in the London Assembly's report on the 7 July bombings. [77535]

Tessa Jowell: The Assembly report puts forward one recommendation for my Department. We will provide a full response to the 7 July Review Committee in due course.

National Lottery

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport to which organisations New Opportunities funding has been distributed in each Westminster constituency; and which projects were funded. [78548]

Mr. Caborn: The New Opportunities Fund (NOF) has made 1,831 lottery grants, with a total value of over £110 million, in Northern Ireland. It is not possible to list all the recipient organisations and projects, but details of each project can be viewed on my Department's website, searchable at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the lottery distributors.

The following table gives the number and value of NOF awards in each Westminster constituency in Northern Ireland.

Tourism

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of gross domestic product was accounted for by tourism in (a) Wales and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [78870]

Mr. Woodward: Industry-specific data are only available for Gross Value Added (GVA), not Gross Domestic Product.

In direct terms, tourism contributes approximately 3.7 per cent. of whole-economy value added in Wales. For the UK in total, tourism contributed an estimated 3.4 per cent. of GVA in 2003 (it is not possible to provide a figure for the UK excluding Wales).

These figures were both calculated using tourism satellite account methodology but were derived separately and so are not directly comparable.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which 10 tourist attractions in (a) Cambridgeshire, (b) Peterborough constituency and (c) Peterborough city council area attracted the largest number of visitors in each year since 1997. [77912]

Mr. Woodward: My Department does not maintain central records of visitors to tourist attractions. However VisitBritain and its predecessor have previously carried out periodical surveys of regional attractions. The data available from the surveys covering Cambridgeshire and Peterborough and the estimated visitor numbers for the most popular attractions in these areas is set out in the following tables.

Trooping the Colour

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how the Government will be represented at this year's Trooping the Colour. [78861]

Mr. Watson: Trooping the Colour at the Queen's birthday parade is organised by Headquarters The Household Division. They do not allocate tickets to individual Members of the Government, but blocks of seats are allocated to the Prime Minister's Office and to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The Ministry of Defence was represented by the Armed Forces Minister.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether the (a) flag of the Commonwealth and (b) personal Commonwealth flag of Her Majesty the Queen will be displayed at this year's Trooping the Colour. [78862]

Mr. Lammy: For Trooping of the Colour, the flags of all 53 countries currently in the Commonwealth are flown in Horseguards Road. The flag of the Commonwealth and the personal Commonwealth flag of Her Majesty are not flown.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

People Trafficking

Ms Abbott: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what discussions she has had with the Home Office on border controls to prevent the trafficking of young women into the United Kingdom. [75356]

Meg Munn: As a Member of the Ministerial Group on Human Trafficking, I work closely with Home Office colleagues to ensure that provision for victims is sensitive to the needs of young women trafficked into the UK for sexual exploitation. All UK immigration officers have been made aware of a best practice toolkit to enable prompt and accurate identification of victims. In addition, immigration officers receive regular intelligence briefings and inter-agency briefings that highlight issues and trends in respect of trafficking.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Brownfield Development

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1387-88W, on Brownfield development, if she will break down the 2004 figures in each column by region. [74283]

Yvette Cooper: The information available is from Land Use Change Statistics, shown in the following tables.

Building Regulations

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what inspection is made of enforcement of building regulation by private sector providers. [75667]

Angela E. Smith: Private sector approved inspectors do not have enforcement powers for breaches of the Building Regulations. No formal inspection is made of the work of either the public or private sector as, under the Building Act 1984, building control is a fully devolved service. However, my officials meet with representatives of both sectors to discuss operational and delivery issues, and have helped to develop Performance Indicators and a revised Performance Standards Handbook, both due to be published soon.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment her Department has made of the extent to which private sector providers are used by local authorities to enforce building regulations. [76938]

Angela E. Smith: We have made no such assessment. The statutory function of enforcing the building regulations rests with local authorities. Local authorities may engage private sector professional assistance to help them discharge their day-to-day building control responsibilities, e.g. assisting with plan checking.

Bullying

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many complaints of bullying were made in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in 2005-06; and how many cases were upheld. [78336]

Angela E. Smith: Staff are encouraged to seek an informal resolution of all matters in dispute with the individual and their line manager. Where it is not possible to resolve informally, complaints of bullying are dealt with under the Department's complaints and grievances procedures. Information on the number of cases dealt with is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Castle Point Borough Council

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what recent assessment she has made of the performance of Castle Point borough council; what steps she is taking to improve the performance of the council; and if she will make a statement. [78176]

Angela E. Smith: A lead official from the Department for Communities and Local Government is working with Castle Point borough council following the council's assessment as 'poor' under the Comprehensive Performance Assessment in June 2004. The lead official advises Ministers regularly on the capability and capacity of the council and following significant improvements over the last year, particularly in the strength of officer and political management, we have recently agreed that formal monitoring meetings will be held on a two monthly rather than a monthly basis.

In December last year the Audit Commission reported that the council were making 'good progress'.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether her Department organises (a) adult learning courses and (b) occupational and professional development courses for its staff. [78322]

Angela E. Smith: Skills for Life support is offered to new entrants and is also highlighted to managers, as part of the induction process. The Department for Communities and Local Government intranet has a Skills for Life page providing information and web links to a variety of resources.

English classes with Westminster Adult Education Service have been set up for Mitie catering staff.

All other learning and development is commissioned through the Department's Training Framework Agreement covering 18 different suppliers.

Fire Service

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much the Department and its predecessors have spent on external consultants on fire service related projects in each year since 2000, broken down by project. [73400]

Angela E. Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Stroud (Mr. Drew) on 9 May 2006, Official Report, column 218W.

The Department of Communities and Local Government was formed in May 2006 (formerly ODPM formed in May 2002) and expenditure prior to May 2002 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. For the period May 2002 to March 2006 the figures are detailed in the following table.

	£ million
	Cost
2002-03	3.38
2003-04	5.29
2004-05	13.27
2005-06	15.35

The increase in expenditure since 2002-03 can be explained by the three large projects known as New Dimension, Firelink and FireControl.

These projects constitute:

(i) an important part of the Government's response to the events of 11 September 2001;

(ii) a reflection of the need to serve the interests of public safety and security by enhancing the ability of the fire and rescue service to respond to major incidents; and

(iii) support the modernisation of the fire and rescue service following Professor Bain's Independent Review of the Fire Service, published in December 2002.

The use of consultants enables a range of professional expertise to be deployed on these projects.

Flags

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will ensure the Union Flag is flown from her Department's buildings on every day the offices are open. [77747]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government follows the rules and guidance on flag flying issued by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. These rules are approved by the Queen on advice from the Department. There are no plans at present to change the number of days flags can be flown from Government buildings.

Licensing Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will meet the hon. Member for Castle Point to discuss the extent to which the Licensing Act 2003 is being applied consistently by local authorities. [78172]

Mr. Woodward: I have been asked to reply.

While I would be happy to meet the hon. Member, interpretation of the Licensing Act 2003 is a matter for licensing authorities in the first instance and the Courts in the case of a dispute. Ministers cannot tell licensing authorities how to interpret the legislation, although we are currently reviewing the guidance issued under s.182 of the Licensing Act 2003 which aims to help licensing authorities operate the regime. If the hon. Member would like to write to me to outline any specific concerns, I would be happy to consider them as part of the review of the guidance.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment Ordnance Survey has made of its potential use of the TerraSAR-X satellite once it is operational. [78323]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is as follows:

"Ordnance Survey continuously monitors developments in the field of satellite and remote sensing technology. It is interested in new satellite technologies and is reviewing the capabilities of a range of new satellite sensors and platforms to augment its activity and improve operational efficiency in its ability to monitor change in Great Britain."

Regional Government

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2006, Official Report, column 1816W, on regional government, how much funding is being allocated to the regional round tables in each of the two years. [78241]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

DEFRA will contribute up to £46,000 in 2006-07 and up to £72,000 in 2007-08 towards a programme of activities put forward by each regional sustainable development round table and agreed by DEFRA.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Delegated Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of (a) the Electricity and Gas (Energy Efficiency Obligation) Order 2001 and (b) the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1998; and what recent representations he has received about the operation of each instrument. [77803]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

The Electricity and Gas (Energy Efficiency Obligations) Order 2001 enabled the Government to effectively implement the first phase of the Energy Efficiency Commitment (EEC), an obligation on electricity and gas suppliers to promote improvements in household energy efficiency. It is administered by Ofgem on behalf of Government. The first phase of the EEC is expected to lead to 0.4 million tonnes of carbon being saved annually by 2010. All energy suppliers met their targets under EEC phase 1, allowing 10 million householders to benefit from energy saving measures. The second phase of the EEC came into force on 1 April 2005 under Electricity and Gas (Energy Efficiency Obligations) Order 2004, and we have not received any recent representations about the operation of the 2001 Order. We routinely meet with energy efficiency industry stakeholders on the operation of the 2004 Order and our commitment to extend the scheme to a third three-year phase.

The Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1998 deal with the safety of gas systems and appliances in domestic and some commercial premises. The regime arising from the Regulations is under review and representations are continuing to be received.

Rural Post Office Network

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the public consultation on the future of the rural post office network is expected to commence; what the nature will be of this consultation; when it is expected to be concluded; and if he will make a statement. [78806]

Jim Fitzpatrick: We are carefully considering options for the network post 2008 and are not working to a specific timetable. There has already been informal consultation with key stakeholders and we expect to consult more widely in due course.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Benefits (Appeals)

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many appeal cases for (a) incapacity benefit, (b) disability living allowance and (c) jobseeker's allowance were lodged in each of the last five years; and how many were successful. [75387]

Vera Baird: The information is set out in the following tables.

Capita Group

Chris Grayling: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what meetings (a) she and (b) Ministers in her Department have held with directors and senior executives of (i) Capita Group plc and (ii) its subsidiaries since 1 January 2004; and whether (A) Capita Group plc and (B) its subsidiaries have provided input (1) in writing and (2) in person to policy discussions in her Department since 1 January 2004. [61084]

Ms Harman: Capita Group plc has a large number of trading subsidiaries and I am unable to provide the requested information without incurring disproportionate costs.

Cohabiting Couples

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations she has received on the Law Commission proposals that cohabiting couples have the same rights on separation as married couples on divorce. [77332]

Ms Harman: I have received no representations. The Law Commission published a consultation paper on 31 May entitled "Cohabitation: the Financial Consequences of Relationship Breakdown". The consultation period will run until 30 September. The Law Commission has not proposed giving cohabiting couples the same rights on separation as married couples on divorce. An overview document of the consultation paper is available on the Law Commission's website at www.lawcom.gov.uk/cohabitation.htm. The Government look forward to the outcome of the consultation and will consider any recommendations that the Commission makes in its final report due next year.

Compensation Bill

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the number of personal injury cases that are likely (a) to succeed and (b) to fail as a result of the use of defences proposed under Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill [Lords]; and if she will make a statement. [76544]

Vera Baird: Clause 1 does not provide a new defence against liability for negligence or breach of statutory duty, and the success or failure of a claim will not depend on it. It simply identifies a factor which the courts can already take into account in determining a claim. The court will also take all the other circumstances of the case into account.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the likely change in the total amount of compensation paid out by insurers as a consequence of defences using proposed provisions in Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill [Lords]. [76546]

Bridget Prentice: Clause 1 does not provide a new defence against liability for negligence or breach of statutory duty, and the success or failure of a claim will not depend on it. It will therefore not affect the amount of compensation paid by insurers.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of likely cases involving the use of the new defences under Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill [Lords]. [76547]

Bridget Prentice: Clause 1 does not provide a new defence against liability for negligence or breach of statutory duty, and the success or failure of a claim will not depend on it. The courts will be able to consider the factor embodied in clause 1 wherever they consider it to be relevant, as is the case now.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will bring forward a Government new clause to the Compensation Bill [Lords] to define 'desirable activity'; and if she will make a statement. [77723]

Bridget Prentice: The Government do not intend to introduce a new clause to define desirable activity. The provision in Clause 1 of the Bill gives the court the flexibility to consider all the relevant circumstances of the case to reach a fair and just decision. Including a definition of 'desirable activity' could imply that certain types of desirable activity would have more weight than others, and would not reflect the existing law.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will bring forward a Government new clause to the Compensation Bill [Lords] to overturn the House of Lords judgment in the case of Barker; and if she will make a statement. [77724]

Bridget Prentice: The Government fully understands the concerns that have been expressed about the judgment and are determined to find the best way to address the resulting issues for the claimants involved. As the Prime Minister has indicated, we are looking at this very carefully and hope to be in a position to make an announcement in the next couple of weeks.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will provide an explanatory note to define the phrase 'desirable activity' in the context of clause 1 of the Compensation Bill [Lords]. [77725]

Bridget Prentice: Defining the phrase desirable activity is not necessary or appropriate. The concept which it embodies is the very well-established one of taking the wider social value of activities into account. This reflects the existing law and the courts are already able to—and do—take these matters into account when considering all the circumstances of an individual case.

Constitutional Affairs Select Committee

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what Constitutional Affairs Select Committee recommendations her Department has (a) accepted and (b) implemented since 2001-02; and if she will make a statement. [77512]

Ms Harman: The Constitutional Affairs Select Committee (previously called the Committee on the Lord Chancellor's Department) was established in January 2003.

The Committee have since produced a number of reports. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, my Department has made it clear, in the Government responses to Select Committee reports, whether or not we accept Committee recommendations. Where accepted, we aim to implement within an appropriate time scale.

CORE

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the set-up costs were of the co-ordinated online record of electors (CORE); and what she estimates the running costs of CORE will be in the next three financial years. [78221]

Bridget Prentice: Since its inception in late 2003, expenditure of £1,726,631 has been incurred by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and the Department of Constitutional Affairs on Phase I of the CORE project-supporting in house system providers and third party vendors so that their electoral registration systems can output electoral register data in an agreed EML format standard.

A further £23,111.38 has been incurred by the Department of Constitutional Affairs in relation to Phase II of CORE, the implementation of national access arrangements.

At this stage of the project, estimates are not available for the cost of procuring a CORE information system or associated annual running costs. These will be identified shortly as part of the CORE Phase II development process.

County Court Records

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 15 May 2006, Official Report, column 732W, on county court records, whether she has received representations on (a) the Department's contract with Registry Trust and (b) the appropriateness of the contract in the context of European legislation on the re-use of public sector information. [76738]

Ms Harman: No representations have been received by the Department on its contract with Registry Trust Ltd., nor its appropriateness in the context of European legislation on the re-use of public sector information.

Registry Trust Ltd., in its role as Registrar of the Register of Judgments, Orders and Fines, carry out a statutory function on behalf of the Lord Chancellor. Therefore, the provisions of Directive 2003/98/EC, requiring public sector bodies to avoid as far as possible exclusive agreements between themselves and private partners when establishing the principles for re-use of documents, do not apply to its contract with Registry Trust Ltd.

Court Transcripts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which groups receive transcripts of court proceedings as a matter of course; and if she will make a statement. [76780]

Ms Harman: No group receives transcripts of court proceedings as a matter of course. However, transcripts are provided on request subject to payment of the appropriate transcription fees and, where necessary, subject to the necessary permission being granted by the court. In addition, transcripts are provided to the Court of Appeal in any case where appeal proceedings have been initiated.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether judges have the power to order that transcripts of court proceedings be given, free of charge, to parties other than those that normally receive them as a matter of course. [76876]

Ms Harman: There is no statutory provision that empowers judges in the Crown court to make such an order. However, transcripts are provided on request subject to payment of the appropriate transcription fees and, where necessary, subject to permission being granted by the court. Transcripts of proceedings in the Crown court are provided free of charge to any party that has been granted a right to representation by the Criminal Defence Service for the purposes of appeal proceedings. In civil proceedings, if a party to the action requires a transcript then one will be provided upon payment of the appropriate transcription charges. Under provisions in the Civil Procedure Rules an unrepresented appellant who is in difficult financial circumstances may make a request to the judge that the cost of a transcript be borne at public expense. Parties other than those to the proceedings are required to make an application to the judge for a transcript and pay the appropriate transcription fees.

Criminal Offences Legislation

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the criminal offences created in legislation sponsored by her Department since April 2005, broken down by Act. [76904]

Ms Harman: Section 44 of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 creates an offence of ill-treatment or neglect. Section 35 of the Inquiries Act 2005 creates summary offences for failure to comply with orders from an inquiry chairman.

Data Protection

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will take an early legislative opportunity to bring forward amendments to the Data Protection Act 1998 to provide that the name and identity of the author of personal data are disclosed to anyone who has sought disclosure of personal data about themselves under the provisions of the Act. [76370]

Vera Baird: We have no plans to do so. The Data Protection Act 1998 does not necessarily prevent the disclosure of such information to individuals making subject access requests to organisations for data about themselves. However, the name and identity of those who are the authors of, or who have otherwise processed that data are, themselves, personal data. Any decision on whether or not that information should be disclosed would need to be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will issue guidance on the Data Protection Act 1998 that the provisions of that Act should not prevent the exchange of relevant data between police and the owners of post box addresses at which vehicles involved in road traffic accidents are registered. [76693]

Vera Baird: We have no plans to do so. The Data Protection Act 1998 is administered and enforced independently of the Government by the Information Commissioner and it is his role to produce advice and guidance on the proper application of the Act.

The Act does not prevent the exchange of personal data, where there is a legitimate need to do so, but decisions need to be made on a case-by-case basis.

Departmental Annual Report

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many copies of her Department's annual report (Cm 6820) were produced; at what cost; who was sent copies; at what cost; who was consulted on the text prior to publication; on what criteria the retail price was decided; and if she will make a statement. [77527]

Bridget Prentice: My Department received 500 copies of the DCA departmental annual report under the terms of its contract with TSO, at a cost of £25,134 (including VAT). These were distributed free-of-charge to key stakeholders such as the judiciary, other Government Departments, magistrates, MPs and Lords, the legal profession, DCA Agencies and DCA staff. Approximately 300 of the copies were sent to external recipients via second-class post, at a total postage cost in the region of £588.

Key policy officials within DCA consulted with cross-criminal justice system partners (Home Office, CPS, Office for Criminal Justice Reform) and HM Treasury on the text and the final version approved by Ministers. The Stationery Office set the retail price of £20.50 for the report based upon their production costs for the report.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which official has lead responsibility for progress on each of the targets set out on pages 37 to 45 of the departmental annual report (Cm 6820); to whom each such official reports; what recent discussions she has had on implementation of each target; and if she will make a statement. [77528]

Vera Baird: Ministers have regular meetings with officials to discuss progress in delivering key initiatives and targets. The structure of the Department for Constitutional Affairs is available on the Department's website at www.dca.gov.uk and this site also outlines ministerial responsibilities and names senior officials. There is also an organisational chart on pages 138-39 of the departmental annual report.

Departmental Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has for legislation in the next Session of Parliament; and if she will make a statement. [77511]

Bridget Prentice: I refer the hon. Member to the response from the Leader of the House of Commons dated 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1431W.

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the Chief Accounting Officer of her Department. [76821]

Vera Baird: Alex Allan is the Principal Accounting Officer at the Department for Constitutional Affairs. He holds an MA in Mathematics (Cantab), and an MSc in Statistics (Lond). Among his extensive experience in Whitehall Departments, 14 years of his career were spent at Her Majesty's Treasury.

Accounting Officer is a role that the Permanent Secretary combines with his personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the department and for department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The Accounting Officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified and experienced senior managers including the Director General of Finance.

Departmental Documents

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which (a) individuals and (b) organisations received an embargoed copy of each (i) consultation document and (ii) White Paper produced by her Department in (A) 2005 and (B) 2006; and if she will make a statement. [77569]

Vera Baird: Embargoed copies of the Legal Services White Paper in 2005 and the draft Coroners Bill produced by DCA in 2006 were received by a range of individuals and organisations. One organisation received embargoed copies of the Draft Inquiry Procedure (UK Inquiries) Rules consultation document from my Department in 2006. The majority of DCA consultations are not embargoed.

Embargoed copies of the White Paper published on 17 October 2005 called "The Future of Legal Services: Putting Consumers First" was received by:

Chairman of the Bar Council
President of the Law Society
President of the Chartered Institute for Patent Agents
President of the Institute of Trade Mark Attorneys
Dean of the Arches and Auditor, Master of the Faculties
Chair of the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee (CASC)
Opposition spokesmen Oliver Heald MP, Simon Hughes MP, Lord Goodhart QC and The Right Honourable Lord Kingsland QC, The Lord Chief Justice
Chairman, Office of Fair Trading (OFT)
Chief Executive of Citizens Advice
Chief Executive of Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC)
Chairman of National Consumer Council (NCC)
Chairman of Prudential PLC
Chairman of Which?
The Immigration Services Commission

At a press briefing held on the morning of publication, but before publication time, embargoed copies were made available. The press, legal professions and members of the Consumer Panel (Which?, NCC, EOC, OFT, Citizens Advice, Federation of Small Businesses) were invited.

Embargoed copies of the draft Coroners Bill were received by the Constitutional Affairs Select Committee and five senior coroners ahead of publication on 12 June 2006.

The Draft Inquiry Procedure (UK Inquiries) Rules consultation document was received from DCA by ARACS Conference Services (conference organisers) ahead of publication on 1 March 2006. ARACS gave the copies out at a public seminar on public inquiries held after publication. The seminar was attended by around 40 people with knowledge or experience of inquiries, for example, solicitors.

Election Candidates

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what checks electoral returning officers are required to undertake to establish eligibility of candidates standing in UK elections. [77109]

Bridget Prentice: At UK elections, it is for candidates themselves to determine whether or not they are eligible to stand for election. The Returning Officer's role is to ensure compliance with the procedural requirements relating to the information to be provided in the nomination papers.

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what penalties are in place for candidates in UK elections who falsely claim (a) residential and (b) business status in order to stand in such elections. [77110]

Bridget Prentice: Mechanisms exist for the removal from office of candidates in UK elections who falsely claim eligibility to stand and are elected, but are subsequently found to be ineligible to hold that elected office.

There are currently no penalties that attach to the candidate other than their removal from office. However, the Electoral Administration Bill will make it an offence of corrupt practice for a candidate to knowingly give a false declaration in a nomination paper as to their qualification to stand.

Election Maladministration

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how maladministration in the conduct of an election is (a) investigated and (b) redressed; and if she will make a statement. [76536]

Bridget Prentice: The outcome of an election, and any maladministration complained of, may only be challenged by the issue of an election petition. A special election court is constituted to hear the petition.

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what redress is available to a person who believes that an electoral Returning Officer has acted improperly in conducting an election and has caused that person to suffer harm and loss. [76537]

Bridget Prentice: A person who believes that the Returning Officer has acted improperly in conducting an election has the option as part of an election petition to request such further relief or remedy as the court may deem to be just.

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints have been received regarding the conduct of an electoral returning officer in each of the last five years. [76538]

Bridget Prentice: Formal challenges to the conduct of an electoral returning officer are by way of election petition. The number of election petitions logged and heard, or to be heard, for England and Wales in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Number
2006	8
2005	3
2004	6
2003	7
2002	5

Electoral Registration

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what guidance her Department gives to local authority electoral registration departments to ensure that (a) illegal immigrants and (b) failed asylum seekers are not on the electoral register. [74085]

Bridget Prentice: The Department for Constitutional Affairs does not issue guidance to ERO's. The independent Electoral Commission has within its remit a general duty to issue advice and guidance to electoral administrators.

Electoral Returning Officers

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what options are available to investigate and deal with errors, maladministration and corrupt practice by an electoral returning officer. [78607]

Bridget Prentice: The Electoral Administration Bill provides for a returning officer to take such steps as he thinks appropriate to remedy any procedural error on the part of himself or his staff relating to the conduct of an election, although he may not re-count the votes once the result is declared.

Maladministration or corrupt practice by a returning officer that is considered to have materially affected the result of an election may be challenged by means of an election petition.

In addition, there are various offences of corrupt practice at an election, so allegations of corrupt practice by a returning officer may be referred to the police for investigation and any further action.

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints have been made against an electoral returning officer in respect of the conduct of elections in each of the last five years. [78608]

Bridget Prentice: Formal complaints against the actions of a returning officer that are considered to have materially affected the result of an election are made by election petition. Although not all election petitions allege any error or wrongdoing on the part of a returning officer, they are all required to name the returning officer as respondent to the petition.

In the last five years, the number of election petitions that have included specific complaints about the returning officer are as follows:

	Number
2002	5
2003	6
2004	4
2005	1
2006	4

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether it is a duty of an electoral returning officer to report to the police (a) the fake witnessing of a candidate's nomination papers and (b) other incidents of possible fraud during the course of an election when such incidents became known to the returning officer; and if she will make a statement. [78890]

Bridget Prentice: Returning officers are responsible for running elections and for ensuring they are conducted in accordance with the relevant rules. It is for individual returning officers to reach their own conclusions on any possible incidents of electoral malpractice or fraud, and to decide whether they should report such matters to the police.

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make it her policy to enable the police to investigate possible incidents of electoral fraud or other irregularities during or after an election other than exclusively on the instructions of a returning officer; and if she will make a statement. [78891]

Bridget Prentice: It is open to any person to report possible incidents of fraud to the police at any time. It will be for the police to decide what action to take in relation to any such reported incidents, and the nature and timing of any investigation that may take place into them.

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what duties are placed upon returning officers in respect of following advice from the Electoral Commission. [78932]

Bridget Prentice: None. The Electoral Commission issues general advice to returning officers on a range of issues relating to the conduct of elections. Returning officers are ultimately responsible for the running of elections and for deciding what action to take in any particular case to ensure they are conducted in accordance with the rules.

Freedom of Information Users Group

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs who the members are of the Freedom of Information Users Group; and what their political affiliations are. [75379]

Vera Baird: Members of the Information Rights User Group are as follows:

Ian Readhead, Deputy Chief Constable of Hampshire
Peter Bottomley, MP
Adrian Pollitt
Paul Bettison
Steve Bailey
Lord Lester of Herne Hill
John Hipwood
Professor Robert Hazell
Rosemary Jay
Maurice Frankel
Anthony Kenny
Bob Satchwell
Judith Cullen
Richard Thomas, the Information Commissioner (observer)

Lord Lester is a Liberal Democrat peer. Paul Bettison is leader of Bracknell Forest borough council (Conservative) and Peter Bottomley is a Conservative MP.

Information about the political affiliations of the other members is not held. The membership has been drawn solely on the ability of the group to assist Government in ensuring that public authorities are responsive to the needs of the users of both the Freedom of Information and Data Protection Acts and the Environmental Information Regulations. Political affiliation was not used as criteria for the selection of the User Group members.

Hutton Inquiry

Norman Baker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to her answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1666W, on the Hutton Inquiry, who the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary were at 18 July 2003; and what public inquiries each had chaired before that date. [76337]

Ms Harman: The Lords of Appeal in Ordinary in July 2003 were as follows:

Lord Bingham of Cornhill
Lord Nicholls of Birkenhead
Lord Steyn
Lord Hoffmann
Lord Hope of Craighead
Lord Hutton
Lord Saville of Newdigate
Lord Hobhouse of Woodborough
Lord Millett
Lord Scott of Foscote
Lord Rodger of Earlsferry
Lord Walker of Gestingthorpe.

Public inquiries chaired by each before that date are as follows:

Lord Bingham of Cornhill

Investigation into the supply of petroleum and petroleum products to Rhodesia—Published 1977-78. Bingham Inquiry (Bank of Credit and Commerce International)—Published October 1992.

Lord Scott of Foscote

Scott Inquiry (Inquiry into Exports of Defence Equipment and Dual Use Goods to Iraq)—Published February 1996.

Lord Saville of Newdigate

Bloody Sunday Inquiry: Commenced January 1998.

Lord Hutton

Hutton Inquiry—Published January 2004.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by her Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature was of the charges brought against them. [73958]

Ms Harman: In the last five years, of those employed in my Department, (excluding agency workers, contractors and consultants) one individual was found, in 2005, to be an illegal immigrant. This individual was employed in a full-time post. He was discovered as the result of an Immigration Officer's investigation into his status. He had provided the correct documentation in obtaining his employment with the Department, but was subsequently found to have made a false statement in order to obtain those documents. He was dismissed immediately.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many immigration appeals from appellants in Leeds were heard in South Shields in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [76600]

Bridget Prentice: The Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (AIT) operates a hearing centre at North Shields. Of the appeals heard at North Shields, in the period April to December 2005, 12 substantive appeals were from appellants with a home address in the Leeds postal area.

It is not possible to break down the substantive appeals by location of the appellant for any period prior to April 2005 without incurring disproportionate cost.

National Identity Card database

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment the Government have made of the merits of allowing the National Identity Card database to be used for electoral registration; and if she will make a statement. [78251]

Bridget Prentice: The Home Office set out the possible role of the National Identity Register and the National Identity Scheme in relation to electoral registration and voting in its evidence to the House of Commons Constitutional Affairs and ODPM: Housing, Planning, Local Government and the Regions Committees published by the Committees on 16 March 2005.

Identity cards cannot become compulsory without further primary legislation. Unless, and until, that occurs, the National Identity Register (NIR) could not replace the existing electoral registration process where an annual canvass is used to establish electoral registers.

Any future proposal to use the NIR to replace the existing electoral registration process would need detailed exploration with the Home Office, and with stakeholders, including electoral registration officers and political parties.

While the NIR could have a role in improving the quality of the information held on the electoral register and could potentially support the electoral registration process if and when identity cards become mandatory, separate registers could still be required as there are likely to be indiyiduals, such as citizens residing overseas, who may be entitled to vote but may not be on the NIR.

Parliamentary Boundaries

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, column 1472W, on parliamentary boundaries, when she expects the Committee on Standards in Public Life to publish its review of the functions of the Electoral Commission; and how long after the review is published she expects the Government to decide the timing for transferring responsibility for parliamentary boundaries to the Electoral Commission. [77392]

Bridget Prentice: The Committee on Standards in Public Life is independent of the Government and therefore the timing is not a matter for the Government to decide. However, we understand that the Committee aims to complete the review by the "turn of the year". The Government will then consider the recommendations and make a decision as to the timing of the Boundary Commission transfers as soon as possible following publication of the Committee's final report.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the Parliamentary Ombudsman have been (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by her Department since 1997. [76262]

Bridget Prentice: Since 1997 the DCA and its predecessors, including its executive agencies and NDPBs, have declined to give full effect on two occasions to recommendations made by the Parliamentary Ombudsman. These were both in relation to complaints made under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. The Ombudsman's reports on these two cases are in the Library.

Rape/Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) how many rape cases were abandoned by the Crown Prosecution Service because of failure of the (a) victim and (b) accused to attend court proceedings in the last period for which figures are available; [76733]

(2) how many rape cases in (a) England and Wales and (b) Bedfordshire were dropped because of witness non-attendance at court proceedings in the last period for which figures are available. [76759]

Ms Harman: In cases listed for trial in the Crown court during the period October 2005 to March 2006 there were eight rape cases where the prosecution ended the case because a witness was absent or withdrawn. There were a further five cases which were adjourned to a later date because a prosecution witness, other than a police officer or expert witness, was absent and an additional 21 cases adjourned because the defendant failed to attend court.

In England and Wales there were 18 rape cases listed for trial where the trial did not take place through witness non-attendance on the day. Of these eight cases were ended by the prosecution and 10 cases were adjourned and listed for another date. There were no such instances recorded at Luton Crown court in Bedfordshire during this period.

Figures relating to magistrates court proceedings are not collected centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost to the Department.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the maximum number of court appearances was in (a) domestic violence and (b) rape cases after which the case failed to be heard in (i) England and Wales, (ii) Luton and (iii) Bedfordshire over the last five years. [76734]

Ms Harman: This information is not collected centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost to the Department.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will bring forward legislation preventing the provision of UK public funding to any organisation or programme which supports or participates in the management of a programme of coercive abortion or involuntary sterilisation; and if he will make a statement. [77570]

Mr. Thomas: We do not intend to bring forward legislation on this issue. The UK does not provide funds to organisations that support or participate in coercive abortion or involuntary sterilisation.

Burma

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects his Department funds in Burma to support (a) the Shan ethnic minority and (b) the Pa-o ethnic minority in Shan state. [77800]

Mr. Thomas: DFID funds a number of projects in Shan state: the Fund for HIV/AIDS in Myanmar, to which DFID has committed £10 million over five years, provides anti-retroviral treatment in almost every township; a project to strengthen the capacity of doctors to provide affordable TB and malaria services to low-income people (£393,275 over three years) operates in the north and west of the state; and a programme with Save the Children to provide early childhood care and education (£2.7 million over three years) in the most northern townships. These projects have been designed with the primary purpose of reducing poverty, rather than to support specific ethnic minority groups, any of which are able to access all of these projects.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what cross-border aid has been provided to Karen refugees following the Burmese Government's recent military offensive against civilians. [78099]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has not provided funds for cross border aid from Thailand for internally displaced people in Burma. We are, however, supporting efforts to provide limited emergency assistance to displaced people from inside Burma and we are providing funding to help support refugees in Thailand.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development to what reforms the regime in Burma has agreed to facilitate the new three diseases fund for Burma. [78487]

Hilary Benn: The concept of DFID involvement in the new multi-donor fund to tackle HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria in Burma was agreed by Ministers in March 2006, but the detail of the project has yet to be finally approved. In the process of preparing for a decision, DFID is, with the other donor partners, involved in a process of consultation with the regime in Burma to ensure that they do not seek to apply restrictions which would prevent the effective operation of the Three Diseases Fund.

Congo

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. [78083]

Hilary Benn: The humanitarian situation in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) is very serious across the country, especially in the eastern provinces of Katanga (particularly North Katanga), North and South Kivu and Province Orientale (especially Ituri district). The UN Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs estimates that approximately 1.6 million people are internally displaced and over 300,000 are refugees in neighbouring countries.

Increased conflict in North Katanga since November last year has led to a rise in displacement and this has contributed to a much higher monthly average of new displacements in 2006 compared to 2005, at over 100,000 newly displaced per month compared to 35,000 per month last year. It is hoped that the recent surrender of a Mayi-Mayi commander from that region may lead to greater stability.

Elsewhere in the East, external armed groups such as the Forces Democratiques de Liberation du Rwanda (FDLR) in the Kivus and other rebels groups operating in Ituri, as well as ill-disciplined brigades of the DRC army, are committing abuses such as theft and violence, including high levels of sexual violence, against the civilian population. Operations by the Congolese army against the armed groups, often carried out jointly with MONUC (UN Peacekeeping force in the DRC), are frequently the cause of civilian displacement.

Mechanisms are in place to get assistance to those who need it quickly, but lack of access due to insecurity and logistical difficulties can lead to delays.

The UK has strongly supported efforts by the UN to mobilise greater international funding to meet humanitarian needs. DFID has increased UK humanitarian support to the DRC to £60 million over two years. Some other countries have also increased funding, but overall support remains far too low to meet all the needs. The DRC remains a neglected crisis. I have called on my donor counterparts to do more and will continue to keep up the pressure to ensure that funding is forthcoming to meet all the desperate needs in the DRC.

Foreign Travel

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent on foreign travel by his Department in each of the last eight years. [76063]

Mr. Thomas: Figures for travel costs within administration cost budgets for years which information is readily available are shown in the following table:

2001-02	2,358
2002-03	2,645
2003-04	10,677
2004-05	13,337
2005-06	12,646

The figures for travel reflect all domestic and overseas travel for Ministers, Advisers and Officials and include costs for all travel, accommodation and subsistence. It is not possible to disaggregate costs for Officials' travel overseas without incurring a disproportionate cost. Information for earlier years is not readily available and in some cases will no longer be held.

In 2003-04, DFID introduced new procedures to draw together administration costs, including those travel costs which had previously been recorded on the programme budget. These changes have increased transparency and have enabled DFID to manage administration costs more effectively. Figures for 2003-04 onwards now include travel costs that were previously funded by country programmes and as a result are not comparable with earlier years.

Since 1999, the Government have published, on an annual basis, the total costs of all ministerial overseas travel and a list of all visits by Cabinet Ministers costing in excess of £500. This information is available in the Library. Information for the financial year 2004-05 was published on 21 July 2005, Official Report, column 158WS. Information for the financial year 2005-06 is in the process of being collated and will be published shortly.

Indonesia

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for how long the UK will provide assistance to the area affected by the recent Indonesian earthquake. [77932]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's £5 million contribution towards humanitarian relief is for immediate use (£1 million to the International Federation of the Red Cross/Crescent, £3 million to the UN and £1 million to NGOs).

We will consider further financial support covering the next two years, based upon requests from the Indonesian Government.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on the humanitarian situation in Sierra Leone. [78084]

Hilary Benn: The situation in Sierra Leone is stable and the country has made considerable progress since the end of the civil war in 2002. This was confirmed by the withdrawal of the United Nations Peacekeeping Force, UNAMSIL in December 2005. However, considerable challenges remain and the state is fragile. Current threats to continued stability include frustration resulting from large-scale unemployment, particularly among young men, and the weak capacity of government to deliver basic services. Poverty is high, with 70 per cent. estimated to be living below the poverty line. The run-up to the 2007 elections is likely to be a period of increased tension within the country and insecurity in other countries in the region may also present challenges to continued stability.

Sierra Leone is currently ranked 176 out of 177 on the Human Development Index and continues to have some of the worst health indicators in the world, particularly in terms of maternal and child mortality. Malaria is a major cause of death. There are occasional epidemics of cholera and Lassa fever poses a regional threat in the east of the country.

There are currently approximately 40,000 refugees in Sierra Leone principally from Liberia. With improved stability in Liberia, many of these have started, or are preparing to go home. Since January 2006, some 9,000 have returned. DFID has supported the care and maintenance of Liberian refugees in camps across the region for some years, and more recently has financed their repatriation from Sierra Leone and other countries. In 2005, £1.1 million was committed for these objectives, and this year, a further £700,000 has been allocated. In addition, DFID has spent over £3.5 million per year for the last three years to help rebuild Liberia and thereby encourage refugees from Sierra Leone and other countries to return home.

DFID's programme since the end of the war has concentrated on security and rebuilding government institutions and these will remain an important component of the country programme. The programme is currently developing its strategy for the next three years, and as part of this is exploring options for expanding its work in the areas of basic services, economic development and job creation. Through our country-office in Freetown, and from Africa Division's Conflict and Humanitarian Unit in London, we are monitoring the humanitarian situation closely.

South America

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what academic research is (a) being undertaken and (b) planned on the Department's South America policy. [78053]

Mr. Thomas: DFID's central policy in the region is to deliver its assistance to Latin America (including both Central and South America) through its Regional Assistance Plan 2004-2007; copies of this document are available in the Libraries of the House.

Within the framework of this Plan, programmes are tackling regional issues such as HIV-AIDS; improving the impact of the Inter-American Development Bank and World Bank on poverty and inequality; strengthening national development strategies and donor alignment; and improving understanding of the impact of trade on poverty in Latin America. Analytical and research work is supported as part of these programmes. DFID's Regional Assistance Plan and policy for Latin America is scheduled to be reviewed in early 2007.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make an urgent assessment of the impact of disease outbreaks in internally displaced persons camps in Darfur. [78929]

Hilary Benn: The only significant disease outbreak currently affecting Darfur is that of the 75 cases of acute watery diarrhoea in South Darfur. The outbreak has so far claimed four lives in the state, with cases concentrated in Nyala, Kass and El-Daein towns. The first report of the outbreak was on 24 May 2006 and all four deaths to date occurred on 24-25 May 2006. This reflects the effective planning and response by the Government and humanitarian agencies. Although, the vast majority of cases have been amongst town residents rather than in the internally displaced persons (IDP) camps, the unconfirmed reports of a case in Gereida, where 100,000 IDPs have sought shelter, is of concern.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) and the Ministry of Health have established a task force to co-ordinate the response. In accordance with their contingency plans, a public health campaign has been launched, broadcasting hygiene promotion messages on local TV and radio. The immediate response has also included the mapping of cases, identifying high risk areas for chlorination of water supplies and testing. In preparation for an outbreak, the WHO stockpiled cholera treatment kits across Darfur. These have proved invaluable in enabling the immediate response. In addition, a Cholera Treatment Centre has been set up in Nyala with the capacity to handle 50 patients a day.

Water Access

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to support public-public partnerships as a means of improving access to clean water and sanitation in the developing world. [78892]

Hilary Benn: I attach great importance to ensuring increased access to safe water supply and sanitation in the developing world and have recently committed to doubling DFID's expenditure on the provision of these basic services in Africa to £95 million by 2007-08. However, while we recognise the importance of 'public-public' partnerships, our focus is on a pragmatic approach led by our partner countries, to ensure we are doing what works, and recognising that there can be failures of both private and public models.

In practice, the majority of our work on rural, urban and humanitarian water supply and sanitation services is spent through Governments, not-for-profit or humanitarian agencies (this was around 95 per cent. of our bilateral spend in 2003-04). We are currently actively involved in seven African countries (Ethiopia, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), Malawi, Mozambique, Rwanda, Tanzania and Zambia). In these countries our effort is focused on helping Government and donors deliver more effective water services. We are engaged in sector working groups which aim to promote partnerships (including within the public sector and civil society) that will deliver effective services on the ground and increase access for poor people through better co-ordination at both national and local level.

I am closely monitoring our progress in water and sanitation and DFID publishes regular updates on our website. The latest update is available on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov.uk

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking to assist poorer countries in improving their water supplies. [78893]

Hilary Benn: DFID is committed to helping achieve the Millennium Development Goal (MDG) target of halving the proportion of people without access to safe water by 2015. Our programmes are focused on sub-Saharan Africa and parts of Asia, where achieving the target will be most difficult.

DFID's Water and Sanitation strategy was set out in the 2004 Water Action plan. The Secretary of State has reinforced DFID's commitment to doing more in his speeches on World Water day in March 2005, and at DFID's External Water Forum in February 2006.

DFID is committed to doubling spending on water in Africa to £95 million by 2008. We are currently actively involved in seven African countries (Ethiopia, DRC, Malawi, Mozambique, Rwanda, Tanzania and Zambia), up from only two years ago; and through our funding of other agencies' programmes, we reach many other countries. We are also committed to creating an international system that works more effectively than it does now. We work closely with the World Bank, which is now more focused on water, and with UN Water, to improve co-ordination of the UN agencies operating water and sanitation programmes.

DFID closely monitors progress in water and sanitation and publishes regular updates on the DFID website. The latest update is available on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov.uk

World Bank

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what key proposals he made to the World Bank Spring Meeting; what decisions the Bank took on (a) these proposals and (b) other matters; and if he will make a statement. [77763]

Hilary Benn: Major UK objectives for the World Bank 2006 Spring Meeting were delivery on 2005 commitments, governance and corruption, climate change and clean energy, and the Investment Climate Facility (ICF) for Africa. The Development Committee focused its discussion on two World Bank documents: (i) The Global Monitoring Report (GMR) 2006: Strengthening Mutual Accountability—Aid, Trade and Governance and (ii) Clean Energy and Development: Towards an Investment Framework.

The GMR sets out clearly the progress that has been made on tackling poverty, and the challenges that remain. We noted that almost all developing countries are off-track to meet at least some of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), and the lack of progress in Africa is especially worrying. More aid is clearly essential, and it must be delivered more effectively. We called on the World Bank, other bilateral and multilateral agencies to take action, and ensure that we live up to the commitments made in Paris on aid effectiveness last year, including a country-based approach. The Results and Resources Frameworks, first suggested in the Bank's Africa Action Plan, are a good vehicle for improving mutual accountability and we urged the Bank to develop and implement them quickly. We also called on donors to give more emphasis to assisting the poorest countries, including fragile states and make commitments to increased and long-term resources for education so that developing countries can fully finance their education plans over the long-term.

The Development Committee agreed that donors should fully implement the commitments they have made for substantial increases in aid volumes, and that the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) have a key role in helping countries ensure that increases in aid volumes can be absorbed effectively, consistent with macro-economic stability and growth objectives. Rapid progress was required to implement the framework agreed in the Paris Declaration for enhancing aid effectiveness through a stronger focus on results. Donors need to improve the quality of aid, modalities of aid delivery to reduce volatility, achieve greater predictability, and provide stronger alignment with national poverty reduction strategies. They were encouraged where possible to move towards multi-year plans and commitments, and be ready to finance recurrent costs where sector policies are sound and fiduciary conditions are adequate. The Committee agreed that the World Bank and other partners should improve their coordination at the country level, particularly in strengthening health services and improving access to good quality education, to reduce transaction costs and help increase absorptive capacity. Donors should fill the Education Fast Track Initiative current financing gap and a progress report on Education for All should be submitted to the Annual Meeting in Singapore. The Committee urged the Bank to implement the annual Results and Resources Frameworks.

The focus of this year's GMR was governance. Prior to the Development Committee, I wrote an article on corruption and participated in a forum on governance and corruption at the Center for Global Development in Washington. At the Committee, I underlined that governance was critical for development and achieving the MDGs, and an essential element of the compact between developing countries, developed countries and international institutions. Only countries themselves can make the decisive changes that are needed. However, donors can help the process of creating more effective states and it is vital that we assist. The proposed Bank framework for monitoring provided a practical and useful starting point, and should be developed further to include aspects such as the extent to which the state responds to the wishes of the people, particularly the poor. We strongly supported the message in the report that corruption is an outcome of poor governance, and caused by a number of failures of national and global systems. It should not be tolerated; but we made clear that our work on tackling corruption needs to get better at addressing the failures, and connect better with the people who have the power and motivation to do something about it. The international community must work collaboratively and take a firm line on the need to tackle and prevent corruption. It must not equate to doing nothing in poor countries where corruption is an issue. Instead, we must find more effective ways of engaging.

I called on the World Bank to develop a framework for assisting developing countries with their long-term efforts to improve governance, and tackle corruption where it needs addressing. The framework will need to include how we can best ensure that aid is used for the purpose for which it was intended. This will include strong, independent units to detect and investigate fraud; strengthening national financial and accountability systems more effectively; and how to address the corruption that comes from beyond national borders, including developing global initiatives, such as the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative. We urged the World Bank to consult widely in taking forward this work, recognising that addressing governance failures will require action from all parts of the international community, not only from developing countries. It is essential that the framework commands broad support.

The Development Committee endorsed these views and the main messages of the report. It called on the World Bank to develop and submit to the Annual Meetings in Singapore a broad strategy for helping member countries strengthen governance and deepen the fight against corruption, with clear guidelines for World Bank operations.

On clean energy and development, I made clear that the effects of climate change are already being felt in many developing countries and will seriously impact our global efforts to reduce poverty and meet the MDGs. Responsibility for mitigating climate change requires urgent action on the part of richer countries, while some fast-growing middle-income countries must shift to cleaner, more efficient energy production to avoid exacerbating the problem. Meanwhile, developing countries need access to affordable, reliable and clean energy to grow their economies and to lift people out of poverty. We urged the international community to act now to support countries to do this in a sustainable way and so achieve a double-dividend of poverty reduction and environmental protection. Helping member countries meet these challenges should be a key objective of the World Bank and other multilateral development banks over the coming years.

We welcomed the valuable work undertaken already in the World Bank to develop an investment framework to accelerate investment in clean energy, energy efficiency and adaptation to climate change. This now needs to be developed further into an ambitious global investment framework based on sound analysis of existing financial resources and identification of gaps where new instruments are needed. We urged the World Bank to work closely with the multilateral development banks, private sector and civil society to create a global joint investment framework to be presented at the Annual Meetings in Singapore. The Development Committee endorsed the importance of this work and asked the Bank to submit a report on progress towards an investment framework in September.

In the margins of the Spring Meetings, I co-hosted with President Wolfowitz a meeting to raise awareness among donors and African countries of the Investment Climate Facility for Africa. African governments and institutions know that creating the right environment in which people and firms feel comfortable investing their money is crucial for Africa's prosperity. If Africa is to achieve the growth necessary to meet the MDGs, the business environment must improve significantly. Boosting African growth and poverty reduction is, ultimately, what the ICF is all about. I urged donors to co-fund the ICF and cooperate operationally so that it can add value and truly be complementary to existing work. African participants welcomed the formation of the ICF with its strong African ownership. Donors (including the International Finance Corporation and the European Commission) and companies have also responded positively and the ICF was launched in Africa on 1 June.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development to what extent the World Bank and International Monetary Fund require developing countries to liberalise their economies as a condition for aid; and what recent changes have been made to their policies on liberalisation. [77764]

Hilary Benn: In 2004, the World Bank abolished its practice of "prescriptive conditionally", which meant countries were urged to adopt specific economic policies to receive budgetary support. The UK pressed for a review of the World Bank's use of conditionality, and this concluded in September 2005. The World Bank undertook analysis of previous practice and recent thinking, and sought contributions and views from many sources, including developing countries. I made a written submission, setting out the Government's stance, and particularly emphasising the importance of country ownership in setting the development agenda. The review report has been published and is available on the World Bank website at www.worldbank.org. It showed that the use of conditionality in sensitive areas, such as trade liberalisation and privatisation, had declined in recent years. The review also proposed five good practice principles to guide the World Bank's use of conditionality, and these were endorsed by ministers.

The principles are:

Ownership

Conditionality should reinforce, not undermine, country ownership of policies and programmes.

Harmonisation

Conditionality should be agreed up-front with the government and with other donors, as part of a wider framework for assessing progress on poverty reduction.

Customisation

Conditionality should reflect country circumstances.

Criticality

Conditionality that determines whether to release money should include only those actions that are critical for the programme's success.

Transparency

Conditionality should be specified so that it can be reviewed transparently, and so ensure that the Bank's financial support is predictable.

The World Bank will be reporting back in the next few months on how it has implemented these principles.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has also improved its practice on conditionality in recent years. The conditionality guidelines approved by the IMF in 2002 are similar to those adopted by the World Bank. A review of IMF conditionality last year demonstrated a sharper focus on core areas of the Fund's remit in macroeconomic management and a reduction in conditions on privatisation and liberalisation. A separate review of the Fund's trade policy and conditions showed a sharp reduction in overall conditions on trade policy since the adoption of the guidelines. In addition, it demonstrated a shift towards conditions on trade governance, such as reforming customs administration, and away from trade policy such as tariffs. The Independent Evaluation Office of the IMF is currently undertaking a study to look at the process of setting conditionality on economic reforms, which is expected to report later this year.

Information on the number of abortions in 2005 is not yet available. In 2004 there were 2,324 admissions to hospitals in Northern Ireland with a diagnosis of abortion, which includes miscarriage and unintentional loss of the foetus, 59 of these were medical abortions.

2005-06	783

In the financial year 1998-99 the Northern Ireland Customer Services section devolved responsibility for customer complaints to individual teams. Problems in the uniformity of recording complaints resulted in the data not presenting a true reflection of the numbers received.

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will keep a separate total for the annual amount spent on alcohol for hospitality purposes in each Department in Northern Ireland, including his Office. [77313]

Mr. Hanson: There are no plans to separately record expenditure on alcohol at this time. However, all Departments separately monitor spend on hospitality generally in accordance with principles set out by HM Treasury and in line with the practicality of financial coding.

David Cairns: Government policy is to encourage the use of sustainable travel and Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office may offer advances of salary to assist staff with the purchase of season tickets.

Translink, through its Corporate Commuter Initiative, encourages both public and private sector employees to use public transport to and from their workplace. Under this initiative, Translink has worked with the Department for Social Development, the Department for Employment and Learning and the Department for Culture Arts and Leisure providing assistance to staff such as personalised transport plans.

The Travelwise Scheme operated by Roads Service, provides advice to all Northern Ireland Government Departments on workplace travel plans and encourages sustainable travel, including the greater use of public transport.

Domiciliary Care Workers

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what rate per mile is paid for travel carried out by domiciliary care workers in each of the Northern Ireland health and social services trusts. [73544]

Paul Goggins: The actual rate of travel for HPSS employees is a matter for the employer to decide and up-to-date information on the rates in payment is not held centrally. It will take some time to collate this information and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as it is available and place a copy in the Library.

Substantive answer from Paul Goggins to Mr. Gregory Campbell:

Mileage rates paid to domiciliary care workers

Trust	Mileage rate

Regular user allowance is paid to employees who are designated by their employer as an essential car user (but it is uneconomic or not possible to offer a leased car) and where in the course of their employment they are required to travel either:

1. An average of more than 3,500 miles a year; or

2. An average of at least 1,250 miles a year and uses their car on average three days a week or spend 50 per cent. of their time on travel; or

3. An average of at least 1,000 miles a year and use their car on average four days a week.

Up to 3,500 miles (pence)	34	43	53
Thereafter (pence)	16.2	18.3	20.5

Public transport mileage rate is payable at 23p per mile where the employer deems that standard or regular user rates do not apply.

European Evidence Warrant

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the European Evidence Warrant on cross border crime; and if he will make a statement. [78710]

Mr. Hain: I welcome agreement on the European Evidence Warrant which will improve and speed up the process of obtaining evidence from other member states for use in criminal proceedings.

Investigators and prosecutors require an effective system that delivers the evidence they require within a reasonable time. This is essential to combat terrorism and other serious, organised crime which involves an international element.

Historical Inquiry Team

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the Historical Inquiry Team's (HIT) budget has been set aside to investigate the murder of Robert and Thomas Dobson in Moy on 16 May 1976; and if he will make a statement on the HIT's investigation into this case. [78270]

Paul Goggins: The Government have committed a total of £34 million, over six years, to the Unresolved Deaths project. Of this amount, the Historical Inquiry Team (HIT) has been allocated £24.2 million to review unresolved deaths relating to the security situation in Northern Ireland from 1968 to April 1998, and assist in bringing resolution for the families of victims affected by these deaths.

The HIT have confirmed that the deaths of Robert and Thomas Dobson will come within their remit. Of the funding provided to the HIT, there is no set amount allocated for each case. Spend on individual cases will not be known until the review of such cases is taken forward, as this depends on what work is required to be done and if any new evidential opportunities exist.

Hospital Treatment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many heart bypass operations were carried out in NHS hospitals in Northern Ireland in each year since 1995. [78760]

Paul Goggins: The number of heart bypass operations performed in hospitals in Northern Ireland in each year since 1994-95 is detailed in the following table.

Heart bypass operations in Northern Ireland

	Number
1994-95	845
1995-96	872
1996-97	872

Housing Stock

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what housing stock is held by the Housing Executive in (a) each Belfast district and (b) Castlereagh district; and how many houses have been sold in each area in the last 10 years. [78717]

Mr. Hanson: The information requested is as follows:

Housing Executive District Office	Stock at 31 March 2006	House sales completed from the financial year ending 1996-1997 to end of May 2006
Belfast 1	2,146	1,486

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by his Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73962]

Paul Goggins: Since 2001 the Northern Ireland Office is unaware of having employed any illegal immigrants.

Local Authorities

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the expected cost savings are from the Government's plan to reduce the number of local authorities in Northern Ireland. [78265]

David Cairns: Savings from the Review of Public Administration (RPA) decisions on local government have been estimated at £54-£73 million. The final figures will depend on how the proposals are implemented.

More robust cost models will be evolved as part of the process of developing and delivering an implementation programme for the RPA as it impacts on local government. All savings achieved will be available for reallocation to front-line services in Northern Ireland.

Modernisation Fund

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications for the Modernisation Fund (a) have been received by the Department for Social Development and (b) have been successful. [78883]

Mr. Hanson: The Department for Social Development has received 163 applications for funding from the Modernisation Fund Revenue Programme. The 40 highest scoring organisations have now proceeded to the final stage of the assessment process and are undergoing detailed economic appraisal. Successful applicants will begin to be notified within four weeks. All 163 organisations who applied have been contacted by the Department and advised of the status of their application.

Northern Ireland Police Fund

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1489W, on Northern Ireland Police Fund, why the Department does not maintain a record of the community breakdown of staff; and whether members of staff in the Northern Ireland Police Funds are required to complete a community background check as part of the appointment process. [77104]

Paul Goggins: Given the status of the Northern Ireland Police Fund, appointment processes including community background checks are a matter for the board of directors of the Fund. I have been advised by the Northern Ireland Police Fund that in accordance with Article 48(2) of the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998 community background details are not required to be held in respect of the staff.

Police Complaints

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints against the Police Service of Northern Ireland were received by the Police Ombudsman in 2005-06. [77372]

Paul Goggins: The Police Ombudsman has advised that 3,108 complaints against the Police Service of Northern Ireland were received by the Police Ombudsman in 2005-06.

Security Forces (Republic of Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1605W, on security forces (Republic of Ireland), why no record is kept of occasions when security forces from the Republic of Ireland enter Northern Ireland with the consent of UK authorities while on operation. [77211]

Paul Goggins: PSNI "operations" are broadly defined as duties which include all manner of policing activities such as anti-terrorism, combating drug-smuggling, briefings, presentations, joint enquiries, investigations etc. These activities will, of necessity, cross many District Command Units and Departments and the resultant records are likely to number in the thousands. To quantify the number of occasions during which operations from the Irish Republic have, with consent, crossed into Northern Ireland would, therefore, be time-consuming and disproportionately costly.

Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont Spy Ring

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were interviewed by the Police Service of Northern Ireland in connection with the Sinn Fein/IRA Stormont spy ring; and how many files recommending prosecution were forwarded by the Police Service of Northern Ireland to the Public Prosecution Service. [65324]

Paul Goggins: Five people in total were arrested by the PSNI in connection with this incident. Four of the five people were subsequently recommended for prosecution. This was split into two prosecution files.

Taxis

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many licensed taxi drivers are operating in Northern Ireland. [78728]

David Cairns: At 15 June 2006 there were 16,880 licensed taxi drivers in Northern Ireland.

Toxic Sludge

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 1 March 2006, Official Report, column 786W, on toxic sludge, to which local government authority areas the four prosecution cases by the Environment and Heritage Service relate. [78730]

David Cairns: The Environment and Heritage Service is investigating four incidents involving spreading of sludges to land in breach of regulations. The council areas to which these relate are Moyle, Londonderry, Lisburn and Craigavon.

Waste Management

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much grant has been allocated to each local government authority in Northern Ireland for waste management for 2006-07. [78731]

David Cairns: The total capital grant for 2006-07 is £7,000,000, the details of which are set out as follows:

Capital grant for 2006-07

WORK AND PENSIONS

Action Teams

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 22 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1475-78W, to the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn, Badenoch and Strathspey (Danny Alexander), on action teams, how many whole-time equivalent staff are allocated to each action team; and how many were allocated to each in the two previous years. [75250]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) black and Asian and (b) other people are employed in his Department's press office. [74356]

Mrs. McGuire: As at 31 May 2006 the total number of people employed in the Department's press office, including all management and admin staff is 61.

Information on ethnicity is collected on a voluntary basis. On grounds of confidentiality we are unable to provide the information requested on how many black and Asian staff are employed within press office.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many of his staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age; [77192]

(2) how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into his Department in each of the last three years. [77193]

Mrs. McGuire: The number of staff in the Department aged under 55 years and over 55 years of age is in the following table.

	Headcount	Full-time equivalent (FTE)
Under 55 years	113,641	102,668
Over 55 years	16,434	15,010

Notes:
1. Staff numbers are point in time as at 31 December 2005.
2. Figures include temporary staff.
3. Staffing for Health and Safety Executive not included.

The number of recruits to the Department over the age of 55 years in each of the last three years is in the following table.

Year ending December	Headcount	FTE
2003	44	40
2004	481	448
2005	423	402

Note:
Figures include temporary staff.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75094]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Department for Work and Pensions offers incentives to staff to encourage more sustainable forms of travel; these include salary advances for the purchase of season travel tickets. Concessionary bus passes are available in some locations.

The Department promotes sustainable travel to work. 'Sustainable Transport Travel' pages are available on the intranet. The travel pages promote awareness of travel options and include a copy of the departmental generic travel plan. Details of greener forms of transport are also included in the departmental induction pack.

Employment and Support Allowance Claimants

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the proposed criteria are for the reserved circumstances group of employment and support allowance claimants; and how these will be decided. [78363]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The new employment and support allowance will focus on how we can help people into work and will not automatically assume that because a person has a specific health condition or disability they are incapable of work.

We are still developing details of the criteria that will decide whether a person's physical or mental functions are so severely limited that it would be unreasonable to require them to engage in work-related activity. We want to ensure that the criteria are based on functional ability, not on diagnosis, and that they will correctly identify those who should receive benefit without having to take part in work-related activity, without dismissing those for whom engagement is possible.

In developing the criteria, we are taking into account the comments that have been made in response to the Government's consultation paper.

Employment Services (Disabled People)

Mr. Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to consult on the review of employment services for disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [77938]

Mrs. McGuire: It is our intention to formally consult later this year on the proposals emerging from the review of services for disabled people.

Free TV Licences

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has spent on the provision of free television licences for over 75-year-olds in (a) Coventry and (b) the West Midlands in each of the last five years. [78032]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available. TV licence expenditure figures are not available broken down by constituency or Government office region.

Illegal Immigrants (Benefits)

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate has been made of the total amount of benefits paid to illegal immigrants in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [79003]

Mr. Plaskitt: Illegal immigrants are not entitled to DWP administered benefits.

Jobcentre Plus

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how, under its Employer Engagement Strategy, local resources in Jobcentre Plus will be matched to services required by major national employers; and how (a) consistency of service delivery across the country and (b) effective communication and liaison between specialist delivery teams will be ensured. [76510]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how, under our Employer Engagement Strategy local resources in Jobcentre Plus will be matched to services required by major national employers; and how consistency of service delivery across the country and effective communication and liaison between specialist delivery teams will be ensured. This is something, which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus has a National Sales Team that provides an account management service to our major national employers. The Account Managers work at a strategic level to develop and agree Service Level Agreements with these companies. These Service Level Agreements are communicated to geographically-based Account Managers who ensure that they are used as a basis to agree local solutions to meet individual recruitment needs. The same Account Managers are responsible for engaging with service delivery colleagues within Jobcentres to resolve any issues involving employer requirements or service delivery.

In addition to this, the National Sales Team is fully committed and engaged in the Employer Engagement Strategy at all levels of Jobcentre Plus through Vacancy Planning. Working with delivery colleagues, they are able to ensure that regional and district plans reflect the current and future needs of national employers.

In support of these activities Jobcentre Plus will shortly be introducing the Employer Relationship Management IT system, which will provide an unprecedented level of data on employers and the labour market in general. Analysis of this data will allow Jobcentre Plus to provide tailored services that meet the needs of employers.

Employer engagement strategies and marketing campaigns will all emanate from this new system and local resources will be channelled accordingly. Consistency of service will be ensured across the whole of Jobcentre Plus as access to the system will be restricted to key decision makers, such as the Account Managers, who manage the interests of the major national employers and will be able to communicate appropriate strategies throughout the organisation.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps are being taken to improve liaison between Jobcentre Plus and (a) other parts of his Department and (b) other Government Departments and agencies. [76515]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the steps being taken to improve the liaison between Jobcentre Plus and (a) the other parts of his Department and (b) other Government departments and agencies. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Our new organisational structures, introduced in April, place a new focus on effective partnership working. At Board level this is provided through a Director of External Relations and Communication; and at strategic and operational levels we have external relations functions that maximise the effectiveness of our national, regional and local partnerships.

In particular we now have a team specifically responsible for leading on our relationships with the key governmental organisations with whom we work to deliver our shared agenda on social security and benefit issues affecting our customers. They are in the process of reviewing existing partnership agreements, setting up new ones where they do not already exist and reviewing and improving day to day liaison arrangements. Organisations within the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) covered by this work include the Child Support Agency, Debt Management, the Disability and Carers Service and The Pension Service. Outside DWP the work covers Local Authorities, the Tribunal Service, the Veterans Agency and HM Revenue and Customs.

In parallel Jobcentre Plus works with a range of other Government organisations nationally to improve opportunities for people to move into and stay in work. These organisations include, for example, Regional Development Agencies, the devolved administrations, and the Learning and Skills Council. We also work closely on a wide range of issues with the Home Office's Prison and Probation Services (National Offender Management Service) and Immigration and Nationality Directorate. Opportunities are continually sought to strengthen liaison across all of these partnerships.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the introduction of the Adviser Achievement Tool into Jobcentre Plus. [76519]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. I have asked her to provide the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question regarding the introduction of the Adviser Achievement Tool (AAT) into Jobcentre Plus. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The AAT was introduced in April 2006 to ensure all our advisers make an effective contribution to Jobcentre Plus' aims, and to identify those advisers who may need additional help to achieve this. The AAT supports the new Job Outcome Target which introduces a change to the way performance is measured. All job outcomes will count towards achievement of this target, not just those achieved through Jobcentre Plus notified vacancies or financial initiatives. Advisers will no longer have individual points targets linked to job entries as part of their personal objectives.

The AAT has been designed to improve adviser performance and strengthen the support for advisers and their managers. It reflects the new approach to evaluating individual performance which is required under the new target regime. It is supplemented by individually tailored Improvement Plans which managers and advisers will use to address personal development issues. It is intended that the AAT will provide an indicator of advisers' performance and will help their managers to regularly monitor adviser achievements.

Adviser managers will not rely on the AAT alone to deliver performance improvements. Other activities such as mandatory observations from the Quality Assurance Framework must also be undertaken on a regular basis, in conjunction with agreed individual objectives as part of the Department's internal Performance Development System.

We will be evaluating and refining the AAT throughout the year as the Job Outcome Target system becomes more established and we learn more about the blend of quality and productivity information needed to optimise individual adviser performance.

I hope this is helpful.

Medical Assessments

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of medical assessments for (a) disability living allowance, (b) attendance allowance, (c) industrial injuries disablement benefit and incapacity benefit and (d) incapacity benefit have been classified as (i) Grade A, (ii) Grade B and (iii) Grade C in each year in which ATOS Origin and SEMA Group have been conducting such assessments. [76880]

Mrs. McGuire: Information is not available prior to September 2004 due to concerns about the reliability of the available data. No separate breakdown is available for attendance allowance and disability living allowance figures. The available information is in the following table.

Percentage of medical reports in each grade for benefits and dates shown

	Grade
Benefit type/Period	A	B	C
Incapacity benefit
September 2004 to August 2005	79	18	4
September 2005 to May 2006	76	21	3
Disability living allowance and attendance allowance
September 2004 to August 2005	69	27	4

Percentage of medical reports in each grade for benefits and dates shown

Benefit type/Period	Grade A	B	C
September 2005 to May 2006	70	26	4
Industrial injuries disablement benefit
September 2004 to August 2005	86	12	2
September 2005 to May 2006	84	14	2

Note:
Percentages may not sum to 100 due to rounding.
Source:
Atos Origin Medical Services

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of grade C medical assessments for (a) disability living allowance, (b) attendance allowance, (c) industrial injuries disablement benefit and incapacity benefit and (d) incapacity benefit have resulted in a (i) new assessment and (ii) modification of the original assessment in each of the last five years. [76881]

Mrs. McGuire: If a medical report is found to be C grade at audit, Atos Origin must rework it before it is used by the decision maker to determine entitlement to benefit.

In cases where reports which have not been subject to audit are subsequently found to be deficient, as part of a complaints investigation, for example, Atos Origin notify the decision maker so that the decision maker can review their decision.

Records as to the outcome from these procedures are not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average cost is per claimant of a medical assessment for (a) disability living allowance, (b) attendance allowance, (c) industrial injuries disablement benefit and incapacity benefit and (d) incapacity benefit. [76884]

Mrs. McGuire: Financial information connected with individual medical assessments is commercially sensitive and cannot be disclosed as to do so may prejudice the commercial interests of the Department and/or its suppliers.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will reply to question 73877, on cold-calling, tabled by the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight on 25 May 2006. [79105]

Mr. Plaskitt: I replied to the hon. Member on 19 June 2006, Official Report, columns 1698-99W.

Pathways to Work

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of Pathways to Work provision is by the (a) public and (b) private sector. [76832]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The information requested is not available.

Both voluntary and private sector organisations deliver a number of different programmes which support Pathways to Work. Some of these programmes are specific to Pathways to Work (in-work support and condition management programmes), while others are delivered nationally across Jobcentre Plus, for example WORKSTEP and new deal for disabled people.

In the Green Paper we said the next phase of Pathways to Work roll-out will be delivered through voluntary and private sector providers contracted locally.

Staff Surveys

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library copies of the results of the latest staff surveys for (a) his Department and (b) each of its Executive agencies. [35394]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions routinely publishes its annual survey results within the public domain. This includes percentage responses for all survey questions for the DWP overall and for each of the main businesses, client groups and corporate services within the Department. Results for 2002, 2003 and 2004 are held by:

The British Library

The National Libraries for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland

Oxford Library

Cambridge Library

Results for the DWP Survey 2005 are currently being published in the same way. In addition, copies are being placed in the House of Commons and House of Lords Libraries as well as being placed on the Department's website. We are awaiting confirmation of publication of all departmental surveys on the Cabinet Office website before proceeding.

HEALTH

Audiology

13. Sir Patrick Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will reconsider the decision to exclude audiology from the 18 week waiting time for treatment. [78472]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The 18 week 'referral to treatment' target covers hospital pathways.

As a result of innovation, the majority of audiology and adult hearing services are accessed directly from primary care and are outside the scope of the 18 week pathway. Hearing and balance conditions that need to be referred to a medical consultant however will be subject to 18 weeks.

There is no intention to reconsider this principle. However, reducing the time that patients wait for directly accessed services is important and an action plan is being developed to improve access to audiology services outside the 18 week pathway.

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of hearing aid services in the Chorley and South Ribble Primary Care Trust area; and if she will make a statement. [78474]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department' policy on hearing aid services has focused on ensuring that the national health service provides modern digital hearing aids. Digital hearing aids have been available at Chorley Hospital since March 2004, with the majority of new patients being fitted within 13 weeks of referral to the audiology service.

Practice-based Commissioning

14. Mr. Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the development of practice-based commissioning. [78473]

Ms Hewitt: All primary care trusts (PCTs) have committed to putting in place the arrangements to support practice-based commissioning (PBC) by the end of December this year. The most recent data indicate that 27 per cent. of PCTs have already put these arrangements in place, and that 41 per cent. of practices have taken on PBC.

Sexual Health

16. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department is implementing to increase young people's knowledge of sexually transmitted infections. [78475]

Caroline Flint: As part of the Government's drive to modernise and transform sexual health services in England we are developing a new campaign. This will focus on young men and women and we plan to launch it later this year.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expenditure on sexual health campaigns was in each year since 1979 in (a) nominal and (b) real terms. [51932]

Caroline Flint: Expenditure on sexual health campaigns including HIV public education, contraception awareness, prevention of sexually transmitted infections plus[1] helplines is shown in the table. Information is not available before 1985-86. This expenditure does not include local health promotion work undertaken at health authority/primary care trust level.

[1] Contract for the sexual health information line, formerly the National AIDS Helpline, is delivered as part of a contract which also includes Drinkline and Frank (substance misuse prevention).

	Nominal	£ million Real terms
1985-86	0.520	1.026
1986-87	7.600	14.540
1987-88	11.210	20.315
1988-89	10.000	16.937
1989-1990	12.000	18.974
1990-91	10.000	14.664
1991-92	11.000	15.213
1992-93	11.230	15.052

1995-96	8.060	10.091
1996-97[1]	5.250	6.349
1997-98	4.700	5.521
1998-99	4.800	5.496
1999-2000	6.000	6.737
2000-01	4.600	5.098
2001-02	4.600	4.975
2002-03	6.600	6.919
2003-04	6.600	6.741
2004-05	6.600	6.600
2005-06	5.120	5.003

[1] Before 1996-97, expenditure also includes a contribution towards the overhead costs of the former Health Education Authority.

Retinal Screening (Diabetics)

17. Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what targets have been set for retinal screening for diabetes; and if she will make a statement. [78476]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The priorities and planning framework includes targets that by 2006, 80 per cent. of people with diabetes should be offered diabetic retinopathy screening rising to 100 per cent. by end of 2007.

Data show that, in March 2006, 78.4 per cent. of people with diabetes had been offered screening for diabetic retinopathy in the previous year.

GPs (Bolton, South-East)

18. Dr. Brian Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs there were in Bolton, South-East constituency in 1997 and on the latest date for which figures are available. [78477]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not hold information on the number of general practitioners by constituency. However, in Bolton primary care trust there were 142 GPs in 2001, which increased by 20 per cent. to 171 in 2005.

Patients Groups

19. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the funding of patients groups. [78478]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The term 'patient's group' can cover a variety of different organisations. These bodies can be funded in a number of ways, including public donations made to charitable organisations as well as grants given by national health service bodies or central Government.

Hospital Cleanliness (West Midlands)

20. Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in improving hospital cleanliness in the West Midlands. [78479]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Hospital cleanliness is measured annually as part of the patient environment action team (PEAT) assessment. The first inspections in 2000 found around one third of national health service trusts to have poor or unacceptable standards. Since then there has been a steady improvement and in 2004-05, fewer than 5 per cent. were classified as poor or unacceptable. The latest PEAT inspections have recently been completed, and the results will be published in due course. However the PEAT scores published in 2004 and 2005 show improved rates of cleanliness in the hospital sites across the strategic health authority areas in the West Midlands.

Breast Cancer Treatment

21. Ms Barlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for breast cancer treatment; and if she will make a statement. [78480]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Average waiting times are not collected centrally. In the last quarter 99.7 per cent. of patients were treated for breast cancer within a month of diagnosis and 99 per cent. of patients were treated within two months of urgent referral by their general practitioner.

25. Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the most recent average waiting time was for breast cancer treatment in York; and if she will make a statement. [78484]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect average waiting times for breast cancer treatment. However, the latest data available for the York hospitals NHS trust show that in Quarter 4 2005-06 the trust achieved 100 per cent. of the two week out-patient wait for urgent referrals target and 100 per cent. of the maximum one month wait from diagnosis (decision to treat) to first definitive treatment target. The trust achieved 95.8 per cent. against the 62 day target for urgent general practitioner referral for suspected cancer to treatment for breast cancer in the same period.

Community Hospitals

22. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the future of community hospitals in Gloucestershire. [78481]

Caroline Flint: Making decisions on local healthcare provision, including the closure of community or cottage hospitals, is a matter for primary care trusts and strategic health authorities, as they have responsibility for ensuring that services provided locally meet the needs of the populations that they serve.

Mental Health Services

23. Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on the provision of mental health services. [78482]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In line with the implementation of the national service framework, mental health services in England are being modernised to improve access to effective treatment and care, reduce unfair variation, raise standards, increase patient choice and provide quicker and more convenient services.

Graduate Unemployment

24. Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of graduate unemployment among (a) nurses and (b) physiotherapists. [78483]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect this information. The Higher Education Statistics Agency conducts a sample survey of graduates. Of those who responded for the year to 31 July 2004, 90 per cent. of nursing and midwifery graduates and 84 per cent. of physiotherapy graduates were employed in their chosen profession. The remainder were employed elsewhere, unemployed or did not answer the question.

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much the national health service has given to the British Pregnancy Advisory Service to undertake abortions in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by region; [75638]

(2) how many complaints were made to (a) her Department and (b) the national health service about the British Pregnancy Advisory Service in each of the last five years; [75639]

(3) how many early medical abortions were performed by the British Pregnancy Advisory Service at the request of the national health service in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) age of the woman, (b) gestation of the pregnancy and (c) region; [75643]

(4) how many women were referred by national health service GPs to the British Pregnancy Advisory Service for an abortion in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what the (a) age of the woman, (b) gestation of the pregnancy and (c) region of residence was in each case. [77594]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the answer the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for public health gave to the hon. Member for Belfast, North (Mr. Dodds) on 18 March 2005, Official Report, column 522W, about the amount of national health service funding given to British Pregnancy Advisory Service (BPAS).

The Department has received a couple of complaints during the last five years which were investigated. Information on complaints received by the NHS is not held centrally. Under the Care Standards Act 2000, BPAS is required to supply each patient with a written copy of its complaints procedure, fully investigate each complaint and maintain a detailed, written record of each complaint. BPAS is also required to send the Healthcare Commission a statement every year with a summary of the complaints received. In addition, the Healthcare Commission look at these records as part of a clinic inspection.

The information requested on the number of NHS funded early medical abortions performed by BPAS is shown in the table. Information is not held centrally on the number of women referred to BPAS by NHS general practitioners; the abortion notification form collects the names and addresses of the two registered medical practitioners who authorised the abortion under the Abortion Act.

[1] Totals less than 10 (0-9 cases) are suppressed. This is in line with the Office for National Statistics' guidance on the disclosure of abortion statistics, 2005.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department (a) has undertaken and (b) plans to undertake into the reasons for trends in the early medical abortion rate in England and Wales between 2004 and 2005; and if she will make a statement. [75640]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not undertaken research into the reasons for trends in early medical abortion and has no plans to do so.

Medical abortion is safe, avoids the need for anaesthesia and surgery and offers women a choice of method. The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists' evidence-based guideline 'The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion (2004)' encourages abortion services to offer a choice of recommended methods for each gestation band.

There has been a continuing upward trend in medical abortions since 1991 when Mifegyne was licensed for use in the United Kingdom. In 2004, 28 per cent. of the abortions performed under nine weeks gestation were medical abortions.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make it her policy to issue a written ministerial statement to announce the publication of the abortion statistics; and if she will make a statement; [75649]

(2) what the publication date was of the abortion statistics in each of the last five years; [75650]

(3) if she will make it her policy to send an embargoed copy of each year's annual abortion statistics to those organisations known to her Department to (a) support and (b) oppose abortion; and if she will make a statement. [77566]

Caroline Flint: Abortion statistics for the last five years were published on the following dates:

2000 published by Office for National Statistics (ONS) in September 2001;

2001 published by ONS in September 2002;

2002 published by the Department in October 2003 and revised in July 2004;

2003 published by the Department in August 2004 and revised in July 2005; and 2004 published by the Department in July 2005.

The annual abortion statistics publication is a National Statistics (NS) product, the publication is released in accordance with the NS Protocol on Release Practices. The 2005 abortion statistics bulletin for England and Wales has been pre-announced for publication in July 2006 on the Department's website.

Sending embargoed copies of statistical publications to organisations prior to the official release date and time is contrary to best practice as set out in the NS Protocol. Best practice is to make the publication, equally available to all, at the same time and the statistics are released as soon as practicable once they and the accompanying commentary are fit for purpose. We therefore do not intend to issue embargoed copies of the annual abortion statistics publication to any organisation.

In addition, the Head of Statistics Profession at the Department has now determined the release date and time for the "Abortion Statistics, England and Wales 2005" publication. This will be on Tuesday 4 July at 9.30 am. The publication will include detailed commentary of the results, reflecting current departmental policy and hence, we have no plans to issue a ministerial statement. On the day of publication, a statistical press release will be issued releasing the figures and providing a web link to the website.

Asthma

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people have been admitted to hospital due to asthma in each (a) health authority and (b) primary care trust in England for each of the last five years; [76861]

(2) what the total cost was to the NHS of treating people with asthma for each year since 1997; [76862]

(3) what measures the Department is taking to reduce emergency hospital admissions for people with asthma; and if she will make a statement. [76863]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Data on the number of people admitted to hospital with the primary diagnosis of asthma, in each strategic health authority and primary care trust over the last five years have been placed in the Library.

Information on the total cost to the national health service of treating people with asthma is not collected.

The NHS Improvement Plan set out the Government's priority to improve care for people with long-term conditions by moving away from reactive care based in acute systems, towards a systematic, patient-centred approach.

The national public service agreement target focuses on improving health outcomes for people with long-term conditions, including asthma, by offering a personalised care plan for vulnerable people most at risk, and reducing emergency bed days by 5 per cent., by 2008 through improved care in primary and community settings.

To take this forward, 'Supporting People with Long-Term Conditions', published January 2005, sets out a new NHS and social care model designed to help local NHS and social care organisations improve care for people with long-term conditions. By 2007, there will be some 3,000 community matrons co-ordinating care for around 250,000 people.

Autism

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Bexleyheath and Crayford are diagnosed with autism; and how many of them are children. [78068]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the number of people including children in Bexleyheath and Crayford who are diagnosed with autism is not available centrally.

Care Homes

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what complaints procedures there are for those in a (a) private and (b) NHS care home. [77286]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Under the Care Homes Regulations 2001, care homes are required to establish complaints procedures for service users or persons acting on their behalf. The regulations apply equally to homes run by all providers, including local authorities, private companies or individuals, voluntary organisations and the national health service.

The national minimum standards (NMS) for care homes, which are available in the Library, include specific requirements for homes to have complaints procedures for service users, relatives and friends. The Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) must take the NMS into account when inspecting care homes to ensure that they comply with the Care Standards Act 2000.

Details of complaints procedures should be supplied to all service users, or those acting on their behalf if requested. Complaints procedures must be simple, clear and accessible and appropriate to service users' needs. Complaints should be responded to within a maximum of 28 days and detailed records should be kept, which should include details of investigations and any action taken.

Service users whose care is arranged by their local authority (LA) are also entitled to pursue complaints about the way the LA has fulfilled its function regarding the provision of services to meet the needs of the individual via the LA's complaints procedure.

All service users and their representatives have a further right to refer matters to CSCI and then to the parliamentary ombudsman for further investigation if they are not satisfied with the way their complaints are dealt with.

Care in the Community

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding will be made available to local authorities to pay for care in the community over the next three years; and if she will make a statement. [74267]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department does not hold this information nationally or for individual local authorities. Council funding for adult social services is derived from a number of sources: a share of overall formula grant allocated by the Department for Communities and Local Government, specific grants distributed by the Department, revenue from council tax, income from fees and charges and the re-prioritisation of funds on the basis of local decision making. The most recent allocation of funds for adults' social services was made in December 2005 and covers the two financial years 2006-07 and 2007-08.

As most of the Government funding for adult social care is allocated without conditions, it is not possible to identify the proportion of that funding that may be attributable to care in the community. Local authorities have a significant degree of flexibility to manage and direct their resources in accordance with local priorities and the needs of the communities to which they are accountable.

Carers' Grant

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in what circumstances a local authority may refuse to pay carers' grant to (a) individuals and (b) organisations supporting carers; [78062]

(2) whether local authorities are permitted to use the carers' grant to support the provision of day centres; [78063]

(3) whether she plans to extend carers' grant beyond 2008; [78064]

(4) what funding is planned to help with the provision of respite care; [78065]

(5) what options are available to individuals for the use they make of carers' grant; and what role local authorities play in ensuring choice is available. [78066]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This Government introduced the carers' grant in 1999 to support councils in providing breaks and other services for carers in England. The grant is not paid to individuals but paid each year to councils as a specific formula grant.

Councils can use the grant to provide a range of services for carers in their area depending on local demand and need. This may include commissioning day care services if this is what is needed locally. Councils will want to ensure that the services they commission provide good quality services that will meet carers' assessed needs. Councils should ensure that individuals have as much choice as possible about the services they are offered.

Ministers have yet to decide whether the carers grant will continue after March 2008.

Local councils can use the carers grant to provide short breaks for carers as well as a range of other services to support them. The grant in 2006-07 is £185 million. In addition, in our health and social care White Paper "Our health, our care, our say" we commit to ensure that short-term, home-based respite support is established for carers in crisis or emergency situations.

Carter Report

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to issue a detailed response to Sir David Carter's report and recommendations reviewing specialised services in the NHS; and if she will make a statement. [75305]

Andy Burnham: We support the approach in the independent report from the Review of Commissioning Arrangements for Specialised Services chaired by Sir David Carter. This comprehensive report contains a significant number of helpful proposals for improving the access to and quality of specialised services for all patients with rare conditions. We are considering the details of the report carefully and will take forward the recommendations in the Commissioning Framework, which we expect to publish in the summer.

Children's Health Services

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of whether a primary care trust is complying with its responsibilities under the "Every Child Matters" initiative where it is refusing to accept referrals for paediatric speech and language therapy. [67662]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: No assessment has been carried out centrally. Access to speech and language therapy is a matter for primary care trusts, which have responsibility for commissioning services to implement the national standards as identified in the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services and the "Every Child Matters: Change for Children" programme.

Cottage Hospitals

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact on social services care in the community programme of closing cottage hospitals; and if she will make a statement. [74266]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Decisions on the role of cottage hospitals in local healthcare provision are matters for primary care trusts and strategic health authorities in consultation with local populations.

The White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say: a new Direction for Community Services", made it clear to national health service organisations that community hospital facilities and the integrated health and social care services they provide should not be lost in response to short-term budgetary pressures that are not related to the viability of the community facility itself.

Debt Collectors

Miss Kirkbride: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) her Department and (b) its (i) executive agencies and (ii) non-departmental public bodies use the services of private debt collectors. [71075]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As most debtors of the Department and its executive agencies are other public bodies it is not deemed appropriate to use a debt collection agency. Information relating to non-departmental bodies is not held centrally.

Dentistry

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the oral health of the population in (a) Peterborough constituency, (b) the East of England and (c) England. [77921]

Andy Burnham: The information available centrally shows that in 2003-04 the average number of decayed, missing or filled teeth among five-year-olds in the area of North Peterborough primary care trust is 1.78. This compares with 0.9 in South Peterborough, 1.21 in the Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire strategic health authority area and 1.49 in England as a whole. People living in some parts of Eastern England receive the benefits to oral health from a seam of naturally occurring fluoride in water which runs from Hartlepool in Durham to Chelmsford in Essex. Peterborough however does not receive either natural or artificially fluoridated water.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to implement the recommendations of the Medical Devices Expert Group in respect of the provision to patients of statements of conformity for dental appliances. [77576]

Andy Burnham: The proposal to provide patients with statements of conformity for dental appliances is currently under negotiation in the Council of Ministers working group that is reviewing the Medical Devices Directive 93/42/EC. Once the revisions have been agreed and incorporated into the directive the changes will be implemented into United Kingdom law within the laid down timescale for transposition.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency has in place for the inspection of dental laboratories located in (a) China, (b) Turkey, (c) India and (d) South Africa which manufacture dental appliances for use in the UK. [77577]

Andy Burnham: The manufacturer of any custom-made dental appliance should ensure that it complies with the requirements of the Medical Devices Regulations before placing the device on the United Kingdom (UK) market. Where the manufacturer is based outside the European Community this would include appointing an authorised representative to register on their behalf with the member state competent authority where they have their registered place of business. The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency conducts an annual programme of inspections of custom-made appliance manufacturers and authorised representatives based in the UK selected at random.

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many inspections of dental laboratories were carried out by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency and its predecessors in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [77578]

Andy Burnham: The number of inspections of dental laboratories carried out under the Medical Devices Regulations are as follows:

	Number of inspections
2001-02	88
2002-03	36
2003-04	121
2004-05	108
2005-06	107

Departmental Chief Accounting Officer

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) name, (b) professional and academic qualifications and (c) relevant experience are of the chief accounting officer of her Department. [76796]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: As Acting Permanent Secretary, Hugh Taylor is the Principal Accounting Officer for the Department.

Before becoming Acting Permanent Secretary, he was the Department's strategy and business development group director. He previously held senior management jobs in the Prison Service, the Cabinet Office and was director for national health service work force in the NHS executive.

Accounting officer is a role that the Permanent secretary combines with his personal responsibility for the overall organisation, management and staffing of the Department and for Department-wide procedures in financial and other matters. The accounting officer is assisted in the discharge of these duties by suitably qualified and experienced senior managers, such as Richard Douglas, the director-general of Finance and Investment.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) EU foreign nationals and (b) non-EU foreign nationals have been employed in her Department in each of the last five years; what vetting procedures are in place for each category of staff; and whether these include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies. [68018]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information is not held centrally. Prior to the appointment of new employees, nationality checks are carried out to establish compliance with civil service nationality rules. Other checks, including the taking up of references, character enquiry and health checks are also conducted. These would not routinely include liaison with foreign law enforcement agencies.

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any buildings in her Department fall short of disability access regulations. [72990]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) audits have been completed on all of the Department's buildings. All of the Department's buildings are accessible and usable and meet DDA accessibility standards.

Drug Quotas

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment her Department has made of the effect on NHS costs of manufacturers' quotas on medicines and drugs and restrictions on the parallel importation of drugs and medicines; [77462]

(2) what recent discussions she has had with pharmaceutical manufacturers on their quotas on the supply of medicines and drugs in England; [77463]

(3) what assessment her Department has made of the possible impact of manufacturers' quotas for the supply of medicines and drugs in England on the pharmaceutical wholesale and retail sectors. [77464]

Andy Burnham: In terms of the impact on national health service expenditure, information is not routinely collected on the source of products, but from the data currently available, the Department estimates that parallel imports save the NHS in England approximately £60 million per year in the community sector.

Parallel importing is legal within the European Union (EU). The United Kingdom (UK) parallel import licensing scheme allows medicinal authorised products in other EU member states to be marketed in the UK provided the imported products have no therapeutic difference from the equivalent UK products.

The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) liaises closely with the relevant competent authorities to obtain the necessary information to ensure that only those products which fully comply with the stringent criteria for parallel import are granted a licence. This information is published at monthly intervals on the MHRA's website.

The Department has had no recent discussions with manufacturers nor made an assessment of the possible impact of quotas on the supply of medicines.

Drug Trials

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that in human trials of medicinal drugs not previously ingested by human beings the drugs are not to be ingested simultaneously by the volunteers. [76616]

Andy Burnham: Following the recent drug trial incident involving TGN 1412, an expert working group of leading international experts was established to address the scientific questions that were raised by it. In particular, recommendations we requested regarding this type of drug and how to manage the risks associated with making the transition from pre-clinical testing in animals to trials in humans.

Professor Gordon Duff, who is Professor of Molecular Medicine at Sheffield University, has been appointed to act as chair of the group.

On receipt of the report from this group, the Government will consider what steps might be required to minimise risk for first human trials in the light of their recommendations.

Food Promotion

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what methods her Department will use to carry out its 2007 assessment of changes in food promotion to children as proposed in the 2004 Choosing Health White Paper. [76706]

Caroline Flint: We have said that we want to see a change in the nature and balance of food and drink advertising and promotion to children so that it better represents a healthy balanced diet.

We will be establishing a baseline against which we can assess what progress has been made. The assessment will take into account any reduction in the volume or scheduling of advertisements across television and various non-broadcast media in recent years, and what changes have been made to the content of those advertisements.

Gershon Review

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1540W, on the Gershon Review, to the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Soames), if she will break down the savings by main budget heading. [76388]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The total savings to December 2005 break down as follows:

	Amount (£ million)
Productive time	879
Procurement	1,048
Corporate services	36
Social care	179
Policy funding and regulation	63
Total	2,205

These figures were set out in the Department's report published in May 2006.

Head Injuries

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how payment by results will affect the commissioning and delivery of services for those with a serious head injury; [76142]

(2) what steps have been taken to implement the recommendations in the Health Committee's Report of Session 2000-01, on Head Injuries: Rehabilitation, in relation to (a) improving data collection on the incidence, prevalence and severity of head injuries, (b) facilitating the planning of services for those with a head injury, (c) making explicit the level at which planning for serious head injury rehabilitation should be located and (d) commissioning and delivery of specialist services. [76143]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: In our response to the Committee (CM 5226, July 2001) the Government undertook to take their recommendations into account in drawing-up the national service framework for long-term neurological conditions (NSF), and subsequently did so. The NSF was published last year and we are now working with stakeholders to implement it.

It is the responsibility of local professionals to commission services to meet the current and forecast needs of the people they serve.

Under payment by results, money follows patients and so providers are rewarded for the number and complexity of cases they treat, and incentivised to provide high quality care.

Health Professional Council/General Osteopathic Council (Funding)

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated to the (a) Health Professional Council and (b) General Osteopathic Council in each of the last nine years. [77058]

Andy Burnham: The Department granted the following amounts to the following organisations over the past four years. Information for the previous five years can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information available is shown in the following table:

	Regulatory body
	General Osteopathic Council	Health Professions Council
2004-05	0	0
2003-04	0	1,330,000.00
2002-03	0	2,474,467.38

Health Treatment Centres

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been treated at each independent sector treatment centre since each was established, broken down by type of treatment received. [61716]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information on the number of elective procedures performed by centrally procured independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) in wave one is shown in the tables. Data are not held centrally by speciality except for the Greater Manchester Surgical Centre which has a different contractual arrangement. The table also indicates where all an ISTCs procedures fall within one specialty.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with which independent treatment centres the NHS holds contracts; what type of treatment was contracted for in each case in the most recent year for which figures are available; how many episodes of treatment were contracted for in each case in that year; which NHS body holds the contract; which primary care trusts are covered by the contract; whether a (i) Wave 1, (ii) Wave 2 and (iii) other type of contract applies; and what the (A) name and (B) legal status is of the proprietor of each centre. [79101]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information is not held centrally on spot purchased activity from the independent sector by local commissioners. Details of the first wave of independent sector treatment centre (ISTC) contracts have been placed in the Library. All wave one ISTC contracts have been entered into with companies registered in England and Wales.

No contracts have been finalised for phase two of the procurement for additional elective and diagnostic activity or the extended choice network of independent providers.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) hospitals and (b) other NHS units in England and Wales are being proposed for closure during the current financial year; and if she will make a statement. [74165]

Andy Burnham: The information requested for England is not available centrally. For Wales, it is a matter for the National Assembly for Wales.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) originally estimated, (b) most recently estimated and (c) outturn cost was in each of the five largest information technology contracts agreed with outside suppliers over the last five years. [71760]

Caroline Flint: The information provided pertains to the central Department and does not cover executive agencies, other arm's length bodies or NHS Connecting for Health.

The five largest information technology (IT) contracts agreed with outside suppliers over the last five years are:

The information management services agreement-Computer Sciences Corporation (CSC)

The annual support charge for the CSC agreement has fluctuated from the initial estimated charge but this has been a reflection of the introduction of new services, for example, new remote working facilities, wireless connectivity services and new collaborative tools. Ongoing charges over five years are as follows:

	£ million
2002-03	7.65
2003-04	8.85
2004-05	8.77
2005-06	7.47
2006-07	[1]7.60

[1] Forecast charges.

Transformation of the infrastructure formed a separate part of the agreement. The original estimate was £9.1 million. The estimate was revised to £12.6 million to include the cost of commissioning and implementing the new services. The outturn cost was £12.6 million.

A total of £88.42 million has been spent with CSC over the five years since the contract was let. The support charges and transformation form part of that figure. The remainder has included expenditure which CSC administer on behalf of the Department, for example BT costs for the wide area network and business ports, and audio conferencing and mobile telephone costs. The remainder of the costs over the five years have been apportioned to project work in support of the integrity and resilience of the infrastructure in line with changing technologies. These project and pass-through costs are listed as follows.

	£ million
2002-03	12.88
2003-04	18.32
2004-05	20.06
2005-06	21.82
2006-07	[1]21

[1] Forecast charges. £2.72 million invoiced so far.

Finance system agreement-Cap Gemini

The original estimate for the project was £6.1 million. The revised estimate and actual cost was £5.6 million.

Corporate software agreement-IBM

The agreement was for a three year deal with three annual payments totalling £1.4 million. The original estimate and actual costs were the same.

Web content management service-Xansa

This contract was awarded early in 2006 and the estimated costs over the next five years are £5.11 million. The outturn is expected to remain the same as the estimated costs.

External applications hosting-BT

This annually renewable contract was for a hosting provision designed to be scaleable to meet the requirements of the Department. The charges represent the fluctuation in these requirements. The annual charges were:

London Hospitals

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she last reviewed the strategic provision of hospital provision in London and the surrounding areas; and if she will make a statement. [77489]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 19 June 2006]: Strategic leadership and commissioning is a central role of new strategic health authorities and primary care trusts working with their partners. Strategic provision of hospital services has been a key part of the strategic authority responsibilities since shifting the balance of power was introduced in 2002.

Maternity Units

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether payment by results applies to midwife-led maternity units. [75990]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The tariff applies to midwife-led maternity units, to the extent that they are providing services within scope of payment by results. For example, deliveries in hospitals and maternity units are within scope of payment by results and the tariff would therefore apply for deliveries in a midwife-led unit. Home deliveries are excluded from the scope of payment by results and tariff would therefore not need to apply for a home birth managed by a midwife-led maternity unit.

Measles

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of measles there were in England in each year since 1997; and what the percentage uptake of the measles, mumps and rubella vaccine was in each year since 1988 in (a) England and (b) each region. [79040]

Caroline Flint: Laboratory confirmed cases of measles in England and Wales between 1996 and 2005 are available on the Health Protection Agency's (HPA) website at:

www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/measles/data_mmr_confirmed.htm

On the 15 June 2006, the HPA reported that they had received reports of 449 confirmed cases of measles in England and Wales in the period January to May 2006. Further information is available at:

www.hpa.org.uk/hpa/news/articles/press_releases/2006/060615_measles.htm

Annual England data for years 1997 to 2005 are available from NHS Immunisation Statistics on the Department's website at:

Mental Health/Learning Disabilities

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to promote the protection of people with (i) mental health problems and (ii) learning disabilities (A) at work and (B) in residential care settings. [74986]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Less than one in four people experiencing long-term mental health problems is in employment, and one third of those in employment report having been dismissed or forced to resign. There is evidence that better access to psychological treatment can help people to return to or maintain employment.

The Government are committed to improving access to evidence-based psychological therapies, and this policy was set out in the Labour manifesto 2005 and the "Our Health, our care, our say White Paper. Our Improving Access to Psychological Therapies" programme forms a key part of the Government's "Health, Work and Well-Being—Caring for Our Future" (HWWB) strategy, which the Department launched last October with the Department for Work and Pensions and the Health and Safety Commission.

The Department is not responsible for the protection of people with learning disabilities at work. However, people with mental health problems and learning disabilities are protected by all employment legislation, for example that governing freedom from discrimination and equal opportunities. In addition, "The Duty to Promote Disability Equality statutory code of practice in England and Wales", published by the Disability Rights Commission in December 2005, includes mental illness and learning disabilities.

There are a wide range of measures to protect vulnerable people in regulated social care, including those with mental health problems and learning disabilities. We have set out standards for care and treatment for the national health service and social care services in the national service framework for mental health and the White Paper, "Valuing People: a new strategy for learning disability".

We have introduced national minimum standards for care homes, domiciliary care and adult placements to ensure that vulnerable people can live in a safe environment, where their rights and dignity are respected and staff are properly trained. The regulator, the Commission for Social Care Inspection, has powers to take swift and decisive action where abuse occurs, by serving enforcement notices on care homes and domiciliary care providers and, ultimately, it can close services down.

"No Secrets", statutory guidance issued under section 7 of the 1970 Local Authorities Social Services Act by the Department in 2000, provides a complete definition of abuse and a framework for councils to work with the police, the NHS and regulators to tackle abuse and prevent it from occurring.

We introduced the protection of vulnerable adults (PoVA) scheme in July 2004. PoVA prevents dangerous or unscrupulous people from gaining access to vulnerable people in care homes or being cared for in their own homes. The Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Bill was introduced in Parliament on 28 February 2006. The new scheme will build on the existing PoVA scheme and will make it far more difficult for abusers to gain access to some of the most vulnerable groups in society. Subject to the necessary legislation being passed by Parliament, it will begin staged implementation in 2007.

Ministerial Visits (Accommodation)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in her private office have stayed overnight in (i) five star, (ii) four star and (iii) three star hotels in each of the last three years. [69211]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental officials and special advisers are expected to make efficient and cost-effective arrangements.

National Blood Service

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ask the National Blood Service to issue guidance to its staff aimed at ensuring that men who have sex with men are treated with respect when they are told they are unable to give blood. [76951]

Caroline Flint: All staff working with blood donors are required to treat blood donors with respect. People who are asked not to donate blood are entitled to a clear explanation as to why they have been deferred or excluded from donating blood, this will include men who have sex with men.

Productive Time Savings

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on productive time savings, as envisaged by the Gershon Review, achieved since 2003-04; and what proportion of these savings are directly attributable to products delivered through the National Programme for Information Technology. [74054]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The latest reported savings figure for productive time is £879 million at December 2005.

The Gershon report "Releasing Resources to the Front Line" identified three main contributors to front line service (productive time) efficiency—information communication technologies (ICT), process redesign and work force reform.

Our delivery strategy for this programme recognises that efficiencies are achieved by technology, process and work force changes being delivered together. The national health service uses an integrated service improvement programme (ISIP) to plan and manage service improvement. This programme is a key element of implementing the national programme for information technology (NPfIT). More information is available at www.isip.nhs.uk.

To avoid double counting, the approach to measuring most productive time benefits is based on outcome changes, for example day case rates, inpatient length of stay and emergency admission, rather than the separate contribution of ICT or work force or process change.

It is not therefore possible to determine the proportion of current or future gains attributable specifically to the NPfIT but clearly its contribution is likely to increase.

Details of our approach to productive time measurement and the specific measures used are explained in the Department's efficiency technical note, which is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/41/37/04124137.pdf.

NHS Finance

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average per capita NHS funding for 2006-07 is in rural areas. [72773]

Andy Burnham: The average allocation per person made to the 82 primary care trusts in predominantly rural areas in 2006-07 is £1,168.

NHS Treatment

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) elective hospital admissions, (b) first out-patient attendances following general practitioner referral and (c) consultant-led first out-patient attendances there were in the NHS in each year between 1990-91 and 2005-06. [75435]

Andy Burnham: Data from 1996-97 onwards are shown in the table. Data for the earlier years are not available on the same basis.

Thousand

	Elective hospital admissions[1]	First out-patient (OP) attendances following general practitioner referral[2]	Consultant-led first OP attendances[3]

Non-life Threatening Conditions

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she has received evidence that NHS organisations are reducing services for non-life threatening conditions; [75019]

(2) which conditions the NHS classes as non-life threatening. [76384]

Andy Burnham: There is no data available on the planned level of non-life threatening services but the national health service produces local delivery plans which set out the planned level of out-patient attendances and elective admissions to hospital. The 2006-07 plans are still being agreed with strategic health authorities but they currently show that, across England, the NHS is planning for a 1.4 per cent. increase in first out-patient attendances following a referral from a general practitioner and a 2.4 per cent. increase in elective admissions to hospital.

Parliamentary Ombudsman

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those occasions when the recommendations of a report from the parliamentary ombudsman have been (a) rejected and (b) partly rejected by her Department since 1997. [76267]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There has been one occasion since 1997 when the Department has partly rejected the recommendations of the parliamentary ombudsman. This concerned information withheld pending publication of a National Audit Office (NAO) report. Following publication of the NAO report, the Department acceded to all the Ombudsman's recommendations except on one point.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial assistance will be made available to support primary care trusts seeking to re-engineer services in accordance with the priorities set out in the White Paper "Our health, our care, our say". [60751]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Revenue allocations covering 2006-07 and 2007-08 were announced to primary care trusts (PCTs) on 5 February 2005. Over the two years covered by this allocation PCTs will receive an average increase of 19.5 per cent. They are therefore able to plan to take account of the principles set out in the "Our health, our care, our say" White Paper and the wider programme of health reform, knowing how what resources they have available. In delivering wider reform, PCTs have the support of modernisation teams in strategic health authorities. These teams have an important role in ensuring the delivery of improvements in local health and social care services that maximise all opportunities and available resources.

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been generated by the top-slicing of 3 per cent. of London's primary care trust budgets; where this top-sliced income is being held; what decisions have been taken on the use of the fund; and if she will make a statement. [77848]

Andy Burnham: A reduction to London primary care trusts (PCT) 2006-07 revenue allocations of 3 per cent. would amount to around £320 million. Reserves generated to manage the overall financial position are currently being held by strategic health authorities (SHAs). The final amounts and terms for the use of the reserves will be for local agreement between the SHA and PCTs, within a framework agreed with the Department.

Radon Gas

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measurement of radon gas has been recorded in each county in each of the last five years; and how this information is made available to the public. [77677]

Caroline Flint: The radiation division of the Health Protection Agency (HPA) manages the radon measurement programme in England and Wales. Buildings are monitored using two detectors supplied by HPA to measure levels of radon over a three-month period.

The HPA uses various campaign methods to encourage householders to have their dwellings measured but a number of householders choose to ignore this support. In the future, house holder-sales packs will include a section about radon levels in the house which will significantly help to raise awareness of radon gas.

The readings are fed into a national database to produce the radon atlas of England and Wales, publication NRPB-W26 from the HPA and available as a free download on www.hpa.org.uk/radiation, provides detailed data by administrative and postcode divisions as well as the definitive radon probability maps. This publication is due to be updated within the next 12 months.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to protect citizens from the effects of radon gas. [77678]

Caroline Flint: The National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) first offered advice to the Government on the exposure to radon in dwellings in early 1987. (In 2005 the NRPB merged with the Health Protection Agency, becoming its radiation protection division.)

This advice was updated and expanded in 1990 in a statement and supporting document on the limitation of human exposure to radon in homes (reference NRPB. Human exposure to radon in homes. Doc. NRPB. 1, No. 1, 17-32 (1990)). Central to the control strategy is a recommendation that radon concentrations at or above an action level should be reduced to as low as reasonably practicable. In areas with a high risk of elevated radon concentrations, the radon concentration in existing homes should be measured and reduced as appropriate and new homes built with protective measures against radon.

Legislation under the Health and Safety at Work Act, Etc. 1974 means that in places of work the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1999 come into effect if radon is present above a defined level and then employers are required to take action to restrict resulting exposures.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government have determined a maximum safe level of radon gas. [77685]

Caroline Flint: Radiation protection principles are based on the level of risk and this approach is applied when dealing with radon gas levels in buildings. The risks from the presence of radon gas have to be balanced against other factors. From a public health perspective, priority has to be given to areas and houses that are more likely to suffer from the problem and this is tackled in many ways.

The Government accepted advice in a statement from the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB), published in 1990, on the limitation of human exposure to radon in homes and implemented the recommendations contained in the supporting document (reference NRPB. Human exposure to radon in homes. Doc. NRPB. 1, No. 1, 17-32 (1990)). (In 2005, the NRPB merged with the Health Protection Agency (HPA), becoming its Radiation Protection Division.)

The results of 13 European studies of indoor radon and lung cancer, taken together, provide overwhelming evidence that radon can cause lung cancer. There is no evidence of a threshold below which radon exposure is safe, and there is substantial evidence of a risk for individuals who live in homes with moderate radon concentrations as well as those with homes above 200 bequerels per metre cubed, the current United Kingdom (UK) action level. Homeowners are currently advised to apply radon reduction measures if tests show levels above the action level.

Significant efforts are being made by World Health Organisation, developed countries, UK Government and the HPA to determine how to raise awareness of the issue and to how to better tackle the whole problem.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those (a) Acts and (b) parts of Acts which received Royal Assent between 1976 and 2006 and for which her Department has policy responsibility which remain in force. [69142]

RU-486

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the US Administration about H.R. 1079 (Holly's Law) and the experience of the US Administration in dealing with deaths caused by the abortion drug RU-486 in the United States; and if she will make a statement. [77592]

Andy Burnham: I refer the hon. Member to replies given on 3 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1701-02W.

Recent assessments by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), in consultation with independent experts, have concluded that the balance of risks and benefits of mifepristone (Mifegyne, RU-486) remains positive, for use in its licensed indications in medical abortion, and that no changes to prescribing advice are needed. The MHRA is aware of deaths that have been reported in association with the use of mifepristone both in the United States (US) and in the United Kingdom. However, as there is no clear evidence that mifepristone has caused these deaths there is no basis for regulatory action or further discussions with the US authorities.

Service Reorganisation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether primary care and NHS trusts in Gloucestershire are required to consult (a) the public and (b) voluntary organisations on possible changes in passenger transport services arising from reconfiguration of hospital and other services. [78901]

Caroline Flint: The requirement on trusts and primary care trusts is to consult on proposals to change health services not passenger transport services. Such issues, however, would be dealt with in the context of the health service consultation, and not treated separately.

However, the consultation which was launched on 12 June 2006 by Avon, Gloucester and Wiltshire strategic health authority, 'The Future of Healthcare in Gloucestershire Proposals for Developing Sustainable NHS Services', includes proposed changes to passenger transport services.

Sexually Abused Children

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what services are provided by the NHS for children in Milton Keynes who have been sexually abused. [77697]

Andy Burnham: Specialist services including treatment for sexually transmitted infections, termination of pregnancy and mental health services are available for those children who need them as a result of sexual abuse, wherever they are in England. For children with less severe mental health problems, it is more appropriate for universal services to provide the psychological support they need than for them to be referred to specialist child and adolescent mental health services.

The Department and the Mental Health Foundation jointly funded a multi-centre study to evaluate the use of psychotherapy with girls aged 6 to 14 years who had been sexually abused. Two of the main findings were that high rates of depression, anxiety and post-traumatic stress disorder were found and both group and individual psychotherapy were effective and improvement in the patients condition tended to continue after treatment had ended.

It is important that Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) are developed in a way that is responsive to the needs of the populations they serve. The CAMHS standard of the children's National Service Framework (NSF) sets out the requirement for an assessment of the needs of particular groups of children in the locality who are vulnerable or at risk. The NSF also states that commissioners and services should be able to demonstrate multi-agency partnership working in the following areas: the provision of services to children and young people who may or may not have been harmed, as set out in "Working Together to Safeguard Children"; contributing to the assessment of complex child abuse cases; the assessment and provision of post-abuse therapeutic services; and services for looked after and adopted children.

Skipton Fund

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) a panel has been appointed to hear appeals to the Skipton Fund and (b) a timetable has been set for the commencement of appeals to the Skipton Fund; and if she will make a statement. [78589]

Caroline Flint: The NHS Appointment Commission is undertaking the recruitment of the chair and members of the Skipton Fund appeal panel and interviews have been arranged for late June 2006. Once the necessary appointments have been made, the Skipton Fund, who provide the secretariat for the appeals panel, will organise all necessary meetings of the panel and prepare cases to be considered by the panel at the earliest convenience.

Specialist Nurses

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals in South East London provide (a) Parkinson's disease nurse specialists and (b) paediatric diabetes specialist nurses. [78417]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: This information is not held centrally.

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many working days were lost to her Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to the Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [76892]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The information requested is shown in the following table.

	Staff years	Average working days lost per employee	Estimated average daily cost of absence (£)	Total cost (£)
2004	6,881	3.8	84	2,195,369
2003	7,196	5.4	79	3,069,813
2002	7,448	4.7	75	2,625,420
2001	5,607	6.8	73	2,783,314
2000	5,279	5.8	70	2,143,274
1999	4,880	6.8	69	2,289,696
1998	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
1997	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a

n/a = Not available.

Information on sickness absence in the civil service is published annually, and the reports for the years 1999 to 2004 can be found on the civil service website at:

www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/occupationalhealth/publications/index.asp

The average daily cost of absence is based on average basic salaries presented in each year's report.

Staff Surveys

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff surveys have been conducted in her Department in each of the last three years. [72859]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Department has conducted three staff opinion surveys, one each year, over the past three years.

Summary/Detailed Care Records

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information will be held on an individual's (a) summary care record and (b) detailed care record. [75125]

Caroline Flint: In the future, each person using the national health service will have a personal electronic NHS care record which can be quickly accessed by health care professionals legitimately involved in the person's care. It will be made up of detailed care records and a summary care record.

Detailed care records will be built up over time into a detailed health and care history.

Patients will also have a summary care record. Initially this is likely to be limited to more basic information such as allergies, adverse reactions to medications, and current prescriptions but over time more information will be added about current health conditions and treatment. Departmental officials are in discussion with representatives of the medical professions of patients and the public about the scope and implementation of the summary care record. This work will be accelerated by the new taskforce.

Strict controls will be in place for both the detailed and summary care records so that only those people involved in the care of the patient will have access to patient information appropriate to their role.

People's consent to share and ability to limit the sharing of their care record is covered by the NHS care record guarantee.

Vulnerable Adults

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on plans to place on a statutory footing the 'No Secrets' guidelines for developing a multi-agency framework for prevention and investigation of abuse of vulnerable adults. [78423]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government regard abuse of vulnerable and older people as unacceptable in all its forms and is determined to root it out.

'No Secrets', published by the Department in 2000, provides a complete definition of abuse and a framework for councils to work with the police, the national health service and regulators to tackle abuse and prevent it from occurring. 'No Secrets' is statutory guidance, issued under section 7 of the 1970 Local Authorities Social Services Act; local authorities must have regard to it.

I am informed by the Commission for Social Care Inspection that 145 out of 150 localities have established adult protection committees, as recommended in the guidance, which demonstrates that councils are taking their responsibilities to tackle and prevent abuse seriously.

Waiting Times

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) mean and (b) median wait was for a (i) out-patient and (ii) in-patient appointment in (A) 1979, (B) 1997 and (C) the most recent period for which figures are available. [76950]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The mean and median waits for in-patient admission and first out-patient appointment in 1997 and 2006 are shown the following table. It is not possible to calculate mean or medians for 1979 as data were not collected in sufficient detail at that time.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Avian Influenza

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what aid the Government have given to the Romanian authorities to tackle the incidence of H5N1 avian influenza there. [77807]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK is playing a lead role in international initiatives to coordinate action on avian influenza. We provide advice and support through the Veterinary Laboratories Agency which, as the World Reference Laboratory, is a constant source of advice, expertise and training for specialists around the world. We have provided technical veterinary expertise to Romania and will consider requests for additional support, working with the European Commission, to help their efforts to tackle the disease.

We consider that the most effective use of resources is to channel them through multilateral organisations, such as the Food and Agriculture Organisation, who already have in place infrastructures and programmes which can be employed to address avian influenza.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely impact on pigeon racing of restrictions which may be introduced to tackle avian influenza; and whether the Department plans to issue guidelines on this matter. [78010]

Mr. Bradshaw: Following a veterinary risk assessment, pigeon racing is currently allowed within the British Isles (that is, including the Republic of Ireland) subject to certain conditions. These include a requirement for race organisers to advise their local Animal Health Office that the event is taking place and to adhere to strict biosecurity practice.

Following a further recent risk assessment, pigeon races from Belgium and Northern France were permitted since 15 June 2006. These gatherings are subject to the same notification and biosecurity conditions for races within the British Isles as well as additional requirements to isolate pigeons following a race and can only take place until 31 July 2006 when we will review the position again. If the disease situation changes we will immediately review the position and may re-impose a ban on all pigeon races.

The Defra website contains full details of the restrictions and guidance on how to comply with them: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/diseases/notifiable/disease/ai/qanda/gatherings.htm.

Commercial Recycling

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether he plans to extend his Department's grants to cover commercial recycling; [76776]

(2) what mechanisms he plans to help small and medium-sized businesses recycle their waste products. [76851]

Mr. Bradshaw: The recent consultation on the review of England's Waste Strategy puts forward proposals for a greater emphasis on the recycling of commercial and industrial waste. This includes a wider role for local authorities in fostering better recycling services for small businesses, better integration of municipal and business waste management, and the further development of markets for recycled materials. The consultation also asked for views on how best the Government can support small and medium-sized businesses (SMEs) in overcoming the barriers they face in recycling their waste.

Responses to the consultation, which closed on 9 May 2006, are being carefully considered during the development of a revised waste strategy—due to be published later this year.

In addition, the recently created Waste Infrastructure Development Programme is considering how to encourage local authorities to allow for appropriate, larger facilities that can serve the non-municipal sector.

The Business Resource Efficiency and Waste (BREW) Programme also plays a key role in reducing the amount of commercial waste sent to landfill—returning £284 million to businesses over three years through resource efficiency and waste minimisation programmes.

The Waste and Resource Action Programme (WRAP) has set up a pilot project providing sector-specific help for small businesses, and the Environment Agency (EA) is developing a pilot internet service called 'What do I do with my waste?'. This will work as an extension to the EA's existing guidance service for SMEs, 'NetRegs', which includes guidance on waste issues.

Egg Industry

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when his Department will provide guidance on new welfare guidelines as they will apply to permitted flooring systems for the egg industry. [75971]

Mr. Bradshaw: Updated legislation covering the welfare of laying hens in all systems was introduced in 2002. A Code of Recommendations for the welfare of laying hens is available from the Defra website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/welfare/farmed/layers/layerscode.pdf

If a producer requires further guidance on the suitability of individual flooring systems, they should contact the relevant local enforcement body.

Endangered Species

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many offences have been committed under the Control of Trade in Endangered Species Regulations since the increase in penalties in 2005; what the nature was of these offences; and what penalties were imposed in each case. [76715]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I have been asked to reply.

Data on convictions under the Control of Trade in Endangered Species regulations since the increase of penalties in 2005 are unavailable as the most recent data available are for 2004. Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

GM Organisms

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the UK Government's policy is on non-food GM crops; and what assessment has been made of the impact of such crops in different parts of the world. [77806]

Ian Pearson: No genetically modified (GM) crops, including non-food GM crops, will be approved unless they pass a detailed case-by-case assessment of possible risks to human health and the environment. Under European Union (EU) legislation each proposed commercial GM product is subject to a detailed risk assessment which involves careful scrutiny by independent scientists. An evaluation is made of all the risk factors that may arise, including possible toxic or allergenic effects and the likely consequences of any gene transfer. Any GM crop intended for importing into this country from outside the EU would need to have the requisite EU consent.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the UK Government's policy is on Poland's decision to ban the cultivation and sale of genetically modified organisms. [77869]

Ian Pearson: This is a matter for the Polish Government and the European Commission. The Government's policy is that we expect member states to abide by existing EU law.

Hosepipe Ban

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will estimate the financial impact on the landscape and gardening industry of the imposition of a hosepipe ban in some parts of the South East of England. [78645]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 19 June 2006]: Water companies are responsible for considering whether to introduce hosepipe bans using the powers available to them under the Water Industry Act 1991. Prior approval from Government is not required.

No assessment of the financial impact of hosepipe bans on the landscape and gardening industry has been conducted by the Government. However, in light of lessons learned from the current drought period, my Department will review the scope of the current legislative framework relating to hosepipe bans.

Landfill

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of landfilled waste in Herefordshire comes from commercial sources. [76775]

Mr. Bradshaw: Based on returns supplied to the Environment Agency by the facility operators, 5,406 tonnes (48.6 per cent.) out of a total of 11,122 tonnes of waste landfilled at three licensed facilities in Herefordshire in 2002-03 were of commercial origin. This is the last year for which fully quality assured data are available.

This is a relatively small amount compared both to the total waste land-filled in the West Midlands (6,623,554 tonnes) and to the total waste dealt with (through treatment, transfer and disposal) in Herefordshire (167,846 tonnes). The tonnage deposited in landfills is likely to decrease further over subsequent years as landfill sites come under stricter regulation.

Marmoset Monkeys

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what restrictions apply to the taking of marmoset monkeys into public places; and if he will make a statement. [77704]

Mr. Bradshaw: Marmoset monkeys are not listed under the Dangerous Wild Animals Act and there are no restrictions specific to taking them into public places. However, any keeper would need to ensure that in taking such an animal into a public place they are not causing any unnecessary suffering contrary to section 1 of the Protection of Animals Act 1911.

Under the Animal Welfare Bill all keepers and owners will need to ensure that an animal's welfare needs are also provided for.

The Department is also looking at the provision of codes of practice on the care of primates.

Meat Hygiene Controls

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely impact of the proposals in the Food Standards Agency's consultation on charging arrangements for meat hygiene controls on (a) the charges to and (b) the viability of small abattoirs. [76359]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The Food Standards Agency's proposals for changes to the charging arrangements for meat hygiene controls are still being developed. I understand that they are currently seeking the initial views of stakeholders, prior to full consultation later this year. Officials from this Department will be liaising closely with those of the Agency to assess their potential impact on charges generally and particularly on the viability of smaller abattoirs.

Packaging

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the Government plan (a) to reduce the amount of packaging used by big businesses and (b) to encourage consumers to choose products with less packaging. [76852]

Mr. Bradshaw: Last year the Government launched the Courtauld Commitment, a voluntary agreement between 13 major retailers and the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) to reduce packaging waste. There are three broad objectives to meet, which are:

i. to design out packaging waste growth by 2008;

ii. to deliver absolute reductions in packaging waste by March 2010; and

iii. to identify ways to tackle the problem of food waste.

There are also two sets of regulations which cover packaging in the UK both of which encourage producers (including retailers) to minimise packaging. The Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended) are intended to increase the recovery and recycling of packaging waste. The amount of packaging waste producers have to recover and recycle is determined, in part, by the amount of packaging they handle. Therefore, businesses can save money if they reduce the amount of packaging they handle. The Packaging (Essential Requirements) Regulations 2003 (as amended) place a number of requirements on all packaging placed on the market in the UK, including a requirement that packaging should be manufactured so that the volume and weight are limited to the minimum adequate amount to maintain the necessary level of safety, hygiene and acceptance for the packed product and for the consumer.

Both regulations have led to decreases in packaging used around products. However, more still needs to be done to reduce the amount of packaging that is produced. We have asked the Advisory Committee on Packaging to work with industry to find solutions to this problem and to let me have recommendations for ways of encouraging businesses to further reduce the amount of packaging they use.

Although legislation is one way of reducing packaging, consumers also have a part to play. If consumers make a point of choosing goods that are not heavily packaged, buy "loose" food rather than pre-packaged food and use their reusable shopping bags, manufacturers would be more inclined to think about the type and the quantity of packaging around their products.

Private Sewers

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with interested parties on his recent consultation on the adoption of private sewers; and what option he plans to recommend following that consultation. [76866]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA has worked hard with stakeholders including Ofwat, Water UK and the Consumer Council for Water to examine the scope and form any potential transfer to water and sewerage companies might take; its costs and funding, the impact on the drain repair and insurance industries, and public expectation. We intend to publish a decision on how to address the problems associated with existing private sewers in England and Wales in the autumn.

Recycling

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely effects of a deposit system for returnable cans and bottles on the amount of domestic and commercial waste; and if he will make a statement. [78011]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department commissioned a project last year to evaluate whether a deposit system could provide additional value in the UK alongside the current packaging waste recovery system. The work has now been completed and has taken into account existing deposit and return schemes in other parts of Europe, the USA and Canada. The Government will evaluate the findings including an assessment of the likely cost implications, taking account of the fact that additional costs are likely to be passed on to consumers.

The Department has also had discussions with the Advisory Committee on Packaging, regarding the impact of a deposit system. A task force concluded that the costs would be significant, and might be in the region of £1 billion to £7 billion, depending on how any such systems were set up.

The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) has also been leading a £1.2 million project to help retailers pilot new ways of encouraging householders to return their wastes to collection systems at supermarkets for recycling. The project has looked at whether these new approaches, including the use of new technology in bring banks and incentives such as discount vouchers, could help bolster recycling rates and attract new recyclers.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what standards the Government plan to introduce for operators recycling televisions and computer monitors containing cathode ray tubes. [78441]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) Directive aims to minimise WEEE arisings and to encourage reuse, recycling and recovery.

Article 6(1) and annex II of the Directive introduce requirements for the treatment of collected items of WEEE to remove certain substances, preparations and components. The aim is to avoid the dispersion of pollutants into any recycled material or the waste stream. Cathode ray tubes (including their fluorescent coating) are among the substances that have to be removed.

This type of treatment will be subject to waste management licencing to ensure the protection of the environment and human health. We will publish guidance on how to comply with these requirements for those involved with the treatment of WEEE once regulations are made to transpose these provisions.

Specified Risk Material

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action he is taking to enable butchers who remove specified risk material from carcases to return such material to the abattoir. [78161]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 16 June 2006]: The Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies (No. 2) Regulations 2006, came into force on 3 May. They enable any butcher to apply to their local authority for an authorisation to remove vertebral column from the carcases or part carcases of cattle which are between 24 and 30 months of age. Vertebral column from this age group of cattle is specified risk material.

We are working closely with industry representatives to facilitate the disposal of vertebral column removed from carcases at butchers' shops and have discussed the possibility of having approved intermediate plants operating on abattoir sites. This would allow vertebral column to be returned to the abattoir of origin for disposal. Abattoirs wishing to pursue this option should notify their local animal health office at the earliest opportunity.

Other disposal routes available include rendering and incineration or the use of collectors such as knackers. Guidance on the disposal of vertebral column has been drawn up in consultation with the industry and will be available shortly.

Veterinary Practices

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many veterinary practices there were in (a) 2006 and (b) 1991. [78209]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department does not hold information on the number of veterinary practices.

Warden Bay Scheme

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether the Warden Bay scheme will include replacing the woodland at the top of the cliff. [78078]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 16 June 2006]: I refer to the answer given on 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 905W, which explained that Swale borough council is promoting the Warden Bay coast protection project and details of its construction are a matter for that authority. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the council direct to establish their plans for the area of woodland in question.

Waste and Resources Action Programme

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs by what mechanism the Waste and Resources Action Programme Real Nappy Scheme is audited. [78530]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Real Nappy Scheme is funded through the Waste Implementation Programme (WIP) and run by the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP). WRAP publishes an annual report, which lists the achievements of each of its programmes. WRAP's accounts are audited on an annual basis by their own auditors, like any other company, and the Real Nappy Programme is considered as part of that process. In addition, the National Audit Office (NAO) is carrying out an investigation into reducing the reliance on landfill in England. As part of that process, they have considered the impact of WIP including the Real Nappy Programme. It is expected that the finalised NAO report will be available later this summer.

Water Extraction

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much water has been abstracted from the river (a) Lugg, (b) Arrow and (c) Wye in each month since January 2004. [77448]

Ian Pearson: The Environment Agency has provided the following information which is taken from data received from licence holders who are authorised to abstract water from the rivers Arrow, Lugg and Wye. The data cover the period 2004 and 2005.

The information does not include any data declared as commercially confidential.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol Misuse and Enforcement Campaign

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much will be made available to police through the Alcohol Misuse and Enforcement Campaign between (a) 9 June and 9 July and (b) 10 July and 10 August, broken down by constabulary. [77652]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 14 June 2006]: The latest Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign (AMEC) ran from 8 May 2006 until 8 June 2006 with an additional £2.35 million provided to local forces and trading standards authorities for this period. One key purpose of this campaign was to set the tone of acceptable behaviour and how the use of alcohol would be policed both for the World Cup and the summer. The campaign did not extend into the period of the World Cup itself, as the police service has its own well-established plans for policing during major sporting events which are funded through the service's mainstream resources.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of Government guidelines on the treatment of animals used in scientific experimentation; and if he will make a statement; [77683]

(2) what assessment he has made of the merits of strengthening Government guidelines on the treatment of animals in scientific experimentation; and if he will make a statement. [78438]

Joan Ryan: It has long been our policy to assess and satisfy the welfare needs of animals bred and used under the licensing controls of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. We are working to ensure that the highest possible standards of animal welfare are applied to animals used in scientific procedures and that they are used only where it is fully justified, where the benefits outweigh the costs and where there are no suitable alternatives.

The animals must be housed and cared for in accordance with codes of practice published and laid before Parliament under the 1986 Act. These codes set standards which have to be met as a requirement of licence conditions, and the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate closely monitors compliance. In their report published in July 2002, the House of Lords Select Committee on Animals in Scientific Procedures recognised the progress that had been made since the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 came into force in fostering a culture of care towards animals used in scientific procedures in establishments designated under that legislation.

The culture of care in the United Kingdom is indeed probably better than anywhere else in the world, and we remain committed to maintaining and improving that position. United Kingdom standards and best practice have been used extensively to inform revised guidance on the accommodation and care of laboratory animals adopted on 15 June 2006 by the Council of Europe.

The new guidelines include a considerable increase in the minimum amount of space that must be allocated to animals. This will help to promote more group accommodation and a more stimulating and interesting environment for the animals. In anticipation of their adoption, we have for some time been advising United Kingdom users to work to the Council of Europe draft guidelines. The United Kingdom codes of practice will be revised to reflect these improved practices, where necessary, in due course.

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that animals used in laboratory experiments are kept in adequate conditions. [78580]

Joan Ryan [holding answer 19 June 2006]: It has long been our policy to assess and satisfy the welfare needs of animals bred and used under the licensing controls of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures to tackle antisocial behaviour have been introduced by his Department since 1997; and what the take-up for each measure has been to date in (a) Dudley and (b) the West Midlands. [77145]

Mr. McNulty: Building and enforcing a modern culture of respect and tackling antisocial behaviour is a priority for the Government. On 10 January the Government published the Respect Action Plan. The plan is central to the Government's drive to step up and broaden the clampdown on antisocial behaviour and to promote good behaviour.

Prior to this the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 put in place a range of measures to tackle antisocial behaviour and gave local agencies the tools they need to tackle antisocial behaviour on the ground. Key measures in the Act include:

Powers to close premises where drugs are used unlawfully.

Powers enabling social landlords to take action against antisocial tenants.

A package of support and sanctions to enable parents to prevent and tackle antisocial behaviour among children.

Powers to allow police officers to disperse groups of people who are causing nuisance or intimidating others.

Powers for environmental health officers to close noisy premises.

Powers to tackle graffiti and fly-posting.

The Housing Act 2004 also contained important measures to enable landlords to tackle antisocial behaviour. A survey of Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships and Community Safety Partnerships in England and Wales in 2005 found that:

514 crack house closure orders were made between January 2004 and September 2005;

809 areas were designated as dispersal areas between January 2004 and June 2005;

2,369 parenting contracts and orders were made between October 2003 and September 2005;

13,478 acceptable behaviour contracts were made between October 2003 and September 2005.

Antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) were introduced under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 and have been available since April 1999. In Dudley 30 ASBOs have been issued between April 1999 and September 2005. 552 ASBOs have been issued in the West Midlands during the same period.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in each London borough in each year since their inception, broken down by (a) age and (b) sex; and if he will make a statement. [75541]

Mr. McNulty: The available information is given in tables which will be placed in the Library.

Building Safer Communities Fund

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding from the Building Safer Communities Fund has been allocated to (a) Leeds city council and (b) the basic command units of West Yorkshire Police within the Leeds city council district in each of the last three years. [76933]

Mr. McNulty: The information is as follows:

(a) The Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) in Leeds City Council received a total of £3,987,656 under the Building Safer Communities Fund over the last three financial years, broken down as follows: 2003-04 £1,307,428, 2004-05, £1,340,114, 2005-06 £1,340,114.

(b) The Basic Command Unit of City and Holbeck within the West Yorkshire Police force has received a total of £1,111,170 under the Basic Command Unit (BCU) Fund over the last three financial years, broken down as follows: 2003-04 £370,390, 2004-05 £370,390, 2005-06 £370,390.

Cannabis

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average number of grammes of cannabis found on people charged with possession of cannabis was in each of the last five years. [77159]

Mr. Coaker: The requested information is not collected centrally.

CCTV

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he made of the cohesiveness of Government, local authority, town and parish council funding streams for developing a viable and robust network of CCTV cameras; [76931]

(2) how much central Government funding has been spent on CCTV cameras in the area covered by Leeds city council in each of the last five years; [76932]

(3) how much funding for CCTV cameras has been allocated by town and parish councils in the Leeds city council district in each of the last three years. [76934]

Mr. McNulty: There is continuing interest in the further development of CCTV across the country. The Government offices in the regions have a role in ensuring all interested parties, including local authorities and town and parish councils are involved, both in the planning and in finding the appropriate funds. Although there is no National CCTV strategy at the moment, work is under way to produce one by the end of the year. Under the Crime Reduction Programme, Central Government provided £869,000 funding during 2001-02 for Leeds Watch Local, a CCTV scheme under the second round of the CCTV initiative. Money has been made more widely available since then through general crime reduction funding streams, for example under the Building Safer Communities Fund (BSCF). The allocation for CCTV cameras in the Leeds city council district over the last three years was £2,170,000. Exact figures at town and parish council level are not held but funding, where allocated locally, was split fairly equally at approximately £720,000 each year.

Community Support Officers

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding the Government have provided for police community support officers in each police force in each of the last five years. [75901]

Mr. McNulty: The table gives details of Government funding to police authorities for police community support officers (PCSOs) in the four years since they were first appointed.

Correspondence

James Duddridge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reply to the letter of 2 May 2006 from the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East to the former Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State regarding his constituent Mrs. P. Day of Southend-on Sea. [78043]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 16 June 2006]: I can confirm that I will be writing to the hon. Member for Rochford and Southend, East.

Crime (Ealing)

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of violent crime there were in Ealing Southall constituency in the most recent period for which figures are available, broken down by type of crime. [78046]

Mr. McNulty: Southall comes within the Ealing Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership area. There were 9,962 violent crimes recorded in Ealing in 2004-05. Of these, 8,009 were offences of violence against the person, 388 were sexual offences and 1,565 were offences of robbery.

Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many domestic violence incidents dealt with by police in (a) England and Wales, (b) Luton and (c) Bedfordshire in the last five years involved (i) repeat victims and (ii) repeat visits to the same address. [76730]

Mr. McNulty: Data for the number of reported incidents of domestic violence that involved victims of a reported domestic violence incident in the previous 12 months are available from 2002-03 for Luton and Bedfordshire and given in the following table. Data are not available for England and Wales as a whole. Information on repeat visits to the same address is not collected centrally.

Number of reported incidents of domestic violence that involved victims of a reported domestic violence incident in the previous 12 months

	Luton	Bedfordshire
2002-03	1,890	2,962
2003-04	1,818	3,295
2004-05	1,924	3,287

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the trend over the last five years in the number of repeat victims in cases of domestic violence investigated by police in (a) England and Wales, (b) Luton and (c) Bedfordshire. [76731]

Mr. McNulty: Between 2002-03 and 2004-05, the number of reported incidents of domestic violence that involved victims of a reported domestic violence incident in the previous 12 months has risen by under 2 per cent. in Luton and 11 per cent. in Bedfordshire. Data are not available for England and Wales as a whole.

Drug Intervention Programme

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the results of the Drug Intervention Programme. [69543]

Mr. Coaker: Since the introduction of the Drug Interventions Programme (DIP) in April 2003, over 45,000 drug misusing offenders have entered treatment through DIP. The programme continues to have a positive impact in communities not only through the interventions that it offers but also by delivering a more integrated approach by local agencies to the problems of offenders. Acquisitive recorded crime—to which drug related crime (including theft) makes a substantial contribution—fell by 12 per cent. in the year to April 2005 compared with the previous 12 months.

The programme is highly regarded by operational staff and the many offenders whose lives it has helped to change. Its success has been achieved through a combination of additional resources, new legislation, revised working practices and a stronger focus on partnership working.

We are on track to achieve the overall target of 1,000 offenders a week (4,300 a month) into treatment by 2008. In April 2006 over 2,800 offenders engaged in treatment through DIP. The programme continues to be developed and strengthened. For example, from 31 March 2006 testing on arrest has been rolled out to 98 areas.

Those testing positive are required to attend an assessment with a drugs worker. Testing on arrest is a way of identifying drug misusers at an early stage in the criminal justice process. Restriction on bail is now available across all local justice areas in England.

Drugs

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been convicted of drug trafficking offences in each of the last five years, broken down by police force. [77151]

Mr. Coaker: The table shows the number of people found guilty at court or cautioned in England and Wales police force areas between 2000 and 2004 for drug trafficking offences. Trafficking offences include: possession with intent to supply, unlawful supply, unlawful production and unlawful import or export.

Extremist Exploitation

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking towards making young people less vulnerable to being influenced and exploited by extremists. [76813]

Mr. McNulty: Together with the Muslim communities, we are taking forward projects designed to reduce the risk of radicalisation of vulnerable young people. Examples of these projects are; The National Roadshow of Influential Populist Scholars, work with the UK Youth Parliament seeking new and effective tools for engagement and youth workshops to challenge the radicalisation of Muslim youth. The Prison Service have commissioned a three year project on how prison service policies on preparing prisoners for release meets the needs of Muslim prisoners. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Home Office have a full programme of media intensive visits by British Muslim delegations to a number of countries in the Muslim world. And as a Government we are committed to prioritising policies that tackle the real and perceived socio-economic inequalities confronting Muslim communities today. As well as focusing on tackling the issue of young Muslims being influenced and exploited by extremists, the Home Office has funded a number of initiatives in Burnley, Oldham and Bradford which are involved in engaging young people at risk of joining far right extremist organisations. The Home Office also works closely with Rewind a project aimed at tackling issues of racism among young people. We are also supporting an initiative in Blackburn with Darwen which will bring together young girls across faith groups to discuss issues of racism and extremism.

Firearms

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many incidents a deactivated gun that has been reactivated was used in shootings and armed violence in England and Wales in the last five years; and which of these incidents resulted in murder. [77610]

Mr. McNulty: Data for recorded crime involving specific types of imitation firearms in England and Wales have been collected centrally only since April 2004.

In 2004-05, police recorded one violent offence that involved a deactivated firearm. The weapon was used as a threat and did not result in injury.

Iris Scans

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the results were of the airport-based Iris Recognition Immigration System pilots; what percentage of iris scans were successful; and if he will make a statement. [78121]

Joan Ryan: The IRIS Project Board agreed on 5 May 2006 that the project should exit its pilot stage. At that point the IRIS enrolment biometric acceptance rate was 99.53 per cent. compared to the contract pilot acceptance criterion of 98 per cent. I will make a written statement to the House on the overall results of the IRIS Project Report once it is complete.

Knives

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many knives have been handed in during the amnesty in Houghton and Washington East constituency. [76334]

Mr. McNulty: Figures for the number of items handed in during the amnesty are being collected at force level. The number of items surrendered after the first week in Northumbria is 617. Final figures will be published after they have been collated following the end of the amnesty (30 June).

London Terrorist Attacks

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average compensation paid to those who lost (a) one and (b) two limbs as a result of the terrorist attacks on 7 July 2005 was; and whether further consideration is being given to increasing the sums involved. [68700]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 8 May 2006]: Compensation under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme is paid on the basis of a tariff (scale) of awards for injuries of comparable severity. The tariff awards for the loss of limbs are as under: loss of one leg below knee £33,000, loss of one leg above knee £44,000, loss of one hand or arm £44,000, loss of both hands or arms £110,000, loss of both legs £110,000. Victims who lose a limb are likely to be eligible for additional compensation for loss of earnings, loss of future earning capacity and the costs of special care. Such compensation will vary according to individual circumstances.

In most such cases final settlement of the claim will not be possible until the final prognosis for recovery is clear, and a final assessment can be made with regard to lost earning capacity and the costs of future care. However, a substantial interim award or awards will be made where a final determination cannot be made for some time. We announced on 8 June 2006, Official Report, column 38WS, that we were making an extra donation of £2.5 million to the London Bombings Relief Charitable Fund to give assistance to bereaved and the injured victims of the 7 July 2005 London bombings. The further support was being made on a special, one-off basis in recognition of the exceptional circumstances of the London bombings, rather than under the rules of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme, which would require a change to legislation.

Mentally Ill Prisoners

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who work with mental health patients have been murdered by patients in each of the last 10 years for which records are available. [76779]

Mr. McNulty: The requested data are not collected centrally for inclusion on the Homicide Index.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer Question 51888 tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 10 February 2006 on transport for prisoners. [65398]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I replied to the hon. Member on 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1220W.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will provide a substantive response to question 63667, tabled by the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight on 30 March, on the Security Industry Authority. [70112]

Mr. Coaker: I refer the hon. member to the reply given 6 June 2006, Official Report, column 299W. I can confirm that in the 10 weeks following the offence date of 20 March 127 warnings have been issued and the SIA have conducted six operations as part of "Operation Forewarn". The SIA has a regionally-based compliance team of 33.

People Trafficking

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his estimate is of the number of people trafficked into the UK for (a) sexual slavery and (b) forced labour in each year since 1997, broken down by country of origin. [74856]

Mr. Coaker: It is difficult to make an accurate assessment of the number of people trafficked into the UK for sexual or labour exploitation and particularly by reference to the year and country of origin. An indicator of the number of victims involved in this type of trafficking is the number of referrals to the Poppy project. Since the scheme's inception in 2003 a total of 184 women who met the criteria for the project have been referred to it (out of a total of 451 referrals between March 2003 and the end of March 2006). However, the scheme operates mainly in London and has tightly focused criteria, so the number of victims nationwide is likely to be higher. A breakdown of the country of origin for women who met the criteria for the Poppy project follows. Operation Pentameter, a police-led, multi-agency initiative aimed at tackling the trafficking of human beings for sexual exploitation has resulted in the rescue of 75 women since its launch on the 21 February. These cases are subject to on-going investigation and as such it would not be appropriate to disclose the country of origin of the potential trafficking victims. The Home Office has commissioned CEOP, the Child Exploitation and Online Protection centre, to conduct an intelligence gathering exercise to scope the problem of child trafficking in the UK; initial findings are expected in the autumn.

There is currently little information on the scale of trafficking for labour exploitation and officials are considering ways in which our knowledge can be improved. Illegal working statistics may provide some indication of the possible size of the illegal working market. Statistical returns are provided on a monthly basis by local enforcement offices, showing the breakdown by nationality of those encountered during illegal working operations. There is currently no facility available to record whether those encountered have been trafficked for the purpose of labour exploitation. However, following are statistics available for illegal working operations for each financial year since 2002 with the top five nationalities identified (figures are not available prior to 2002). 2002-03—A total of 301 operations were reported; a total of 1,099 offenders were encountered. Poland, Lithuania, Brazil, Ukraine and Pakistan were the top five nationalities identified in descending order. 2003-04—A total of 697 operations were reported in 2003-04; a total of 2,304 offenders were encountered. Brazil, Poland, Lithuania, Bangladesh and Ukraine were the top five nationalities identified in descending order. 2004-05—A total of 3,314 operations were reported in 2004-05; a total of 9,227 offenders were encountered. Turkey, Bangladesh, Pakistan, India and Brazil were the top five nationalities identified in descending order.

Mr. Jeremy Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to expand the Poppy scheme for victims of human sex trafficking. [74859]

Mr. Coaker: In April the Home Office entered into a two-year, £2.4 million funding agreement with Eaves Housing for Women for the expansion of the Poppy project. This funding will not only provide for the existing crisis provision service for up to 25 women, it will also meet the costs of 10 additional "step-down" places which will help the women to live semi-independently with less intensive support, and the development of a resource pack for victims, service providers and law enforcement agency staff. It will also introduce the first ever specialist national outreach service in the UK for victims trafficked into sexual exploitation. Whilst the project remains London based it will continue to take referrals from across the country and provide a national service. We are currently looking at how best to utilise other existing local service providers to support victims and will continue to consider the feasibility of further extending the Poppy model of support to other areas in the future.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children were identified as victims of child trafficking in the UK in each year between 2001 and 2005; from which countries they came; what percentage of those children had been sexually abused; and through which agencies most of those victims of child trafficking were found. [75972]

Mr. Coaker: The Government have no centrally collated data on the number of children trafficked into the UK. The Home Office recognises there is an urgent need to improve its intelligence on this issue and for this reason have commissioned a scoping project in partnership with the Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre (CEOPS) to estimate the scale and nature of the problem including source countries. Additionally newly established Minors Intelligence Teams based at Croydon and Liverpool Asylum screening units now provide monthly reports on children who have been identified as being at risk including those that they believe have been trafficked.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taking to deter child trafficking into the UK. [75974]

Mr. Coaker: The Government have taken a number of steps to deter child trafficking into the UK. They have, for example, strengthened the legislative framework by including the offence of trafficking children in the Sexual Offences Act, 2003 and the Asylum and Immigration Act, 2004. Additionally, the Sexual Offences Act introduced new offences of "abuse of children through prostitution and pornography" which aim to protect children under the age of 18. The law enforcement response to human trafficking is co-ordinated by Reflex, the multi agency task force on organised immigration crime, established in 2000. Reflex has been working closely with police forces in the regions to increase awareness of human trafficking and build capacity to tackle it. A key thrust of its activity is to develop our intelligence base, thereby improving our knowledge and understanding of the extent and nature of child trafficking within the UK. The establishment of the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) on 1 April 2006 brings a renewed focus on improving intelligence and targeting those organised crime groups causing the most harm. The previous Home Secretary (Mr. Clarke) made clear in his letter to all chief constables, in June 2005, that police forces should increase their efforts against organised immigration crime, focusing particularly on human trafficking. A national action plan is being developed this year incorporating the responses from the UK consultation on tackling human trafficking. The action plan will include measures to deter child trafficking. Responses to the plan from stakeholders are currently being collated with a view to publishing a summary report of these on 21 June 2006. The Government are increasing their engagement with developing countries in helping to eradicate the root causes of trafficking such as poverty, social exclusion, discrimination against women, girls and inequality. The Government are working with several overseas countries to prevent human trafficking by helping to tackle poverty and removing the conditions that lead to forced migration. The Government are also seeking to build the capacity of these countries to combat trafficking by improving ways of stemming the problem. Through our embassies and consulates we are working to raise awareness in source countries on the dangers of trafficking among potential victims.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what programmes are in place to ensure that recovered children are not re-trafficked. [75975]

Mr. Coaker: Children who have been identified as having been trafficked and who are considered to be at risk are looked after by local authorities under section 20 of the 1989 Children Act. The arrangements for trafficked children as for other children in need in the UK are matters for local authorities to decide based on careful analysis of the risks, the needs and the circumstances facing that particular child.

The Home Office National Asylum Seekers Service (NASS) is conducting a review together with the Department for Education and Skills, to ensure that safe arrangements for lone asylum-seeking children who have been assessed as being at risk from traffickers can be incorporated in those for other unaccompanied foreign national minors in need of support. This work will be carried out in partnership with the most knowledgeable and experienced local authorities. Her Majesty's Government are aware that children returned to certain countries could be put at risk of further harm, with the likelihood of being re-trafficked. As a general principle, therefore, children will only be returned, where it is considered both possible and safe to do so and only after a full assessment of each case has been thoroughly carried out. Before considering the return of a child, full consideration is given to the Government's obligations under the immigration laws and the European Convention on Human Rights and the unique circumstances of each case including an assessment of the country of origin.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with which counterparts in other countries he (a) has discussed and (b) plans to discuss actions to tackle the growth in human trafficking. [78810]

Mr. Coaker: My right hon. Friend Tony McNulty, along with Lord Goldsmith attended the G8 meeting on 15 and 16 of June the agenda for which included human trafficking. The Government are actively involved in discussions on how to tackle trafficking with other EU countries as part of the EU Action Plan which we initiated. We will keep under review the need for bilateral discussions as and when they arise.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the Government have transposed the Council of the European Union's Framework Decision on combating trafficking in human beings into UK law; and if he will make a statement. [78811]

Mr. Coaker: The UK has met its international obligations with the introduction of a range of offences covering trafficking into or out of the UK for sexual exploitation under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 and Section 22 of the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 2003. With regard to trafficking for non-sexual exploitation, the UK is compliant with the framework decision following the introduction of the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants) Act 2004, the Gangmasters (Licensing) Act 2004, the Proceeds of Crime Act 2004 and relevant sections of the Immigration and Asylum Act 2006. An explanatory memorandum to this effect was cleared from scrutiny in the Lords on 13 June.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information the Government have provided to the UN Office on Drugs and Crime's Global Programme Against Trafficking in Human Beings for the purposes of establishing a trafficking database. [78814]

Mr. Coaker: UN Office on Drugs and Crime trafficking trends database collects a wide range of open source information on trafficking including both qualitative and quantitative information provided by the UK Government. The information provided by the UK Government includes estimates of the volume of trafficking by country, details of trafficking cases dealt with by the criminal justice system, characteristic profiles of victims/ traffickers and details of trafficking routes.

Police

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in favour of keeping West Mercia as a separate police force. [69976]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 10 May 2006]: We have received representations from West Mercia police force and authority in favour of allowing West Mercia to stand alone as a strategic force. We have also received correspondence in favour of this option from members of the public and other interested parties in the West Mercia force area.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many misconduct sanctions have been imposed on police officers in each of the last five years, broken down by type of sanction. [75403]

Mr. McNulty: The misconduct sanctions imposed on police officers in each of the last five years for which statistics have been collected, broken down by sanction, are as follows:

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Prime Minister about merging police forces in England and Wales since his appointment. [77126]

Mr. McNulty: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has regular discussions with his right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, about the whole range of my responsibilities.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) serving and (b) former police officers of each police force have been imprisoned in each of the last five years. [77155]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not held centrally.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police recruits have dropped out of training in each police force in each of the last five years; and what percentage this represents of the total number of recruits in each year. [77427]

Mr. McNulty: The figures in table A refer to police recruits who have voluntarily resigned from their force within their probationary period. Data are only available from 2003 onwards. The figures in table B are force recruitment data for the same period. The probationary period is two years in length and an officer may be recruited in one year and then resign in the next. For this reason, it is not possible accurately to cross-reference the two sets of data so as to express the number of resignations during any given year as a percentage of the officers recruited during that year.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in each police force have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) inappropriate use of the internet and (ii) using official telephones to access premium rate telephone numbers in each of the last five years. [77431]

Mr. McNulty: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the consultation on the merger of the four existing forces in the West Midlands will cost (a) his Department and (b) (i) each individual police force and (ii) each local authority involved. [77682]

Mr. McNulty: The statutory four month period in which objections can be raised under Sections 32 and 33 of the Police Act 1996 is part of normal Home Office business and, as such, imposes no additional costs. The costs, if any, that police forces and police authorities choose to incur is a matter for the bodies concerned.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police stations have been closed in villages and towns with a population smaller than 10,000 inhabitants in each year since 1997. [78201]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answers of 7 June 2006, Official Report, columns 741-42W, on the police, whether his strategic objectives in relation to West Mercia police differ from those of his predecessor. [78390]

Mr. McNulty: As my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, made clear during the course of Home Office oral questions on 19 June, he believes that the creation of strategic police forces will bring benefits both in improving protective services and safeguarding dedicated local policing. However, he also made it clear that he wants to engage in further discussion with police forces and police authorities on how best to move to strategic police forces.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will withdraw the guidance to police forces contained in Annex C of his Department's circular 46/2004; [77964]

(2) if he will amend the guidance to police forces on reviewing injury pensions so that injured officers who were in receipt of such a pension prior to the introduction of the current guidance will not have their pension reviewed earlier than their state retirement age; [77965]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effect of new legislation on age discrimination on the existing guidance to police forces on injury pensions contained in Annex C of Home Office Circular 46/2004. [77966]

Mr. McNulty: We have no plans to change the guidance in Annex C in HOC 46/2004, which was issued to provide for a fairer and more consistent framework within which police authorities review the injury pensions they are paying. Police authorities have a statutory responsibility to consider at suitable intervals whether the pensioner's loss of earning capacity has altered. The relevant provision is now set out in regulation 37 of the Police (Injury Benefit) Regulations 2006, but the legal obligation has been in place since before 1987, when the previous regulations were made. A wider policy review of the injury award system is planned.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the creation of larger police constabularies on response times; and if he will make a statement. [67102]

Mr. McNulty: While no assessment has been made of the effect of the creation of larger police forces on response times, we believe that strategic forces will have greater capability and capacity to deliver effective protective services, response policing and neighbourhood policing for all their communities. Targets on response times are set and monitored locally. It is an operational matter for the chief constable of each area to decide how he or she wishes to deploy the available resources to best serve their communities.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the proposed merger between Lancashire and Cheshire police authorities on policing in Lancashire. [76013]

Mr. McNulty: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary's assessment revealed that the most effective option for improving policing for the communities of both Lancashire and Cumbria is for these force areas to amalgamate. This will preserve and embed neighbourhood policing and protect people better against serious crime and terrorism. Both Lancashire and Cumbria police authorities voted in favour of amalgamation.

Pornographic Material

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider introducing legislation to reduce the amount of (a) pornographic materials in circulation and (b) bad language, pornography and violence on television; and if he will make a statement. [78967]

Mr. Coaker: The information requested is as follows.

(a) Legislation, including the Obscene Publications Act 1959, the Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981, the Video Recordings Act 1984 and the Communications Act 2003 already exist to protect people against illegal and harmful sexual material. The Government are also currently considering the responses they have received to their Consultation on the Possession of Extreme Pornographic Material which contains proposals to make illegal the simple possession of a limited range of extreme pornographic material.

(b) Decisions on broadcast programme standards are a matter for Ofcom, the BBC and S4C to determine independently of Government, according to the provisions of the Broadcasting and Communications Acts.

Prison Service

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times in the last 12 months the London Area Manager of the Prison Service, or his representative, has attended multi-agency public protection arrangements strategic management boards within his area. [78088]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Four meetings of the multi-agency public protection arrangements (MAPPA) strategic management boards were held in the last 12 months and a representative of the Area Manager attended all these meetings. The Prison Service is part of the MAPPA "Responsible Authority" with the Police and Probation and a protocol exists between the agencies which has been signed by the Area Manager. This requires the Area Manager to ensure consistent representation at strategic management board. The main responsibilities of the Prison Service and the Area Manager are to ensure that operational functions work consistently in prisons. This is monitored through assurance visits to each prison by the Area Manager's representative.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are employed in the Prison Service Race and Equality Advisory Group; and if he will make a statement. [78130]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service Race Equality Action Group employs 26 staff.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost has been of the Tasker investigation commissioned by the Prison Service London area office; and if he will make a statement. [78186]

Mr. Sutcliffe: This information will be calculated once the investigation is complete.

Prisons

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prison inmates are involved in training courses; how many were on training courses five years ago; and if he will make a statement. [77248]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 13 June 2006]: Data in the specific format requested are not available.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many mobile telephones have been found in each prison in the possession of inmates in each of the last seven years; and if he will make a statement. [77485]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service does not separately record incidents of mobile telephones found in the possession of prisoners and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times illegal drugs have been found in each prison in each of the last seven years, broken down by (a) type and (b) quantity of drug; and if he will make a statement. [77486]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Prison Service does not hold data on drugs finds broken down by type of drug and quantity. Centrally available information records any drug-related find and includes items associated with drug taking.

Individual prisons will have information on the type and quantity of drugs found and use this information in developing a local drug strategy for combating drug abuse.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what forecast he has made of the prison population on 30 June. [78146]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The latest prison population projections are published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 10/05 "Updated and Revised Prison Population Projections, 2005-2011, England and Wales".

Private Security Industry Act

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when application procedures for each type of licence under the Private Security Industry Act 2001 were opened. [77000]

Railway/Underground Crime

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes have been reported at each mainline railway station in each of the last five years. [76398]

Derek Twigg: I have been asked to reply.

The number of crimes reported at each mainline railway station—namely those stations in Great Britain managed by Network Rail—and recorded by the British Transport police (BTP) in each financial year since 2001-02 is given in the following table.

Notifiable offences

Mainline railway station	2001-02	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
Birmingham New Street	1,049	1,053	1,061	1,084	917

London Waterloo	1,788	2,270	2,159	1,979	1,551
Manchester Piccadilly	764	821	843	940	957

In reading the data supplied in the table, the following factors should be considered:

(i) the data include crimes committed on train journeys ending at these locations as well as those occurring on the stations themselves; and

(ii) the Home Office introduced a National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) that all police forces across England and Wales were required to adopt. BTP adopted this standard on 1 April 2002. The impact of the new recording standard saw an increase in recorded crime, equating to an average 22 per cent. increase recorded by all police forces across England and Wales. The basic principle of NCRS is that if on the balance of probability a crime has been committed it is recorded as a crime. As a result 2001-02 data cannot be meaningfully compared with subsequent years. The standard has made crime recording more victim focused.

Road Traffic Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted in (A) Southend, (B) Essex, (C) Hertfordshire and (D) England and Wales of offences under sections (1) 16 and (2) 17 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by age group. [75630]

Mr. Coaker: The table shows numbers of prosecutions and convictions for offences under section 16 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 over the five year period from 2000 to 2004. The offences under section 17 of the same act form part of a group of miscellaneous motoring offences in the data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform. It is not possible to separate these offences from others within the group and therefore no separate data can be provided. Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Security Industry Authority

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average wait for a licence issued by the Security Industry Authority has been since licensing was introduced. [62301]

Mr. Coaker: The SIA do not calculate the average processing times for applications. Some, such as those involving overseas criminal records checks, unavoidably take a considerable time. The SIA have a published target of processing 80 per cent. of all applications within six weeks, measured from the date that a properly completed application enters the processing system to the date that a licence is issued. From April 2004 until August 2005 the SIA processed 62 per cent. within six weeks and 88 per cent. within nine weeks. Since September 2005, there has been a backlog of applications that have been waiting to enter the system. These have added an additional time of between two and four weeks to the process, so it is now taking up to 10 weeks to process most applications.

Sex Offenders Register

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) former prisoners and (b) individuals who have been cautioned were placed on the sex offenders register in each month since the register was introduced; [78568]

(2) how many (a) former prisoners and (b) individuals who have been cautioned and placed on the sex offenders register were in breach of the obligations thereby placed on them in each month since the register was introduced. [78569]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The data requested are not collected centrally and to do so would incur a disproportionate cost.

Swale Borough Council

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to designate Swale borough council as an alcohol control zone. [78510]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 19 June 2006]: Local authorities can place restrictions on public drinking in areas with a history of alcohol-related crime, disorder or nuisance by making a Designated Public Place Order (DPPO), sometimes referred to as an 'alcohol control zone'. The power, given under section 13 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001, is not available to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, and can only be exercised by local government. Current figures reveal that around 170 authorities now have adopted this measure, with around 360 Orders published in England and Wales.

Young Victims of Crime

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of victims of crime have been under 18 years old in each of the last five years. [78651]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally. With the exception of certain specific sexual offences where the age of the victim is defined by statute, no details of the victim's age are available from the recorded crime series.

TREASURY

Biodiversity

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Minister in his Department is responsible for monitoring his Department's compliance with its duty under section 74 of the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 to have regard to the purpose of conserving biological diversity in carrying out its functions; and if he will make a statement. [73936]

John Healey: As Financial Secretary, I am the HM Treasury's Sustainable Development Minister responsible for both sustainable development policy and sustainability of our internal operations.

HMT is taking a number of steps to reduce the impact of its operations on the environment. These are set out in our sustainable development action plan which is available on our website. http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk./media/089/DA/sustainabledev_170306.pdf .

Birth Rates (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the birth rate was per 1,000 women aged (a) 19, (b) 18, (c) 17, (d) 16, (e) 15, (f) 14 and (g) under 14 years in (i) Peterborough constituency and (ii) Peterborough city council area in each year since 1997. [77911]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 20 June 2006:

As the National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the birth rate per 1,000 women aged (a) 19, (b) 18, (c) 17, (d) 16, (e) 15, (f) 14 and (g) under 14 years in (i) Peterborough constituency and (ii) Peterborough City Council area in each year since 1997. (77911)

Where constituencies are not co-terminous with local authority boundaries, as is the case with Peterborough, the Office for National Statistics (ONS) do not generally release figures based on recording of mother's age at birth registration. This is to protect against disclosure of information provided in confidence. Figures are provided for the relevant local authority instead.

The latest year for which livebirth data are available is 2005 and the table below shows livebirth rates per 1,000 female population by age for Peterborough Unitary Authority for the period 1997 to 2005. Rates for 2005 are provisional, as they are calculated using mid-2004 population estimates.

There were too few livebirths to girls resident in Peterborough at ages under 14, 14 and 15 for figures to be provided separately without breaching confidentiality. Therefore, livebirths to girls aged under 16 have been aggregated in the table.

Rates by single year of age at local authority level should be treated with caution. Population estimates are only considered reliable at local authority level when aggregated to groups of at least five years of age.

Climate Change Levy

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been raised through the Climate Change Levy. [78070]

John Healey: Information on revenue from Climate Change Levy can be found on table 2 of the HM Revenue and Customs 'Climate Change Levy Bulletin', on the HM Revenue and Customs website: http://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=climate

Correspondence

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam of 13 April concerning his constituent Mr. Paolo Standerwick. [78553]

Ed Balls: I have replied to the hon. Member.

Death Rates

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the (a) death rate from heart disease, stroke and related illnesses and (b) death rate from all cancers was among (i) people aged 65 and under, (ii) people aged 75 and under and (iii) all people, in each year since 1970. [78013]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 20 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the (a) death rate from heart disease, stroke and related illnesses and (b) death rate from all cancers was amongst (i) people aged 65 and under, (ii) people aged 75 and under and (iii) all people, in each year since 1970. I am replying in her absence. (78013)

The most recent year for which figures are available is 2004. The table below shows age-standardised death rates from all circulatory diseases and cancer, for persons aged under 65 and under 75 years, and for all ages, in England and Wales for the years 1970 to 2004.

[5] Figures are for registrations of death in each calendar year from 1970 to 1992 and for occurrences of death in each calendar year from 1993 onwards.
Note:
Between 1984 and 1992 a different interpretation of ICD-9 selection Rule 3 was used to code underlying cause of death in England and Wales to that used internationally. This change means that comparisons between this period and years before and after, should be interpreted with caution. The impact of the change on mortality statistics was analysed and reported in annual mortality publications in 1984 and 1994. *The introduction of ICD-10 for coding cause of death in 2001 also means that figures are not completely comparable with data for years before this date. Comparisons between the data before and after 2001 should therefore also be interpreted with caution. Articles specifically examining the effect of the change in classification for circulatory disease and cancer trends were published in Health Statistics Quarterly 22 and 23. More information about these changes, as well as the results of the study, can be found on the National Statistics website at www.statistics.gov.uk/icd10mortality.

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will keep separate records of the amount spent annually on alcohol for hospitality purposes in (a) the Department and (b) his private office. [77201]

John Healey: The information requested is not recorded separately. The Treasury's expenditure on official entertainment is incurred in accordance with the principles of "Government Accounting" as well as the Department's own internal guidance, which provides that expenditure on official entertainment should be incurred in moderation and also be compatible with the occasion and the standing of guests.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in (a) his private office and (b) the Department are (i) under and (ii) over 55 years of age. [77202]

John Healey: As at 1 April 2006, 51 staff in the Treasury were 55 years of age and over, including one member of the staff of the Chancellor's private office. Of the 1,061 staff under the age of 55, 12 were working in the Chancellor's office.

Fixed-odds betting terminals

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how fixed-odd betting terminals are taxed in (a) betting shops and (b) casinos; and what estimate the Government have made of the tax revenue from such terminals in the last 12 months. [78303]

John Healey: Takings from fixed-odds betting terminals have been within the scope of VAT from 6 December 2005 when they were also removed from the scope of General Betting Duty. They will be liable to Amusement Machine Licence Duty from 1 August 2006. Fixed-odds betting terminals cannot be offered outside of a licensed bookmaker.

In Budget 2006 we estimated that revenue would increase by £25 million in 2006-07 from aligning the taxation of gaming machines with the Gambling Act. This includes the increase in revenue from fixed-odds betting terminals.

Gambling Act

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Government have made of the effect on tax revenues of the implementation of the Gambling Act 2005. [78304]

John Healey: The Government have not made an assessment of the overall effect on tax revenues of the implementation of the Gambling Act 2005.

Planning Gain Supplement

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many submissions have been received on the Planning Gain Supplement in response to the consultation. [78318]

John Healey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 16 March 2006, Official Report, column 2417W.

Small Change Big Difference

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department and its agencies have taken following the launch of the Government's Small Change Big Difference campaign. [72016]

John Healey: The Treasury and its agencies support the Government's Small Change Big Difference campaign.

We have an on-site low-cost fitness centre, our staff restaurants have healthy eating options on menus, and we provide facilities for on-site low-cost therapies such as shiatsu massage.

We support fitness activities run by staff such as a yoga club, running club, football and other sporting teams. There is an annual sports day in July each year. In addition we work with our occupational health providers to seek other ways of encouraging healthy living and will be holding a well-being day in June 2006.

We provide a number of family friendly policies to promote work-life balance such as the opportunity for all staff to request varied working patterns and not just those who are statutorily entitled to seek alternative working arrangements.

We will be introducing a smoking ban in the Treasury building before the end of 2006 and providing help-line contacts for those who wish to stop smoking.

In common with other Government Departments we will continue to work with the Department of Health to promote further awareness of healthy life style options among our staff.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the merits of introducing six monthly fixed awards for tax credits; and if he will make a statement. [75758]

Dawn Primarolo: As the 2005 pre-Budget report stated (Para 5.23), the Government will continue to listen to the case for a system of fixed awards, but believe on balance that it is preferable to maintain the current system that flexibly responds to changing circumstances.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many calls to the tax credits helpline were (a) received, (b) handled, (c) engaged and (d) abandoned in each month from December 2005 to May 2006; and if he will make a statement. [75770]

Dawn Primarolo: I have already provided much of this information and would refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 187W. Table 1 sets out the number of calls received and table 2 provides those figures for calls handled, engaged and abandoned that did not form part of my answer on 5 June.

[3] Call attempts where the caller was played an engaged tone, before they were placed in a queue to speak to an adviser.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit overpayments have been written off in each quarter since April 2003 because HM Revenue and Customs could not reliably match the payment of manual cheques to claimants; what the value was in each quarter; and if he will make a statement. [76490]

Dawn Primarolo: For 2003-04, I refer the hon. Member to NAO report, 2004-05. This represented an estimated 134,000 payments made during 2003-04. HM Revenue and Customs has not written off any such manual payments made in 2004-05 or 2005-06.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations (a) he and (b) the Paymaster General have received from the Citizens Advice Bureau about the complexity of tax credit award notices; and if he will make a statement. [78092]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers regularly receive representations on various aspects of the administration of the tax credits system.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of (a) the intra-year volatility of the incomes of low income households and (b) its implications for the design of the tax credits system; and if he will make a statement. [78150]

Dawn Primarolo: To improve its understanding of short-term changes in income, HMT and HMRC partly funded research on income variability by Professor John Hills and others at the Centre for Analysis of Social Exclusion at the London School of Economics. This was also part-funded by the Economic and Social Research Council. The report, "Tracking Income: How Working Families' Incomes Vary Through the Year" was published in March 2006, and is available on the LSE and HMRC websites.

The research showed that many families experience instability in their incomes over time and, while recognising the challenges posed by administering a responsive annual system, said that basing tax credit payments solely on previous levels of income would be "rough justice".

As the 2005 pre-Budget report stated (para. 5.23), the Government will continue to listen to the case for a system of fixed awards, but believe on balance that it is preferable to maintain the current system that flexibly responds to changing circumstances.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether overseas students, with the right to work for 20 hours a week, can claim tax credits; what guidance is given to tax credit staff to check that the limit of work is being observed; and if he will place in the Library copies of written guidance to staff on the eligibility of overseas students for tax credits and the checks to be carried out; [78276]

(2) whether asylum seekers with the right to work can claim tax credits; what guidance is given to tax credit staff on asylum seekers' eligibility; and if he will place in the Library copies of such guidance. [78278]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 June 2006]: Apart from specified exceptions, set out in the Tax Credits (Immigration) Regulations 2003, persons subject to immigration control, including asylum seekers and overseas students, are not eligible for tax credits.

Guidance for staff on dealing with claims from people subject to immigration control is available on the HMRC website: www.hmrc.gov.uk/manuals/ntcmanual/eligibility_residency/ntc0350000.htm.

UK Competitiveness

Mr. Willis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent steps he has taken to improve UK competitiveness. [77984]

John Healey: The Budget report provided an assessment of all areas of the UK economy, and action needed by Government to provide the right environment for businesses competing in the global environment.

The Government's strategy for advancing productivity growth is based, first on providing macroeconomic stability to allow firms and individuals to invest in the future, and second, on making microeconomic reforms to ensure that markets function efficiently and that barriers to productivity growth are tackled.

USA (War Debts)

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what war debt repayments have been made by the USA to the UK in respect of military assistance provided in conflicts over the last 30 years; [78177]

(2) how much, in today's prices, has been paid to the USA in respect of (a) First World War and (b) Second World War debt; [78178]

(3) what sums are outstanding in relation to war debt repayments to the US; and on what dates repayments are due; [78179]

(4) whether the USA has offered to cancel the UK's outstanding liability for repayment of Second World War debt. [78180]

Ed Balls: I refer the hon. Member to the answers the former Financial Secretary (Ruth Kelly) gave him on 30 October 2003, Official Report, column 317W; 14 October 2003, Official Report, column 150W; 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1439-41W; the answer given by the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Aldershot (Mr. Howarth) on 17 December 2002, Official Report, columns 679-80W and the answer given by the Economic Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for East Lothian (Anne Moffat) on 8 June 2006, Official Report, columns 858-59W.

TRANSPORT

A500

Mr. Flello: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential economic impact of the new A500 through Stoke-on-Trent. [79097]

Dr. Ladyman: The potential economic impact of the new A500 through Stoke on Trent was assessed as set out in the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions (DTLR) document "Guidance on the Methodology for Multi-Modal Studies" (GOMMS, 2000).

The GOMMS approach to assessment includes various objectives against which schemes are to be assessed, one of which is Economy.

The Economy objective comprises Transport Economic Efficiency, Reliability and Wider Economic Impacts.

With regard to Transport Economy Efficiency, the quantitative economic modelling carried out before start of works in 2004 shows that the A500 Scheme has a Benefit to Cost Ratio of 4.0. The Benefit to Cost Ratio is a measure of the economic efficiency, and is calculated by dividing the benefits by the costs, and a BCR of 4 is considered "High" Value for Money.

With regard to Reliability, the qualitative assessment shows that the A500 Scheme has a positive "Beneficial" impact.

With regard to Wider Economic Impacts, the qualitative assessment shows that the A500 Scheme lies within and will directly serve the Stoke-on-Trent designated regeneration area, and that Development will depend upon the A500 Scheme.

The results of the assessments are included in an Appraisal Summary Table, which was presented at the Public Inquiry in November 2002.

Aviation Industry (Emissions)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met representatives of the aviation industry to discuss the reduction of carbon emissions from aircraft over the next 10 years; and what the conclusions of the discussions were. [78955]

Gillian Merron: We have regular meetings with various stakeholders, including representatives from the aviation industry, to discuss a range of issues. It is not the normal practice of Government to release details of meetings with private individuals or companies.

Crossrail

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of whether the proposed seven year construction time for the Crossrail project will be achieved. [78611]

Derek Twigg: I understand from Cross London Rail Links Ltd—the company responsible for Crossrail design—that seven years remains a reasonable estimate for the overall period of main construction works.

Foreign Registered HGVs

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what proportion of accidents involving heavy goods vehicles (HGVs) in the UK involved foreign-registered HGVs in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [79300]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Gatwick Express

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the future of the Gatwick Express. [79335]

Derek Twigg: Alternative plans submitted by train operators for the implementation of the recommendations of the Brighton Main Line Route Utilisation Strategy are currently under consideration by the Department for Transport. An announcement will be made in due course.

Travel Costs

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on foreign travel by his Department in each of the last eight years. [76064]

Gillian Merron: The Department was formed in May 2002. Three of the Department's agencies, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, the Highways Agency, and Vehicle and Operator Services Agency, do not record details of overseas travel separately from other travel and subsistence costs, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Figures for the Department and its remaining agencies are contained in the following table:

	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06
DfT(c)	1,682,041	1,825,175	1,595,447
DSA	33,000	29,000	33,000
DVLA	—	—	—
HA	—	—	—
MCA	931,875	1,278,135	868,867
VGA	277,000	245,000	349,574
VOSA	—	—	—
GCDA	157.00	186.00	177.00

The figure stated for DfT(c) for financial year 2004-05 differs from that included in the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Tamworth (Mr. Jenkins) on 16 February 2006, Official Report, column 2407W. It is with regret that in the earlier answer, the cost of domestic flights was included in error. The air travel element in the current table consists entirely of international flights.

All travel in the Department and its agencies complied with the requirements of the "Civil Service Management Code".

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total cost was of overnight accommodation for (a) civil servants and (b) special advisers in his Department staying overnight in (i) Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland, (iii) the Republic of Ireland and (iv) other countries in each of the last three years. [69082]

Gillian Merron: The Department for Transport does not separate travel and subsistence costs for Northern Ireland from those for Great Britain. The figures for the last three years are contained in the following tables.

(a) Civil servants

	GB and NI	Republic of Ireland (IE)	Other	Total
2005-06	301,217.82	1,218.54	180,911.55	483,347.91
2004-05	296,831.12	307.87	73,907.94	371,046.93
2003-04	306,050.16	1,396.42	64,303.67	371,750.25
Total	904,099.10	2,922.83	319,123.16	1,126,145.09

(b) Special advisers

	GB and NI	Republic of Ireland (IE)	Other	Total
2005-06	356	0	751	1,107
2004-05	130	0	0	130
2003-04	0	0	181	181
Total	486	0	932	1,418

The amount spent on overseas travel in 2005-06 is higher than in previous years largely as a consequence of travel arising from the UK's presidency of the European Union between July and December 2005.

The Department's agencies do not record subsistence payments by region, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Railway Stations

Jim Sheridan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many railway stations are unstaffed at weekends. [73189]

Derek Twigg: This information is available from the National Rail Inquiries website at www.nationalrail.co.uk.

Road Safety

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures the Government are taking to reduce road casualties (a) overall and (b) among children. [79188]

Dr. Ladyman: We continue to develop and implement our wide-ranging road safety strategy "Tomorrow's Roads—Safer for Everyone", which set casualty reduction targets to be met by 2010. The first three-year review of the strategy, published in April 2004, confirmed that the 2010 targets remained appropriate. A second review is now under way.

The 2004 casualty figures show we are now over halfway towards our 2010 target of a 40 per cent. reduction in the number of people killed or seriously injured, and over three-quarters of the way towards our 50 per cent. reduction target for children:

the number of people killed or seriously injured in road accidents has fallen by 28 per cent. from the baseline average of 1994-98, and the number of children killed or seriously injured has fallen by 43 per cent. from the 1994-98 baseline.

After setting the target to reduce child fatal and serious injuries, we published "Child Road Safety—Achieving the 2010 Target". This reviewed progress on child safety and identified the action still needed. This action plan is currently being reviewed. Measures to help us reach our target include:

Kerbcraft practical pedestrian training;

THINK! campaigns;

20 mph zones around schools, where appropriate; and child specific projects within the Neighbourhood Road Safety Initiative, which aims to improve road safety for people living in deprived areas.

Both documents are available on the Department for Transport website: www.dft.gov.uk

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the number of accidents caused by drivers who are aged (a) 30 to 64, (b) 65 to 74, (c) 75 to 85 and (d) over 85 years in each of the last three years. [78976]

Dr. Ladyman: The information requested is not available.

Personal injury road accident data in Great Britain are collected by the police and reported to the Department using the STATS19 accident report format. Results are published in detail in "Road Casualties Great Britain—Annual Report". The report for 2004 was published on 29 September 2005 and a copy placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he plans to introduce continued driver development by making Pass Plus or similar schemes compulsory to try to reduce the number of people killed or seriously injured. [79096]

Dr. Ladyman: There are no plans to introduce continuous driver development for car drivers but from autumn 2008 and 2009 respectively bus and lorry drivers will be required to hold a Certificate of Professional Competence which will include a requirement for continuing training in order to drive vocationally. A research project has recently been setup to consider how to increase the take-up of the Pass Plus scheme.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect on road traffic casualties of the Hazard Perception Test since 2002. [79098]

Dr. Ladyman: The Hazard Perception Test was introduced as part of the theory test in November 2002. No specific assessments have been carried out into its impact on casualty rates.

The Department is undertaking a research study, "The Cohort Study of Learner and Novice drivers II", which will include an assessment comparing the effect on casualty rates of newly qualified drivers who took the Hazard Perception Test against those who did not. The results of that study will be published in 2007.

Royal Liverpool University Hospital

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last discussed Hall Lane Strategic Gateway in Liverpool in relation to plans for rebuilding Royal Liverpool university hospital; with whom these discussions were held; and if he will make a statement. [76774]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The Secretary of State has not had any discussions about the Hall Lane Strategic Gateway. Officials in the Government office for the North West liaise on a regular basis with officials from Liverpool city council on the progress of their major schemes including the Hall Lane scheme. I understand that the council considered the scheme at a meeting of its executive board on 16 June 2006.

Train Usage

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) passenger train carriages and (b) multiple units are stored on the rail network but are not in service. [77777]

Derek Twigg: Around 330 passenger carriages are currently in store. These are mainly locomotive hauled coaches previously used on long distance routes and which have been replaced with new or younger cascaded rolling stock.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) locomotives, (b) multiple units, (c) freight wagons and (d) carriages are in use on the rail network, broken down by (i) train operating company and (ii) class. [77778]

Derek Twigg: Tables have been placed in the Library of the House, which give details of the number of locomotives, multiple units and carriages, used by UK franchised passenger train operators, broken down by train operating company and class. Vehicles operated by non-franchised operators such as Network Rail, open access and charter operators are not included. Details of the numbers of freight vehicles used on the network are not held centrally.

This information is based on latest available data but minor variations in the figures can be expected due to ongoing activities such as short term vehicle hiring, the introduction of new fleets and the withdrawal of older vehicles.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Duties

11. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes to his ministerial duties have occurred since May. [79140]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on Wednesday 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 985W, and to my letter of appointment as Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Sino-British Trade

12. Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the Chinese Government on encouraging Sino-British trade and investment. [79141]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My hon. Friend may be aware that I visited China in February this year.

This visit enabled me to meet several very senior members of the Chinese administration, including:

Premier Wen Jibao

Jia Qinglin, Chairman of the Peoples Political Consultative Conference

State Councillor Tang

The Chief Executive of Hong Kong Donald Tsang

The Mayor of Beijing.

Trade and investment formed an important part of the discussions we had. I was also able to close the successful UK-China Partners in Science year in Shanghai.

Trade and investment is one of the core issues considered by the China taskforce, which I chair at the request of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister. Its work offers strategic direction in five key sectors—finance, energy, information and communications technology (ICT), healthcare and water—areas where the UK has world-class expertise and where Chinese demand is growing rapidly. We are encouraging Chinese companies to invest in the UK—particularly those from high value added sectors such as ICT and high performance engineering.

While in China, I was also honoured to be invited to open Nottingham university's new campus in Ningbo. Deepening educational links—particularly in the higher education sector—is vital to allowing the UK to tap into the large pool of well-qualified Chinese graduates, and to encouraging Chinese students to come to the UK. Greater understanding and interchange will help both our economies profit in the long term.

Admiralty House

13. Stephen Hammond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost of his official residence in Admiralty House was to the public purse in 2005-06. [79142]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Final figures are not yet available. The cost will be accounted for in the Department's annual report and accounts in the usual way.

Eastern Europe (Government Policy)

15. Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent work he has undertaken in respect of his responsibility for Government policy relating to Eastern Europe. [79144]

The Deputy Prime Minister: As part of my role during the UK presidency of the EU last year I visited a number of countries in Central and Eastern Europe for high level discussions on our presidency priorities. These included Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Slovenia, Hungary and Croatia.

I have also received a number of senior visitors from Eastern Europe in London over the past year. Our discussions covered a wide range of subjects, including the economy, trade and investment, education and skills, security and the environment.

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his office on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77319]

The Deputy Prime Minister: All expenditure is conducted in accordance with the principles of "Government Accounting".

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many of his staff are part of the Cabinet Office; and how many are assigned to the Department for Communities and Local Government. [78229]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 24 May 2006, Official Report, column 1840W to the hon. Member for Old Bexley and Sidcup (Derek Conway).

Official Duties

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he uses an e-mail account in the course of his duties. [78228]

The Deputy Prime Minister: No.

Private Office

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the budget is of his new private office. [78226]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Expenditure will be accounted for in the Department's annual report and accounts in the usual way.

DEFENCE

Child Protection

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to encourage appropriate representation of military establishments on local safeguarding children boards; and if he will make a statement. [77598]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence recognises the importance of proper representation on local safeguarding children boards (LSCB) and there has been service membership of preceding bodies, particularly Child Protection Committees, where appropriate. The plans for a MOD Children's Board will provide an additional focus for improved interaction between military establishments and LSCB's in England and the equivalent bodies in UK more generally.

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on advertising by his Department in each of the last three years. [70617]

Mr. Watson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my predecessor on 20 July 2005, Official Report, columns 1751W-52W.

In addition, the final outturn figure for publicity and recruiting, which includes advertising, for 2004-05 was £76.8 million.

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77274]

Mr. Watson: Records are kept of overall expenditure on official hospitality, but there is no separate record of the amount spent on alcohol, nor are there any plans to do so. Expenditure in the Department is conducted in accordance with the principles of "Government Accounting" and comprehensive guidance is issued to staff about expenditure on official hospitality, including situations in which alcohol may be provided at public expense.

Farnborough Air Show

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Indonesian (a) military and (b) other official personnel will be attending the Farnborough Air Show in 2006. [78373]

Mr. Ingram: The Defence Export Services Organisation (DESO) intends to publish a list of those countries from which delegations are invited a day or so in advance of the exhibition opening, the timing being consistent with maintaining the security of guests. It is planned to place this list on the DESO internet site:

www.deso.mod.uk

Mine Clearance

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mine clearance equipment is available to Light Forces; what mine clearance equipment is deployed in (a) Afghanistan and (b) Iraq; how many mine clearance projects have been completed in each of the last three years, broken down by country; and how many projects are pending, broken down by country. [77760]

Mr. Ingram: Light Forces are equipped with appropriate mine clearance equipment for the tasks and environments in which they operate.

I am withholding information regarding the specific mine clearance equipment available to Light Forces and deployed in Afghanistan and Iraq, as disclosure of such information would have a bearing on our operational security and place our servicemen and women at risk.

UK forces do not undertake mine clearance projects. They undertake only routine clearance tasks that are essential to the protection of UK forces during an operation. Humanitarian mine clearance projects are undertaken by specialist contractors, paid for and coordinated by the Department for International Development.

Operation Telic

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions helicopters have been grounded due to temperatures exceeding 45 degrees since the start of Operation Telic. [77607]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 June 2006]: The information requested cannot be provided as disclosure of such information would reveal the operational tactics and capability of UK forces, which in turn could have a bearing on our operational security, thereby placing our servicemen and women in additional unnecessary danger.

Royal Ordnance

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which countries will supply in future the items currently produced at Royal Ordnance (a) Bridgwater and (b) Chorley. [77619]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 June 2006]: BAE Systems Land Systems (BAES LS) remains responsible for the security of the supply of products previously manufactured at Bridgwater and Chorley. MOD and BAES LS have set up a joint project team to monitor the transfer of products to other sites (in the UK or abroad) and to ensure security of supply.

Decisions on alternate sources are a commercial matter for the company. BAE LS has indicated, however, that some activities will be transferred to other BAES LS facilities in the UK; some to other UK suppliers; and others to foreign suppliers including USA and France.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Volunteers' Week

10. Mr. McGovern: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps the Government are taking to support Volunteers' Week. [79139]

Edward Miliband: The Government supports Volunteers' Week, primarily through an annual core grant of £1.5 million to Volunteering England, the organisation that runs the week. This year during Volunteers' Week, which took place from 1-7 June, I and other Government Ministers visited a range of volunteering organisations to show support for Britain's 20 million volunteers.

Third Sector Organisations

14. Helen Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps she is taking to encourage all Government Departments to take account of relevant third sector organisations and issues in determining policies and measures. [79143]

Edward Miliband: The Government have set up the new Office of the third sector in the Cabinet Office to co-ordinate the work of Government with the third sector. This includes work to ensure the implementation of the principles of the Compact on funding and policy.

Civil Service (Staff Learning and Development)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what (a) adult learning courses and (b) occupational and professional development courses the civil service makes available to its staff. [78272]

Mr. McFadden: Civil service Departments seek to ensure that all staff have the skills they need to carry out their duties effectively. The range of courses civil servants might attend in either adult learning or occupational and professional development is dictated by the particular needs of the individual, their link to the requirements for current and future development, availability of appropriate training and cost.

The Professional Skills for Government programme has identified a framework for standards of performance across core skills and professional expertise. Occupational and professional development needs to be focused on ensuring staff are able to demonstrate these standards of performance. The National School of Government offers a comprehensive range of training courses which support the professional development of staff in the civil service.

Cyber Security

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent guidance she has issued on cyber security in Government Departments. [79138]

Mr. McFadden: The Government take the issue of cyber security very seriously. The Cabinet Office regularly issues guidance on cyber security based on advice received from the National Infrastructure Co-ordination Centre (NISCC—pronounced "nicey") and the Communications Electronic Security Group (CESG).

Six such notices have been issued this year on a range of specific and technical electronic security requirements (which it would not be appropriate to comment on).

We have also launched the first phase of Get Safe Online, a joint public-private initiative to raise awareness of internet safety among the general public.

Departmental Report

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many copies of the Cabinet Office Departmental Report 2006 were produced; at what cost; to whom copies were sent; at what cost; who was consulted prior to publication; how members of the public can obtain copies; at what cost; and if she will make a statement. [78598]

Hilary Armstrong: One Thousand copies of Cabinet Office Departmental Report 2006 were produced for Cabinet Office's own use and distribution. The total design and production cost to the Cabinet Office was £25,000.

Copies were distributed at no cost to the following:

Cabinet Office Parliamentary Branch and House of Commons Library;

HM Treasury and Cabinet Office Library;

Cabinet Office Board members;

Cabinet Office PSA target holders;

Cabinet Office staff;

National Audit Office;

Central Office of Information

Some copies have been reserved for future distribution among stakeholders and other contacts.

The Cabinet Office Management Board, Heads of Management Units and HM Treasury were consulted prior to the publication of the report.

Further copies were produced by The Stationery Office (TSO) for sale to members of the public at a cost of £11 per copy. They can be purchased at TSO shops, and ordered online from www.tso.co.uk/bookshop. The report can also be downloaded free of charge from the Cabinet Office website www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/publications

Departmental Targets

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who is responsible for progress on each of the targets set out on pages 37 to 45 of Cm 6833; to whom each person reports; what recent discussions she has had about implementation of each target; and if she will make a statement. [78599]

Hilary Armstrong: I am responsible for delivery of the Cabinet Office's Public Service Agreement (PSA) targets and with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer jointly responsible for the delivery of PSA target 1.

Progress on performance against the PSA targets is reported to the Treasury in two, public documents the Autumn Performance Report (available on the Cabinet Office website at http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/reports/psa/autumn_delivery/index.asp) and the departmental report.

Public Service Pensions

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster pursuant to the announcement by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry of 18 October 2005 on public service pensions, that all sector scheme negotiations would be completed by March 2006, when she will announce the details of the consultation on the proposed benefit structure for new entrants to the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme; whether the negotiations have been completed; and if she will make a statement. [78009]

Mr. McFadden: The principles agreed between the Government and the trade unions at the Public Services Forum on 18 October 2005 stated that all sides involved in scheme-specific negotiations should aim to reach agreement no later than June 2006. However, the principles also stated that a co-operative approach should be adopted in all discussions and that adequate time should be made for the discussion process. The Cabinet Office's primary concern is to reach an agreement which produces pension arrangements which are sustainable and which are right for the civil service. The Cabinet Office has had several months of constructive discussions with the civil service trade unions. It expects to put formal proposals to them shortly. The Cabinet Office will publish the formal proposals on its website www.civilservice-pensions.gov.uk

Staff Handbook

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if she will place in the Library a copy of the Cabinet Office staff handbook. [78271]

Mr. McFadden: The Cabinet Office no longer publishes a staff handbook. The terms and conditions of service that apply to all Cabinet Office employees are readily available electronically on the Cabinet Office intranet to all staff. The text is updated periodically as necessary. I will arrange for a CD Rom containing the current version as at 15 June 2006 to be placed in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

10 Downing Street

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Prime Minister what the dimensions are of the garden at 10 Downing Street. [78264]

The Prime Minister: The dimensions of the garden at 10 Downing Street have remained unchanged since the 18th century. It is an L-shape garden which at its widest points is approximately 42m and 58m. The total area is approximately 1760m^2.

Carbon Emissions

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he takes to offset the carbon emissions of his flights to foreign countries on official business. [77696]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Carmichael) on 15 May, Official Report, 2006, Column 820W.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Prime Minister what official role Mrs. Blair plays when accompanying him on foreign tours; and who pays for her travel. [77863]

The Prime Minister: My wife accompanies me on official visits overseas as appropriate. The costs of such visits are included in the total cost of Ministers' visits overseas which is published on an annual basis. Information for 2005-06 is currently in the process of being assembled and will be published shortly.

Sustainable Development

Joan Walley: To ask the Prime Minister what mechanism exists to enable liaison between Government departments responsible for delivering sustainable development policy. [77048]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply. The Government published the UK Sustainable Development Strategy "Securing the Futureonly" in March 2005, setting out a range of activities to support this vital agenda. The UK Framework for Sustainable Development, "One future—different pathsy", also launched in March 2005, describes the shared understanding and common purpose that exists across departments and in different parts of the country.

Sustainable development is promoted and co-ordinated through a number of ministerial and official level working groups across Government.

For example, within the Cabinet there are two committees which have sustainable development issues as part of their remit: the Energy and Environment (EE) Committee and the Sub-Committee on Sustainable Development in Government (EE(SD)). The EE Committee is chaired by the Prime Minister and was established in May 2005 to develop the Government's energy and environmental policies, to monitor the impact on sustainable development of the Government's policies, and to consider issues of climate change, security of supply and affordability of energy.

I chair the EE(SD) Sub-Committee which has the remit to improve the Government's contribution to sustainable development through the conduct of its business, including through consideration of departmental sustainable development action plans; and to report as necessary to the Energy and Environment Committee.

The Sustainable Development Commission is the Government's independent watchdog on sustainable development, reporting to the Prime Minister and the First Ministers of Scotland and Wales. Its recently expanded role includes monitoring cross-Government and departmental progress towards sustainable development.

Details of other groups working across Government to deliver sustainable development can be found on our sustainable development website at http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk/government/index.htm

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Prime Minister whether he had read (a) the Sustainable Development Commission's report "Is Nuclear the Answer", dated March 2006, and (b) the Environmental Audit Committee's report "Keeping the Lights on: Nuclear, Renewables and Climate Change" HC584, dated 16 April 2006, prior to making his address to the Confederation of British Industry on 16 May. [78094]

The Prime Minister: In addition to the presentation and papers from the Energy Review, I was briefed and read widely on energy issues in preparation for the address to the CBI on 16 May. This, of course, included the Sustainable Development Commission's report and its research papers and the Environmental Audit Committee's April report.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Business Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 10 May 2006, Official Report, column 370W, on business rates, how many (a) hotels, (b) hostels and (c) bed and breakfasts were on the 2005 Rating List for each local authority area in England. [78250]

Mr. Woolas: A table showing the number of properties classed as (a) hotels, (b) hostels and (c) bed and breakfasts in the 2005 Rating List for England, for each individual local authority area, at 31 January 2006, has been placed in the Library.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment the (a) Valuation Office Agency and (b) Valuation Tribunal Service has made of the potential effect of concerns over the effect of overhead power lines on the valuation of domestic properties for council tax; and what guidance each body has published on this. [78284]

Mr. Woolas: Neither (a) the Valuation Office Agency (VOA) nor (b) the Valuation Tribunal Service (VTS) has made an overall assessment of the potential effect of overhead power lines on the valuation of domestic properties for council tax purposes. Whether the existence of overhead power lines would affect the open market value of a dwelling, on which the council tax banding is based, is a question of fact and degree in individual cases. Such matters would be considered by listing officers of the VOA and, if their decision on banding were subject to an appeal, by Valuation Tribunal panels, on a case by case basis. No specific guidance on the effect on valuations for council tax purposes of proximity to overhead power lines has been published by either (a) the VOA or (b) the VTS. General guidance on the approach to valuation for council tax purposes is contained in the VOA's "Council Tax" manual, which is published on the VOA's website at: www.voa.gov.uk

Departmental Staff

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many full-time equivalent communications, public relations and marketing staff were employed by the Department and its predecessors in each year since 2001. [79027]

Angela E. Smith: The Department for Communities and Local Government was created on 5 May 2006. Information on full-time equivalent communications staff employed within the Directorate of Communication on that date is given in the table.

	Number
Senior Management	2.8
Press Office	20
Strategic Communications	2
Corporate Communications and Events	3
Internal Communications	3
Publicity and Marketing	9.4
eCommunications	8.5
Print Publishing	6.5

Comparable information in relation to the former Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) is not available. However for information on ODPM press officer numbers, I refer to the answer given by my hon. Friend (Jim Fitzpatrick) to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 20 July 2006, Official Report, column 1770W.

Fire Safety

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance will be offered by the Fire and Resilience Directorate to the owners of (a) metal reclamation yards, (b) tyre dumps, (c) timber yards and (d) other high fire risk open air premises to ensure compliance with the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005. [78582]

Angela E. Smith: For the premises listed, and other industrial uses of open air premises, generic guidance is given in the guide for factories and warehouses. The existing guide "Fire Safety for Tyre Sites" will continue to be available. Non-industrial uses are covered by the guide for open air events and venues that we shall be publishing shortly. Further guidance may be needed on some types of premises or uses and we will be keeping the position under review.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether she plans for responsibility for the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 to remain with the Fire and Resilience Directorate in her Department. [78583]

Angela E. Smith: Responsibility for the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 and for policy on general fire safety law for non-domestic premises both rest with the Fire and Resilience Directorate. The Department has no plans to change that.

Leisure Facilities (Discount Entitlement)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance she has issued to local authorities on the required proof of entitlement for people claiming benefits to discounts for use of leisure facilities. [74614]

Mr. Woolas: The Department for Communities and Local Government does not provide guidance for local authorities in relation to proof of entitlement to discounts for the use of leisure facilities for people in receipt of benefits; this is a matter for local authorities.

Local Government

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Government encourages exchange of best practice between local authorities on estate utilisation. [77573]

Mr. Woolas: Government policy is to promote the spread of best practice in local authority asset management. Asset management was one of the themes for Round 6 of the Beacon councils scheme and the authorities with Beacon status for asset management have been rolling out a programme of learning events to share their best practice with other local authorities.

Additionally, my department, in liaison with other stakeholders, commissioned the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors to prepare new guidance. This guidance, which was published in 2005, aims to help local authorities use their assets more effectively to support delivery of their strategic objectives and increase the cost effectiveness of existing assets and capital resources. The text of the guidance is available on the internet at:

http://www.rics.org/Property/Propertymanagement/AssetManagementinLocalAuthorities230305.htm

The Government also welcomes the Asset Management Network, set up in 2000 by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy and local government property societies, to disseminate best practice information and support local authorities developing asset management practices. The network runs an extensive website for hosting asset management information at:

http://www.ipfproperty.net/ampnetwork

Local Strategic Partnerships

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether non-councillor members of local strategic partnerships are (a) regulated by (i) local government codes of conduct and (ii) the Standards Board and (b) required to declare personal or prejudicial interests. [78281]

Mr. Woolas: The Local Government Act 2000 provides for a code of conduct to apply to members and co-opted members of every relevant authority. The Standards Board for England polices this code. This code does not directly apply to non-local authority members of LSPs. However, they would be required to conduct themselves with reference to their own professional or corporate code of conduct, and to comply with any advice which accompanies this.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 26 April 2006, Official Report, column 1196W, to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman), on the automated valuation model, what data sources are used to compile the Valuation Office Agency's single dataset. [78253]

Mr. Woolas: The main source of the Valuation Office Agency's (VOA's) property attribute dataset is the Agency's own paper-based records, which have now been digitised and are maintained as part of ongoing work in the VOA. Data has also been drawn from other sources to supplement and validate these records. These are:

data on the location of subsidised housing from the National Register of Social Housing (NRoSH); this has been reviewed and adapted by the VOA data supplied under a contractual arrangement with Rightmove.co.uk plc

National Land and Property Gazetteer "X-Y co-ordinate" data

Additionally, data is supplied by local authorities, primarily as part of their statutory responsibility to supply information which they consider would assist the VOA's listing officers in maintaining council tax lists.

Also, standard ordnance survey maps have been used to confirm some property attribute details and to assist with the calculation of plot sizes.

Wards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many local authority wards, including the district tier in two-tier areas, there are in England. [78252]

Mr. Woolas: Decisions as to the number of wards in England are a matter for the Electoral Commission. The current number is: in the 32 London boroughs, 624 wards; in the 36 Metropolitan districts, 815 wards; in the 45 Shire unitary authorities (excluding the county of the Isle of Wight which has 48 divisions), 1,006 wards; in the 238 two-tier districts, 5,449 wards. Total: 7,894 wards.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Exports

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent estimate he has made of the annual value of the UK arms export trade. [76858]

Mr. Ingram: I have been asked to reply.

Defence exports bring commercial benefits to UK companies and around 20 per cent. of UK defence employment is in export work. As set out in the Defence Industrial Strategy White Paper in December 2005 (CM6697), they also contribute to the achievement of wider defence objectives and support our foreign and security interests.

Over the last five years the UK defence industry, with the support of the Defence Export Services Organisation, won defence export orders averaging £4.5 billion per annum. Last year, these included the US101 helicopter, to be used for the US Presidential flight, and an important understanding with Saudi Arabia. This will lead to a greater partnership in modernising the Saudi armed forces, and will sustain the defence relationship for many years to come.

Malcolm Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what purpose a Westland Scout AH1 helicopter (registration G-ONEB) was transferred to Sierra Leone after being deregistered in the UK on 12 May 2006, and if he will make a statement. [77081]

Mr. McCartney: My interest in this relates to the possible need for an export licence for the export of this item. Although I am bound by a duty of commercial confidentiality as regards export licensing information which may be placed in the public domain, I shall ensure that this matter is pursued, if necessary involving HM Revenue and Customs as the enforcement authority. I would be grateful if the hon. Member could send me any further factual information he holds regarding this matter.

Coal Production

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much coal was produced by the (a) National Coal Board and (b) British Coal Corporation in each year since 1976. [79215]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is as follows:

(a) The National Coal Board	Output (million tonnes)
1976-77	119.9
1977-78	119.9
1978-79	119.0

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77262]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The DTI does not currently keep a separate record of amounts spent on alcohol. It is not intended to keep a separate record in future since the total spent by the Department on hospitality in the round was £71,000 in 2005-06 and it would not be cost effective to further analyse such a relatively low amount.

The DTI's internal guidance strongly reinforces the need for any expenditure in respect of hospitality to be conducted in accordance with the principles of Government accounting.

Energy Efficiency

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of his Department's additional allocation from the Treasury for support for micro-renewables he plans to allocate to individual household installations. [78485]

Malcolm Wicks: The additional £50 million announced by the Chancellor in the Budget will not be used to support microgeneration installations in individual households. These funds will be used for installations in the public sector, possibly including social housing.

Individuals can apply for grants under the original £30 million Low Carbon Buildings Programme.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to encourage the use of (a) cleaner and (b) more efficient sources of energy. [77858]

Malcolm Wicks: Government are taking a number of measures to encourage the use of cleaner and more efficient sources of energy such as renewables, combined heat and power (CHP), and carbon abatement technologies.

The Government's key mechanism for encouraging renewable generation is the Renewables Obligation (RO) which places an obligation on electricity suppliers to source a specific and annually increasing percentage of their sales from eligible renewable sources. This is set at 6.7 per cent. for 2006-07 and will rise to 15.4 per cent. by 2015-16. The RO together with the Climate Change Levy will be worth up to £1 billion per year by 2010.

Since 2002 the Government have also made available around £500 million of direct funding for emerging renewable and low carbon technologies in the form of capital grants.

This includes:

£117 million in capital grants for round one offshore wind farms;

£66 million for biomass capital grants;

£80 million for Low Carbon Buildings Programme;

£50 million Demonstration Fund for Carbon Abatement Technologies, Hydrogen and Fuel Cells;

£12.5 million for the Clear Skies Programme;

£50 million for Marine Renewables Deployment Fund; and £19 million a year for industry-led Research & Development.

With regard to Combined Heat and Power (CHP) the Government have added support measures for CHP in the new Climate Change Programme, including a commitment that CHP will be fully considered in the UK's Phase II National Allocation Plan of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme. Combined heat and power (CHP) can increase the overall efficiency of fuel utilisation to more than 75 per cent. compared with up to 50 per cent. from modern Combined Cycle Gas Turbines. We are also considering whether we can offer support for CHP under the current Energy Review.

In 2005 the Government launched the Carbon Abatement Technologies Strategy and the UK's Strategic Framework for Hydrogen Energy. Carbon Abatement Technologies (CATs) have the potential to significantly lower carbon dioxide emissions by 85 per cent. or more and will enable the cleaner use of coal and allow it to have a role in a sustainable world. The use of hydrogen as a transport fuel could provide significant cost-competitive CO_2 reductions by 2030. These strategies include (as listed above) funding for demonstration of hydrogen, fuel cell and carbon abatement technologies (including Cleaner Coal and Carbon Capture and Storage).

The EU Emissions Trading scheme covers electricity generation and energy intensive industry and requires an allowance to be produced for every tonne of carbon dioxide emitted. These allowances are tradeable across the EU and will effectively require companies to incorporate the cost of carbon into decision making. This scheme should therefore provide another incentive to invest in cleaner and more efficient sources of energy.

Energy Engineers

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information his Department holds on the average age of registered professional (a) gas engineers and (b) nuclear engineers. [78521]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department does not hold information covering the age profiles of registered gas or registered nuclear engineers.

Work force demographics will be addressed in the sector skills agreements which are being developed by the relevant sector skills councils—Cogent for nuclear and Energy and Utility Skills for gas. These will provide a framework for meeting current and future needs for skilled people.

Energy Review

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the reasons are for the delay in posting the submissions received in April in response to the Energy Review consultation on his Department's website; and when he expects all the remaining submissions to be posted. [79081]

Malcolm Wicks: We received a high number of responses to the Energy Review consultation (over 5,300), many of which were submitted towards the end of the consultation period. Since the close we have focused on reading and logging the responses to ensure the comments feed into our overall analysis. We are now working on responses received in April, which we hope to post on the DTI website by the end of the month.

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will post the submissions received in April to the Energy Review consultation on his departmental website. [78973]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 20 June 2006]: The high number of responses to the Energy Review consultation (over 5,300), many of which were submitted towards the end of the consultation period, has meant we are still working on the responses received in April. We hope to post these on the DTI website by the end of the month.

Franco-British Nuclear Forum

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of EU competition law on the Franco-British Nuclear Forum announced by the Prime Minister on 9 June 2006; [79042]

(2) how many (a) permanent and (b) temporary staff have been allocated from his Department to the Franco-British Nuclear Forum announced by the Prime Minister on 9 June 2006; [79050]

(3) which UK companies and industry groups were consulted about the setting up of the Franco-British Nuclear Forum prior to its announcement by the Prime Minister on 9 June 2006; [79051]

(4) what assessment he has made of the likely cost of the Franco-British Nuclear Forum announced by the Prime Minister on 9 June 2006; and what proportion of the costs will be borne by UK companies and industry groups. [79052]

Malcolm Wicks: The terms of reference for the Franco-British Nuclear Forum, which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and President Chirac agreed to establish on 9 June 2006, have yet to be decided, as have its aims, and its membership. I shall write to the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton as soon as the information is available.

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when he plans to make a statement on the Franco-British Nuclear Forum announced by the Prime Minister on 9 June 2006; [79102]

(2) who will represent the UK at the Franco-British Nuclear Forum announced by the Prime Minister on 9 June 2006; [79103]

(3) what the (a) terms of reference and (b) aims are of the Franco-British Nuclear Forum announced by the Prime Minister on 9 June 2006; and how often it will meet. [79104]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answers 20 June 2006]: The terms of reference for the Franco-British Nuclear Forum, which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and President Chirac agreed to establish on 9 June 2006, have yet to be decided, as have its aims, and its membership. I shall write to the hon. Member for Rutland and Melton as soon as the information is available.

Music Copyright

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many prosecutions there have been for the illegal copying of music for personal use under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988; and if he will make a statement. [76874]

Jim Fitzpatrick: It is a matter for copyright owners or their representatives to pursue those who infringe copyright in music by private copying. I understand that the BPI, the British music industry's trade association, has not sued anyone who has merely copied music for personal use.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent advice he has received from (a) the police and (b) the music industry on the issue of private sound copying and the application of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988; and if he will make a statement. [76875]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Infringement of copyright by private copying is a civil, rather than a criminal matter, and therefore not a matter for the police. I have not received any recent representations from the music industry, although I am aware of their concerns. Private copying is one of the issues under consideration by the current independent review of intellectual property led by Andrew Gowers. The review will report to Government in the autumn.

New Technologies

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what percentage of the Department's budget was spent on researching new technologies in the last period for which figures are available. [76806]

Jim Fitzpatrick: SET Statistics provide a breakdown of Government R&D expenditure by primary purpose and Department. The following table outlines spend for the Department of Trade and Industry and other major Government Departments for 2003-04 on technology support and gives this as a percentage of the Department's total budget. The category technology support includes strategic as well as applied research, and pre-competitive research. These figures exclude funding of the research base under the Science Budget and are derived from SET statistics tables 3.6 and 3.10 available on the DTI website at http://www.dti.gov.uk/science/science-funding/set-stats/govt-exp-r&d/index.htnml, hard copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Industry

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent assessment he has made of the skills capability in the UK nuclear industry; and if he will make a statement. [78996]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are advised on skills capability in the nuclear industry by Cogent, the sector skills council covering nuclear. The most recent assessment on skills in the nuclear industry has been completed through the Sector Skills Agreement Process. "The Skills Needs Assessment of the Nuclear Industry", is available on the Cogent website at www.cogent-ssc.com/ as is the "Assessment of Current Education and Training Provision for the Nuclear Industry".

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of nuclear (a) scientists and (b) engineers available in the United Kingdom. [77722]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 15 June 2006]: The nuclear industry employs good general science and engineering graduates. The nuclear specific competences are added by in-service training and experience and, increasingly, by Masters Courses at the 15 or so universities and institutions teaching postgraduates in nuclear related topics.

Survey and scenario planning work undertaken by Cogent sector skills council with nuclear employers in 2005-06 provides estimates for the current workforce of:

(a) approximately 3,150 professional scientists working within the nuclear industry and;

(b) approximately 17,400 professional engineers working within the nuclear industry.

This reported workforce is not necessarily nuclear specialists.

The Institution of Nuclear Engineers has about 1,000 members of all categories.

In addition, there is a broader engineering design and project management resource, at least 20,000 strong, that could support energy sector projects, including nuclear.

Zimbabwe

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which UK companies have licences to export military equipment to Zimbabwe. [78594]

Malcolm Wicks: Export licence applications are made to the Government in confidence and the information they contain is therefore exempt from disclosure. The Government publishes detailed information on its export licensing decisions, by destination, in its annual and quarterly reports on strategic export controls. The Government's annual reports are available from the Library of the House, and our quarterly reports, from the DTI Export Control Organisation website at:

TREASURY

Cancer/Leukaemia

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people under the age of 18 years in (a) Southend on Sea, (b) Essex and (c) England and Wales were diagnosed with leukaemia in each year between 2002 and 2005. [78596]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people under the age of 18 years in (a) Southend on Sea, (b) Essex and (c) England and Wales were diagnosed with leukaemia in each year between 2002 and 2005. (78596)

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of leukaemia registered in England and Wales are the year 2003. Figures for people under the age of 18 years at diagnosis for the years 2002 and 2003 are given in the following table.

Numbers of newly diagnosed cases of leukaemia,[1] for people under the age of 18 years at diagnosis, registered in Southend unitary authority, Essex county and England and Wales, 2002-03

	2002	2003

Essex county	12	8
England and Wales	478	453

[1] Figures selected using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD10), all leukaemias coded as C91-C95.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in (a) Southend on Sea, (b) Essex and (c) England and Wales were diagnosed with (i) leukaemia, (ii) breast cancer, (iii) prostate cancer and (iv) lung cancer in each year between 2002 and 2005. [78597]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people in (a) Southend on Sea, (b) Essex and (c) England and Wales were diagnosed with (i) leukaemia, (ii) breast cancer and (iii) prostate cancer and (iv) lung cancer in each year between 2002 and 2005. (78597)

The most recent available figures for newly diagnosed cases of cancer registered in England and Wales are the year 2003. Figures by selected cancers for the years 2002 and 2003 are given in the following table.

Numbers of newly diagnosed cases of selected cancers,[1] registered in Southend unitary authority, Essex county and England and Wales, 2002-03

	Southend unitary authority		Essex county		England and Wales
	2002	2003	2002	2003	2002	2003

[1] Figures selected using the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD10), all leukaemias coded as C91-C95, breast cancer as C50, prostate cancer as C61 and lung cancer as C34.
[2] Figures provided here are for female breast cancer. However, there are around 300 cases of male breast cancer diagnosed each year in England and Wales.

Drug Deaths

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Scotland died as a result of (a) heroin and (b) cocaine misuse in the last 12 months. [78866]

John Healey: This is a matter for the Scottish Executive (Registrar General) and the hon. Member may wish to write to them about this issue.

Electoral Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of the electorate in each (a) constituency and (b) ward of each constituency were registered to vote in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2006. [79080]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question concerning how many and what percentage of the electorate in each (a) constituency and (b) ward of each constituency were registered to vote in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2006. (79080)

Whilst ward electorate counts for England and Wales by parliamentary constituency can be provided for February 1997 and most recently for December 2005, the necessary ward population estimates to calculate the percentage of the electorate who were registered to vote are not available.

In the nine-year period from 1997, ward population estimates for England and Wales are available only for 2001 and 2002. Information for 2001 and 2002 has been provided previously in response to earlier Parliamentary Questions (No. 38272, 20 Dec 2005, Column 2809w, No. 41187, 19th January 2006, Column 1491w).

In addition there have been a significant number of ward name changes and ward boundary changes over this nine-year period which may cause significant difficulties when comparing figures for wards over time.

Electors (Southend)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many electors there were in each ward in Southend, West in each of the last 10 years. [78595]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 21 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the number of electors in each ward in Southend West in each of the last 10 years. I am replying in her absence. (78595)

The most recent ward electorate counts are for December 2005. The ward electorate counts for Southend West for the last 10 years are included in the attached table. The ward electorate counts are for parliamentary electors, including attainers. Local government electorate counts are not available at ward level.

It should be noted that the number of people eligible to vote is not the same as the resident population aged 18 and over. There are numerous reasons for this. For example not everyone who is usually resident is entitled to vote (foreign citizens from outside of the EU and Commonwealth, prisoners, etc. are not eligible), some people do not register to vote and people who have more than one address may register in more than one place. Further, there is inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. These factors have a differential impact from area to area.

Energy Taxation

Mr. Drew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the merits of reducing the level of energy taxation for those who live close to energy-providing facilities including nuclear and renewables. [78900]

John Healey: There is no energy tax levied on individuals, as no such assessment has been made.

Hot Meals Provision

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will reduce the rate of VAT on supplies of hot meals to (a) school children and (b) pensioners. [79303]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no VAT chargeable on the supply of a hot meal by a school to its pupils. Neither is VAT chargeable on meals provided to children or elderly people by any charity or state-regulated welfare provider as part of a package of care or welfare services.

European VAT agreements governing the application of exemptions, reliefs and reduced rates do not allow for their further extension. Neither do these agreements allow for the introduction of any new VAT zero or reduced rates for supplies of catering, including the provision of hot meals.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 13 June 2006, Official Report, columns 1110-11W, on the parliamentary ombudsman, whether his Department has accepted recommendation 10, page 9, of the parliamentary ombudsman's report, "Tax Credits: Putting Things Right", of June 2005; and if he will make a statement. [78716]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 June 2006, Official Report, column 1627W.

Dawn Primarolo: HM Revenue and Customs keep a record of penalties paid in respect of income tax returns filed after the due date at national level only.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many self-assessment tax returns were issued in Northern Ireland in each year since 1998. [78778]

[1] Figures are estimated liabilities on an accruals basis for income tax, but receipts for capital gains and inheritance tax.
[2] Taxpayers with a marginal rate of 20 per cent. on savings income or 10 per cent. on dividends income.
[3] Taxpayers with a marginal rate of 22 per cent.
[4] Inheritance tax is only taxed at 40 per cent. above the inheritance tax threshold. The 2005-06 threshold was £275,000.

The information on income tax is based upon the latest survey of personal incomes (2003-04) projected to 2005-06 in line with 2006 Budget assumptions.

The information on capital gains tax is based on data held by HMRC on capital gains tax accrued in respect of assets disposed of in 2004-05 by taxpayers resident in Northern Ireland. Capital gains tax accrued in 2004-05 is paid in 2005-06.

The figure for inheritance tax is estimated, based upon historical data held by HMRC for tax paid in respect of estates where the deceased person was resident in Northern Ireland.

Similar information for other taxes is not available as taxes are often collected centrally and cannot be directly attributed to countries within the UK.

Teenage Pregnancy

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many females aged (a) under 18 and (b) under 16 years became pregnant in each (i) parliamentary constituency and (ii) local authority area in the East of England in each year since 2001; what the pregnancy rate was in each area; and what percentage of pregnancies in under 18 year olds ended in abortions in each area in each year. [77920]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 20 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many females aged (a) under 18 and (b) under 16 years became pregnant in each (i) parliamentary constituency and (ii) local authority area in the East of England in each year since 2001; what the pregnancy rate was in each area; and what percentage of pregnancies in under 18 year olds ended in abortions in each area in each year.

Information on conceptions is routinely published for local authorities and strategic health authorities. Figures cannot be provided by parliamentary constituency because of the risk of disclosing individual's information due to small differences with local authority boundaries.

Available figures are estimates of the number of pregnancies that resulted in a live birth, stillbirth or termination.

Conception numbers, rates and percentage leading to abortion for girls aged under 18 by local authorities in the East of England from 2001 to 2004 (the most recent year for which figures are available) are given in the following table. Figures for 2004 are provisional.

Conception statistics for girls aged under 16 for each year since 2001 are available only for unitary authorities, metropolitan counties and counties. Figures are not available for county districts as there is a risk of disclosure of information about individuals due to small number of cases each year. The under 16 data are given in the following table.

1. Following ONS guidance on disclosure of abortion statistics, figures for 2003 and 2004 on percentage of conceptions leading to abortions have been suppressed where the count is less than 10 cases. Occasionally it has been necessary to apply a secondary suppression to avoid the possibility of disclosure by differencing.
2. Rates are per 1000 female population aged 15-17.

World Cup

Mark Tami: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements he has made to attend matches at the World Cup. [79590]

Mr. Gordon Brown: As a guest of the German Government, which provided the ticket, I attended the England v. Sweden World Cup match on 20 June.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Burma

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding the Government plan to allocate to the new three diseases fund for Burma. [77796]

Mr. Thomas: The concept of DFID involvement in the new multi-donor fund to tackle HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria in Burma was approved by Ministers in March 2006, but the level of DFID's contribution has yet to be finally approved. We anticipate a decision by early July 2006.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether people in Burma receiving antiretroviral treatment through projects funded by his Department are able to receive regular and reliable blood tests to monitor the efficacy of such treatments. [77797]

Mr. Thomas: DFID funds antiretroviral treatment in Burma through the joint-donor Fund for HIV/AIDS in Myanmar (FHAM), to which DFID is the largest contributor, providing £10 million over five years. At 31 March 2006, the FHAM was providing antiretroviral treatment to 2,953 patients. All of those people are able to receive regular clinical follow-up and monitoring, including reliable blood tests, to monitor the efficacy of their treatments.

Blood tests in the vast majority of cases include CD4 T-cell counts, which is a technique which monitors the response of the patient's immune system to the antiretroviral treatment. Materials and chemical reagents are sourced from reputable suppliers, and training of clinicians and laboratory scientists in these methodologies has been undertaken by the International NGOs involved and by the World Health Organisation (with FHAM funding).

In the main referral centres in Yangon and Mandalay, automated CD4 counter machines are available and as antiretroviral treatment is provided to new areas in peripheral areas, additional manual CD4 counting equipment and reagents, will be supplied. Those organisations funded by FHAM who provide antiretroviral treatment but do not use CD4 T-cell counts instead test patients' blood using a process of clinical staging, which is also regarded as a good practice means of monitoring treatment efficacy. In addition, the introduction of a further test for the effectiveness of antiretroviral treatment is planned for the near future, when HIV viral load testing will be made available at the central National Health Laboratory, with the support of UNICEF.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent estimate he has made of the number of Karen people internally displaced by the Burmese Government's recent attacks on Karen civilians. [77801]

Mr. Thomas: It is very difficult to provide a realistic estimate of the numbers of recently internally displaced Karen people because of the problems in obtaining data in Burma generally, and especially in areas of ongoing conflict. We have seen estimates ranging from 11,000 to 18,000 people and adopt a working assumption of approximately 15,000.

Flag Flying

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on how many days since May 1997 the St. George's Flag has been flown from his Department's buildings. [77742]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not have any buildings in England which have a flagpole, and therefore does not fly the St. George's Flag.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his Department's policy is on flying the (a) St. George's Flag and (b) EU Flag from departmental buildings. [77743]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has only one building with flagpoles, which is in Scotland, and therefore flags are flown in accordance with the directives issued by the Scottish Executive. The St. George's Flag is not flown; the European Flag is flown alongside the Union Flag on European Day.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will ensure the Union Flag is flown from his Department's buildings on every day the offices are open. [77744]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has only one building with flagpoles, which is in Scotland. Flags are therefore flown in accordance with the directives issued by the Scottish Executive.

Hospitality Expenses

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77421]

Hilary Benn: DFID keeps a record of the amount spent annually by the Department for hospitality purposes, but there are no plans at present to keep a separate record of the amount spent on alcohol.

Expenditure in DFID is conducted in accordance with the principles of Government accounting as well as our own internal guidance.

Inter-American Development Bank

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment has been made of the compatibility of Inter-American Development Bank programmes with his Department's poverty objectives. [78052]

Mr. Thomas: The Inter-American Development Bank (IADB) plays an important role in assisting its borrowing member countries in their efforts to implement the Millennium Development Goals. This is in line with the IADB's mission of accelerating economic and social development and reducing poverty. DFID works closely with the IADB to tackle poverty and inequality, including support through a number of trust funds which are specifically designed to help the very poorest people in the region.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which Private Member's Bills were drafted by his Department in each Session since 1997; and which of those received Royal Assent. [77505]

Hilary Benn: Members will consider a range of possible subjects before introducing their Private Member's Bills.

Government draftsmen do draft some Bills in advance which are available as one of the options for Members to consider before they make their selection.

However, Members may make subsequent amendments or revisions to a Government drafted Bill, or use it as the basis for a Private Member's Bill in the future.

The information requested is therefore not collected.

World Health Organisation

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the outcomes of the recent World Health Organisation's World Health Assembly. [77930]

Mr. Thomas: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Health Services led the UK Delegation to the World Health Assembly. The Assembly was overshadowed by the sudden death of the director general (DG), Dr. Lee. However, an acting director general (Anders Nordstrom) was approved and a process for selecting a new DG was agreed.

Overall, it was a very difficult Assembly due to the loss of Dr. Lee. However, agreements were reached, which will improve global public health. The following items were of particular relevance to the development agenda.

The General Programme of Work, which is essentially the World Health Organisation's (WHO) long-term vision (2006-15) was agreed. A key objective for the UK is to see the General Programme of Work linked to a new Medium-Term Strategic Plan which will be developed by 2008; along with the preparation of the next biannual budget.

A new Global Strategy for the Prevention and control of Sexually Transmitted Infections (STI) was endorsed. This is an important strategy to re-invigorate and accelerate STI prevention and control, which is urgently required if countries are to achieve universal access to HIV prevention treatment and care, and to improve sexual and reproductive health and rights.

In relation to HIV and AIDS, resolutions were also passed on nutrition and HIV/AIDS, and a resolution to endorse the Global Task Team recommendations on improving AIDS co-ordination among multilateral institutions and international donors. The Health Assembly also supported the WHO to develop a five-year-plan to help achieve universal access to HIV/AIDS treatment by 2010.

A resolution was agreed on Intellectual Property Rights to improve access to medicines, vaccines and diagnostics for people in developing countries. The Assembly agreed to establish an intergovernmental working group to draw up a global strategy and plan of action based on the recommendations of the Commission on Intellectual Property Rights, Innovation and Public Health.

Other important resolutions for forwarding the development agenda included resolutions on eradication of polio, infant and young child nutrition, and emergency preparedness and response.

A resolution on the role of nursing and midwifery was agreed, which is linked to the theme of the World Health Report on health work force issues. This is an important contribution to supporting the sustainable development of health systems.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Abandoned Vehicles

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many abandoned cars were recorded in each local authority in England in 2004-05; and what estimate has been made for 2005-06. [78533]

Mr. Bradshaw: Numbers of abandoned vehicles in each local authority were primarily collected from WasteDataFlow in 2004-05: http://www.wastedataflow.org. Results from authorities that responded are listed in the following table. Results for 2005-06 are not yet available and estimates have not been made.

Badgers

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what trials of badger body snares are taking place; what the (a) objectives, (b) process and (c) procedures of the trials are. [76140]

Mr. Bradshaw: A study protocol for current work to assess the effectiveness and humaneness of a possible body snare designed to restrain badgers will be placed in the House Library. A full report of this work will be published following peer review.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many inquiries have been made to his Department about dealing with badgers causing damage in Castle Point in each of the last five years. [78181]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department keeps no central records of the number of inquiries it receives about badgers causing damage. However under section 10 of the Protection of Badgers Act 1992, DEFRA has received 29 applications for licences to interfere with badger setts in the Castle Point area since 5 May 2001 when electronic recording of applications began.

These applications were received in the following years:

	Applications
2001	3
2002	3
2003	10
2004	6
2005	5
2006 (To date)	2

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will visit Castle Point to examine the damage caused by the local badger population. [78182]

Mr. Bradshaw: I am grateful for the hon. Member's invitation. However, I am already aware of concerns about damage caused by badgers in Castle Point. DEFRA wildlife advisers have advised on several occasions about the action which can be taken, and appropriate licences have been granted in some cases.

Bottle Production

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate he has made of how much energy is used to produce (a) plastic and (b) glass water bottles. [75563]

Ian Pearson: Neither Defra nor the Carbon Trust holds this information. Defra collects data on energy use by the food industry. However it is not possible to break down the data to the level needed to estimate the energy used to produce plastic or glass bottles for packaging spring or mineral waters. Energy use in producing bottles is, in any case, only one factor that needs to be taken into account—along with others such as transport, and re-use or re-cycling of materials—when assessing which type of packaging is the best sustainable option.

Bovine TB

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the specificity was of the gamma interferon test using the (a) standard purified protein derivative, (b) ESAT6 and CFP10 peptides and (c) ESAT6 and CFP10 peptides in combination with the standard purified protein derivative in research undertaken by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency; and what the confidence limits were in each case. [78918]

Mr. Bradshaw: The results of the trial to determine the specificity of the gamma interferon test undertaken by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency, for the conditions listed above, were as follows:

(a) PPD-B minus PPD-A: 96.7 per cent. (95 per cent. CI: 95.6 - 97.8)

(b) ESAT-6/CFP-10 peptides: 97.0 per cent. (95 per cent. CI: 95.9 - 98.1)

(c) PPD-B minus PPD-A AND ESAT-6/CFP10 peptides combined: 99.2 per cent. (95 per cent. 01:98.6-99.8).

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs by what date the Gamma Interferon Working Group has been asked to report to Ministers; and what discussions members of the group have had with the Independent Scientific Group. [78305]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Gamma Interferon Working Group will provide Ministers with a progress report later this month. It will outline proposals for, and the scope of, the wider roll-out of the test later this year. In the meantime, Defra continues to apply the gamma interferon test in a range of prescribed circumstances.

Members of the Gamma Interferon Working Group have held various discussions with the Independent Scientific Group (ISG). The ISG has endorsed the group's proposals.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether the Gamma Interferon Working Group has been provided with the results of research by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency into the specificity of the gamma interferon test using the ESAT6 and CFP10 peptides in combination with the standard purified protein derivative; [78306]

(2) when research was completed by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency into the specificity of the gamma interferon test using ESAT6 and CFP10 peptides in combination with the standard purified protein derivative; and what reports have been produced on the subject. [78343]

Mr. Bradshaw: The study by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency into the specificity of the gamma interferon test in GB cattle was completed on 31 March 2006. A report was submitted to Defra and the Independent Scientific Group Secretariat on 19 April 2006.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when his Department was first advised by the Independent Scientific Group to consider using the gamma interferon tuberculosis test in combination with the standard intra dermal skin test to identify bovine tuberculosis in the national herd. [78307]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) first advised the Department of the need for improved diagnosis, and of the potential value of the gamma interferon test to complement the tuberculin test, during the first half of 2000.

The ISG proposed a programme of study on gamma interferon to provide essential laboratory and field information. The Department subsequently sponsored a small feasibility study into the practicalities of using the gamma interferon test, and a pilot field trial was undertaken between October 2002 and October 2005.

Defra uses the gamma interferon test on an ad hoc basis in identified problem TB herds. About 9,000 tests were undertaken in 2005.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what cost-benefit assessment his Department has made of employing a gamma interferon test using ESAT6 and CFP10 peptides in combination with the standard purified protein derivative. [78344]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department has not conducted a cost-benefit analysis of the use of ESAT6 and CFP10 in combination with the standard purified protein derivative (PPD). Although the use of these more specific antigens may reduce the small numbers of false positive diagnoses, there is also some loss in sensitivity, that is, the chances of detecting truly infected animals. The available standard commercial assay uses PPD alone.

Carbon Emissions

John Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of the emissions of carbon dioxide from fossil fuel sources produced by (a) a gas-fired power station, (b) a coal-fired power station, (c) an oil-fired power station, (d) an electricity-only waste to energy incinerator and (e) a combined heat and electricity waste to energy incinerator. [77252]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 15 June 2006]: The amount of carbon dioxide generated by different types of power station, per kilowatt hour of electricity produced, is given in the following table.

Emissions from a combined heat and power (CHP) plant will be the same per unit of electricity generated as that of a conventional plant. However the heat generated by a CHP plant may be used to offset emissions that would otherwise be generated by additional energy used for heating. Good quality CHP plants typically offer an additional carbon saving of between 25 and 30 per cent. of that generated by conventional plants.

Type of power plant	CO_2 (kg)/kWh electricity generated
Coal	1.09
Oil	1.17
Gas	0.47
Unprocessed municipal solid waste to electricity	[1]0.60
Unprocessed municipal solid waste to electricity and CHP (30 per cent. additional efficiency)	0.42

[1] Non-biogenic fraction only.

Electrical Goods

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to encourage electrical manufacturers to incorporate more recyclable materials in household electrical goods. [76750]

Mr. Bradshaw: The waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) directive is a producer responsibility directive, which aims to reduce the quantity of waste from electrical and electronic equipment and increase re-use, recovery and recycling. It requires member states to ensure that producers (or third parties acting on their behalf) set up systems to provide for the collection, treatment, recovery and environmentally sound disposal of WEEE. The directive sets out treatment requirements and recovery targets and it is the producer who is responsible for meeting these.

On 15 December 2005, the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) announced a review of the policy on implementation of the WEEE directive. This review has now concluded, and the DTI will be consulting on the draft regulations and accompanying guidance shortly.

Additionally, the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) is currently completing a major research project to develop a process capable of removing brominated flame retardants from WEEE plastics. Under the requirements of the directive, brominated flame retardants containing plastics have to be treated separately from those not containing them. The project was led by Axion Recycling and has built on technology initially developed by the Fraunhofer Institute in Germany.

Fly-tipping

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment the Environment Agency has made of the change in the level of fly-tipping since 2001. [78248]

Mr. Bradshaw: No national data were previously available before Flycapture, the national database for fly-tipping incidents, was launched in April 2004. Every waste collection authority in England has now registered to submit data to the Environment Agency, with around 90 per cent. submitting regular returns. Results from the first year's data showed that an average of over 88,500 fly-tipping incidents per month were reported in the period April 2004 to March 2005. Data for 2005-06 are currently being analysed.

The Flycapture database should help us build up a more accurate picture of illegally dumped waste, as well as providing a useful management tool for local authorities in tackling the problem.

Local Authority Statistics

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what statistics his Department collects from local authorities on (a) litter, (b) fly-tipping and (c) clean streets. [78243]

Mr. Bradshaw: All local authorities (excluding county councils) submit annual data on the cleanliness of their areas through Best Value Performance Indicator 199a. Data are also collected through the Local Environmental Quality Survey of England run by ENCAMS (Environmental Campaigns).

Waste collection authorities are required to submit data on fly-tipping via Flycapture, the national fly-tipping database established in April 2004.

Flycapture gathers summary data on the number of fly-tipping incidents dealt with by local authorities and the Environment Agency, as well as actions taken to deal with the problem. Every waste collection authority in England and Wales has now registered to submit data, with around 90 per cent. regularly submitting returns.

In addition, the internet-based system, WasteDataFlow, collects data on the amount of municipal waste collected by local authorities on a quarterly basis. This includes the amount of municipal waste arising from street cleaning and fly-tipping where this is collected under the control of the local authority: http://www.wastedataflow.org/

Renewable Energy

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether energy generated as a by-product of a mass-burn incineration plant is classed as a renewable energy source. [78245]

Mr. Bradshaw: The EU renewables directive classifies the biodegradable element of waste as a renewable energy source.

TB Losses (Compensation)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the compensation level payable to farmers for lost stock due to tuberculosis is; how this has changed recently; and if he will make a statement. [78966]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 June 2006]: On 1 February 2006, a new table valuation-based compensation system was introduced for cattle owners in England, whose cattle are affected by bovine TB, brucellosis or Enzootic Bovine Leucosis.

Compensation in England is now determined primarily using table valuations, based on average market prices for 47 pre-determined cattle categories; these are based on the animal's age, gender, type (dairy or beef) and status (that is, pedigree or non-pedigree). The relevant new procedures are covered in the Cattle Compensation (England) Order 2006.

Further information on compensation for bovine TB can be found on Defra's website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/control/compensation.htm

Waste Management

Stephen Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment his Department has made of the impact on waste management of (a) the introduction of recycling facilities and (b) mandatory bottle return and recycling schemes in supermarkets. [77522]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) has been leading a £1.2 million project to help retailers pilot new ways of encouraging householders to recycle their waste at supermarkets. The project has looked at whether these new approaches, including the use of new technology in bring banks and incentives such as discount vouchers, could help bolster recycling rates and attract new recyclers.

A report on the success of this project will be available soon.

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of waste was recycled in each local authority in Yorkshire and Humber in each year since 2003-04. [78946]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 20 June 2006]: The percentages of household waste recycled and composted[1] by local authorities in the Yorkshire and Humber region in 2003-04 and 2004-05 are provided in the following table.

Household waste recycled and composted in Yorkshire and Humber region

Authority	2003-04	Percentage 2004-05

Water Framework Directive

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether members of the Consumer Council for Water will contribute to the introduction of the Water Framework Directive via membership of river basin district liaison panels. [74449]

Ian Pearson: Defra's consultation report on River Basin Planning Guidance, published in December 2005, makes clear that the river basin district liaison panels will include representatives from all relevant sectors, including those representing sections of the public affected by the implementation of the Water Framework Directive. The Environment Agency, as competent authority for implementation of the Water Framework Directive in England, has decided that there will be Consumer Council for Water representatives on all the river basin district liaison panels.

Water Poverty

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on developing a joint approach to overcoming water poverty. [78930]

Ian Pearson: I have had no specific discussions with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland about this issue. However, I am aware of the approach to water affordability being taken in Northern Ireland, in particular the new affordability tariff. This is being introduced in response to particular circumstances which do not apply in England and Wales. Northern Ireland has a public sector water service while in England and Wales the industry has been fully privatised since 1989. A parallel cannot be drawn between the positions in Northern Ireland and England.

Whaling

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations he has made to (a) Japan, (b) Norway and (c) Iceland on their policy on whaling. [70423]

Mr. Bradshaw: With colleagues from 16 other countries led by Brazil, HM ambassador in Tokyo delivered a demarche to the Government of Japan on 16 January, protesting in the strongest terms on Japan's plans to expand its so-called "scientific" whaling activities. The UK Government, in common with those of a majority of International Whaling Commission (IWC) members, has regularly criticised Japanese scientific whaling programmes in both the North Pacific (JARPN) and the Southern ocean (JARPA) as being of little scientific value and urged Japan to terminate them forthwith.

On 20 April the British Charge d'Affaires in Oslo on behalf of the UK and 11 other countries delivered a demarche to the Norwegian Government, urging it to stop its commercial whaling programme. We continue to press Norway to desist from commercial whaling, which we believe to be contrary to the spirit of the International Whaling Commission moratorium.

We also persist with our strong opposition to Iceland's continuing "scientific whaling" programme and made our objections very clear with regard to Icelandic whaling at the last annual IWC meeting in Korea, and at a recent meeting with the Icelandic Fisheries Ministers.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Regional Casinos

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she plans to recommend changes to the shortlist drawn up by the Casino Advisory Panel for the regional casino licence that will be granted under the Gambling Act 2005. [79011]

Mr. Caborn: No. Ministers will not be involved in the work and decision making of the Panel, which is independent from Government.

The Casino Advisory Panel will make its recommendations on the local authority areas for the 17 new casinos permitted under the Gambling Act 2005 to the Secretary of State by the end of 2006.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what meetings she has had with hon. Members in the constituencies which submitted proposals for a regional casino to the Casino Advisory Panel; and what issues were discussed at each meeting. [79012]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met the hon. Member for Coventry, South (Mr. Cunningham) and the hon. Member for Coventry, North-West (Mr. Robinson) on 5 June.

The Secretary of State explained that the Panel was independent from Government and that any representations by Coventry should be made to the Panel, not Ministers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Business Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission, how much the Palace of Westminster has paid in business rates in each year since 1997-98. [78414]

Nick Harvey: The sums paid by the House of Commons in business rates for the Palace of Westminster in each year from 1997-98 were as follows:

	Rates paid[1] (£)	Revised rates[2] (£)
1997-98	1,820,550	—
1998-99	1,884,150	—
1999-2000	1,939,800	—
2000-01	2,288,000	1,976,000
2001-02	2,365,000	2,042,500
2002-03	2,403,500	2,075,750
2003-04	2,442,000	2,109,000
2004-05	2,508,000	2,166,000
2005-06	1,804,050	—

[1] Prior to 2000-01 Contributions in Lieu of Rates, (CILOR), applied to the Palace of Westminster as Crown land.
[2] For the rates period from 2000-01 to 2004-05 the valuation was successfully appealed, resulting in a reduced rating valuation and a subsequent rebate as shown as the revised rates figure.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Age Positive Week

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the costs of Age Positive Week were, broken down by main budget heading. [70110]

James Purnell: Information that is available is in the following table.

Age positive week 2006

	Cost (£)
Events	88,468.06
PR/Media	29,142.55
Advertising	68,299.00
Total	185,909.61

Notes:
1. Age Positive Week is part of DWP's activity to raise awareness of issues around our extending working life and age diversity agenda. The activities for the Week will have been complemented by ongoing PR activity and these costs are included above.
2. Cost of the events include refreshments, speakers, event management, and other associated costs.
3. All costs are exclusive of VAT

Allowances Rules

Willie Rennie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the potential cost of ceasing to offset carer's allowance against bereavement allowance. [75489]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 7 June 2006]: The estimated annual cost of ceasing to offset carer's allowance against bereavement allowance in the overlapping benefit rules would be around £3 million, although that figure does not take account of bereaved people who currently decline to claim carer's allowance but who would be induced to do so by a change in legislation.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of fraud in (a) income support, (b) jobseeker's allowance, (c) pension credit and (d) housing benefit in each of the last five years. [73255]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is in the following tables:

Income support, jobseeker's allowance and pension credit fraud overpayments

April to March each year	Income Support (not including pensioners)	Jobseeker's Allowance	Income Support for pensioners/ Pension Credit
2000-01
Percentage of benefit overpaid	5.2	7.0	2.1

Notes:
1. The figures for April 2003 to March 2004 and April 2004 to March 2005 in the table have been adjusted to compensate for data quality problems. Previous figures have not been adjusted in this way as there is insufficient available information. The tables therefore are not suitable for making reliable comparisons over time.
2. The reports are available online at www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd2/fraud.asp

Notes:
1. These figures are made up of reviews of around 85 per cent of HB expenditure (used for measuring performance against the relevant PSA target to reduce fraud and error in HB) combined with more approximate estimates of error in the remaining 15 per cent. of expenditure. Further details are available in the relevant National Statistics reports.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many cases of fraudulent claims for benefits were identified in each of the last five years; how many involved identity fraud; and if he will make a statement. [73915]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information is not available on the number of cases of identity fraud. The available information is in the following table.

Cases where incorrect payment identified by a benefit fraud investigation

	Effective cases
2001-02	160,974
2002-03	145,232
2003-04	135,710
2004-05	150,651
2005-06	161,172

Notes:
1. The information available is based on the number of "effective cases", which includes all cases where a change of benefit entitlement is identified as a result of a fraud investigation.
2. Effective cases are a total of benefit fraud cases plus Instrument of Payment fraud cases for all years.
3. Figures exclude General Matching Service.

Fraud information by Sector (FiBS)

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals from EU accession states have been found to be fraudulently claiming (a) jobseeker's allowance and (b) housing benefit since accession. [77603]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available. The Department does not maintain a record of benefit offences by nationality.

Bereavement Allowance

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will take steps to increase the number of men receiving bereavement allowance; and if he will make a statement. [76753]

Mr. Plaskitt: We keep under review the way in which information is made available about benefits so that bereaved people, at this very difficult time in their lives, know about their possible right to benefit and can act on it at the right time.

As well as traditional sources of information we are working in partnership with funeral directors, registrars and voluntary groups such as Cruse, the National Association of Widows and Citizens Advice Bureaux who may be contacted by bereaved people. In addition we will continue to look for opportunities across Government and their services as they develop, to improve advice about this particular benefit, to those most in need of it—the newly bereaved.

Carers

Stephen Hesford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) benefits and (b) other assistance are offered by his Department to those who act as carers for (i) ill and (ii) disabled relatives in Wirral, West. [71636]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of carer's allowance is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Martyn Craske:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what (a) benefits and (b) other assistance are offered by his Department to those who act as carers for (i) ill and (ii) disabled relatives in Wirral West.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service. In the Chief Executive's absence I have been asked to reply on his behalf.

In answer to parts (a) and (b) of your question, depending on their personal circumstances, carers have access to the full range of social security benefits. Those who provide regular and substantial care of at least 35 hours a week for a severely disabled person receiving Attendance Allowance or the equivalent rates of the Disability Living Allowance care component can be entitled to a Carer's Allowance and if on a low income, to the carer premium in the income-related benefits or the carer's additional amount in Pension Credit.

Information on the recipients of carer's related benefits in Wirral West is provided in the attached Appendix.

I hope you find the information helpful.

Appendix: Recipients of carer's related benefits in the Westminster parliamentary constituency of Wirral, West, November 2005

Benefit	Claimants
Carer's Allowance	690
Carer's Additional Amount paid with Pension Credit	320
Carer's Premium with income- related benefits:
Income Support	320
Income based Jobseeker's Allowance	—

Definition and convention
"—" nil or negligible.

Notes:
1. Carer's allowance: Total shows the number of people in receipt of an allowance, and excludes people with entitlement where the payment has been suspended, for example if they are in hospital.
2. Pension credit: Pension credit was introduced on 6 October 2003 and replaced minimum income guarantee (income support for people aged 60 or over).
3. Parliamentary constituencies are allocated by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS Postcode Directory.
4. A smaller number of former MIG cases did not convert to pension credit on 6 October 2003. These cases have been excluded from the figures and are mainly cases where the claimant is aged under 60 and the partner over 60.
5. IS, PC and CA figures are taken from 100 per cent. WPLS data and are rounded to the nearest 10.
6. JSA (IB) figure is derived by applying 5 per cent. proportions to 100 per cent. WPLS data and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.
7. November 2005 is the latest published data available.

4. CTB figures exclude any single adult rebate cases.
5. The figures are based on a 1 per cent. sample and are therefore subject to a degree of sampling variation.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what his latest estimate is of the cost to his Department of Sir David Henshaw's review of the Child Support Agency, broken down by (a) travel costs, (b) salary costs for Sir David Henshaw, (c) other staff costs, (d) telephone costs and (e) other costs; and if he will make a statement; [75762]

(2) whom Sir David Henshaw has interviewed to date for his review of the future of the Child Support Agency; [75763]

(3) by what date he plans to make a statement on the future of the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [75764]

Mr. Plaskitt: The redesign of child support is ongoing. Sir David Henshaw will deliver his findings to my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions before the summer recess. It is the intention to publish Sir David Henshaw's report when a statement is made to the House.

The Henshaw redesign's estimated total costs between February 2006 and July 2006 will be as follows:

	Estimated cost (£)
Sir David Henshaw's:
Time	54,000
Redesign secretariat staffing	200,000
Redesign non-staff costs and publication	up to 75,000
Redesign research/consultation	50,000

Note:
Figures are rounded to the nearest £1,000.

The DWP also meets the costs of general office overheads such as accommodation and IT. These costs are not separately identifiable from DWP running costs.

Information on costs to this Department are not yet available. The redesign secretariat is staffed by employees from the Department for Work and Pensions and the Cabinet Office and the costs detailed are an estimate of the direct costs of Sir David Henshaw and his team for both Departments.

Sir David Henshaw's report will contain the details of the costs incurred by this Department and representations made to him.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of the cases agreed under the old Child Support Agency system have been varied; and at what cost. [75810]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is not available.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his Department's press release of 26 September 2005, why the gateway service for help with the resolution of potential Child Support Agency cases has not been established to date; and what representations he has received on this issue. [77088]

Mr. Plaskitt: The extent to which mediators could be used to secure agreement between the parents on the subject of child support maintenance is clearly an area to be considered by Sir David Henshaw in his redesign. He is looking at initiatives across Government, including those in the Department for Constitutional Affairs and the Department for Education and Skills, with the aim of identifying scope for closer working so that all Government interventions will ensure parents both take financial responsibility for their children and reach agreements that reflect the best interests of their children.

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much he estimates the Henshaw Review of the Child Support Agency will cost. [76556]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 13 June 2006]: The Henshaw redesign's estimated total costs between February 2006 and July 2006 will be as follows:

	Estimated cost (£)
Sir David Henshaw's:
Time	54,000
Redesign secretariat staffing	200,000
Redesign non-staff costs and publication	up to 75,000
Redesign research/ consultation	50,000

Note:
Figures are rounded to the nearest £1000.

The DWP also meets the costs of general office overheads such as accommodation and IT. These costs are not separately identifiable from DWP running costs.

Error Task Force

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have worked in the Error Task Force in each year since it was introduced, broken down by civil service grade; what targets have been set for the Task Force; when it is expected to report to Ministers; and whether its report will be published. [73446]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Official Error Task Force was set up in January 2006 with the aim of reducing official error in income support, jobseekers allowance and pension credit during 2006-07. It meets monthly with membership representing key policy and operational areas.

Information regarding the number of people who have participated in the Official Error Task Force broken down by civil service grade is in the table.

Official Error Task Force

Civil service grade	Full-time/part-time	Number of staff
SCS	Part-time	4
UG6	Part-time	2
UG7	Part-time	4
SEO	Full-time	1
HEO	Full-time	1

The Task Force is also working with a number of people to implement its improvement activities. It reports directly to the Permanent Secretary. Progress reports are provided to Ministers on a regular basis.

The first set of official error estimates covering the period of the Task Force is due to be published in summer 2007.

European Social Fund

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library the information given to me under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 regarding how much companies, contracting bodies and local authorities received in each of the last five years from the European Social Fund. [76523]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information has been placed in the Library.

Family Credit

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the take-up rates were for family credit for each year of its existence; and if he will make a statement. [78410]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table.

Estimates of take-up for family credit

	Caseload take-up rate	Percentage Expenditure take-up rate
1988 and 1989	57	67
1990 and 1991	62	66
1991 and 1992	66	73
1993-94	71	81
1994-95	69	82
1995-96	70	83
1996-97	71 to 75	82 to 88
1997-98	67 to 70	75 to 81
1998-99	66 to 70	73 to 79

Notes:
1. Caseload take-up compares the number of benefit recipients, averaged over the year, with the number who would be receiving if everyone took up their entitlement.
2. Expenditure take-up compares the total amount of benefit received, in the course of the year, with the total amount that would be received if everyone took up their entitlement for the full period of their entitlement.
3. The estimates exclude the full-time self-employed, and cover private households only.
4. Estimates for 1988 to 1992 are sourced from the Family Expenditure Survey, and cover calendar years. These years have been combined due to small sample sizes in each of the years.
5. Estimates for 1998 and 1999 are based on the calendar year 1989 and April to December 1988.
6. Family credit was replaced with working families tax credit in October 1999; take-up statistics for the period April 1999 to October 1999 were not published.
7. Due to small samples sizes on the FES for family credit, estimates are open to a significant margin of error.
8. The source for estimates for 1993-94 to 1998-99 is the Family Resources Survey, and covers financial years.
9. Estimates up until 1995-96 were presented as point estimates. Thereafter, estimates were presented as ranges as the point estimate was adjusted to take account of sampling variation. Estimates were not adjusted to take account of possible bias, so the Department is less confident that the true level of take-up lies within the ranges given, than it is for other benefits.
10. Estimates were published in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-up" series. Copies are available in the Library.

Information Technology

Chris Huhne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was spent on information technology (IT) sourced from outside his Department in each of the last five years; who is responsible for such projects in his Department; and what IT (a) expertise and (b) qualifications they possess. [71816]

James Purnell: The information in the table lists the Department's IT spend sourced outside the DWP over the five years 2001-02 to 2005-06.

Financial year	Spend (£ million)
2005-06	1,156
2004-05	1,070
2003-04	1,073
2002-03	941
2001-02	651

The Department's Chief Information Officer (CIO) is responsible for the delivery of projects that relate to IT and the Department's modernisation programme—in co-ordination with the client groups, agencies and corporate functions—to ensure procurement of effective, reliable information systems and services that give value for money. The Chief Information Officer is also Head of Profession for programme and project management and for information systems.

The Department's Chief Information Officer, client group and corporate Directors General and agency Chief Executives have extensive experience of delivering major projects in the public and private sectors.

Interest-only Mortgages

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will raise the £100,000 limit on interest-only mortgages for people on benefit who are disabled and have adaptations made to their homes. [77086]

Mr. Plaskitt: Help with interest payments is limited to the interest on outstanding capital of £100,000. The only exception to this rule is where the loan is needed to make the home suitable for a disabled member of the household.

Language Line

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the annual cost of Language Line has been in each of the last five years, broken down by region. [48983]

Mrs. McGuire: The table provides details of departmental expenditure on Language Line for each agency in the last five years. The category entitled 'other' refers to usage by departmental cross-cutting services.

Language Line costs cannot be provided on a regional basis as they are not collated in this way.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many immigrants were claiming benefits within six months of being allocated a national insurance number for each reporting period from April 1997 to April 2006; and if he will make a statement. [75759]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is published in "National Insurance Number Allocations to Overseas Nationals Entering the UK". A copy has been placed in the Library.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) asylum seekers, (b) failed asylum seekers and (c) illegal immigrants have been issued with national insurance numbers in each of the last eight years. [77124]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his estimate is of the total value of welfare benefit claims made by individuals issued with a national insurance number who were referred to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate owing to (a) suspicion about their eligibility to work in the UK, (b) the use of false documents and (c) other reasons in each of the last five years. [75859]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Pensions

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of pensioners received means-tested benefits in each year from 1979-80 to 2005-06; what his estimate is for each in 2006-07; and if he will make a statement. [70295]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available. The information that is available is in the following table.

Estimated pensioner beneficiaries of income-related benefits as a percentage of the population of Great Britain 1990 to 2006

Mid year	Beneficiaries aged 60 and over of income-related benefits	Beneficiaries as a percentage of the population aged 60 and over
1990	5,200,000	45

2003	3,280,000	27

Estimated pensioner beneficiaries of income-related benefits as a percentage of the population of Great Britain 1990 to 2006

Mid year	Beneficiaries aged 60 and over of income-related benefits	Beneficiaries as a percentage of the population aged 60 and over
2004	3,740,000	30
2005	3,950,000	32
2006	4,100,000	32

Notes:
1. Income-related benefits are pension credit (PC), minimum income guarantee/income support for the over 60s (MIG/IS), jobseeker's allowance (income based) (JSA(IB)), housing benefit (HB), community charge benefit/council tax benefit (CCB/CTB), family credit (FC) and disability working allowance (DWA).
2. Overlaps between benefits have been removed.
3. Figures have been rounded to the nearest ten thousand, due to the estimation procedure to produce the figures for housing benefit and/or council tax benefit.
4. Beneficiaries is the sum of claimants aged 60 or over and claimants' partners aged 60 or over.
5. Percentage for population has been calculated using the revised Office for National Statistics (ONS) mid-year population estimates for age group 60 and over, for 1990 to 2004, and Government Actuary's Department 2004-based mid-year population projections for 2005 to 2006.
6. Figures based on one per cent and five per cent samples are subject to sampling variation. These include all JSA figures, information concerning partners of PC and MIG/IS claimants, and all other figures prior to 2000 except DWA which is derived from 100 per cent. sample data. HB/CTB (all years) and IS (1990 to 1993) are derived from one per cent samples. All other figures were obtained from the WPLS.
7. CTB data excludes second adult rebate cases.
8. HB data excludes any extended payment cases.
9. Jobseeker's allowance replaced income support for the unemployed in October 1996.
10. Some JSA(IB) claimants may also have entitlement to benefit via the contributory route.
11. A consistent data series prior to 1990 cannot be provided due to a lack of HB/CTB data, and because overlapping cases cannot be identified.
12. Estimates for 1990 to 2004 are based on past benefit data. The estimate for 2005 is based on projections for HB and CTB, and past benefit data for other benefits. The estimate for 2006 is based on projections for all benefits.
13. The increase in beneficiaries from 2004 is due to the introduction of pension credit which is more generous than its predecessors. People aged 65 and over are rewarded for making provision for their retirement through the savings credit. In addition pension credit assumes £1 of income for every £500 of savings above £6,000. This is half the assumed rate of income in the MIG. Pension credit has also been the subject of considerable take-up activity by The Pension Service.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the change in the proportion of pension contributions from (a) employers and (b) employees following the transfer of pension schemes from defined benefit to defined contribution schemes since 2002-03. [76756]

James Purnell: Information is not available in the format requested.

Weighted average employer and employee contribution rates in private sector occupational pension schemes in 2000, 2004 and 2005 are shown in the following table.

Private sector occupational pension schemes[1]	2000	2004	2005
Employer contribution (percentage)
Defined Benefit schemes	9.9	14.5	16.0
Defined Contribution schemes	4.3	6	6.3

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate (a) the number of people affected by and (b) the total savings to the Treasury from the abolition of adult dependency increases, as proposed in the White Paper, "Security in Retirement: towards a new pensions system" in (i) 2020, (ii) 2030, (iii) 2040 and (iv) 2050. [77997]

James Purnell: The information requested is set out in the following table:

	Expenditure saved (£ billion)	Number of people affected
2020	1.4	660,000
2030	1.4	630,000
2040	1.1	520,000
2050	1.2	580,000

Notes:
1. Expenditure is in 2006-07 price terms and all figures are for UK and overseas cases.
2. Estimates of expenditure changes are consistent with the policy detail set out in the White Paper.
3. Savings presented in the table are additional to long-term projections of United Kingdom benefit spend, consistent with the Budget Report 2006 but are subsumed in the overall costs of the proposals as set out in the White Paper.
4. Currently around 66,000 people (the vast majority of whom are men) receive an adult dependency increase of state pension.
5. The numbers in the table take account of the equalisation of State Pension age between 2010 and 2020 and are based on current rates of female labour market participation.
6. The numbers affected are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date the first public announcement was made that the Post Office card account was a temporary scheme. [70892]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute (Mr. Reid) on 13 March 2006, Official Report, column 1849W.

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the impact of the withdrawal of Post Office card accounts on the blind and partially sighted. [74530]

Mr. Plaskitt: Post Office Ltd. made a number of improvements to its PIN pads to ensure its banking services were accessible to as many customers as possible, including those who are blind and partially sighted. Customers using a bank account at the Post Office follow exactly the same routine as those using a Post Office card account. They insert their plastic cards in the same PIN pads before entering their PIN. So any blind or partially sighted people who have used a card account should equally well be able to use a bank account at their post office branch.

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to his Answer of 3 May 2006, Official Report, column 1606W, on Post Office card accounts, whether (a) agents and (b) outsourced workers of the Pensions Service are telephoning pensioners to persuade them to cease using their Post Office card accounts. [75814]

Mr. Plaskitt: No, they are not.

Targeting Fraud Website

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many hits the Targeting Fraud website has received, broken down by month; how many cases of suspected fraud have been reported to the website; how many of these suspected cases have been investigated; how many (a) cases of fraud have been established, (b) changes to benefits have been made and (c) successful prosecutions there have been as a result; and what sentences have been imposed by the courts when prosecutions have been successful; [73440]

(2) how many submissions have been made to the Targeting Fraud website in each month since January 2000; how many referrals for investigation were made as a result of submissions to the Targeting Fraud website; how many investigations were completed as a result of submissions to the website; and how many prosecutions have resulted from website submissions. [73441]

Mr. Plaskitt: Information is not available broken down by month. Information on sentences arising from investigations as a direct result of the Targeting Fraud website is not available.

The available information is in the following table.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the case of Abdul Rahman, convicted in Afghanistan of apostasy. [77942]

Dr. Howells: Abdul Rahman was not convicted of apostasy.

Owing to apparent procedural flaws in the case, the apostasy charges against Mr. Rahman were referred back to the Attorney-General's Office and he was released from custody on 26 March 2006.

I refer the hon. Member to my public statement of 22 March 2006, available on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website at http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1007029391629&a=KArticle&aid=1142704623955%20&year=2006&month=2006-03-01&date=2006-03-22, and to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Clwyd, West (Mr. Jones) on 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 914W.

Latin America

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of US democracy promotion in Latin America. [78058]

Mr. Hoon: We have not made a specific assessment of the impact of US democracy promotion in Latin America. We work with a number of partners in the EU and across the region to promote democracy and good governance in Latin America.

Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards the implementation of the 13 practical steps for nuclear disarmament adopted in 2000 at the non-proliferation treaty review conference. [79084]

Dr. Howells: The UK is fulfilling all its obligations under the treaty on the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons (NPT), including those on disarmament under Article VI of the treaty. We continue to support the relevant disarmament measures contained in the Final Document from the NPT Review Conference (RevCon) in 2000, including the 13 practical steps towards disarmament, and we have a good record on meeting the priorities they set out. Not all the 13 steps are relevant to the UK, such as those relating to bilateral measures between the US and Russia. However, we have made progress on the majority of the other steps. For example, in 2000 the UK initiated a research programme to study techniques and technologies that could be used to verify nuclear disarmament. Conclusions of this programme were presented to the 2005 NPT RevCon. We continue to call for the entry into force of the comprehensive test ban treaty as soon as possible and, pending its entry into force, maintain a moratorium on nuclear weapons test explosions and any other nuclear explosions. The UK is also pressing for the immediate commencement of negotiations on a fissile material cut-off treaty, without preconditions, at the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva.

Terrorism Victims

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in (a) providing financial support and (b) improving information and logistical support for British citizens who are victims of terrorist attacks abroad; and if she will make a statement. [78311]

Dr. Howells: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has in place a package of immediate assistance measures to help victims of terrorism overseas and their families in the immediate aftermath of a terrorist incident overseas. This is available in the absence of an insurance policy, employer's scheme or any other form of assistance.

Depending on the circumstances, the support we offer on top of our normal support may include medical evacuation for people who have been injured or evacuation for people in danger (this may not necessarily be to the UK, but to a safe place in the region); paying immediate medical expenses; transporting bodies or remains back home; paying the return luggage costs of those killed or injured; travel for two members of the victim's family to the site of the attack; and accommodation and travel insurance.

In addition to this support, victims of major catastrophes overseas, or their families, need further help when they return to the UK. The Humanitarian Assistance Unit in the Department of Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) works with the relevant agencies and services to help victims to get the aftercare they need.

The Chancellor announced in the Budget a £1 million initial endowment to a charitable fund to help the British victims of terrorism. The fund will provide rapid relief to meet the immediate financial needs of those caught up in a terrorist attack, whether in the UK or overseas. The DCMS is working in consultation with the voluntary sector, partners in Government and victims' groups to finalise the details and will make a further announcement in due course.

Information and logistical support has been improved by the deployment of Rapid Deployment Teams (RDTs) to the areas affected. These volunteers are trained consular officers who travel to the area to assist our embassy/high commission with the incident. Their tasks range from meeting family members to visits to morgues, assisting with medevacs etc. The RDTs also consist of personnel from International SOS and the British Red Cross.

Venezuela

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are for Ministers in her Department to visit Venezuela. [78054]

Mr. Hoon: Foreign engagements for my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and other Ministers are kept under constant review. It is not our practice to announce such visits until they are firm. Because of the unpredictable nature of world events, final decisions on overseas visits are often not possible until very shortly before the day of travel.

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken to promote British commercial interests in Venezuela. [78055]

Mr. Hoon: We actively support UK commercial interests in Venezuela through our embassy in Caracas, UK Trade and Investment and UK regional partners. UK exports to Venezuela have grown in recent years: £236 million in 2005 (26 per cent. up on 2004). The embassy and its partners work closely with the Venezuelan authorities, national and private companies, and chambers of commerce in Venezuela to identify and report commercial opportunities that could benefit UK enterprises. This year we will support five outward missions to Venezuela by UK small and medium-sized enterprises and two inward missions to the UK by Venezuelan companies seeking joint venture partnerships and alliances.

Weapons of Terror Report

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of recommendations (a) 58, (b) 26, (c) 20, (d) 19, (e) 7 and (f) 45 of the Weapons of Mass Destruction Commission report on weapons of terror; and if she will make a statement. [79082]

Dr. Howells: The UK has not yet made a full assessment of the various recommendations contained in the report of the Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD) Commission, "Weapons of Terror". However, we consider it to be a valuable contribution to the continuing discussion of proliferation in many fora around the world and will study it closely.

The UK takes its disarmament obligations under Article VI of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons (NPT) very seriously and we have an excellent record in this area. We have reduced the explosive power of our nuclear forces by over 70 per cent. since the end of the cold war and currently have a stockpile of fewer than 200 operational warheads. We continue to support the relevant measures agreed at the 1995 and 2000 NPT Review Conferences and have a good record on meeting the priorities they set out. We also remain fully committed to the negative and positive security assurances we gave to non-nuclear weapon States Party to the NPT in 1995.

The UK is fully committed to progress in multilateral disarmament fora, in particular in the Conference on Disarmament (CD). We continue to press for the immediate commencement of negotiations on a Fissile Material Cut-Off Treaty, without pre-conditions, in the CD. However, we believe that the CD must continue to operate by consensus if we are to make progress on these serious matters.

The Outer Space Treaty (1967), to which the UK is a Depository, places important constraints on the use of space, prohibiting the deployment of WMD in space and military activity on the moon and other celestial bodies. There is no international consensus on the need to start negotiations on a new international instrument governing the military use of space.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make a statement on the political situation in Zimbabwe. [78085]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 20 June 2006]: The political situation in Zimbabwe is dire as is the economic collapse. Mugabe's regime continues to deny the people of Zimbabwe their basic rights and freedoms; intimidate and suppress opposition; silence independent media; force people from their homes; ignore international calls for reform; and deny any responsibility for the grave situation the country faces. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister told the House on 19 April 2006, Official Report, columns 122-23, what the regime in Zimbabwe is doing is a disgrace.

We will continue to work for the restoration of good governance and the rule of law in Zimbabwe.

HEALTH

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many women taking the abortion drug RU 486 suffered (a) excessive bleeding, (b) haemorrhaging when the foetus was expelled from the uterus, (c) damage to the cervix and (d) an infection in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by (i) age of the woman, (ii) gestation of the pregnancy and (iii) region; [75641]

(2) how many women taking the abortion drug RU 486 required further treatment because the womb was not completely emptied of its contents or it failed to end the pregnancy in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by (a) age of the woman, (b) gestation of the pregnancy and (c) region. [75642]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Under the Abortion Act, any registered medical practitioner who terminates a pregnancy is required to supply the Chief Medical Officer with the information set out in the Abortion Regulations 1991. As such, information is not held centrally on how many women taking mifepristone (Mifegyne, RU486) required further treatment because the womb was not completely emptied of its contents or why the drug failed to end the pregnancy.

[2] For confidentiality reasons, totals less than 10 (0-9 cases) are suppressed. This is in line with the Office for National Statistics' guidance on the disclosure of abortion statistics, 2005.
Note:
Breakdown by region is not possible, for confidentiality reasons, due to small numbers.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the Answer of 18 May 2006, Official Report, columns 1161-62W, on abortion, what estimate she has made of the cost of answering the question; and if she will make a statement. [77593]

Caroline Flint: Data on grounds, funding, gestation, and age are currently available but not in the format requested. We estimate it would take 33 hours, at a cost of £825, to extract the data and prepare the tables for publication, which is why we have previously stated that this information is only available at disproportionate cost.

If these tables were to be produced, we believe, given the level of detail and areas of interest requested, much of it could not be made available owing to patient confidentiality (the number of cases is likely to be very small).

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women seeking an abortion in England gave a Northern Ireland address in each of the last five years, broken down by postcode. [78938]

Caroline Flint: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Southend, West (Mr. Amess) on 19 April 2006, Official Report, columns 730-31W. The information cannot be broken down by postcode owing to patient confidentiality.

Accident Costs (Recoupment)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been recovered for the NHS in respect of recoupment of treatment costs from (a) accident victims and (b) insurance companies in each of the last three years; and if she will make a statement; [75993]

(2) in what circumstances medical treatment costs can be recovered from (a) insurers and (b) accident victims, in respect of treatment under the NHS for injuries; what the maximum sums are that can be recovered in each case; and if she will make a statement; [75995]

(3) if she will extend the (a) range of cases and (b) maximum sum that can be recouped in respect of recovery of costs of medical treatment for (i) accident victims and (ii) insurers; and if she will make a statement. [76127]

Ms Rosie Winterton: For more than 70 years hospitals have been able to recover the costs of providing treatment to the victims of road traffic accidents where the injured person successfully claims personal injury compensation from the person responsible for the accident. The arrangements for this were streamlined and centralised through the Road Traffic (NHS Charges) Act 1999 which established a formal recovery scheme, operated on behalf of the Secretary of State by the Compensation Recovery Unit, part of the Department for Work and Pensions. Where a compensation payment is made to a road traffic accident victim by an insurer, the insurer is also obliged under the terms of the scheme to make a payment towards the cost of any hospital treatment the injured person needed, in accordance with a simple tariff system covering in-patient or out-patient treatment as appropriate. The injured person is not required to make any payment towards their own treatment costs under the scheme.

At present the maximum amount that can be recovered in respect of any injury is £37,100. The tariffs and the maximum amount are uprated each year in line with Hospital and Community Health Services inflation. The amounts recovered in the last three years are as follows:

2003-04	105,654,936
2004-05	117,504,738
2005-06	121,500,568

Part 3 of the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 laid the legislative framework for a wider-ranging NHS Injury Costs Recovery (ICR) scheme to be established, subsuming the existing road traffic accident scheme and extending it to all cases in which personal injury compensation is paid to an injured person who has received national health service hospital treatment. Following a public consultation on draft regulations that will govern the operation of the ICR scheme, it was decided to widen the scope for the scheme to take into account contributory negligence where this has been a factor in the primary compensation claim. The necessary amendment to the 2003 Act is contained in the Health Bill. In order to allow adequate time for the Bill to complete its passage through Parliament and for the amending clause to be brought into effect from the outset of the ICR scheme, the scheme is now expected to be introduced from 29 January 2007. The intention is to transfer the tariffs and maximum amount from the existing road traffic scheme, together with the introduction of a new tariff covering the cost of ambulance journeys required to take the injured person to hospital. As now, these amounts will be uprated annually.

Acute Care Beds

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute care beds per 100,000 population have been provided in each financial year since 1997-98 in each strategic health authority area. [74066]

Andy Burnham: Data for the years 2002-03, 2003-04 and 2004-05 are shown in the following table. Strategic health authorities (SHAs) were established in 2002 and, therefore, data prior to 2002-03 are not available on a SHA basis.

Audiologists

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to increase the number of audiologists. [77284]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Work force planning is now the responsibility of local national health service employers and strategic health authorities. It is for them to determine how many audiological staff are required to meet local service needs.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her Department's press release on HER2 testing dated 5 October 2005, whether it is her policy that all women diagnosed with breast cancer should be offered HER2 testing irrespective of the type of treatment being proposed in their case. [79302]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department's policy is to ensure that testing arrangements are put in place so that patients who may benefit from herceptin are identified.

Professor Mike Richards, the national cancer director, is working with cancer networks to achieve this. An update from Professor Richards is due shortly and a report on progress will be made available as soon as possible afterwards.

Childhood Obesity

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the incidence of (a) overweight and (b) obesity was amongst children in England aged under 16 years in each year since 1997. [76737]

Caroline Flint: The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity is the Health Survey for England. The table shows the most recent data on the estimated prevalence of overweight and obesity in children aged two to 15 between 1997 and 2004. Data for 2005-06 are not yet available.

Departmental Publications

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which statistical publications produced by her Department are issued (a) weekly, (b) fortnightly, (c) monthly, (d) quarterly and (e) annually; and what the planned date of publication is of each during (i) 2006 and (ii) the first half of 2007. [77565]

Andy Burnham: No departmental statistical publications are issued weekly or fortnightly. The following departmental statistical publication is issued monthly on its website:

National health service in-patient and out-patient waiting times figures

The following departmental statistical publications are issued quarterly on its website:

NHS in-patient and out-patient waiting: events occurring during the quarter

Waiting times for suspected cancer patients

Accident and emergency (A and E) activity; total time spent in A and E from arrival to admission, discharge or transfer and waiting for emergency admission through A and E

Cancelled operations

The following departmental statistical publication is issued bi-annually on its website:

Critical care beds: census day

The following departmental statistical publications are issued annually on its website:

Abortion statistics: England and Wales

Imaging and radio diagnostics

Bed availability and occupancy

The following departmental statistical publication is regularly updated. The exact timing is dependent on publication of National Patient Survey results by the Healthcare Commission:

Public Service Agreement Scores on Patient Experience

Timing of annual and other statistical publications produced by the Department is pre-announced by way of a 12-month publication plan on its website which is available at: www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/Statistics/CodeOfPractice/12MonthPlan/fs/en?CONTENT_ID=4016423&chk=eLDBG/.

This plan also currently includes statistical publications produced by the Information Centre for health and social care.

The Department process for pre-announcing statistical publications is carried out in accordance with the National Statistics protocol for release practices.

Dermatology

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the use of the NHS Guidelines for the Appointment of General Practitioners with Special Interests in the Delivery of Clinical Services: Dermatology by primary care trusts when making such appointments; what steps she is taking to (a) monitor the appointment of such general practitioners and (b) ensure that such appointments are being made in line with the guidelines; and what plans she has to review the guidelines. [71112]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In conjunction with the Royal College of General Practitioners, national guidelines have been developed across a number of specialties to assist primary care trusts (PCTs) to accredit general practitioners with special interests (GPwSIs). GPwSIs are PCT-led services, and it is for them to ensure they reflect national guidelines and meet local need.

The Department is currently reviewing all existing guidelines in the context of the White Paper "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" published in January 2006, which identified the need to accelerate the development of facilities and services being provided closer to home. These updated guidelines will also include new advice on how commissioners should accredit services to meet national standards. These will be published later this year.

Foster Review

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish (a) the findings of the Foster Review and (b) recommendations for the reform of healthcare regulation. [79299]

Andy Burnham: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 15 May 2006, Official Report, column 694W.

General Practitioners

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are planned to increase the number of general practitioners recruited by the NHS over the next decade. [74993]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is the responsibility of primary care trusts (PCTs) to assess and make provision for the healthcare needs of their local communities. PCTs ensure the maintenance of adequate staffing levels, including the recruitment of general practitioners through local delivery plans.

"Delivering the NHS Improvement Plan: the Workforce Contribution" highlights strategic work force issues, which PCTs and strategic health authorities are asked to ensure are considered in their local delivery plans. This includes maintaining adequate staffing levels as well as achieving greater productivity.

Health and Social Care Act

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she plans to extend the duty to consult under section 11 of the Health and Social Care Act 2001 to cover social care and new providers; and if she will make a statement. [79298]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The duty to consult is being considered in the review of patient and public involvement. The expert panel set up to conclude this review has now reported its recommendations to Ministers. There will be an announcement on the future of patient and public involvement shortly.

Health Care Regulation

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the new NHS Patient and Public Involvement Resource Centre at the University of Warwick is able to provide support in promoting patient and public engagement in respect of the future of professional healthcare regulation to (a) non-executive directors of NHS bodies, (b) participants in patient and public organisations, (c) lay members of healthcare regulatory bodies and (d) members of local authority scrutiny committees. [77083]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The patient and public involvement (PPI) resource centre will be delivered by the consortium of University of Warwick, Centre for Public Scrutiny and LMCA—Alliance for Health. The consortium will design, develop and deliver a new centre to support the delivery of PPI in health care delivery system. Part of its remit is to promote the value of PPI.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the remit of the new NHS Patient and Public Involvement Resource Centre at the University of Warwick extends to (a) working with and (b) spreading best practice to (i) similar organisations in the UK and (ii) healthcare regulatory bodies. [77084]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The centre will also work with and spread best practice across all aspects of health and social care delivery. Currently, guidance in patient and public involvement (PPI) is provided and held by a variety of sources. A resource centre is needed to capture knowledge and learning from PPI activity systematically and create a process to enable the sharing of effective PPI practice (from the United Kingdom and overseas) and provide guidance to increase effectiveness in PPI. There is demand for personal and web-based information, signposting systems and networks—a virtual place for people to come together and exchange learning and experiences and a place for those new to PPI to get the best information to get started.

Influenza

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 229W, on influenza, what steps she has taken to ensure that expanded production capacity for pandemic influenza vaccine is located in the UK. [75348]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Last year, the Department invited manufacturers to tender for a contract to supply pandemic flu vaccine once the pandemic strain is known. The tendering process for these contracts is ongoing and we cannot comment on the location until this is completed.

Management Consultants

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to her Department was of employing management consultants (a) in the NHS and (b) for each (i) primary care trust, (ii) mental health trust and (iii) strategic health authority in each of the last five years. [76615]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect information from the national health service that would allow for an analysis of the cost of management consultants engaged by primary care trusts, mental health trusts, or strategic health authorities.

Mental Health

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the timetable is for introducing payment by results funding for mental health provision; and if she will make a statement. [75672]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The introduction of a payment by results funding system for the provision of mental health services depends on the results of an ongoing project to determine currencies that could be used to describe and cost mental health activity. If the project is successful in producing meaningful currencies this summer, these will be piloted and evaluated.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the findings of the Royal College of Psychiatrists that Irish-born people living in London have the highest rates of death and depression of any migrant group; and if she will make a statement. [76631]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not made a direct assessment of the Royal College of Psychiatrists' findings. However, the Department published guidance entitled "Celebrating our Cultures: Guidelines for Mental Health Promotion with Black and Minority Ethnic Communities" in December 2004 which includes a specific chapter on promoting the mental health of people from the Irish community.

The National Suicide Prevention Strategy for England (2002) recognised the risk of suicide in black and minority ethnic groups and consequently a black and minority ethnic suicide research project has been commissioned to provide comprehensive information on the risk factors for suicide and suicide attempts in different ethnic groups, including the Irish community. This information will be published in due course.

"Delivering Race Equality in Mental Health Care"(2005), a five-year action plan for improving black and minority ethnic communities' access to, and experience of, mental health care includes Irish communities, and the Federation of Irish Societies is represented on the "Delivering Race Equality" national steering group.

National Recruitment and Retention Premium

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons NHS employers are not paying the national recruitment and retention premium to the building craft grade; when the review of that non-payment is planned to take place; and if she will make a statement. [78581]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There is no nationally agreed recruitment and retention premium for building craft workers working in the national health service. It is for employers to decide whether or not there is evidence to justify payment of local recruitment and retention premiums.

NHS employers in partnership with national trades unions have recently agreed to review the national recruitment and retention premiums set out in the agenda for change agreement.

NHS Direct

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total expenditure on NHS Direct (a) is in 2006-07 and (b) was in each of the last three years. [75661]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Expenditure by NHS Direct is only available for 2003-04 and 2004-05. For 2005-06 and future years, information is not yet available.

In 2003-04 the expenditure by NHS Direct was £121,988,000 and in 2004-05 £148,362,000. These figures are from the audited statutory accounts and are publicly available on the NHS Direct website at www.nhsdirect.nhs.uk/articles/article.aspx?articleId=1242.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it a condition of NHS Direct becoming a foundation trust that it does not outsource to overseas call centres. [79232]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are in the early stages of considering how the foundation trust model and application process could apply to NHS Direct. There are no plans to transfer NHS Directs call services abroad.

NHS Drug Budget

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the NHS drug budget has been in each year since 1997. [75340]

Andy Burnham: Primary care and national health service trust drugs budgets are not determined centrally. Trusts are responsible for setting their own budgets. Decisions on the level of funding will depend on local priorities.

The following table gives the total drugs bill since 1997.

	Outturn (£ million)
1997-98	5,173
1998-99	5,550
1999-2000	6,202
2000-01	6,688
2001-02	7,447
2002-03	8,355
2003-04	9,271
2004-05	9,965

Notes:
1. Figures are net which include pharmaceutical price regulation scheme receipt savings.
2. The total drugs spend include drugs expenditure in primary care and the hospital and community health service (HCHS). The primary care expenditure reflects amounts paid to pharmacy and appliance contractors' and amounts authorised for dispending doctors and personal administration in England. HCHS expenditure includes drugs and medical gases.
3. From 2000-01, figures are in resource terms, prior to this figures are in cash terms. Cash figures relate to February to January prescribing due to delay in prescription processing and payment calculations. Resource figures represent the actual cost between April to March.

NHS Facilities

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what NHS facilities have been closed in 2006-07 to date, broken down by (a) primary care trust and (b) reason for closure; and if she will make a statement. [78358]

Andy Burnham: The Department does not routinely collect and hold operational management information on closures of national health service facilities.

Local authority overview and scrutiny committees have the power to review and scrutinise health services from the perspective of their local populations. NHS bodies which have proposals under consideration to substantially vary or substantially develop NHS services in the area of a particular local authority have a duty to consult that local authority's committee. The committees have the power to refer any proposal to the Secretary of State if they believe that they have not been consulted when they should have been consulted or if they believe the plans are not in the interests of the health service.

NHS Finance

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health about which NHS trusts and organisations she has received warnings under section 19 or section 8 of the Audit Commission Act 1998; and on which organisations auditors are considering posting Public Interest Reports. [76386]

Andy Burnham: Auditors appointed by the Audit Commission to audit the accounts of national health service bodies have the discretionary power under section 8 of the Audit Commission Act 1998 to issue a report in the public interest.

Section 8 of the Act requires auditors in auditing the accounts to consider whether, in the public interest, they should report on any matter coming to their notice in the course of the audit, in order for it to be considered by the body concerned or brought to the attention of the public. The auditor can issue an immediate report if the public interest requires it, or can issue a report at the conclusion of the audit.

Since 1 April 2005, auditors have issued section 8 reports to the following NHS organisations:

Cambridge City Primary Care Trust (PCT) and South Cambridgeshire PCT

The section 8 reports issued to these NHS organisations also constituted a referral to Secretary of State under section 19 of the Act.

There will be other cases where the auditors are considering when/whether to issue reports. Comprehensive information on these is not held centrally.

Section 19 of the Audit Commission Act 1998 requires an appointed auditor to refer matters to the Secretary of State if he/she has reason to believe that an NHS organisation has made a decision which involves, or may involve, unlawful expenditure (known as referrals to the Secretary of State). These reports are not published.

Since 1 April 2005, auditors have made referrals, under section 19, in respect of the following NHS organisations.

The section 19 referrals issued to these NHS organisations were in respect of spending above the PCTs allocated limit and did not have a full report to the Secretary of State.

NHS IT Programme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 16 May 2006, Official Report, column 944W, on the NHS IT programme, if she will list the organisations and individuals who responded to the consultation; and what meetings the NHS Information Authority carried out as part of its research. [75193]

Caroline Flint: A list of names of all the organisations and individuals that responded at one or other stage of the consultation process on the national specification for integrated care records service is not held centrally. Some of the responses were provided by organisations which are no longer active.

The original "National Specification for Integrated Care Records Service (Consultation Draft)" was issued in July 2002 by the NHS Information Authority. Some 190 responses to the document were received from suppliers, clinicians, chief information officers (CIOs), information technology (IT) departments of national health service bodies and others, commenting on such aspects as architecture, functional omissions and the realisation of benefits that such a system would produce. These comments were included and formed the base document for the early draft of the output based specification (OBS). This draft was then refined. The clinical input was provided by almost three hundred individuals, and the IT community (IT managers and CIOs) numbered a further one hundred. A broad spectrum of NHS stakeholders was then engaged to review the draft OBS. The review group encompassed leading clinicians, practitioners, policy advisors, health informaticians and managers and included representatives from the Department, the NHS Information Authority, strategic health authorities, NHS trusts, primary care trusts, general practitioners, academic groups and other Government Departments.

It is known that many of these people also sought input from colleagues and we estimate that this cascade has resulted in many thousands of individuals having had a material input to the content and quality of the product.

A final list of 239 people was invited to review the OBS, from which a total of 105 formal review documents were received. From the 900 pages reviewed there were 1,175 comments of substance. These comments resulted in a further refined version of the OBS which was then distributed for any final comment. A response to every individual comment was returned to the reviewer in question.

Reflecting a level of transparency unprecedented for major projects within Government, the OBS was published to the public domain in July 2003 and is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/PublicationsAndStatistics/.

In addition to many hundreds of internal meetings, there were 44 meetings held by the clinicians from the national programme with important stakeholders and stakeholder groups. These included several chairs of the Royal Colleges, and presentations to many hundreds of clinicians at various locations around the country.

Data on those consulted on ways of managing the confidentiality of patient health information have been placed in the Library.

23 meetings were carried out as part of the research phase in addition to eight focus groups and 56 face-to-face interviews, involving patients, researchers, suppliers, senior care service managers, and NHS information governance professionals.

NHS IT Support

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms have been put in place to manage the performance of strategic health authorities under option 2 of the procurement strategy outlined in paragraph 3.6.1 of her Department's publication "Delivering 21st century IT support for the NHS". [75124]

Caroline Flint: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are responsible for co-ordinating local information technology investment and modernisation activities to deliver benefits from all of the national programme products and services to patients and staff and across the national health service. As part of the Department's regular performance management arrangements for the NHS, SHA chief executives are held to account for delivery priorities for the NHS. Progress in national programme implementation has been the focus of a particular and stringent performance management process instigated by the former senior responsible officer for the programme.

These arrangements are complemented by a parallel process within individual SHAs, and by normal operational contacts with local NHS bodies to support and incentivise the deployment of national programme systems and services.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of members of the NHS pension scheme joined the scheme (a) before the age of (i) 20 years, (ii) 25 years, (iii) 30 years, (iv) 35 years, (v) 40 years and (vi) 45 years and (b) when they were over 45 years old. [61391]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the proportion of joiners to the NHS Pension Scheme in the age bands requested from the year 2000 to date is shown in the following table.

Age on joining NHS pension scheme	Percentage	Number

20	5.68	46,185

NHS Performance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her statement of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 257, on NHS performance, why surpluses generated by primary care trusts and NHS trusts are transferred to strategic health authorities; what assessment she has made of the impact of such transfers on the transparency of financial accounting in the NHS; which (a) primary care trusts and (b) NHS trusts have transferred surpluses to strategic health authorities in the 2005-06 financial year; how much was transferred in each case; under what authority strategic health authorities are permitted to retain surpluses generated by constituent trusts; and if she will make a statement. [77473]

Andy Burnham: Surpluses generated by primary care trusts (PCTs) are transferred and held by strategic health authorities (SHAs) to allow the SHA to balance the financial position across all the organisations they performance manage. This helps increase the transparency of financial accounting and reporting in the national health service, as it means SHAs can ensure that these surpluses are not used to mask overspends of poorly performing organisations.

The Department did not require the SHAs separately to identify transfers of surpluses between PCTs and SHAs in their inter-authority transfer requests. However, for the current financial year the Department intends that transfers between PCTs and SHAs will be formally recorded in a note to their individual accounts.

The Secretary of State has the power to make adjustments to the resource limits of PCTs and SHAs under section 97 of the National Health Service Act 1977 as amended.

NHS Staff

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors, (b) nurses and (c) dentists were employed in the NHS (i) in full-time equivalent terms and (ii) in headcount terms in (A) 1979, (B) 1997 and (C) the most recent period for which figures are available. [76961]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The figures requested are shown in the table.

NHS Trust Finances

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each NHS trust, including foundation trusts, owed to other NHS bodies in the final period of the financial year 2005-06 broken down by NHS body; and how much was owed by each strategic health authority to each NHS trust. [77684]

Andy Burnham: The audited information for national health service trusts, primary care trusts and strategic health authorities will be available in the autumn following validation by the Department.

The information requested from NHS foundation trusts is not held centrally and may be obtained by contracting the chairman of each organisation.

Obesity

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of (a) males and (b) females are considered (i) obese and (ii) overweight. [77285]

Caroline Flint: The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity and overweight among children and adults is the Health Survey for England (HSE). Tables 1 and 2 show the most recent data on the prevalence of obesity and overweight in children and adults in 2004.

Table 1 presents prevalence among adults aged 16 and over.

Overseas Doctors

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will allow an extended time scale for the introduction of the new rules with regard to overseas doctors working in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [74162]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Transitional arrangements have been put in place. Those doctors who were offered a relevant training programme before the changes were announced will be given the opportunity to complete it.

International medical graduates will still be able to work and train in the United Kingdom. They will now need to meet the requirements of an employment category, such as the work permit requirements, in line with the immigration rules for other professions.

Palliative Care

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated to palliative care in (a) England and (b) Yorkshire and Kirklees in each of the past 10 years. [76165]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not routinely collect data requested on national health service funding of palliative care.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible within the NHS for commissioning and funding services for their resident population, including palliative care. The NHS is currently receiving the largest sustained increase in funding in its history, growth money not identified for specific purposes. PCTs will be able to use these extra resources to deliver on both national and local priorities including palliative care.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to support the provision of palliative care services. [76166]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts (PCTs) are responsible within the national health service for commissioning and funding services for their resident population, including palliative care.

We have set out in "Our health, our care, our say" a programme of action that will deliver increased choice to all patients at the end of life about where they are cared for and die. We will be working with key stakeholders in taking this forward.

Peripatetic Nurses

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps her Department is taking to provide peripatetic nurses skilled in the care of terminally-ill patients to work in local communities; [76163]

(2) which primary care trusts provide peripatetic nurses to work in the local community. [76164]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally. It is for local managers to determine skill mix within the nursing work force. The Government have supported the development of a range of specialist roles within nursing, and trusts must deploy them as they think fit.

Physiotherapists

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many physiotherapists were employed within the NHS in (a) 2005 and (b) 2000. [77227]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The numbers of qualified physiotherapists employed in the national health service in England in 2000 and 2005 at 30 September in each year were 15,608 and 19,997 respectively.

Radon Gas

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent research the Government have commissioned into the effects of radon gas. [77676]

Caroline Flint: The Government have contributed to research into the link between indoor radon and lung cancer in south-west England and also to animal studies of the risks of radon.

Following the announcement/publication of the results of the large European-wide study of radon and lung cancer risks the National Radiological Protection Board (now the radiation protection division of the Health Protection Agency), the Government's adviser on health related radiation protection matters, asked its independent advisory group on ionising radiation to include this information, together with the findings from other relevant research, in the current review of the risks of radon exposure. The report of this review is expected to be published in about six months.

Respiratory Health

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many (a) nurses and (b) doctors specialising in respiratory problems there are in each (i) health authority and (ii) primary care trust in England; [76859]

(2) what steps her Department is taking to ensure that there are adequate respiratory nurses and doctors available for people with asthma; and if she will make a statement. [76860]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on doctors specialising in respiratory problems by strategic health authority (SHA) and primary care trust (PCT) is shown in the table. Information on the number of specialist respiratory nurses is not held centrally.

Respite Care (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to improve the provision of respite care in Peterborough constituency; and if she will make a statement. [78037]

Andy Burnham: This Government introduced the carers grant in 1999 to support councils in providing breaks and other services for carers in England. The grant is worth £185 million in 2006-07 and will be worth £185 million in 2007-08. Councils can use their share of this money to support carers in a range of ways including the provision of short breaks or respite care.

Peterborough's share of the carers grant is £591,333.

Strategic Health Authorities (Information Officers)

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the chief information officer (CIO) in each strategic health authority since 2002; and what the IT experience was of each CIO. [75051]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally and can be obtained directly from the relevant strategic health authorities.

Study Leave (Doctors)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether study leave budgets for doctors in training cover management and leadership development programmes. [70157]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The use of study leave budget allocations is down to local discretion. There is no prescriptive guidance as to the content for which study leave budget allocations should be used. Its main function is to supplement the educational opportunities that are available through training programmes.

Tourists (Health Care)

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision her Department makes for tourist visitors in estimating likely numbers of patients served by NHS (a) hospital trusts and (b) strategic health authorities; and what advice her Department provides to strategic health authorities on allocating funding to hospitals with small local resident populations and high tourist visitor numbers. [78447]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The Department makes allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs) based on the needs of their relevant populations. PCTs agree service level agreements with national health service providers to ensure the necessary healthcare is available for their populations. If activity is carried out by a NHS provider outside these agreements, for example when an individual is on holiday, then the NHS provider is expected to invoice the individual's PCT for the cost of that activity. No allocations are made to cover the cost of this activity as the cost is already funded from within PCTs' allocations.

For non-United Kingdom (UK) tourist visitors, entitlement to free NHS hospital treatment is based on whether they are ordinarily resident in this country. NHS providers are required to establish whether a patient is ordinarily resident, or exempt from charges. For charge-exempt non-UK tourist visitors, NHS providers invoice their local PCTs, which are subsequently reimbursed for this activity.

Waiting Times

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) longest waiting time for an (i) initial urology out-patient assessment, (ii) IVU investigation and (iii) in-patient surgery in the urology specialty has been over the last three years. [77232]

Andy Burnham: Data on the longest and average time waited for a first out-patient consultant-led appointment following GP referral for urology is shown in the table.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of people experienced waits of longer than (a) two and (b) four hours in accident and emergency departments in each of the last five years. [77281]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

	Attendances	Percentage > two hours	Percentage > four hours

QMAE dataset, Department of Health

An operating standard of 98 per cent. has been introduced to allow for the minority of patients who clinically require more than four hours in accident and emergency (A and E).

The Department collects data on total time spent in A and E departments from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge. The first full set of data was published in quarter two (July to September) 2002-03 and was for major (type one) departments only. All types of A and E department were included in the collection from April 2003.

Data broken down into hourly time-bands were first collected in quarter one (January to March) 2004-05. Patients waiting more than two hours include patients in the time-bands two to three hours, three to four hours and more than four hours.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) mean and (b) median waiting time for an in-patient procedure for the 50 most common specialties have been in each year since 1997. [78018]

Andy Burnham: Data on the mean and median waiting times for in-patient admission since 1997 for each specialty has been placed in the Library.

West Hertfordshire NHS Trust

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has received a capital investment plan from West Hertfordshire NHS trust since 26 January; and if she will make a statement. [77819]

Andy Burnham: The "Investing in Your Health" strategic outline case (SOC) for a reconfiguration of acute services in Hertfordshire was received by the Department in 2004. This covered developments to be taken forward by both East and North Hertfordshire national health service trust and the West Hertfordshire NHS trust. For West Hertfordshire NHS trust the options included scaling back services onto the Hemel Hempstead site and consolidating services on the redeveloped site at Watford.

Following external advice procured by the trusts and their strategic health authorities (SHAs), the projects are now being taken forward separately with both trusts aiming to submit the next stage of their plans, their outline business cases (OBCs), to the Department later this year or early next.

All major private finance initiative (PFI) schemes in procurement are subject to a revalidation exercise we announced in January 2006. Revalidation will involve comparing the schemes against a number of tests, to ensure that they properly take account of the new financial mechanisms operating in the NHS (such as choice and payment by results), and are properly taking account of activity of the shift away from the acute sector envisaged in the recent White Paper "Our health, our care, our say". The trust's OBC will need to take into account the findings of this work.

The announcement of decisions following the PFI revalidation will be in two waves. It is anticipated that the announcement for schemes which are most advanced, generally those that have already appointed their preferred bidder, will be in late July. Decisions on the remainder, including East and North Hertfordshire and West Hertfordshire, will be announced later.

Work Permits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether job advertisements which mention the need for work permits will be required to be cleared with the Race Relations Commission. [74604]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are no such requirements to clear job advertisements. We would expect recruiters to follow best practice when drafting advertisements for posts.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Freedom of Information

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether any private body providing services under contract to a public authority has been designated as a public authority by an order under section 5 of the Freedom of Information Act. [79245]

Vera Baird: No bodies have been designated as public authorities by order under section 5 of the Freedom of Information Act.

Voting Irregularities

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many police investigations of alleged voting irregularities in local government elections have exceeded 18 months in duration without charges being laid in the last five years; which local authorities are involved in such investigations; and if she will make a statement. [78396]

Bridget Prentice: The Government do not hold information centrally on where allegations of voting irregularities are being investigated by the police, or how long those investigations take.

NORTHERN IRELAND

The Environment and Heritage Service

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints were lodged in 2005 relating to the ways in which Environment and Heritage Service officials carried out their maintenance of areas of special scientific interest. [78175]

David Cairns: EHS did receive correspondence and representation from a number of sources regarding designation, consenting and protection issues in 2005 although none specifically focused on the practices employed by officials when working towards the maintenance of ASSIs.

Cancer

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people (a) were diagnosed with and (b) died from (i) prostate cancer, (ii) breast cancer, (iii) bowel cancer, (iv) lung cancer, (v) ovarian cancer and (vi) all other cancers in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [78776]

Paul Goggins: Table 1 and 2 detail information on the incidence and deaths due to various cancers in Northern Ireland for the last 10 years for which data were available.

This information has been provided by the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry and is the most up to date currently available.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the mortality rate was for cancer in people under 75 years in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [78777]

Mr. Hanson: The following table gives the malignant neoplasms[1] mortality rate per 1,000 population of persons aged under 75 years in each of the last ten years.

CCTV

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police-monitored CCTV cameras are in operation in Castlereagh District Command Unit. [78741]

Paul Goggins: Aside from the CCTV cameras situated in and around police establishments, there are no other police-monitored CCTV cameras in operation in Castlereagh District Command Unit.

Child Obesity

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children at (a) primary school, (b) high school and (c) other academic institutions in Northern Ireland are deemed to be (i) overweight and (ii) obese; and if he will make a statement. [78502]

Paul Goggins: Information relating to how many children are (i) overweight and (ii) obese in schools and academic institutions is not currently available for all children in Northern Ireland. However such information relating to Primary schools is available for all P1 pupils from the Northern Ireland Child Health Systems. The following table shows the percentage of primary 1 pupils in Northern Ireland, 2003-04, who were overweight or obese.

Northern Ireland 2003-04

Female	19.8	6.9

Further information on the height and weight of children and young people was collected as part of the Northern Ireland Health and Social Well-being Survey and will be available later this year.

The report of the Fit Futures taskforce on tackling obesity in children and young people was published in March 2006. The report included over 70 recommendations designed to deliver the public service agreement target to stop the increase in levels of obesity in children by 2010. Responsibility for this target is shared by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Department of Education and the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure. A response from the Ministerial Group on Public Health to the Fit Futures report, including a comprehensive, cross-departmental implementation plan is currently being developed.

Civil Partnerships

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in local authorities in Northern Ireland have (a) refused and (b) resigned a post based on personal Christian principles following the introduction of the Civil Partnership legislation. [78552]

David Cairns: There have been no instances reported to the General Register Office where staff in local authorities have (a) refused or (b) resigned a post based on personal Christian principles following the introduction of the Civil Partnership legislation.

Contraception

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times in each of the last five years emergency contraception was given to under-age females in each health board in Northern Ireland. [78720]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, information is collected centrally on the number of times females under the age of 16 have obtained emergency contraception through

Health and Social Services Trust family planning services. Information for the last five years is contained in the following table:

	Eastern Board	Northern Board	Southern Board	Western Board
2001-02	147	45	23	13
2002-03	125	46	17	12
2003-04	104	28	23	17
2004-05	87	19	12	19
2005-06	98	35	26	11

Hormonal emergency contraception is also available in accident and emergency units and from G.P. practices. These figures have not been included in the table as (a) figures from accident and emergency units are not collected centrally and (b) figures from G.P. practices are not broken down by age. Emergency contraception is not available over the counter in Northern Ireland for girls under the age of 16.

Cosmetic Surgery

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how cosmetic surgery is regulated in Northern Ireland. [78766]

Paul Goggins: Doctors must be registered with the General Medical Council to practice medicine in the UK, regardless of the area in which they work. Similarly nurses and allied health professionals must be registered with the statutory regulatory body for their professions, i.e. the Nursing and Midwifery Council and the Health Professions Council respectively. Those bodies are responsible for the registration and regulation of their professions.

In addition, independent hospitals and clinics in Northern Ireland providing cosmetic surgery services are regulated under The Independent Health Care Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2005. Under these regulations, independent hospitals and clinics must be registered with the Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority and are subject to regular inspection by the Authority.

Departmental Expenditure

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2006, Official Report, column 1009W, on departmental expenditure, what assessment he has made of the cost effectiveness of advertising commissioned by Northern Ireland Departments, including the Northern Ireland Office. [77216]

Mr. Hanson: A comprehensive review of the procurement and management of government advertising has been undertaken and the final report, published in April 2006, is available in the House of Commons Library. The review considered every area of classified and campaign advertising across all media. The final report makes a series of recommendations aimed at improving value for money and effectiveness. These are now in the process of being implemented and progress against them will be monitored.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 18 May 2006, Official Report, column 1243W, on departmental staff (vetting), what is being done to check information prior to August 2005 to ensure that no foreign nationals working in departments in Northern Ireland, including the Northern Ireland Office, would be disqualified for security reasons. [77215]

Paul Goggins: National security vetting information kept by the security vetting unit in the Northern Ireland Office in respect of the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office was not recorded in a manner that would allow recall of the specific data prior to 1 August 2005. But this has no bearing on the appropriateness of national security vetting clearances given during the preceding four years and is not an indicator that further checks are now necessary.

Diabetes

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland have been refused (a) driving and (b) taxi licences as insulin-dependent diabetics in each of the last 10 years. [78727]

David Cairns: Insulin-dependent diabetes is not a prescribed condition and would not prevent an applicant from being granted a licence for a car or motorbike. It is a prescribed condition in respect of large good vehicles and all passenger carrying vehicles including taxis and prohibits the holding of licences for such vehicles. Information on the number of insulin-dependent diabetes who have been refused a licence is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people aged 16 years and over in Northern Ireland were diagnosed with diabetes in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78785]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available. However, figures are available on the number of registered patients, aged 17 and over, in each GP practice in Northern Ireland as recorded on the practice's Diabetes Register in each of the last two years.

At 14 February each year	Number on Diabetes Register (aged 17 and over)
2005	51,541
2006	54,950

Notes:
1. The figures in the table are a count of all GP registered patients with diabetes at a particular point in time and therefore do not represent just newly diagnosed cases.
2. The diabetes register exists to fulfil requirements for the Quality and Outcomes Framework section of the General Medical Services (GMS) Statement of Financial Entitlement. This has been in operation for 2004-05 and 2005-06 and prevalence are only made on the National Prevalence Day of each financial year.

Independent Monitoring Commission

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1601W, on dissident Republican paramilitaries, (1) whether the eighth report of the Independent Monitoring Commission provided evidence of which he was not already in possession on recruitment activities of dissident Republican groups; [77208]

(2) whether the Independent Monitoring Commission had access to security sources in preparing the eighth report that he has not had. [77209]

Paul Goggins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1601W.

Grammar Schools

Mr. David Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many grammar schools had exclusively A grade pupils in the September 2005 intake. [78982]

Maria Eagle: Only one grammar school in Northern Ireland admitted exclusively Grade A applicants to Year 8 in September 2005. This school was Lumen Christi College, Londonderry.

Elderly Mentally Ill Provision

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many elderly mentally ill (EMI) (a) nursing and (b) residential beds there were in each health trust area in Northern Ireland in each year since 1997; what plans he has to increase the number; and what research has been carried out by his Department into the demand for future EMI provision. [78542]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of (a) nursing and (b) residential places for the elderly mentally ill (EMI) is not available. The Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) does not specify a number of nursing or residential home places dedicated solely to elderly mentally ill. The nature of placements may vary, according to demand.

There are no specific plans to expand the number of EMI residential or nursing home places. In line with the Government's programme of reform and modernisation, the HPSS is required to develop a range of care services in response to its assessment of need. The focus of those services must be upon rehabilitation and supporting independent living. Too many people are placed unnecessarily in residential or nursing homes without the prospect of rehabilitation.

Health and social services boards are responsible for assessing the care needs of their populations. Within that assessment, the future need for EMI residential places is kept under continuous review.

Emergency Doctor Service

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many calls to the out-of-hours emergency doctor service were recorded in each health board in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [78765]

Paul Goggins: Information on calls to out-of-hours services is held by health and social services boards from April 2005. Prior to this, information was held by individual GPs and GP Out-of-Hours Co-operatives and was not collated centrally.

The table shows the number of calls to the out-of-hours service in each health and social services board area for the period April 2005-March 2006. It should be noted that the period covered did not include an Easter period, when it is possible that there was a higher volume of calls than over a normal weekend.

	Number of calls
Eastern Health and Social Services Board	156,000
Western Health and Social Services Board	95,958
Southern Health and Social Services Board	106,532
Northern Health and Social Services Board	122,898

Epilepsy

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland died from epilepsy-related causes in each of the last five years. [78758]

Mr. Hanson: The following table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland for each year between 2001 and 2005 where the primary cause of death was 'epilepsy'[1] or 'status epilepticus'[2].

	Number of deaths due to:
	Epilepsy[1]	Status epilepticus[2]

Fair Employment and Treatment Order

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether an equality impact assessment will be carried out on the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister's proposals to amend the Fair Employment and Treatment Order (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003; and what assessment has been carried out of the effect that these proposals will have on public housing allocation for individuals from each community in Northern Ireland; [76300]

(2) if he will make a statement on the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister's proposals to amend the Fair Employment and Treatment Order (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 to assist the introduction of mixed housing schemes; [76301]

(3) what assessment he has made of the compliance of the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister's proposals to amend the Fair Employment and Treatment Order (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 with the EU Race Directive; [76787]

(4) if he will take steps to ensure that the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister's proposals to amend the Fair Employment and Treatment Order (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 to facilitate mixed housing schemes do not adversely affect steps taken (a) to promote equality of opportunity and (b) to ensure the elimination of community differentials in the allocation of public housing in Northern Ireland. [76789]

Mr. Hanson: The signatories to the Good Friday Agreement rightly recognised that an essential aspect of the reconciliation process is the promotion of a culture of tolerance at every level of society, including initiatives to facilitate and encourage integrated education and mixed housing.

The Government have given a commitment to develop over the next 12 months, through the social housing development programme, two pilot schemes as part of a programme of actions under A Shared Future. The schemes will be promoted as "Housing through Choice" and will be taken forward only where it is practicable, desirable and safe to do so.

In the meantime, the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, having regard to the commitments in the Good Friday Agreement, has signalled that it will engage with the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland and others to consider how best to facilitate mixed housing schemes in the future. That process will include an assessment of the existing legislation, including the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998, to see if it is necessary, and or appropriate, to amend legislation to facilitate the introduction of mixed housing schemes. Any subsequent proposals to amend the legislation will comply with our national and international obligations and will be subject to full equality, human rights and social need considerations.

Flags

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his Department's policy is on flying the EU flag from his Department's buildings. [77666]

Mr. Hain: The flying of flags from Government buildings in Northern Ireland is governed by the Flags (Northern Ireland) Order 2000 and the Flags (Northern Ireland) Regulations 2000. These provide for the European flag to be flown from Government buildings in Northern Ireland on Europe Day (9 May) on buildings with two or more flag poles provided they are flown alongside the Union flag with the Union flag in the superior position.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will ensure the Union Flag is flown on all working days from his Department's buildings. [77667]

Mr. Hain: The flying of flags from Government buildings in Northern Ireland is governed by the Flags (Northern Ireland) Order 2000 and the Flags (Northern Ireland) Regulations 2000. These stipulate that the Union flag shall be flown on 15 specified days from seven designated Government buildings (which are, broadly speaking, the departmental headquarters of Northern Ireland Departments). Other Government buildings (which are defined as buildings which contain a workforce of over 50 per cent. Northern Ireland civil servants) may also fly the Union flag on the specified days. The regulations do not permit the Union flag to be flown from Government buildings on a daily basis.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the bed capacity of the (a) Ulster hospital and (b) Royal Victoria hospital was (i) at the latest date in 2006 for which figures are available and (ii) at the same date in 2005. [78757]

Paul Goggins: Bed capacity at the (i) end of May 2006 and (ii) end of May 2005 for (a) Ulster hospital and (b) Royal Victoria hospital are provided in the following table:

	Bed capacity at:
Hospital	(i) End of May 2006	(ii) End of May 2005
(a) Ulster Hospital	609	636
(b) Royal Victoria Hospital	730	745

Notes:
1. Ulster Hospital figures are at 31 May 2005 to 31 May 2006
2. Royal Victoria Hospital figures are at 27 May 2005 to 26 May 2006

Source:
Ulster Community and Hospitals HSS Trust; Royal Group of Hospitals HSS Trust

The figures presented in the table include both in-patient beds (beds in wards that are open overnight) and beds for use during the day only.

Hospital Treatment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many complaints have been made about the quality of care and treatment in each hospital in Northern Ireland in the last five years. [78761]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not held centrally. Complaints statistics are collated at HSS Trust level only. It will take a number of days before this information can be obtained and collated at hospital level.

I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as the information becomes available and place a copy in the Library.

Knives

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many convictions there have been for illegal possession of a knife in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [76626]

Mr. Hanson: Offences for which statistics are available refer to the possession of an 'offensive weapon' or 'article with blade or point', within which knives are included. While offensive weapons may not solely be knives further detail relating to type of weapon is not recorded in conviction datasets.

The table provides the number of convictions relating to the possession of offensive weapons, for calendar years 1999-2003, the latter being the most up-to-date available.

Number of convictions for possession of offensive weapon offences 1999-2003

Offensive weapon offences	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003[1]
Armed with offensive weapon with intent to commit offence	28	1	[1]1	—	2

Total	156	126	118	160	179

[1] Figures include revisions on previously published statistics.

Note:
Figures are based on principal offence rule.

Litter/Dumping

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many reported incidents of illegal dumping there were along the border with the Republic of Ireland in the last six months. [77366]

David Cairns: The Environmental Crime section of the Environment and Heritage Service investigates all reports of illegal waste activity. Since 1 January 2006, 238 such reports have been received from the seven council areas adjoining the border with the Republic of Ireland, i.e. Armagh, Derry, Dungannon and South Tyrone, Fermanagh, Newry and Mourne, Omagh and Strabane). One offender has already been prosecuted, and there are 106 cases awaiting court hearings.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken against the owners of land upon which illegal dumping has taken place in Northern Ireland. [77367]

David Cairns: The Environment and Heritage Service investigates all reports of illegal waste activity. All significant sites are investigated with a view to prosecution, and over 120 individuals have been successfully prosecuted to date. Most of those convicted were the owners of land on which illegal dumps were situated.

Local Government Reorganisation

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the effect on jobs in the local government sector of the planned reorganisation of local authorities in Northern Ireland. [78541]

David Cairns: It is not possible at this stage to give a reliable estimate of the number of jobs that will be affected in local government as a result of the planned reorganisation of local authorities in Northern Ireland. Final decisions on the structures of new organisations will rest with the councils themselves.

The Human Resources Sub Group of the Local Government Taskforce is currently considering the personnel issues arising from the implementation of the RPA within local government.

Manufacturing

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many manufacturing jobs there were in Northern Ireland in (a) each of the last four years and (b) the last period for which figures are available. [78734]

Maria Eagle: Estimates of the number of employee jobs in manufacturing at Northern Ireland level are available from the Quarterly Employment Survey and the latest figures relate to March 2006. The number of employee jobs in the manufacturing industry in Northern Ireland at March 2006 and in each of the previous four years is shown in the following table.

Employee jobs in manufacturing in Northern Ireland, 2002-06

March of each year	Number
2002	97,740
2003	93,520
2004	89,840
2005	87,430
2006	86,120

Migrant Workers (Attacks)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many attacks on migrant workers have been reported to the Police Service of Northern Ireland in each of the last five years; and how many prosecutions there have been following such attacks, broken down by district command unit. [75423]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available as the Police Service of Northern Ireland do not record attacks on migrant workers specifically. Incidents of this nature are included in the overall statistics for hate crime, which have been recorded since 2004. These statistics are available on the Police Service of Northern Ireland website at:

MOT Tests

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the waiting time for an MOT in Northern Ireland was on the most recent available date. [78722]

David Cairns: The average waiting time for an MOT appointment for the week ending 10 June 2006 was 34 days.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cars were waiting for an MOT in Northern Ireland on the most recent available date. [78723]

David Cairns: There were 66,356 cars awaiting an MOT in the week ending 10 June 2006.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) males and (b) females were convicted of motoring offences in each district command unit in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years for which information is available. [77355]

Mr. Hanson: The table provides the number of males and females convicted of motoring offences in each police district command unit (DCU), for the calendar years 2001-03. It should be noted that the statistics are collated based on the DCU in which an offender's address falls, rather than on the location of the offence. Data beyond 2003 are not yet available.

North Down and Ards Life Education Centre

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funding has been made available by his Department for the work of the North Down and Ards Life Education Centre in each of the past five years; and what plans he has for future funding. [78267]

Paul Goggins: The Comber Drugs Awareness Group (CODAG) has received fixed term funding in respect of the North Down and Ards Life Education Centre from the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety as follows:

Financial Year	Amount (£)
2002-03[1]	20,149
2003-04	40,298
2004-05	43,967
2005-06	45,066
2006-07[2]	23,096
Total	172,576

[1] Figures for 2002-03 represent the six-month period from 1 October 2002 to 31 March 2003 when project commenced.
[2] Figures for 2006-07 represent the six-month period from 1 April 2006 to 30 September 2006 when current funding stream ceases.

This funding was in support of the Drug and Alcohol strategies launched in 1999 and 2000 respectively. These strategies and their associated funding cease on 30 September 2006. On 1 October 2006 the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs 2006-11 (NSD) published on 8 May 2006 will begin its implementation. The local Drug and Alcohol Co-ordination Team (EDACT) has developed local outcomes in support of the NSD covering areas such as education and prevention.

Funding is available in support of the delivery of these local outcomes, and a tendering process is currently under way in respect of this; it will be completed by 28 June 2006 when decisions will have been made and organisations informed.

The South Eastern Education and Library Board provided £9,000 per annum from 2000-01 to 2002-03 and 20,000 per annum from 2003-04 to 2005-06 to assist with the running of the centres.

The South Eastern Education and Library Board is unable to provide funding for the Centres in 2006-07 due to financial constraints.

CODAG has also received funding from the Ards and North Down Community Safety Partnerships. In 2004-05 this was £6,120, with no funding in 2005-06. Indicative allocations for 2006-07 and 2007-08 are £7,000 and £7,200.

Parenting

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Northern Ireland Department has lead responsibility for taking forward the Parenting and Family Support Strategy and Positive Parenting programmes and activities; and which programmes and activities promoting positive parenting are ongoing. [78884]

Paul Goggins: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) has the lead responsibility for taking forward the Family and Parenting Strategy and Positive Parenting programmes and activities.

DHSSPS, in conjunction with the area child protection committees recently published and distributed the 'Safe Parenting Handbook' which provides information and signposting to parents on a range of issues, including positive parenting.

DHSSPS also encourages the ongoing promotion of positive parenting, through Sure Start projects, which offer training and information to parents and workers on alternatives to physical punishment, and through funding to organisations, particularly the Parent's Advice Centre, which develops and runs parenting programmes that promote positive parenting.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Parenting and Family Support Strategy referred to in the consultation on a Draft Strategy for Children and Young People in Northern Ireland is expected to be published. [78885]

Paul Goggins: It is envisaged that the Family and Parenting Strategy will be ready for consultation by summer of this year.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the Department for Education plans to spend on the promotion of positive parenting over the next three years. [78886]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education's earmarked budget for parenting initiatives is currently £250,000 per annum and is allocated entirely to the education and library boards. It is primarily a matter for each board to determine how these earmarked resources should be used.

There are no plans to increase the current level of earmarked funding which the Department of Education makes available to education and library boards for this purpose. However, boards are free to supplement this funding by allocating further resources from within their overall block grant.

Funding has recently been made available to 471 schools from the children and young people funding package for the extended schools programme. This will enable schools to develop, initiatives some of which may involve parents. In addition, a further £10 million has recently issued directly to all schools and it is open to schools to determine whether some of this additional funding should be used to support parenting initiatives.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures his Department has introduced for the promotion of positive parenting in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years; and at what cost in each year. [78887]

Paul Goggins: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS), in conjunction with the area child protection committees recently published and distributed the 'Safe Parenting Handbook' which provides information and signposting to parents on a range of issues, including positive parenting.

DHSSPS is also encouraging the ongoing promotion of positive parenting, through Sure Start projects, which offer training and information to parents and workers on alternatives to physical punishment, and through funding to organisations, particularly the Parent's Advice Centre, which develops and runs parenting programmes that promote positive parenting.

The cost of the 'Safe Parenting Handbook' was £67,570. However, it is not possible to break down the unit cost of each measure undertaken by the aforementioned projects and organisations and, for that reason, the cost of positive parenting could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pharmaceuticals

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland suffered adverse reactions to pharmaceuticals in each of the last five years; and how many died as a result in each year. [78767]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of people who suffered adverse reactions to pharmaceuticals is not available. Information is available on those who were admitted to hospital and had a diagnosis of an adverse reaction to drugs[1].

Table 1 details the number of admissions[2] to hospital with a primary or secondary diagnosis of adverse reactions to drugs[1], for each year between 2000 and 2004 (the latest calendar year for which data is available). It should be noted that any individual could have been admitted to hospital more than once over the course of a year or over a number of years and would therefore be counted more than once in the table.

Police Bodies (Security Incident)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what security checks were carried out in respect of (a) Mr. Desmond Clayton and (b) Mr. Thomas Hale prior to their appointment as staff of the (i) Northern Ireland Police Fund and (ii) Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust. [77634]

Paul Goggins: The appointment of members of staff to the Northern Ireland Police Fund and Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust is a matter for the fund and the trust respectively.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what references were taken up in respect of (a) Mr. Desmond Clayton and (b) Mr. Thomas Hale as part of the appointment process for their employment with (i) the Northern Ireland Police Fund and (ii) the Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust. [77635]

Paul Goggins: Appointment processes in the Northern Ireland Police Fund and Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust are matters for the board of directors of the fund and the trust respectively.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what names of previous employers (a) Mr. Desmond Clayton and (b) Mr. Thomas Hale submitted as part of the appointment process to (i) the Northern Ireland Police Fund and (ii) the Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust. [77636]

Paul Goggins: The appointment of members of staff to the Northern Ireland Police Fund and Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust is a matter for the board of directors of the fund and the trust respectively.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any civil actions have been started by staff in the Northern Ireland Police Fund and Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust. [77637]

Paul Goggins: Civil actions by members of staff in the Northern Ireland Police Fund and Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust are matters for the board of directors of the fund and the trust respectively.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people had their details leaked to parliamentary organisations as a result of the breach of security in (a) the Northern Ireland Police Fund and (b) the Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust. [77638]

Paul Goggins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Under-Secretary, hon. Friend the Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Woodward), on 6 June 2005, Official Report, column 370W, to the hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Mr. Donaldson).

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date Mr. Thomas Hale was detained in connection with terrorist offences. [77639]

Paul Goggins: The operational detail of the investigation is a matter for the Chief Constable.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many official complaints have been made by (a) members of staff and (b) serving and former police personnel and their families about Mr. Colin Ashe's role in the Northern Ireland Police Fund. [77645]

Paul Goggins: The employment of the acting chief executive of the Northern Ireland Police Fund is a matter for the directors of the Fund.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many (a) serving and former officers and family members and (b) members of staff at the Northern Ireland Police Fund were interviewed relating to the possible breach of security in the Northern Ireland Police Fund; [77646]

(2) how many (a) serving and former officers and family members and (b) members of staff in the Northern Ireland Police Fund were asked if they would be willing to give evidence in any prosecutions stemming from a breach of security in the Northern Ireland Police Fund; and how many (i) refused and (ii) initially agreed but later withdrew their statement. [77647]

Paul Goggins: A full investigation has been carried out in relation to alleged breaches of security within the Northern Ireland Police Fund. This investigation has now been completed and involved a comprehensive programme of interviews. No persons have been prosecuted as a result of this investigation. It would not be appropriate to comment on the operational detail of the investigation as such issues are a matter for the Chief Constable.

Police

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many temporary advances issued to police officers in Northern Ireland (a) attending courses outside Northern Ireland and (b) performing operational duty outside Northern Ireland are outstanding; and what is the total cost. [77312]

Paul Goggins: It is not PSNI practice to provide advances of pay, and both police and civilian pay branches have confirmed that they currently have no outstanding temporary advances of pay.

In terms of other advances, PSNI currently have 311 advances with a total value of almost £84,000. It would require a manual search of files at disproportionate cost to determine the details of each advance.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many police officers in Northern Ireland have been retired on medical grounds in each of the last five years. [77094]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is provided in the table.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was received through payment of prescription charges in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [78746]

Paul Goggins: Income from prescription charges comes from over the counter payments at point of dispensing and the purchase of prepayment certificates. The following table presents this information.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost was of prescription charge exemption in each health board in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [78768]

Paul Goggins: The information requested cannot be answered strictly in the format requested because the information is not routinely collected in that form. However, it has been estimated that, at Northern Ireland level, 89 per cent. of prescription items are dispensed annually free of charge. The following table shows the associated estimated cost of not collecting the prescription charge on these items. This estimate is only available from 1997-98, is produced at a regional level and cannot be broken down by health board.

Prisoners

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications made by prisoners for home leave were (a) accepted and (b) rejected in each of the last five years. [77360]

Paul Goggins: The table shows the total number of home leave applications, further broken down to show the number of applications accepted, rejected and cancelled for the years 2004-05, 2005-06 and 2006-07 to date. The great majority were in respect of prisoners completing their sentences at Magilligan prison.

Information for the years 2001-02 and 2002-03 plus the cancelled and rejected breakdown for 2003-04 is not readily available. I regret that to provide this would incur disproportionate costs.

	Number of applications	Accepted (approved)	Rejected or withdrawn
2003-04	2,947	2,030	917
2004-05	2,531	1,817	714

The information sought for the previous years is not available without incurring disproportionate costs.

2004-05	4	13
2005-06	11	12
2006-07 (to date)	2	6

The great majority of these prisoners have been returned to prison—only two prisoners remain unlawfully at large following periods of pre-release home leave and two following release by courts on compassionate bail.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners have escaped from accompanying prison staff while released on compassionate leave in each of the last five years. [77221]

Paul Goggins: Three prisoners have absconded from accompanying staff while released on compassionate leave over the last five years as shown.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much compensation has been paid out to prisoners in Northern Ireland following (a) accidental injury and (b) a successful claim of assault by a member of staff. [77092]

Paul Goggins: The following table indicates compensation paid to prisoners due to (a) accidental injury and (b) successful claim of assault by a member of staff.

Note:
Social security agency payments for reimbursement of benefits in relation to alleged injuries are not included.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many mandatory drug tests were carried out in prisons in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many were (a) positive and (b) negative in each year. [77358]

Paul Goggins: The Northern Ireland Prison Service does not currently have a programme of mandatory drug testing, although its planned to make the necessary changes to the prison rules later this year. In the meantime there is extensive drug testing of prisoners, on a voluntary basis, mainly as part of the Progressive Regime and Earned Privileges Scheme.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average cost of housing a prisoner was over the last financial year in prison in Northern Ireland. [77362]

Paul Goggins: The latest published cost per prisoner place figures relate to the 2004-05 financial year, when they totalled £85,935.

The NI Prison Service publishes the average cost per prisoner place in its annual report and accounts. The 2005-06 annual report and accounts will be laid before Parliament in July.

Procurement

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) when the Department of Education will confirm the procurement route for capital projects announced on 1 March 2006; [74342]

(2) which schools in Northern Ireland he expects to be built using private finance initiative arrangements; and what progress has been made on each site since the announcement was made. [76403]

Maria Eagle: The procurement routes for the schools announced for capital funding on 1 March 2006 are being announced today. None of these schools will be built using the private finance initiative. Confirmation of the procurement routes will enable planning of the schools to proceed.

Public Sector Staff

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) party affiliation, (b) sex and (c) religion is of each member of each associated public body in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [78550]

Mr. Hanson: Individuals appointed to the boards of non-departmental public bodies in Northern Ireland are not required to declare their party affiliation or religion, however, they are asked to indicate their gender and declare their community background and if they have undertaken any significant political activity in the five years prior to the date of their application. In addition, they are asked to provide details of their age, disability and ethnicity.

Appointments are made solely on merit. Political activity, gender, community background and other personal details are recorded for monitoring purposes only and play no part in the selection process.

Disclosure of information on community background by reference to each public body in Northern Ireland would contravene the data protection principles set out in the Data Protection Act 1998.

An overview of the political activity, gender and community background of both applicants and appointees to bodies sponsored by Northern Ireland's 11 Government Departments, as well as details of their age, disability and ethnicity can be found in the Public Appointments Annual Report. Similar information in respect of NIO sponsored bodies is included in the NIO Departmental Report. Copies of the latest versions of both these reports are available from the Library of the House and can be found on the Internet at www.ofmdfmni.gov.uk/public-appointments and www.nio.gov.uk/nio_departmental_report_2006.pdf respectively.

Racially Motivated Crime

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what change there was in the incidence of racially motivated crime in each Police Command Unit in Northern Ireland between 2003 and 2005. [76320]

Paul Goggins: During 2004-05, the Police Service of Northern Ireland established a baseline measure of crimes with a racial motivation and these figures together with those for 2005-06 are contained in the table.

Residential Care

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes there have been in the number of beds for elderly people in residential homes in Northern Ireland between May 1998 and the latest available date. [78759]

Paul Goggins: Information on the number of beds for elderly people in residential homes is available as at 31 March each year, and figures are shown in the following table for the years 1998-2005. The table also shows the annual change in the numbers of beds and the change between 1998 and 2005.

Road Programmes

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are for major road improvements on the coastal route of the Lower Ards Peninsula at Ballywalter and Portavogie in 2006-07. [78564]

David Cairns: The Acting Chief Executive of Roads Service (Mr. Geoff Allister) has been asked to write to the hon. Lady in response to this question.

Letter from Mr. Geoff Allister, dated 21 June 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a parliamentary question regarding what plans there are for major road improvements on the coastal route of the Lower Ards Peninsula at Ballywalter and Portavogie in 2006-07.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Acting Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

The A2 coast road between Ballywalter and Portavogie is inspected regularly in accordance with Roads Service's inspection and repair procedures. The road is considered to be in a generally good condition, although the section between Ballywalter and Ballyhalbert, which is just under 5km in length, is subject to flooding at some locations during periods of heavy rainfall. Roads Service intends to commence drainage improvement works on this section during 2006-07, however, given the overall length of this section of road, it is likely that this work will continue over the next few years, with a longer-term aim to resurface the road. I would add that all proposed works will of course be subject to the availability of funding and other pressures.

The section of the route between Ballyhalbert and Portavogie was resurfaced and had new drainage installed approximately 6 years ago and there are no proposals to carry out major improvement works in 2006-07.

Road Safety

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pedestrians have been killed using properly designated crossings in Northern Ireland in the last three years, broken down by Westminster constituency. [77337]

Paul Goggins: The PSNI do not record statistics by Westminster constituency and to provide the information in that format could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. However, the number of pedestrians killed using properly designated crossings during the last three years, by each District Command Unit, is shown in the table.

Number of pedestrian fatalities by pedestrian crossing and DCU, 2003-05

Crossing on pedestrian crossing	2003	2004	2005	2003-05
Armagh	0	1	0	1
North Belfast	1	0	0	1
West Belfast	1	0	0	1
Fermanagh	1	0	0	1
Total	3	1	0	4

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the frequency is of (a) recalibration and (b) other maintenance for static speed detection devices in Northern Ireland; and who undertakes this work. [77378]

Paul Goggins: Static speed cameras are calibrated on an annual basis or more often as required following repair or upgrading work, which is carried out as and when required. All calibration, repair and maintenance works are carried out by Redspeed International, who are based in Kidderminster.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of speed cameras on main roads in Northern Ireland in reducing the incidence of speeding. [77380]

Paul Goggins: The provision of safety cameras on Northern Ireland roads accounts for only one of the many strands of road safety initiatives conducted by both police and other statutory agencies.

While police activity is concentrated upon enforcement, they also engage with the public to educate and inform, and also liaise with the Department for Regional Development to ensure that the road infrastructure in Northern Ireland is as safe as possible.

In the last five years, there has been a downward trend in the numbers of injury collisions from 8,388 in 2000, to a total of 4,947 in 2005. As approximately 44 per cent. of the injuries received are directly attributable to collisions in which excess speed is the major causation factor, targeting excess speed remains a priority for the PSNI.

Initial findings into the evaluation of the effectiveness of the fixed site safety cameras shows that in the two years immediately preceding the launch of the Safety Camera Scheme, there were 11 killed and seriously injured (KSI) collisions at the locations of the four fixed site safety cameras. In the two years post-launch, this number had fallen to six KSI collisions at the same sites.

Further evaluation into the effectiveness of fixed and mobile safety camera operation at sites throughout Northern Ireland is being carried out by the PSNI and the findings will be included in a report that will be made available in due course on the PSNI website.

School Buildings

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland further to the answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, columns 2596-98W, on school buildings, what progress has been made in relation to the commencement of building work for the new (a) Foyle and Londonderry college and (b) Ebrington primary school. [74277]

Maria Eagle: A comprehensive redevelopment master plan for the former military lands at Clooney will be published by the Department for Social Development. The master plan involved public consultation and liaison with key stakeholders, including Foyle and Londonderry college and Ebrington primary school. The procurement routes for the schools announced for capital funding in March are being announced today and this will enable planning of new schools for Foyle and Londonderry college and Ebrington primary school to go forward.

School Violence

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many school children in Northern Ireland have been suspended for (a) attacks on teachers and (b) bullying other school children in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [78518]

Maria Eagle: From the 2002-03 school year, statistics on the reasons for suspension have been gathered annually from each education and library board and relate to the number of individual suspensions not to the number of pupils suspended.

The following table details the number of suspensions for physical attacks on staff and bullying of other school children in the 2002-03 to 2004-05 school years:

Reason for suspension	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
Physical attacks on staff	365	320	262
Bullying other school children	289	341	322

Seatbelts

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advice he has provided to education and library boards in Northern Ireland regarding the wearing of seatbelts on school buses. [74319]

Maria Eagle: European Union legislation requires that all new non-urban buses (such as those in education and library board fleets) must be fitted with seatbelts as standard. Boards have, since 2000, been purchasing all new vehicles fully fitted with seatbelts. At present 65 per cent. of all board fleet vehicles have seat belts fitted. That figure should rise to 70 per cent. of the fleet once the latest order for new buses has been met. In addition, all new vehicles purchased by the boards have a recorded safety announcement fitted as standard, which reminds pupils of the need to wear their seatbelts.

When hiring private operator vehicles, boards also endeavour to ensure that they are fitted with seat belts. All taxi operator services, including black taxis, must have seatbelts fitted to be eligible to provide home to school transport services.

Finally, parents and pupils are advised of the requirement to wear seatbelts in the Safe School Travel booklet, produced jointly by boards and Translink. This booklet clearly indicates that seatbelts, when provided, must be worn at all times whether the pupil travels by bus or taxi.

Smoking Restrictions

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what preparations his Department is making for the introduction of the restrictions on smoking in public places in Northern Ireland. [78117]

Paul Goggins: Preliminary discussions with a range of agencies have taken place to assess the implications of smoke-free legislation, which is scheduled to be introduced in April 2007. Once the draft Smoking (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 has completed its legislative process, further discussions will take place and guidance will be issued to employers, enforcement officers and the general public.

Special Advisers

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2006, Official Report, column 1776W, on special advisers, how much of the spending on travelling expenses was for air travel. [77212]

Mr. Hain: Pursuant to the answer of 24 May 2006, Official Report, column 1776W, of the £42,536.18 spent on travelling expenses for special advisers, £28,662.61 was spent on air travel in the financial year 2005-06.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent (a) on travel and subsistence and (b) on air travel for special advisers in the Northern Ireland Office in each of the last five years. [77213]

Mr. Hain: The information requested by the hon. Member is not readily available for all of the five years. Prior to financial year 2005-06, payments in respect of special advisers in the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) were not separated out from civil servants. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In 2005-06, the NIO restructured the ministerial expenditure codes in order to separately identify Ministers', ministerial support staff and special advisor costs.

The amount spent in 2005-06 on special advisers' travel and subsistence was £44,177.41, of which £28,662.61 relates to air travel.

Special Needs Children

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the ratio is of care attendants to special needs children in each Education and Library Board area. [78562]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sure Start

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland where funding for the Sure Start initiative in Northern Ireland is being targeted; which groups have received funding; and how much each has received. [78549]

Paul Goggins: The information is as follows.

1. There are currently 25 Sure Start programmes across Northern Ireland. The programmes are targeted in areas of need and cover a wide geographic spread with a good urban/rural mix.

2. The following table outlines each of the groups funding position in 2005-06.

3. There will be an expansion of Sure Start under the Children and Young People's package as announced by the Secretary of State on 7 March 2006. The expansion will target areas within the 20 per cent. most disadvantaged wards in Northern Ireland. The precise details of groups and associated funding for the expansion are to be agreed.

Teacher Training

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many teacher training places were available in each of the last 10 years; how many people entered training in each year; and how many qualified. [78764]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education determines the number of students to be admitted each year to initial teacher education (ITE) courses in Northern Ireland. This is achieved by means of the teacher demand model—a statistical exercise which takes account of a number of factors, including: projected pupil enrolments in the various sectors; teacher wastage rates; and, pupil teacher ratios. The end product provides a projection of teacher vacancies and the consequent requirements for intakes into ITE courses.

Data on students enrolled and gaining qualifications from Northern Ireland Higher Education Institutions have been obtained from the Higher Education Statistics Agency. Data for the 2005-06 academic year will not be available until early 2007, the latest available data refer to 2004-05.

The approved intakes, first year enrolments and the numbers qualifying from the four locally established Higher Education Institutions are as follows:

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost of compensation paid to (a) industrial, (b) commercial and (c) residential premises as a result of terrorist attacks by (i) Republican paramilitary groups and (ii) Loyalist paramilitary groups in Northern Ireland was in each of the last 30 years. [78968]

Mr. Hain: The Compensation Agency cannot provide information about the cost of compensation stemming specifically from terrorist attacks as there is often no way of ascertaining the motives of an individual or group who have damaged property unless a prosecution follows. Additionally where the perpetrator is unknown, or where no prosecution has taken place, the agency could only speculate about potential motive. Therefore any figures provided would be very unreliable.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the total cost of compensation paid to individuals as a result of injury through terrorist attack by (a) Republican paramilitary groups and (b) Loyalist paramilitary groups was in Northern Ireland in each of the last 30 years. [78969]

Mr. Hain: The Compensation Agency cannot provide information about the cost of compensation stemming specifically from terrorist attacks as there is often no way of ascertaining the motives of a victim's assailants unless a prosecution follows. In many cases where the assailant(s) are unknown, or where no prosecution has taken place, the agency could only speculate about the perpetrator's motives and consequently figures provided on that basis would be very unreliable.

Truancy

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils truanted for at least one day from secondary school in each education board in Northern Ireland in each academic year since 2001. [78745]

Maria Eagle: The Department of Education does not collect the requested information. However, information about referrals of pupils to the Education Welfare Service is collected from each of the Education and Library Boards on an annual basis. Referrals can be for a variety of reasons, including truancy.

The following table shows the number of pupils in secondary level schools referred to the Education Welfare Service (EWS) in Northern Ireland for school years 2000-01 to 2004-05:

Number of pupils in secondary level schools referred to EWS

Vandalism

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much vandalism has cost the Department of Regional Development over the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [78504]

David Cairns: The information is not held centrally.

Vehicle Registration

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer to question 73861, whether a valid vehicle inspector's certificate issued by the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency of Northern Ireland in respect of a car registered in the UK covers the use of that car on roads in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) England, Wales and Scotland. [78115]

David Cairns: A vehicle inspection certificate issued by the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency in Northern Ireland is valid for use anywhere in the United Kingdom.

Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the current average waiting time is for each category of vehicle test and driving test carried out for the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency; what the Agency's performance target is for each category of test; and if he will make a statement. [76456]

David Cairns: Waiting times are only measured against an overall target for vehicle tests and driving tests carried out by the Driver and Vehicle Testing Agency. The current average waiting time for all categories of vehicle test is 37 days and for all categories of driving test, 38 days. The target average waiting times are 21 days and 23 days respectively.

Visually Impaired People

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assistance is offered to visually impaired people in Northern Ireland to ensure their access to services available to them. [78118]

Paul Goggins: Health and social services provide a wide range of services to visually impaired people including: full needs assessments; low vision clinics; rehabilitation workers; a range of equipment; community development workers and a number of services are provided through partnership with the voluntary sector.

Accessibility to health and social care provision has been improved through disability awareness training and adaptations to premises.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland are waiting for a heart bypass operation. [78762]

Paul Goggins: At 31 May 2006, there were 152 people waiting for a heart bypass operation in Northern Ireland.

Waste Management

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to use incineration in waste management policy in Northern Ireland. [30765]

David Cairns: There are no plans for an incineration policy in Northern Ireland. In June 2005 The Department of the Environment published guidelines on the 'Best Practicable Environmental Option' for the development of facilities to recover, treat and dispose of waste materials. 'Waste to Energy' options for up to 12 per cent. of municipal solid waste and 17 per cent. of commercial and industrial wastes by 2013 were included. However, the choice of facilities will be left to the discretion of the three district council waste management partnerships—arc21, the South West Management Partnership and the North West Region Waste Management Group.

Their statutory plans are currently under review and will take account of the new Waste Management Strategy, 'Towards Resource Management', which was published in March 2006. The Strategy states that Government continues in its firm belief that energy from waste will be a necessary component of the preferred infrastructure, both in terms of its policies on renewable energy and to ensure that Northern Ireland meets its landfill diversion targets.

Water Pollution

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been prosecuted for polluting Northern Ireland waterways in each of the last five years. [77305]

David Cairns: The number of prosecutions for water pollution offences which occurred during each of the years 2001-05 are as follows.

Because it can take over a year for a case to come to court, a number of prosecution cases from 2005 and some from 2004 are still pending a verdict in court. These pending prosecutions are included in the figures provided.

Year in which pollution offence occurred	Number of prosecutions
2001	109
2002	101
2003	123
2004	[1]65
2005	[2]42

[1] Plus 15 cases pending
[2] Plus 28 cases pending

It should be noted that, between 1996 and 2005, there was a reduction in the number of water pollution incidents from 2,055 to 1,175, a reduction of some 43 per cent.

Water Poverty

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the impact on those defined in Northern Ireland as water poor as measured by the percentage of income spent on water of changes in charges for water over the period 2009-10; and what his estimate is of the change in the percentage of the population paying more than 3 per cent. of their income on water charges in each year of that period. [78928]

David Cairns: Government have recognised that the introduction of water and sewerage charges in Northern Ireland will have an impact on low-income households. To ease the transition, and in recognition of the relatively high levels of poverty and disadvantage in Northern Ireland, the Government's broad objective is to ensure that low-income households, particularly pensioner households, should not need to spend more than 3 per cent. of their income on water and sewerage services.

To achieve this objective, a special affordability tariff has been developed for those households who are entitled to certain social security benefits (housing benefit or rate rebate) or equivalent provision for "relevant children" as defined in the Children (Leaving Care) Act NI 2002, or the new Special Rate Relief Scheme being developed within the context of the reform of rates policy in Northern Ireland. The affordability tariff is a capped tariff which has been calculated by reference to the single person's pension credit guarantee, which is updated by Parliament each year. In 2007-08 this means there will be a maximum water and sewerage bill, for properties valued at £100,000 of approx £180 (which is 3 per cent. of the estimated pension credit guarantee in that year—around £6,000) with additional protection in the form of lower levels of capped charges set for those with properties valued at less than £100,000.

Those occupying property valued at less than £70,000 will pay 50 per cent. of the full affordability tariff, while those in property valued between £70,000 and £100,000 will pay 75 per cent. of the tariff. As the charges will be phased in over three years this will mean that the maximum bill for eligible low-income customers in 2007-08 will be £30, £45 or £60, linked to the value of the property, rising to around £95, £145 and £190 in 2009-10, depending on the pension credit guarantee income level at that time.

The affordability tariff for 2009-10 will be calculated on the basis of the uprated level of the single person pension credit guarantee income level thus continuing to ensure that eligible households will pay no more than 3 per cent. of their income on water and sewerage charges. Many households will pay significantly less.

Data linking individual properties to household income are not available. It is therefore not possible to determine precisely the proportion of the population whose water bill will represent any given percentage of their household income. However it is estimated that around 200,000, close to 30 per cent. of all households will benefit from the affordability tariff and that this number will not change significantly each year. The implementation of the affordability tariff will be closely monitored and reviewed when charges are fully phased in by 2009-10 and the Department will collate all relevant data to assess the scheme against income levels at that time.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Autism

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if he will consider introducing compulsory training for teachers in autism. [79323]

Jim Knight: In order to be awarded Qualified Teacher Status, all trainee teachers must demonstrate that they understand their responsibilities under the statutory Special Educational Needs Code of Practice, know how to seek advice from specialists on less common types of SEN, can differentiate their teaching to meet the needs of pupils, including those with SEN, and can identify and support pupils who experience behavioural, emotional and social difficulties.

The current standards for teachers are under review. Once revised, it is proposed that they will be strengthened to include a standard which requires teachers to know and comply with current legislation on well being of children and young people, one which requires teachers to know and understand the role of others when dealing with children who have special needs and/or disabilities, and one which requires teachers to communicate effectively with parents and carers.

Induction standards require newly qualified teachers to demonstrate that they can plan effectively to meet the needs of pupils in their classes with SEN, with or without a statement, and in consultation with the SEN co-ordinator (SENCO), can contribute to the planning for individual needs.

Once qualified, all teachers are expected to identify their development needs through performance management arrangements, and to address identified needs by undertaking appropriate professional development. This could include strengthening knowledge of autism.

All schools receive a school development grant which they are able to use to support improvements in any aspect of teaching and learning. Local authorities may retain a proportion of this grant, under certain conditions, to provide specific training and development of SEN.

In 2002 we published jointly with the Department of Health, Autistic Spectrum Disorders Good Practice guidance which offered a series of pointers to good practice aimed at schools and SENCOs.

The Department's published SEN Strategy, 'Removing Barriers to Achievement' recognised the importance of training and committed us to work closely with the Training and Development Agency for Schools to ensure that initial teacher training and programmes of continuing professional development provide a good grounding in core skills and knowledge of SEN. We have commissioned the TDA to carry forward a range of initiatives designed to improve and strengthen the SEN skills and confidence of trainees, newly qualified and established teachers. These initiatives will be implemented over the period 2005-08 at a cost of approximately £1.1 million.

Children's Centres

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when the guidance on the governance of children's centres will be published. [78511]

Beverley Hughes: We aim to issue a consultative paper on governance, management and leadership of children's centres and extended schools this summer. We will be seeking views from key stakeholders and interests in order to inform the final guidance which will be published later in the year.

Children's Services

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which off-school site centres deal with children with (a) emotional, behavioural and other difficulties and (b) excluded children; and which schools and areas each serves. [78606]

Jim Knight: There are 290 maintained special schools recorded on the Department's database of educational institutions which cater specifically or primarily for children with behavioural, emotional, and social difficulties (BESD). Also, although we do not have suitable data on any specific needs addressed by each pupil referral unit (PRU), many cater for pupils with a mixture of needs, including those with BESD and those who have been excluded from mainstream schools.

A list of BESD maintained special schools and a list of PRUs have been placed in the House Libraries.

Connexions

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many young people have signed up to the Connexions card scheme in (a) Lewisham, Deptford constituency and (b) Lewisham borough. [79153]

Beverley Hughes: There are 71 young people who hold Connexions cards in Lewisham, Deptford constituency and 4,086 in Lewisham borough.

Education Act 1996 (Prosecutions)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many prosecutions were brought under section 7 of the Education Act 1996 in each year between 2001 and 2003. [79214]

Jim Knight: Home Office data for the period 2001-03 show:

In 2001, there were 6,622 prosecutions in England and Wales under the Education Act 1996. These include:

2,243 prosecutions for truancy under section 444(1);

4,379 prosecutions for various offences under the Education Act. These are likely to include some prosecutions under sections 444(1) and (1A).

In 2002, there were 7,075 prosecutions in England and Wales under the Education Act 1996. These include:

3,445 prosecutions for truancy under section 444(1);

3,625 prosecutions for various offences under the Education Act. These are likely to include some prosecutions under sections 444(1) and (1A);

four prosecutions for child employment offences;

one prosecution for neglecting the cleanliness of a pupil.

In 2003, there were 7,264 prosecutions in England and Wales under the Education Act 1996. These include:

3,732 prosecutions for truancy under section 444(1);

387 prosecutions for truancy under section 444 (1A) (the aggravated offence);

3,142 prosecutions for various offences under the Education Act. These are likely to include some prosecutions under sections 444(1) and (1A); three prosecutions for child employment offences.

Prosecutions for truancy related to section 7 are brought under section 444 of the Education Act 1996.

Financial Education

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what aspects of personal financial education are included in the compulsory elements of the national curriculum for 11 to 16 year olds. [78796]

Jim Knight [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The Government recognises the importance of personal finance education for all young people. The National Curriculum for Citizenship, which is compulsory at key stages 3 and 4 (11 to 16 year olds), includes teaching pupils about how the economy functions, including the role of business and financial services. Pupils are also taught about how public services are financed. In addition, the DfES has asked the QCA, as part of the wider review of GCSE maths and the emphasis on improving functional skills, to consider including financial capability more explicitly in the maths curriculum. In September 2004 we made work-related learning a statutory element of the curriculum, and from September 2005 are funding schools to develop a new focus on enterprise education, defined as enterprise capability supported by better financial capability and economic and business understanding.

Horticultural Courses

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what Government (a) funding has been made available and (b) initiatives have been undertaken for (i) in-service and (ii) full-time funding for horticultural courses for 16 to 18-year-olds since 1997. [76937]

Jim Knight: Full data for the funding made available for horticulture for 16 to 18-year-olds are available for 2004/05 only. In that year the Learning and Skills Council, which provides Government funding for 16-18 education spent £225,000 on horticulture courses through further education provision and £2,425,000 through work-based learning provision, including apprenticeships—a total of £2,650,000. This figure cannot be broken down into full-time and in-service figures. Other land-based and environmental provision, which may include aspects of horticulture has also been funded by the LSC.

The Government have also invested £1.4 million since 2001 in the Growing Schools initiative, which encourages all schools to provide learning activities which enable pupils to gain knowledge and understanding about the outdoor environment through first-hand experience of growing, farming and the countryside—within and beyond the school. The expenditure on this cannot be broken down to show 16 to 18-year-olds separately.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much the Learning and Skills Council spent on consultants in each year since 2003; and how many were hired in each year. [68606]

Bill Rammell: I have overall responsibility for the Learning and Skills Council (LSC). However the operations of the LSC are managed and overseen by Mark Haysom, the LSC's Chief Executive. Details of the number of consultants and the amount spent on them are a matter for the LSC and Mark Haysom has written to the hon. Member with further information and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 20 June 2006:

Further to your question to the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on the above subject and my subsequent response, I am pleased to be able to write to you with further details.

The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) has not previously distinguished, in its accounts, between expenditure with bodies providing consultancy services to the LSC and expenditure with bodies providing professional services as part of the planning and delivery of post 16 learning funded by the LSC. I have set in place measures to maintain this analysis.

The short delay in responding to your query was caused by the need to analyse expenditure between consultants and services.

The LSC's expenditure on management consultancy was £9.4 million, £6.7 million and £3.8 million in the financial years[1] 2003-04, 2004-05 and 2005-06 respectively.

The LSC does not maintain records of the number of consultants employed to provide the associated activities. The internal management of bodies providing consultancy services to the LSC, or funded by the LSC for the benefit of stakeholders/ learners, is a matter for the consultancy provider. The LSC does not, in normal circumstances, review the allocation of external organisations' resources, unless there is a demonstrable risk to the quality of service being delivered.

I trust you will find this information useful.

[1] The Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) financial year covers the period 1 April to 31 March.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the secondary school pupil to teacher ratio was in (a) England and (b) the East Riding of Yorkshire in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [78994]

Jim Knight: The available information is given in the following table.

RAISEonline

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what consultation his Department has conducted with school governors regarding the replacement of performance and assessment reports with RAISEonline; and what assessment he has made of the likely effect on governors of the change. [78643]

Jim Knight: The main purposes of the RAISEonline system being developed jointly by my Department and Ofsted are to assist in school self evaluation, to provide the data to underpin school improvement and to inform the school inspection process. Consultations so far, involving around 750 schools, have concentrated on the presentation, data management and training aspects of the system.

RAISEonline will be available to all schools on a trial basis in July, but will not be used to inform inspections until the 2006 data are available in the autumn. During that period we will be consulting national governor organisations on the information which will be available in the system and the ways in which information can be shared with them by head teachers. Ofsted encourages heads to share their performance and assessment (PANDA) report with their governors. RAISEonline will include a full report similar to the PANDA which will be easy to print off and distribute to governors.

School Administration

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many tasks identified by the Making a Difference-Red Tape and Bureaucracy In Schools Second Report have been removed; [78571]

(2) whether he plans to publish a further report pursuant to Making a Difference-Red Tape and Bureaucracy in Schools 2003, which reviews the impact of initiatives introduced since this publication. [78579]

Jim Knight [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The DfES Simplification Plan that will be published later in the year will detail reductions in bureaucracy and administrative burdens that are referred to in this report, some of which have been superseded. The Simplification Plan will detail policies for reducing burdens on 'front line' staff working in the area of education and training across all sectors: public, voluntary, businesses and charities. In schools, our intention is that the Simplification Plan will cover reduced communications from the centre; the New Relationships with Schools programme; funding rationalisation; simplified inspection; less data requests and simplification arising from the Education Act.

As a Department, we remain determined to make sure our policies have the maximum impact on standards with the minimum burden on schools. That is why we set up the Implementation Review Unit in April 2003 to review the implementation of existing and new policy initiatives, covering all organisations that impact on schools in England. The panel provides feedback on policy implementation, challenges existing systems, and is a sounding board on innovation.

The Department is also developing the New Relationship with Schools. This has led to a new framework for school inspection and introduced School Improvement Partners to work with headteachers to raise standards and attainment. We have also developed a data protocol with many external partners, to ensure that only essential data is collected, that they are collected by sample wherever possible and that they are collected only once and then used many times.

School Budgets

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total schools budget is of each local authority for 2005-06; and what proportion is delegated to schools in each authority. [78617]

Jim Knight: The information requested is not yet available. The Department is due to collect the section 52 Outturn data relating to the 2005-06 financial year from August 2006.

Schoolchildren

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children there are in mainstream schools in (a) England, (b) the North East, (c) the Tees Valley and (d) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency. [79324]

Jim Knight: The requested information is given in the table.

Schooling (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of secondary school aged children who normally reside in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) Peterborough city council area were educated outside the state sector in each year since 1997. [77916]

Jim Knight: We are unable to provide residency based figures for children educated outside of the state sector as the Department does not collect this type of information for independent schools or home educated children.

The numbers of secondary age[1] pupils attending independent schools[2] in Peterborough has been provided in the following table.

	Peterborough parliamentary constituency	Peterborough local authority

Schools

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many small schools in England were amalgamated in the last three years for which figures are available. [78880]

Jim Knight: We have been informed that 238 small primary schools, and 10 small secondary schools, have been amalgamated since January 2003. Amalgamation means either the closure of two or more schools and the establishment of one new school; or the closure of one school and the expansion of another to accommodate displaced pupils. The Department regards a small primary school as a school that has 200 pupils or less and a small secondary school as one that has 600 pupils or less.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when he expects head teachers to receive the direct payments to their schools announced in the 2006 Budget. [78501]

Jim Knight: Additional funding for schools of £220 million in 2006-07, rising to £365 million in 2007-08, was announced in the 2006 Budget, to support personalised learning at key stages 1-4. The funding will be paid to schools in September as an addition to their Schools Standards Grant. An interactive calculator is available on the Teachernet website to enable schools to calculate their share of this new grant.

Student Finance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many individuals had been in arrears for (a) less than one month, (b) less than three months, (c) less than six months and (d) more than six months to the Student Loans Company at the end of each financial year from 1997-98 to 2005-06; and if he will make a statement. [75319]

Bill Rammell: There are two loan schemes for higher education students. Income-contingent loans were introduced in 1998: prior to that support was delivered through the mortgage-style loan scheme.

Most income-contingent loan repayments are collected by employers through the tax system and current policy ensures that deductions keep pace with earnings so borrowers do not become overdue on their accounts.

There are currently 592,500 borrowers with publicly-owned mortgage style loans issued before 1998. The following table shows UK borrowers by length of arrears[1] at the end of financial years 2004-05 and 2005-06.

	Financial year
	2004-05	2005-06
In arrears, no repayment schedule[1]	52,900	59,900
Less than one month in arrears	2,600	2,200
From one month to less than three months in arrears	6,600	5,300
From three months to less than six months in arrears	4,900	3,600
Six months or more in arrears	53,600	43,600

[1] Borrowers in arrears with no repayment schedule include those with a very small balance remaining, and those subject to litigation. In both cases the borrower is required to repay the whole amount outstanding.

[1] Borrowers with loans in more than one category are counted in each relevant category.

This level of detail is not available for earlier years. Note that figures exclude borrowers who are deferring repayment because their income is currently below the repayment threshold, but who have arrears outstanding from the past.

Supply Teachers

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on supply teaching staff in schools in each of the past three years, broken down by (a) region and (b) local education authority. [78563]

[1] The figures are taken from the section 52 outturn data set for 2004-05. Cash term figures are as reported at 15 June and are subject to change by the local authority.

Notes:

1. Includes: (a) salaries and wages for supply teaching staff employed directly by the school who are covering curriculum release, long term absence, sickness absence and training absence; (b) the cost paid to an agency for teaching staff that have been brought in to cover teacher absence, (c) and the cost of insurance premiums for supply staff less any receipts from supply teacher insurance.
2. Includes only expenditure by LA maintained primary, secondary and special schools. Nursery school expenditure was not collected in full until 2004-05. The comparable nursery school figure for England for 2004-05 was £4.3 million. Central local authority expenditure on supply teachers is not recorded separately and is therefore excluded from this table.

Sure Start

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many under-fives entitled to free nursery places on the Sure Start scheme are on waiting lists in (a) Lewisham, Deptford constituency and (b) Lewisham borough. [79164]

Beverley Hughes: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Since April 2004, local authorities have had a statutory duty to secure sufficient nursery education places for all three and four-year-olds whose parents want one. The free nursery education entitlement consists of a minimum of 12. 5 hours per week for 38 weeks of the year and will be extended to 15 hours a week by 2010. By that time, parents who wish to do so will also be able to access the free entitlement flexibly across a minimum of three days.

Provisional national figures show that, in January 2006, almost all four-year-old children benefit from some free provision. The figure for three-year-olds is 96 per cent. The provisional figures for January 2006 were published in Statistical First Release 17/2006 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2006 (provisional)" on 27 April 2006 and are available on my Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/

The available information on the number of free places taken up by three and four-year-olds in Lewisham local authority area is shown in the following table.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Figures

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed in the five (a) most and (b) least deprived wards in England in each of the last 10 years. [73342]

John Reid: Information at ward level is not collected centrally. The lowest level for which the Home Office collects data is for Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership areas.

Drug Offences

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions there have been for drug offences in Peterborough city council area in each of the last five years. [77923]

Mr. Coaker: Drug offenders data cannot be broken down to local authority level. Available information relates to persons found guilty of drug offences at Peterborough's crown and magistrates courts. There were 137 in 2000,156 in 2001,160 in 2002, 220 in 2003 and 147 in 2004. Many offenders convicted in Peterborough courts will not be resident in the area covered by Peterborough city council.

Drug Trafficking

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the amount of heroin trafficked into the United Kingdom in 2005 which came through Scotland. [78865]

Mr. Coaker: We estimate that about 25 to 35 tonnes of heroin enters the UK each year. The bulk is believed to enter through the English Channel ports and is subsequently distributed to all parts of the UK, including Scotland. Small amounts of cocaine are believed to be imported directly into Scotland, but there are no reliable estimates of the amounts.

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of his Department's employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46869]

Joan Ryan: The figures from the centrally managed Home Office and the Agencies, Identity and Passport Service, Public Sector Prison Service Agency, and Criminal Records Bureau are in the following table.

Identity Cards

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that the biometric technology to be used in the proposed identity cards will prevent fraudulent copies being made. [78626]

Joan Ryan: One of the main uses of biometric technology in the National Identity scheme is to make it much easier to detect unauthorised attempts by an individual to register more than one identity with the scheme.

The Government are taking specialist advice with regard to the specification for and implementation of biometric technologies. We are working with leading biometric experts from a number of world-leading institutions in the field, including the US National Institute for Standards and Technology, Cambridge University, San Jose University, the UK National Physical Laboratory and staff from the Communications-Electronic Security Group (CESG, part of GCHQ). This work is further supported by experience gained from colleagues in other schemes internationally, such as those in Hong Kong and the Philippines, as well as those parts of UK Government already using biometric technology, such as the Police Information Technology Organisation and the Immigration and Nationality Directorate.

In addition, there is an assurance process to ensure that advice taken on biometrics is robust and appropriate. Sir David King, the Government Chief Scientist, chairs a Biometric Assurance Group which includes other specialists in the biometric field that reviews such matters in relation to the National Identity scheme. Biometric processes will be supervised as well as supported by other more traditional security procedures. For example, during the enrolment process, biometric checks are supported by checks on public and private databases to verify the information provided by applicants. A number of pieces of key supporting documentation may also be examined for consistency by trained examiners equipped to identify forgery. A fraud investigation unit will exist that will supervise enrolment and work with law enforcement agencies to investigate suspicious activities. It is the combination of both biometric technologies and such more traditional checks that will provide greater assurance of identity than exists today.

A specialist team has been employed to prepare both the security principles and requirements across the National Identity scheme, including biometrics. Their work is being supported by internationally recognised bodies from the fields of national security and law enforcement to technical experts in cryptography and electronic security. In particular, we are working closely with experts from CESG on such issues. This group of experts is highly experienced in dealing with processes and systems that require a high level of security. Security risk assessments have been undertaken on issues such as the physical, logical, procedural, personnel and systems aspects of the National Identity scheme as part of this work and such assessments are updated as the National Identity scheme develops.

Finally, the National Identity Register will need to pass an independent security accreditation process under Cabinet Office guidelines before the National Identity scheme can be launched, thus providing a further layer of independent scrutiny .

Identity Fraud

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many cases of identity fraud using the details of a deceased person were recorded in each of the last five years; [78604]

(2) what percentage of impersonation cases involved the use of identities belonging to deceased people in the last year that figures are available. [78605]

Joan Ryan: The Government takes the problem of identity fraud very seriously and there is a range of criminal offences in place to combat this problem, such as the deception offences in the Theft Act 1968 and 1978. On 7 June 2006 we also brought into force sections 25 and 26 of the Identity Cards Act 2006 which creates new criminal offences of being in possession or control of false identity documents. These offences relate to a wide range of identity documents, including passports, driving licences, ID cards and immigration documents. The maximum penalty is 10 years imprisonment for an offence of possession with intent to use the document for establishing registrable facts (about the individual), and two years imprisonment for possession without reasonable excuse.

The number of criminal offences committed each year using the identity of a deceased person is not recorded centrally. But identity fraud questions have been incorporated into the British Crime Survey and the results should give us more information on the number of victims and the types of fraud that are being committed. In addition, CIFAS, the UK's Fraud Prevention Service for the private sector (mainly financial services companies), has conducted research into the extent of impersonation of deceased person fraud and has estimated that there were approximately 17,500 cases in 2001, 35,000 in 2002, 56,000 in 2003 and 70,000 in 2004. The 2004 figure represents 58 per cent. of the estimated 120,000 incidents of identity and impersonation fraud identified by CIFAS members in 2004.

The Government have been working with the public and private sector to look at ways to reduce impersonation of deceased person fraud. An amendment to the Police and Justice Bill was introduced at Report stage in the House of Commons on 10 May 2006, which will allow Registrars General in England, Wales and Northern Ireland to supply timely death registration information in bulk to the police and other organisations for use in the prevention, detection, investigation and prosecution of offences.

Khalid Rashid

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department further to the answer of 28 March 2006, Official Report, column 908W, on Khalid Rashid, whether an employee of the Government was (a) involved in or (b) present at the removal of Khalid Rashid from South Africa following his arrest on 31 October 2005 in Estcourt, Kwazulu Natal, on immigration grounds; and if he will make a statement. [63882]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 18 April 2006]: It is a matter for the South African authorities.

Knives

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the reasons for the trend in the rate of knife crime among young adults; and what steps are being taken to reduce the incidence of such crime. [78584]

Mr. McNulty: Lemos and Crane's study: "Fear and Fashion: The use of knives and other weapons by young people" which was published in 2004, provided an insight into these issues. The Communities that Care Safer London Youth Survey, published in 2005, includes data on the use of weapons by young people. The Youth Justice Board also commissioned a MORI Youth Survey in July 2004, containing information about young people and the carrying of knives.

On 24 May, we launched a nationwide knife amnesty, the first for 10 years. We are also taking steps to tighten legislation through measures in the Violent Crime Reduction Bill, which will raise the age at which someone can be sold a knife from 16 to 18, introduce a new offence of using someone to mind a weapon, and give head teachers power to search pupils for knives. We are also supporting community work and education programmes which teach young people about the risks and consequences of knife carrying.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many incidents of knife crime were reported in 2005; and how many resulted in conviction; [78863]

(2) what percentage of knife crime in Wales resulted in a conviction in each year since 1996. [78868]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is not collected centrally. Crimes specifically involving the use of a knife cannot be separately identified in the recorded crime statistics or the court proceedings data.

People Trafficking

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many safe-houses there are in the UK for trafficked children who have escaped or are found; and in which cities they are located. [75973]

Mr. Coaker: We are not aware of there being any safe houses specifically for accommodating victims of child trafficking. However, there are accommodation facilities in many locations that will cater for children in need who it is believed may have been trafficked.

Planning for children's services is carried out on a locality basis throughout the UK. It is the statutory duty of local authorities under the 1989 Children Act to ensure that safe arrangements are in place to look after individual children at risk, including children from abroad. It is also the responsibility of the local authority to assess any risk of harm and to arrange for the provision of a suitable range of accommodation for all the children in their area. Any lone child in the UK in contact with any statutory or child welfare agency will be urgently referred to the appropriate local authority.

The Home Office National Asylum Support Service (NASS) reimburses local authorities who receive unaccompanied asylum seeking children (UASC) into their care with a total of £140 million p.a. Partnership plans to provide safer arrangements for children who have been trafficked are being incorporated in a Home Office/DfES joint review of how local authorities accommodate children from abroad. The review will aim to deliver improvements by ensuring UASC are placed in local authority areas where specialist services are in place—including local authority social workers who can recognise and deal appropriately with UASC who may have been trafficked to the UK. The review is also designed to increase specialisation, end inconsistencies in treatment and enable the retention and development of expertise.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many traffickers of children have been (a) charged, (b) convicted and (c) deported in each of the last five years. [75978]

Mr. Coaker: While there is no specific offence of child trafficking, prosecutions involving child victims of human trafficking have been pursued under the Sexual Offences Act 2003.

The most up-to-date information provided to the Home Office by the Crown Prosecution Service, indicates that at least 12 defendants were charged in three separate cases that involved female victims between the ages of 15 and 18. Of these 10 were convicted and received lengthy sentences. All were recommended by the trial judge for deportation on release.

Mr. Vara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money was seized by the Assets Recovery Agency from those offenders charged with crimes relating to human trafficking in each year since its inception. [78975]

Mr. Coaker: The Assets Recovery Agency (ARA) is currently investigating two cases where the alleged criminality relates to human trafficking. In the first investigation ARA have frozen assets to the value of £1.4 million. In the second case the subject is currently serving a prison sentence and the value of any potential assets has yet to be determined. ARA have not recovered money from civil or taxation cases relating to human trafficking to date.

Separately, a multi-agency task force set up to combat organised immigration crime, known as Reflex, seized criminal assets totalling £5.57 million in 2004-05. Figures for 2005-06 are not yet available.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the UN report Trafficking in Persons: Global Patterns; and what steps are being taken by his Department to tackle people trafficking. [70020]

Mr. Coaker: The UN report Trafficking in Persons: Global Patterns, is an informative fact based report on the process of human trafficking from source and transit countries with the aim of providing an unbiased picture of the global extent of trafficking in human beings.

The Home Office has recently conducted a public consultation on tackling human trafficking which ended on 5 April. A summary of responses report was published on 21 June and the responses obtained used to develop a National Action Plan on Trafficking which will be published later in the year. The action plan will take a comprehensive end-to-end approach covering the different elements of our anti-trafficking strategy: from prevention (including demand reduction); investigating and prosecuting the traffickers; through to protecting and supporting the victims. We will consider whether any of the information contained in the UN report can assist with the development of this action plan or with other strategies designed to combat human trafficking and the organised criminals who benefit from it.

We continue to tackle trafficking through Reflex a multi-agency task force aimed at tackling organised immigration crime. Operation Pentameter a Reflex funded multi-agency initiative involving all UK police forces and immigration service aimed at tackling the Trafficking of Human Beings for Sexual Exploitation was launched in February and has already made a real impact rescuing 84 women from traffickers and made 232 arrests.

The Home Office announced on 7 April 2006 additional funding of £2.4 million over two years to expand the provision of support services for victims of trafficking currently provided through the POPPY Scheme. Not only are we delivering on our commitment to continue funding for the core service (25 crisis spaces), we are also funding 10 additional step-down places

Police

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints were made to the Independent Police Complaints Commission in respect of each police force in each year since the Commission's inception; how many were (a) upheld and (b) rejected; and if he will make a statement. [77251]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 14 June 2006]: The Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) is responsible for the management of the police complaints system. I will ensure that the Chairman receives a copy of the question and replies to the hon. Member directly. Copies of the letter containing the IPCC's response will be placed in the Library.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours of safety training was provided per police officer in each of the last five years. [75900]

Mr. McNulty: Under the foundation training programme delivered by the Central Police Training and Development Authority (Centrex) all police recruits received 27 hours of personal safety training under the Centrex personal safety programme. This training has now been incorporated within the Initial Police Leaning and Development Programme (IPLDP), which moves probationer training away from regional centres and back into force so that officers are trained in the community that they serve.

Under the new programme, refresher training is provided to each officer on an annual basis. Advanced personal safety training may be provided by individual forces. The nature of this training will largely be determined by the specific demands of the role being performed by the officer in question and it is not therefore possible to provide a per officer figure.

Prisons

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the availability of class A drugs in category D prison establishments; what action he is taking to reduce the availability of drugs in prisons; and if he will make a statement. [75468]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The best measure of drug misuse in prisons is provided by the random mandatory drug testing programme. The percentage positive rate for Class A drugs in category D prisons' in 2005-06 was 4.4 per cent. A comprehensive series of measures is in place to reduce the availability of drugs, from which establishments draw, based on local need.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have (a) committed suicide and (b) been murdered while being in prison since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [77483]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Between 1 January 1997 and 11 June 2006 there were 790 apparent self-inflicted deaths (all deaths where it appears the person may have acted specifically to take his/her own life and not only those that receive a 'suicide' or 'open' verdict at inquest) and 14 apparent homicides involving prisoners in England and Wales.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many managed moves at senior operational level in the Prison Service there were in each of the last three years; and for what reasons policy was changed in July 2005 to require all such moves to be approved by the Director of operations. [78212]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The number of managed moves at senior operational level over the period in question is contained in the following table. These figures relate to senior operational managers (senior governor grades in paybands A to D). There are no figures available before April 2004. The policy of all managed appointments at senior operational level being approved by the director of operations or the deputy director general was introduced in a Prison Service order on 5 July 2004. The order was published to advise staff of the appropriate levels of authority for the approval of managed appointments. Decisions about managed moves at this level are taken by operational directors acting as members of the Prison Service succession planning committee. There have been no changes to the managed appointment policy since this date.

Number of managed moves at senior operational level in the public sector Prison Service for England and Wales between April 2004 and May 2006

Respect Areas

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to designate 'Respect Areas' in (a) England and (b) Wales; how those areas will be defined; and which locations he plans to designate. [77862]

John Reid: Over the next 12 months, we will be inviting areas from across England and Wales (not designating them) to demonstrate their commitment to their communities to tackling antisocial behaviour by signing up to key components of the Respect Action Plan.

Security Industry

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether security guards who have applied for but not received their Security Industry Authority identity cards will be allowed to work. [62432]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 30 March 2006]: Under licensing arrangements which came into force across England and Wales on 20 March 2006, security guards working as contract staff are required to be licensed by the Security Industry Authority (SIA).

Companies that have been awarded approved contractor status by the SIA are able to legally deploy a proportion of security staff while their licence applications are being processed.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 18 April 2006, Official Report, column 359W, on the security industry, if he will provide the most recent figures for (a) the number of applications received for licences in the security industry, (b) the number issued and (c) the average time taken to process applications. [75350]

Mr. Coaker: As of 7 June 2006:

(a) 162,706 complete applications had been received by the SIA;

(b) 109,021 licences had been issued;

(c) the SIA do not calculate average processing times. Some, such as those involving overseas criminal records checks, unavoidably take a considerable time. The SIA have a published target of processing 80 per cent. of all applications within six weeks, measured from the date that a properly completed application enters the processing system to the date that a licence is issued.

From April 2004 until August 2005 the SIA processed 62 per cent. within six weeks and 88 per cent. within nine weeks.

Since September 2005, there has been a backlog of applications that have been waiting to enter the system. These have added an additional time of between two and four weeks to the process, so it is now taking up to 10 weeks to process most applications.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a small firms impact test was undertaken as part of the regulatory impact assessment for the Private Security Industry Act 2001; and what guidance officials used to determine whether to undertake such a test. [71145]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 16 May 2006]: A small firms impact test was carried out as part of the approved contractor scheme regulatory impact assessment (RIA) published in February 2006, in consultation with the Small Business Service. Officials followed standard guidance on preparing regulatory impact assessments provided to all Government Departments (available on the Cabinet Office website at http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/regulation/ria/) and liaised with the better regulation executive at the Cabinet Office and the Small Business Service in writing the RIA.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to other Government Departments on how to proceed in the event that their suppliers of security staff fail to meet the Security Industry Authority's licensing deadline of 20 March 2006. [59554]

Mr. Coaker [holding answer 17 March 2006]: On 10 March, the Security Industry Authority (SIA) wrote to all purchasers and providers of security services in England and Wales, including Government Departments. The letter included the following advice for purchasers of security:

"We again encourage buyers of security to assure themselves that their supplier deploys only licensed guards from 20 March and/or that the company has achieved ACS [Approved Contractor Scheme] approval."

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into his Department in each of the last three years. [77436]

Mr. Byrne: The following table shows the number of people over age 55 years that have been recruited into the Home Office in each of the last three years.

Home Department: Recruitment of people over the age of 55 for three latest years

Teenage Drug Use

Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure teenagers are made aware of the possible dangers associated with illegal drug use. [70173]

Mr. Coaker: The Home Office is working in partnership with DfES and the Department of Health to ensure young people are made aware of the effects and risks associated with drug use. The FRANK campaign targets young people and their parents with information about drugs. Young people are encouraged to get further information and advice at the comprehensive drug information website which has received over six million visits, or via the helpline which receives around 1,200 calls a day. A range of FRANK literature has been produced for young people and distributed via the helpline and stakeholders and an understanding drugs schools pack will be available for teachers at the start of the next school year.

Breast Cancer

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will authorise the recording of inflammatory breast cancer on death certificates where appropriate instead of a general description of advanced breast cancer. [78986]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 June 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question the recording of inflammatory breast cancer on death certificates where appropriate instead of a general description of advanced breast cancer. (78986)

Guidance for doctors on completion of the medical certificate of cause of death is available at www.gro.gov.uk/medcert/. This guidance follows that set out by the World Health Organisation (WHO) in the International Classification of Diseases (ICD). It does not dictate or constrain the terminology used by doctors.

All breast cancer deaths are coded to the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) code C50, which only identifies the site of the tumour. Neither of the terms 'advanced' or 'inflammatory' would change the ICD coding of the cause of death.

Although WHO are currently reviewing the ICD, the change proposed in the question would be a fundamental change in the axes used for classification and more crucially, would have no impact on the way that breast cancer deaths were coded and hence reported.

Causes of Death

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) males and (b) females aged 16 to 24 years died as a result of (i) road traffic accidents, (ii) suicide, (iii) sexually transmitted diseases, (iv) drug misuse, (v) alcohol misuse and (vi) murder/manslaughter during each year since 1990. [79500]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many (a) males and (b) females aged 16 to 24 years died as a result of (i) road traffic accidents, (ii) suicide, (iii) sexually transmitted diseases, (iv) drug misuse, (v) alcohol misuse and (vi) murder/manslaughter during each year since 1990. I am replying in her absence. (79500)

ONS routinely publishes numbers of deaths for causes which may be sexually transmitted, such as HIV or Hepatitis B infection. Information is not however normally available from the death certificate on the actual method of transmission for deaths from these causes and so figures for sexually transmitted diseases cannot be provided.

The most recently available information is for deaths in 2004. Figures for deaths in males and females aged 16 to 24 years for land transport accidents, suicide or injury/poisoning of undetermined intent, alcohol-related causes, and assault are shown in the table below for each year from 1990 to 2004. Figures for drug misuse are only available from 1993 onwards.

ONS routinely publishes numbers of deaths for causes which may be sexually transmitted, such as HIV or Hepatitis B infection. The most recently available information is for deaths in 2004. Figures for drug misuse are only available from 1993 onwards.

It is assumed that most deaths from injury/poisoning of undetermined intent at ages 15 and over are cases where the harm was self-inflicted, but there was insufficient evidence to prove that the deceased deliberately intended to kill themselves. This cannot be assumed in deaths at ages under 15 and therefore deaths from injury/poisoning of undetermined intent are not included when examining suicide (intentional self-harm) in children. The table below shows the number of suicides in children aged 11 to 14, and the number of suicide or injury/poisoning of undetermined intent deaths in those aged 15 to 18.

Flight Costs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) aircraft flights and (b) helicopter flights have been made by him on official business since 5 May; what was the (i) cost and (ii) purpose of each flight; and if he will make a statement. [77261]

John Healey: The Prime Minister releases details of ministerial travel annually via a written statement to the House. It is expected that information relating to the 2006-07 financial year will be released shortly before the 2007 summer recess.

Minimum Wage (Lewisham, Deptford)

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people aged (a) 22 years and over, (b) 18 to 21 years and (c) under 18 years are receiving the minimum wage in (i) Lewisham, Deptford constituency and (ii) Lewisham borough. [79159]

Jim Fitzpatrick: I have been asked to reply.

Earnings data at the parliamentary constituency level are not available.

However, earnings data are available by Government office region. Although it is not possible to estimate the number of jobs paid exactly at the National Minimum Wage, the DTI estimates that in April 2005 there were 28,000 jobs held by employees aged 16 or over in the London region paid a wage within a 5p range of the National Minimum Wage. This estimate is based on data from the Office for National Statistics Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings 2005.

NHS Deficits

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he has given to the Department of Health on the financial recovery of NHS deficits. [79620]

Mr. Timms: The Treasury agrees budgets with Departments and it is the responsibility of Departments to ensure they remain within these budgets.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Health on deficits in the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [79621]

Mr. Timms: Treasury Ministers and officials have regular discussions with Ministers and officials in the Department of Health as part of the process of policy analysis, development and delivery. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

NHS Funding

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his spending plans are for the NHS in the next two years; and what he expects growth in spending on the NHS to be in each year to 2009-10. [79613]

Mr. Timms: As published in Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 2006, the spending plans for the NHS are shown in the following table:

		£ million
	2006-07	2007-08
Resources	79,997	87,062
Capital	5,227	6,199

As the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury announced on 19 July 2005, a second Comprehensive Spending Review, reporting in 2007, will set departmental allocations for the period 2008-09 to 2010-11.

Pension Contributions

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate (a) the number of people who received and (b) the amount of income tax relief granted on pension contributions given to (i) basic rate taxpayers and (ii) higher rate taxpayers in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [79309]

Ed Balls: Estimates of the annual cost of tax relief on private pensions are available on Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/pensions/7_9_sep05.pdf.

We estimate that around 55 per cent. of tax relief on pension contributions is received by around 2.5 million higher rate taxpayers. But it is not possible to give a time series for this split by taxpayer band.

Poverty Reduction

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department has taken to reduce poverty in Coventry, South since 1997. [79028]

Dawn Primarolo: The Treasury has, in partnership with other Government Departments, tackled poverty and promoted economic opportunity through:

Promoting macroeconomic stability

Supporting work for those who can and ensuring that work pays, through the new deals, a national minimum wage and the working tax credit

Providing financial support for groups at particular risk of poverty, such as child benefit and the child tax for families, and the pension credit for pensioners.

Across the UK, these measures have helped lift more than a million people out of poverty since 1997. Tax credits are benefiting more than 420,000 families in the West Midlands region, and in Coventry, South claimant unemployment has fallen by over 30 per cent., youth unemployment has fallen by 63 per cent. and long-term unemployment has fallen by 82 per cent.

Science City Initiative

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider how the city of Durham's science expertise can be better recognised within the Science City Initiative. [79182]

John Healey: In the 2004 pre-Budget report and in Budget 2005, the Government supported plans by the regional development agencies (RDAs) to develop six "science cities" in Manchester, Newcastle, York, Birmingham, Nottingham and Bristol. It is for RDAs to take the lead role in identifying science cities and detailed implementation plans, in line with their wider strategies for regional economic development, science and innovation.

Smuggled Illegal Meat

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total value of smuggled illegal meat seized by UK enforcement officials was in (a) the UK and (b) Scotland in each of the past five years. [79358]

John Healey: HM Revenue and Customs record seizures of illegal meat by the numbers and overall weight rather than by value. Information on the numbers and overall weight of illegal meat seizures is as follows:

	Great Britain		Scotland
	Number of seizures	Weight in kilos	Number of seizures	Weight in kilos
2003-04	6,473	69,927	658	1,929
2004-05	10,792	77,087	778	2,186

Information on the number of seizures made prior to April 2003 can be found in DEFRA's Annual Review of Controls on Imports of Animal Products last published in July 2005. Seizure statistics for 2005-06 will be included in the next DEFRA Annual Review of Controls on Imports of Animal Products due to be published next month.

Stakeholder Pensions

Gregory Barker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average employee stakeholder pension contribution was in each year since its introduction. [79308]

Ed Balls: Estimates of the average employee stakeholder pension contribution by tax year since the introduction of stakeholder pensions in 2001 are published in Table 7.10, "Personal and Stakeholder Pensions: Number of individuals contributing and average contribution by status and earned income", on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/pensions/menu-by-year.htm.

Suicide

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many farmers committed suicide in each of the last 10 years. [79499]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 22 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many farmers committed suicide in each of the last 10 years. (79499)

The most recently available information is for deaths in 2004. Figures for deaths of farm workers and farm owners from suicide (intentional self-harm) or injury/poisoning of undetermined intent are shown in the table below for each year from 1995 to 2004.

Number of deaths from intentional self-harm[1] or injury/poisoning of undetermined intent[2] in farm workers and farm owners[3], aged 20-74, England & Wales, 1995-2004[4]

2002	45
2003	55
2004	42

[1] The cause of death for intentional self-harm was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes E950-E959for the years 1995 to 2000, and, for the years 2001 to 2004, the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes X60-X84.

[2] The cause of death for injury/poisoning of undetermined intent was defined using the International Classification of Diseases, Ninth Revision (ICD-9) codes E980-E989 excluding E988.8for 1995 to 2000, and, for the years 2001 to 2004, the International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) codes Y10-Y34 excluding Y33.9 where the Coroner's verdict was pending.

[3] The occupation coded at death registration is the last gainful occupation of the deceased, as supplied by the informant who registers the death. Occupation is not coded by ONS for deaths of persons aged over 74. ONS Standard Occupational Classification 1990 (SOC90) codes 900, 901 and 160 were selected for data from 1995 to 2000, and ONS Standard Occupational Classification 2000 (SOC2000) codes 8223, 9111, 1211 and 5111 were selected for data from 2001 to 2004.

[4] Data are for occurrences of death in each calendar year.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the rate of suicide was among people in (a) areas with a population below 10,000 inhabitants and (b) England in each of the last 10 years: [79498]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Colin Mowl, dated 22 June 2006:

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question asking what the rate of suicide was among people in (a) areas with a population below 10,000 inhabitants and (b) England in each of the last 10 years. I am replying in her absence. (79498)

ONS does not produce suicide rates for areas smaller than local authorities as meaningful figures cannot be calculated for very small populations. The latest available suicide rates for local authorities in England and Wales are for the period 2000-2003 and these can be found on the National Statistics website: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Product.asp?vlnk=13618

The most recent year for which figures are available for England is 2004. The table below shows rates for deaths with a verdict of suicide or injury/poisoning of undetermined intent in England for the years 1995 to 2004.

Death rates[1] from suicide or injury/poisoning of undetermined intent[2], England, 1995 to 2004[3]

Teenage Pregnancies

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many girls under the age of 16 years (a) became pregnant and (b) gave birth in (i) Bury St. Edmunds constituency and (ii) Suffolk county council area in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. [79394]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 21 June 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking how many girls under the age of 16 years (a) became pregnant and (b) gave birth in (i) Bury St. Edmunds constituency and (ii) Suffolk county council area in each of the last 10 years, broken down by age. (79394)

Numbers of conceptions in Suffolk County for the years 1995-2004 (the most recent year for which figures are available), and numbers of maternities in Suffolk County for the years 1995-2005 are shown in the table. Figures for 2004 are provisional.

Information on conceptions is routinely published for local authorities and strategic health authorities. Figures cannot be provided by parliamentary constituency because of the risk of disclosing individual's information, due to small differences between the parliamentary constituency and local authority boundaries.

ONS does not publish figures by single year of age below the age of 16 by either local or health authority because of the risk of disclosing individual's information.

Maternity counts are for girls aged under 16 in each year at which either one or more live birth or stillbirth occurred.

Birth figures cannot be provided for Bury St. Edmunds parliamentary constituency for the same reason as provided for conceptions.

Number of conceptions and maternities to girls aged under 16, Suffolk 1995-2005

2002	75	13
2003	93	19

2005[2]	—	9

[1] Conceptions for 2004 are provisional.
[2] Conceptions data are not yet available for 2005.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) petrol cars and (b) diesel cars there were in each vehicle excise duty band for private vehicles in each of the last four years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [79310]

Dr. Ladyman: I have been asked to reply.

The two tables indicate the number of petrol and diesel cars registered in each vehicle excise duty (VED) band for the years 2002 to 2005.

Table 1 outlines the number of cars whose keepers pay graduated VED. Graduated VED was brought into effect in March 2001. Cars attract a rate of VED dependant upon their CO_2 emissions per kilometre driven. There have been a number of changes to the banding system since it was introduced. These are outlined in table 1.

Combined with the new vehicle CO_2 labelling scheme and company car tax, graduated VED raises awareness of CO_2 and provides incentives for consumers to purchase more fuel efficient vehicles.

Table 2 outlines the number of cars whose keepers pay VED by the old system. Cars that were purchased before March 2001 attract VED according to their engine size. A car with an engine capacity above 1549cc pays the higher rate. Those with engines under 1550cc pay the lower rate.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why there are different levels of vehicle excise duty for diesel cars and petrol cars; and if he will make a statement. [79311]

John Healey: As announced in Budget 2000, from 1 March 2001 a graduated VED system for new cars was introduced. Under this system, all new cars first registered from that date have the rate of VED payable determined according to their rate of carbon dioxide emissions.

Within each band, there is a £10 discount for cars using cleaner fuels and technology, including those powered by road fuel gas, bi-fuel and dual fuel, and cars using hybrid technology. Within each band, there is also a supplement for diesel cars to reflect their higher emissions of particulates and other pollutants which damage local air quality.

TRANSPORT

Bus Drivers' Working Hours

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans his Department has to bring into force the European Union legislation on applying the 11-hour rule to bus drivers' shifts; [79207]

(2) if he will make a statement on recent changes to the legal and regulatory framework governing bus drivers' working hours. [79208]

Dr. Ladyman: There are two sets of rules governing drivers' hours in the UK. Many bus drivers operate under domestic drivers' hours rules rather than the EU drivers' hours rules. This is because buses on routes less than 50 kilometres are specifically exempted from the EU Regulations.

A new EU Regulation on drivers' hours has recently been adopted by the EU institutions—it was published in the Official Journal in April 2006 and will, for the most part, come into force in April 2007. We expect to consult later this year on any necessary consequential amendments to existing UK legislation.

Although, during negotiation of the new EU Regulation, consideration was given to extending the scope to include buses on routes less than 50 kilometres, this change was not made.

We will keep under review the need to bring the domestic rules into line with the EU rules, but will not be in a position to consult on any such changes before the bulk of the new EU Regulation comes into force next year.

Crossrail

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how the budget of £154 million allocated to Crossrail in 2001 was spent. [78610]

Derek Twigg: Of the £154 million allocated in 2001, Cross London Rail Links Ltd. (CLRL) had spent £140 million by the end of May 2006. This supported development of the scheme set out in the Hybrid Bill. The most substantial costs have been incurred employing staff, and carrying out transport, engineering and environmental studies.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on the Crossrail project since its inception. [78615]

Derek Twigg: Since 2001, Cross London Rail Links Ltd.—the company responsible for Crossrail design—has spent a total of £161 million on the Crossrail project.

Highways Agency

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what salaries are paid to the board of directors of the Highways Agency. [78872]

Dr. Ladyman: The salary information for Highways Agency board directors for the financial year 2004-05 is published in the Highways Agency's annual report and accounts, a copy of which is available from the House Libraries and at: http://www.highways.gov.uk/aboutus/documents/annl_rept 2004 05.pdf.

Marine Environment High Risk Areas

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what criteria the Marine Environment High Risk Areas were determined. [79353]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 8 March 2006, Official Report, columns 1519-21W given to the hon. Member for St. Ives (Andrew George).

Nuclear Waste Transportation

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to consult Colchester residents about the transportation by rail through the town of nuclear waste from Sizewell Power Station; and if he will make a statement. [78958]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department for Transport has recently taken over responsibility for making regulations covering the transport of radioactive materials by rail from the Health and Safety Executive. In November 2004 the Department undertook a consultation on the proposals for the Carriage of Dangerous Goods and Use of Transportable Pressure Equipment (Amendment) Regulations 2005, SI 2005:1732. These regulations include provisions for the control of the carriage of radioactive materials by rail.

The consultation document was sent out to over 800 addresses across the U.K. and it was published on the Department's website. There were three responses from addresses in Colchester but none of these were concerned with the transport of radioactive materials.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which Private Members' Bills were drafted by his Department in each Session since 1997; and which subsequently received Royal Assent. [77844]

Gillian Merron: Members will consider a range of possible subjects before introducing their Private Members' Bills.

Government draftsmen do draft some Bills in advance which are available as one of the options for Members to consider before they make their selection.

However, Members may make subsequent amendments or revisions to a Government drafted Bill, or use it as the basis for a Private Member's Bill in the future.

The information requested is therefore not collected.

Rail and Cycle Travel Integration

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans the Government have to improve integration of rail and cycle travel. [79190]

Derek Twigg: Each train operating company (TOC) is responsible for both their policy on the carriage of bikes on trains and the provision of cycle parking at stations.

The Government have inherited the Cycling Policy document produced in 2004 from the Strategic Rail Authority. This encourages all TOCs to carry folding bikes at all times, to carry non folding bikes wherever possible, while recognising that in peak periods there may be circumstances where it is in the best interests of the majority of passengers not to do so, and to supply cycle parking at most rail stations. The policy recommends to TOCs that they provide sufficient cycle parking at stations so that 95 per cent. of all rail journeys start from a station with adequate cycle parking by 2009. To support this policy the DfT recently funded an additional 2,900 cycle parking spaces at stations where demand exceeded capacity.

As part of our ongoing commitment to bike and rail journeys I am discussing with our advisory body on cycling, Cycling England, how we might further encourage such journeys.

Rural Transport Services

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many rural rail (a) services and (b) stations have ceased to operate in each year since 1997, broken down by location. [78203]

Derek Twigg: No rural rail services have ceased to operate since 1997, only two small stretches of passenger network at Maindee Loop (near Newport) in 2005 and Sheepcote Lane Curve in 2004 (near Clapham Junction) have closed.

Four stations have ceased to operate since 1997 and 14 stations have been replaced by either light rail, tram, or a station in a new location.

The four stations which have ceased to operate are:

Etruria in 2005;

Sinfin North, Sinfin Central and Pendleton stations in 1998.

Temporary Parking Exemption Blue Badges

Andrew Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce temporary parking exemption blue badges for those suffering short-term impairment for less than 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [77112]

Gillian Merron: Following a review of the blue badge scheme, the Department for Transport has accepted a recommendation made by the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC), the Department's statutory advisers on the transport needs of disabled people, that the scheme should be extended to people with temporary mobility impairments which severely affect their walking ability and are likely to do so for at least 12 months. This reflected the consensus of opinion during the review and there are therefore no plans to extend the eligibility criteria to people with impairments lasting less than 12 months at the present time.

Transport Schemes (Cost-Benefit Ratios)

Graham Stringer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which major transport schemes agreed over the last two years in London have cost-benefit ratios below 2. [78141]

Gillian Merron [holding answer 19 June 2006]: In the past two years the Department has approved two London projects that have a benefit-cost ratio below 2: the fit out of the Thameslink Midland Road box; and the King's Cross LUL Northern ticket hall. Both projects fall within the medium value for money category (benefit-cost ratios in the range to 1.5 to 2).

The Department does not hold comprehensive benefit-cost information on projects approved by Transport for London.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Rural Disadvantage

18. Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if he will make a statement on the findings of the Commission for Rural Communities' report on rural disadvantage. [79361]

Barry Gardiner: I welcome the report and its emphasis on meeting the needs of disadvantaged people living in rural areas.

This is the first major output from the Commission for Rural Communities, demonstrating early action on its mandate to act as a watchdog and advocate for rural people and communities, especially those suffering disadvantage.

Household Waste

19. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to reduce household waste. [79362]

Mr. Bradshaw: Historically, year-on-year, the increase of municipal waste has been reduced to 1.5 per cent. and we have also achieved an overall reduction of waste going to landfill of 10 per cent. since 2000.

The review of the waste strategy has, as one of its prime objectives, to reduce the amount of waste generated in the first place.

Radioactive Waste Disposal

20. Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues about the environmental impact of radioactive waste disposal. [79363]

Ian Pearson: The independent Committee of Radioactive Waste Management (CoRWM) are currently considering the long-term management options for higher level radioactive wastes. As part of their assessments—which have been open and transparent, and in the public domain—they have considered the environmental impacts of the options. The Government look forward to receiving their final report shortly.

Regional Food Specialities

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps his Department is taking to promote local food networks and regional food specialities. [79364]

Barry Gardiner: We are helping to facilitate local sourcing by providing funding to address issues such as distribution, marketing and the encouragement of new outlets and by working with other bodies to highlight and spread best practice. Food from Britain (FFB) takes the lead in the delivery of a national programme of activity to support the quality regional food sector in England which includes many local food producers.

Wild Flowers

22. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action has been taken since May 2005 to protect wild flower meadows and to encourage the planting of wild flowers. [79365]

Barry Gardiner: Earlier this week we published the 2005 highlight report on progress on the UK Biodiversity Action Plan. It shows that 22 per cent. of priority habitats and 11 per cent. of priority species are increasing, and that more priority species are showing improved trends, including the Deptford pink.

Energy White Paper

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to paragraph 3.41 of the 2003 Energy White Paper, what steps he plans to take to extend the energy efficiency commitment beyond the domestic sector. [78451]

Ian Pearson: DEFRA commissioned studies on the possible extension of the domestic energy efficiency commitment (EEC) to those businesses that do not pay the climate change levy.

The Government concluded that the inclusion of small business within the domestic EEC is not practicable at this point. Options continue to be considered, but in the immediate period support for energy efficiency improvement in this sector will continue via other programmes, notably those of the Carbon Trust, as outlined in "Energy Efficiency: The Government's Plan for Action", published in April 2004.

The Government will introduce further measures to encourage and assist Small and Medium Sized Enterprises to take up energy saving opportunities. DEFRA has commissioned work to examine different policy options. This work will draw on the experience of the EEC mechanism in the household sector in informing our views of the best way forward.

Milk Imports

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much milk was imported in the last period for which figures are available. [79348]

Barry Gardiner: Figures from HM Revenue and Customs show that in 2005, just over 48,000 tonnes of liquid milk were imported into the UK. This represents about 0.4 per cent. of UK milk production.

Sakhalin II Project

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which rivers were crossed with (a) gas and (b) oil pipelines (i) during and (ii) outside the designated winter period as part of the Sakhalin II project. [79334]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 21 June 2006]: The designated winter period for crossing rivers as part of the Sakhalin II project is 1 December to 30 April.

Dates on which the rivers were crossed with oil and gas pipelines are available at the Sakhalin Energy website at:

http://www.sakhalinenergy.com/en/project.asp?p=rc_list

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) which rivers were crossed with (a) gas and (b) oil pipelines as part of the Sakhalin II project; [79336]

(2) which rivers were crossed with (a) gas and (b) oil pipelines on non-consecutive construction days as part of the Sakhalin II project; [79338]

(3) what the average time period is between the installation of gas or oil pipelines across each river as part of the Sakhalin II project. [79450]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 21 June 2006]: This information is available on the Sakhalin Energy website at:

http://www.sakharinenergy.com/en/project.asp?p=rc_list

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information he has gathered on the effect of the Sakhalin II project on salmon spawning habitat; and what action he is taking to ensure that there is no loss of such habitat as a result of the project. [79337]

Ian Pearson [holding answer 21 June 2006]: The information gathered on the effect of the Sakhalin II project on salmon spawning habitats includes:

Official and ministerial meetings with Shell;

Information included in Sakhalin Energy's River Crossing Strategy;

Monitoring information published by Sakhalin Energy on its website;

Information gathered during site visits carried out by Export Credits Guarantee Department (ECGD), other potential lenders and their independent consultants.

Sakhalin Energy has committed itself to ensuring no net loss of habitat.

DEFRA will be monitoring performance through its close working relationships with relevant departments such as ECGD, who, together with other agencies such as the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, have commissioned independent monitoring of the project.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been made of the potential impact of an oil spill on the feeding grounds of the Western Pacific Grey Whale in the event of a major incident at the Sakhalin II project; and what assessment has been made of the potential impact of such a spill on those feeding grounds in (a) summer conditions and (b) winter ice conditions. [79449]

Ian Pearson: Information on the potential impact of oil spills on the Western Gray Whales' feeding grounds has been included in a number of assessments, including the Sakhalin Energy Investment Company's (SEIC's) Environmental Impact Assessment (2003) and Addenda (2005), and its Comparative Environmental Assessment (2004). A number of reports on this subject have also been produced for meetings of the IUCN (World Conservation Union) Independent Scientific Review and successor bodies, including a report from the Independent Interim Science Group (IISG), which made a number of specific recommendations to SEIC.

SEIC is developing oil spill response plans that will include measures intended to address the potential impact of a spill on the feeding grounds of the Western Gray Whale in different conditions. These will be reviewed by both Russian authorities and an independent international oil spill response consultancy. The former will address compliance with appropriate elements of Russian Law, whilst the latter will assess the adequacy of plans against a number of recognised and robust international standards.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) the Sakhalin Energy Investment Company's oil spill plan response methods and (b) the potential impact of an oil spill on biodiversity in the Sakhalin island area. [79451]

Ian Pearson: Sakhalin Energy Investment Company (SEIC) is developing oil spill response plans, which must be approved by the Russian authorities before oil production can start. These plans will also be reviewed against Russian and international standards by consultants acting for the potential lenders. We will review the conclusions of this work.

We have kept in close touch with SEIC on the issue of oil spills. In recent meetings with SEIC/Shell we have stressed the importance of having adequate measures in place to address the risks, and of SEIC's implementing the Independent Interim Science Group's recommendations.

WALES

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of his staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77303]

Mr. Hain: At 31 December 2005 Wales Office staff were split as follows:

(a) 45 staff (76.3 per cent.) under 55 years of age and

(b) 14 staff (23.7 per cent.) over the age of 55.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into his Department in each of the last three years. [77304]

Mr. Hain: Between April 2004 and March 2005, there were 14 people over the age of 55 working for the Wales Office. This represented a quarter of the staff at the time.

A further member of staff over the age of 55 was recruited in 2005-06, representing 10 per cent. of the total staff recruited during that period.

Information relating to 2003-04 is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many websites there are within his responsibilities; and what the total cost of maintaining such websites was in the last year for which figures are available. [79067]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has responsibility for www.walesoffice.gov.uk and its parallel Welsh language site www.swyddfa.cymru.gov.uk.

The cost of running both sites was £5,875 in 2005, with an additional £58.75 charged to renew the domain names.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Private Members' Bills were drafted by his Department in each session since 1997; and which subsequently received Royal Assent. [78844]

Mr. Hain: Members will consider a range of possible subjects before introducing their Private Members' Bills.

Government draftsmen do draft some Bills in advance, which are available as one of the options for Member's to consider before they make their selection.

However, Members may make subsequent amendments or revisions to a Government drafted Bill, or use it as the basis for a Private Member's Bill in the future.

The information requested is therefore not collected.

Renewable Energy

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps the Government are taking to increase the supply of renewable energy in Wales. [78867]

Mr. Hain: With up to 24 onshore and offshore windfarms either under construction or in planning, Wales has the potential to supply a huge amount of energy from renewable sources.

The Renewables' Obligation is the Government's main policy measure for supporting renewable energy, establishing a target of securing 10 per cent. of electricity from renewable sources by 2010. Programmes such as the Micro-generation Strategy and the Wave and Tidal Energy Demonstration Scheme support these actions.

Policies put in place by the Welsh Assembly Government complement these commitments. For example, the Assembly Government have set targets for renewable energy generation and has published Technical Advice Note 8 (TAN 8) to facilitate the development of renewable energy in the most appropriate locations.

Wales also offers significant opportunities for harnessing the renewable energy of waves and tides and the Assembly Government are supporting two projects through the Objective 1 programme: Wavedragon and Marine Current Turbines, including the Severn Barrage.

Work and Pensions Select Committee

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action has been taken by his Department to implement Work and Pensions Select Committee recommendations since the 2001-02 session; and if he will make a statement. [78847]

Mr. Hain: Responsibility for the implementation of Work and Pensions Select Committee recommendations rests with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions. The Wales Office has no executive responsibility in this area.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Departmental Re-branding

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate she has made of the total costs at current prices of re-branding (a) the Department of the Environment as the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, (b) the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions as the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions and (c) the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions as the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. [71585]

Angela E. Smith: The costs for re-branding:

(a) the Department of the Environment as the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions was £176,690;

(b) the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions as the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions was £25,250;

(c) the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions as the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was £52,117.

Deputy Prime Minister

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many civil servants worked in the Deputy Prime Minister's private office at 10 April 2006; and what the cost of running his private office was in 2005-06. [71069]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

Staff numbers and costs for my private office in 2005-06 will be accounted for in the usual way in the Department's annual report and accounts.

Mineral Planning

Judy Mallaber: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if she will list the public inquiries on decisions by mineral planning authorities to reject applications for opencast mining since the MPG3 planning guidelines were revised in 1999; and what the outcome of each inquiry was. [72627]

Yvette Cooper: Since revision of Mineral Planning Guidance note 3 (coal mining and colliery spoil disposal) in March 1999 there have been 11 local public inquiries into decisions by mineral planning authorities to reject applications for opencast coal mining. The information requested by my right hon. Friend is listed in the table.

Supported Housing

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how much has been spent on consultants' services relating to Supporting People in the last two financial years; what amount has been allocated for these services for 2006-07; and how much of this expenditure has been for services for work on the Distributed Formula in each year. [76228]

Yvette Cooper: In 2004-05 £2.4 million was spent on consultancy services and in 2005-06 £1.1 million was spent on consultancy.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the Valuation Office Agency holds (a) dwelling house code and (b) value significant code data for (i) 10 Downing Street, (ii) 11 Downing Street, (iii) Flats 1-3, Admiralty House, Whitehall and (iv) Dorneywood. [78655]

Mr. Woolas: Yes.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Hospitality

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77439]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office records its hospitality expenditure in accordance with the principles of Government accounting. It keeps no separate record of expenditure by category of provision, and there are no plans to begin keeping any such detailed record.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of his staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77440]

David Cairns: As at 31 December 2005, the Scotland Office had 48 staff under the age of 55 and six staff over that age.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into his Department in each of the last three years. [77441]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office does not recruit staff directly; its officials are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs. One member of staff in 2003, two in 2004 and one in 2005 were over 55 years of age when they joined the Office.

Disability Access

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether any building in his Department falls short of disability access regulations. [73057]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office's main buildings—Dover House in London and Melville Crescent in Edinburgh—are listed buildings and cannot be altered without the consent of the relevant heritage body. Both buildings were initially assessed for compliance with the Act.

In the light of this assessment, all reasonable and practicable efforts have been made to adapt Dover House for use by the disabled. Subsequently, an access audit was commissioned to advise on longer term improvements that were required; these have been included in a programme of works which is due to be carried out during 2006-07. Where the audit drew attention to an issue that could not be remedied by building works, a management procedure has been introduced.

In Melville Crescent, all improvements and refurbishment works were completed, where reasonably practicable, and in accordance with Part 4 of the Building (Scotland) Regulations 2004, while also in conjunction with British standard—BS 8300:2001.

Sickness Absence

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff in his Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73055]

David Cairns: All Scotland Office staff are on loan from the Scottish Executive or the Department for Constitutional Affairs and those Departments maintain sickness absence records. A complete picture, in the form requested, is however not available.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Digital Switchover

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the results of the digital switchover trial in Bolton; what the effect of switchover was on (a) individuals on low incomes and (b) the elderly; how much switchover cost per (i) household and (ii) vulnerable household; and if she will make a statement. [79572]

Mr. Woodward: The purpose of the trial was to test the process for supporting elderly and severely disabled consumers through switchover. The majority of people in the digital television trial thought switching over was easy and liked watching digital television.

The trial also highlighted the importance of support from family and friends in installing and using the equipment and the need to give older and disabled people time to adapt to using new television equipment.

The full Bolton trial report was published in May; copies are available in both Houses and at www.digitaltelevision.gov.uk. We are considering the findings from the Bolton trial and other research. This will help to inform work on the detailed design and costs of the digital switchover assistance schemes.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the Government has allocated for support to (a) individuals on low incomes and (b) the elderly (i) to purchase equipment and (ii) to obtain help with installation in preparation for the switch to digital television in each year up to 2012; and if she will make a statement. [79573]

Mr. Woodward: The costs of the digital switchover assistance scheme are being assessed as part of work to determine the licence fee settlement for the new Charter period. This work will draw upon a variety of sources including outputs from the Bolton Digital television trial which considered the needs of the elderly and disabled groups who will be entitled to help from the assistance scheme.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to ensure that the small slave transmitter on ordinance survey reference SX802596, at the junction with the Ashprington turn-off at Totnes Hill, will be converted from analogue to digital transmission; and if she will make a statement. [77517]

Mr. Woodward: I understand that there is no record of a transmitter sited at OS reference SX802596, either for television transmission or telecommunications. However the Totnes television relay transmitter is situated at reference SX805594, which is very close to the above location.

During switchover, which takes place in the Westcountry region in 2009, all transmitters (including the Totnes relay) will be converted for digital transmission. After switchover, UK digital terrestrial television coverage will match the current analogue coverage of 98.5 per cent.

Library Facilities

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding the Government are providing for the improvement of library facilities. [79185]

Mr. Lammy: Government funding for public libraries is paid, un-ringfenced, as part of the Local Government Financial Settlement administered by the Department for Communities and Local Government.

It is for the 149 library authorities in England to decide upon the level of funding required to sustain and improve their services bearing in mind their statutory responsibility to make comprehensive and efficient provision.

The public library statistics published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy show that library authorities made net expenditure (excluding capital charges) of £817,216,604 in 2004-05 (the latest figure available). The comparable figure for the previous year was £781,990,546.

Additional examples of funding for improved public libraries from within my Department's portfolio are the £120 million of National Lottery support for the People's Network, around £130 million of DCMS Private Finance Initiative Credits for library or part library projects, and the ongoing DCMS funding of £2 million per annum for the Framework for the Future Action Plan programme. I also look forward to the Big Lottery Fund's £80 million community library funding programme which will be launched later this year.

My Department is also responsible for sponsorship of the British Library, the UK's national library. Grant in aid funding to the British Library over the 2004 Spending Review period is as follows:

	£ million
2005-06
Estimated outturn	96.3
2006-07
Planned	102.2
2007-08
Planned	104.4

London Olympics

Derek Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what committees have been established within the (a) Cabinet, (b) London Organising Committee for the Olympic games and (c) Olympic delivery authority to examine the legacy for (i) the site of the London 2012 games and (ii) the International Olympic Committee. [79566]

Mr. Caborn: The legacy of the Olympic games, including its wider economic, social, health and environmental legacy, is included in the remit of MISC 25 (the Cabinet Committee on the Olympic games) and in that of the Olympic Board (comprising the Government; the Greater London authority; the London Organising Committee for the Olympic games; and the British Olympic Association; with the Olympic delivery authority attending as observers).

Museums (Public Funding)

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what public funding is available from the Government for the improvement and modernisation of museums. [79186]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS annual funding for museums in 2005-06 was £444,828,000. This was made up of two streams: £414,828,000 was provided to national museums and £30 million to the Renaissance in the Regions programme.

In addition, the Department provides funding to the DCMS/Wolfson Fund for Museums and Galleries and the Designated Challenge Fund. Both have two year funding rounds and between 2004-06 the DCMS provided £2 million to DCMS/Wolfson Fund and £3,799,991 to the Designated Challenge Fund. The Subject Specialist Networks received £248,000 for 2004-05.

Museum and Gallery statistics published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance show local authority museums, through the Local Government Financial Settlement, had a net expenditure of £177,250,000 in 2005-06.

However, the majority of this museum funding is not ring fenced for specific improvement work. Although DCMS is encouraging museums to improve their services across the board, it is for the museum itself to decide what funding is needed to sustain ongoing services and what can be spent on special improvement and modernisation.

New Opportunities Fund

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport pursuant to her answer of 30 January 2006, Official Report, column 59W, on the New Opportunities Fund, if she will update the information on the number of (a) awards and (b) payments made from the New Opportunities Fund for physical education and sport since 2004-05. [79703]

Mr. Caborn: The table shows awards and payments made by the New Opportunities Fund for physical education and sport since 2004-05. These figures do not include awards for all activities for young people and other grants which have funded sport indirectly.

	Awards made (£)	Payment made (£)
2005-06	114,710,314	253,055,683
Year to date	1,974,080	63,906,755

The Public

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what Caroline Felton's remit was in carrying out her recent study of The Public arts organisation in West Bromwich on behalf of Arts Council England; and what conclusions her report came to. [79234]

Mr. Lammy: Caroline Felton was commissioned by Arts Council England to produce a stocktake report on The Public in January 2006. She was asked to make recommendations about a range of issues relating to the organisation's current situation and its future challenges. The report's recommendations covered changes to the management team and other key personnel.

DEFENCE

Defence Establishment Closures (Support)

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's policy is on financial support for (a) economic development, (b) training and (c) environmental improvements in an area in which a defence establishment has been (i) closed and (ii) mothballed; and if he will make a statement. [79461]

Mr. Watson: The Ministry of Defence keeps its estate under constant review to meet present and planned future requirements, with a view to disposing of surplus assets as quickly as possible. Pending a final decision and subsequent disposal action, any redundant sites will normally be closed and/or mothballed to reduce unnecessary expenditure. The need for financial support to assist the disposal of a site is considered on a case by case basis, usually to maintain the property to an appropriate standard to meet environmental and health and safety requirements, consistent with the most likely disposal strategy. Limited opportunities may also exist for temporary commercial or military training uses while in disposal.

Other Departments provide direct financial support for economic development regionally or to communities. However, the closure of defence establishments can often provide new opportunities for civilian re-use and development. It is therefore the usual practice of the Ministry of Defence to work closely with the local authority and other stakeholders—amongst others English Partnerships, Regional Development Agencies, and in Scotland the Scottish Executive, the Enterprise bodies and the Welsh Assembly in Wales—to consider the most appropriate future use.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much financial assistance his Department gave to the Cowal area after the closure of the US Navy base at the Holy Loch for (a) economic development, (b) training, (c) environmental improvements and (d) other purposes. [79494]

Mr. Watson: Holy Loch closed over a decade ago and a substantive answer will take a little time to research from archive. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Merlin Helicopters

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the trials which will allow RAF Merlin helicopters to land on naval ships are expected to be complete. [77608]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 June 2006]: Trials are being carried out into the feasibility of extending the operating capability of the RN Merlin Mk1 helicopters from Carrier Vertical Striker (CVS) platforms (HM Ships Illustrious and Ark Royal). Information from these trials will also be used to assess the feasibility of operating RAF Merlin helicopters from naval platforms.

There is no fixed completion date for these trials.

RG31

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation his Department has made of the RG31 vehicle; and what assessment has been made of the possible advantages of this vehicle compared with the Snatch armoured Land Rover. [78216]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1528W, to the hon. Member for Aldershot (Mr. Howarth). Compared to Snatch, the RG31's size means it cannot access areas of the urban environment that Snatch is able to.

Search and Rescue Services

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the statement of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 46WH, on MOD search and rescue services, whether the alternative military unit will be based at RNAS Culdrose; whether his statement that the squadron needs to remain at Culdrose referred to the (a) 771, (b) all squadrons presently based there and (c) the future search and rescue squadron; and what his plans are for the 771 Squadron. [77476]

Mr. Ingram: The statement of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 146WH, on MOD Search and Rescue Services, referred only to the future of the roles currently carried out by 771 Squadron RNAS Culdrose and can be further clarified as follows. The Search and Rescue role will be part of the joint MOD and Maritime and Coastguard Agency future UK helicopter Search and Rescue Capability. The use of Culdrose itself as a future Search and Rescue base will be fully assessed taking into account all relevant factors. The best means for ensuring the continuation of the separate Maritime Counter Terrorism role will be fully assessed in due course and the future basing of this role will be part of that assessment.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Burma

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate he has made of the percentage of people in Burma living in poverty. [77799]

Mr. Thomas: Reliable data about poverty in Burma are scarce, but Burma is one of the poorest countries in Asia, comparable to Cambodia and Laos on available measures and is almost certainly not on track to achieve any of the Millennium Development Goals. A household survey from 1997 found that 23 per cent. of people (11.2 million) had an income below subsistence level. The percentage of poor people earning less than $1 US a day is likely to be significantly higher than this. The same Government survey found that 70 per cent. of household expenditure was on food, an indicator of the vulnerability of poor people in Burma. There is widespread malnutrition, with one in three children aged 5 being moderately to severely malnourished. In 2001, 109 of every 1,000 children died before they reached the age of 5, double the East Asia and Pacific regional average. Maternal mortality is among the highest in the region. Only 40 per cent. of children complete five years of primary education.

Social sector spending in Burma fell steadily during the 1990s and the authorities now spend less than $1 per person each year on basic health care and education combined. This is one of the lowest levels of public investment in the world. Public sector salaries are a long way below a living wage and teachers, doctors and other public servants are forced to either supplement their income through unofficial charges or undertake additional income earning activities. Most poor people rely on informal, private healthcare providers, often receiving poor quality or ineffective treatment as a result. Although education has traditionally been highly valued in Burma, its quality is being undermined by under-investment in the crumbling public education system. HIV/AIDS is a major public health risk in Burma. Burma is one of three countries in Asia with a generalised HIV/AIDS epidemic: 420,000 people are estimated to be infected with the virus and prevalence continues to rise. Prevalence in pregnant women exceeds 2 per cent. indicating that the epidemic has spread from high-risk groups into the general population.

Many of the poorest and most vulnerable people live in the border areas and ethnic nationalities are among the poorest and most socially excluded people in Burma but there is considerable poverty throughout the country, in both rural and urban areas.

China

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the amount of aid China distributes in relation to the size of its gross domestic product; and what discussions he has held with the Chinese authorities of its joint aid programmes. [79427]

Hilary Benn: There are no Government figures available for China's official development assistance. DFID has established close contact with the Department for Aid to Foreign Countries within the Ministry of Commerce. This Department leads on China's aid programme. Along with the United Nations Development Programme, we have made it clear that DFID would be prepared to provide assistance and advice should China decide to establish a formal aid agency. We have not yet had a response from the Chinese Government. Our main discussions with China on international development issues have focused on its growing role in Africa. These discussions cover not only aid, but also trade and investment. There is a possibility that a joint UK/China aid project will be implemented in Ghana.

Disaster Risk Reduction

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of his Department's budget was spent on disaster risk reduction in each region in each of the last three financial years; what percentage is planned to be spent in each region in the next three financial years; and if he will make a statement. [79276]

Hilary Benn: Much of DFID's support for disaster risk reduction (DRR) is integrated into wider development programmes so we do not have specific data detailing the percentage of DFID's budget spent on DRR.

In my speech on humanitarian reform in December 2004, I committed DFID to giving higher priority to DRR. DFID is providing significant bilateral assistance for DRR programmes in countries susceptible to disasters. For example, we are providing over £60 million to support disaster preparedness in Orissa, India, and we are supporting the Government of Bangladesh's Comprehensive Disaster Management Programme. We have committed to allocating 10 per cent. of the value of our humanitarian response to each major natural disaster to prepare for and mitigate the impact of future disasters, where this can be done effectively. Under this policy, DFID has committed £7.5 million in the tsunami-affected region.

DFID is also increasing funding to the international DRR system. We have provided £3 million to the International Strategy for Disaster Reduction and have recently agreed a £4 million programme with the World Bank on mainstreaming DRR into the Poverty Reduction Strategies of several disaster-prone countries. In 2005, we committed £15 million to support the community level DRR work of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies and several international non-governmental organisations in Africa and Asia.

International Development Committee

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what International Development Committee recommendations his Department has (a) accepted and (b) implemented since 2001-02; and if he will make a statement. [77508]

Hilary Benn: DFID does not keep a central record of all those recommendations by the International Development Committee which it has accepted or implemented and to obtain this information would incur a disproportionate cost. However, copies of DFID's responses to IDC reports are available in the Libraries of the House and in these responses, the Government make clear whether they accept the Committee's recommendations.

Kashmir

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what measures he is taking to avoid deterioration of the humanitarian situation in Kashmir as a result of withdrawal of funding to non-governmental organisations. [76735]

Hilary Benn: DFID funding for NGOs, the United Nations and the Red Cross Movement was not withdrawn, but ended after the disbursement of £54.3 million for humanitarian relief. Immediate relief needs have largely been met and the longer-term recovery and reconstruction phase, which we are supporting through our office in Islamabad, began at the end of March 2006.

The Government of Pakistan are making contingency plans for the coming monsoon season and winter period. We have been reassured by the Government of Pakistan that they will keep transport lines open and use all civil and military means to cope with any problems. We are monitoring the situation closely.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what plans he has for legislation in the next Session of Parliament; and if he will make a statement; [77507]

(2) which Government Bills sponsored by his Department are still to be introduced during the current Session; and when, and into which House, each will be introduced. [77506]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member to the response given by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House of Commons on 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1432W.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Aerospace

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to (a) maintain and (b) maximise the UK's capability within the aerospace sector. [78625]

Margaret Hodge: The Government are working in partnership with the aerospace industry on implementing the agenda set by the industry-led Aerospace Innovation and Growth Team report in 2003. This established a vision for the future success of the industry that by 2022,

"The UK will offer a global Aerospace Industry the world's most innovative and productive location, leading to sustainable growth for all its stakeholders".

The key areas of implementation work are technology, process excellence, skills, and environmental issues. This work is overseen by the Aerospace Innovation and Growth Leadership Council, which I chair jointly with Mike Turner, CEO of BAE Systems.

In regard to the defence air sector, the Government's Defence Industrial Strategy published in December 2005 provided clarity to industry on our military capability requirements, and set out a requirement to work with companies to ensure a sustainable long-term industrial base.

Co-firing Activity

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will ensure that energy crops continue to be a mandatory component of co-firing activity from April 2009. [79541]

(2) if he will re-instate the co-firing cap to the 25 per cent. level that was in place prior to 1 April. [79543]

Malcolm Wicks: Co-firing is being reviewed as part of the ongoing Energy Review. All options are open for consideration at this stage and no decisions have yet been made. We anticipate that we will make an announcement on co-firing as part of the Energy Review announcement later in the summer.

Any changes to the co-firing rules would require full statutory consultation.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many of his staff are (a) under and (b) over 55 years of age. [77263]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Staff in the Department of Trade and Industry as of 1 January 2006:

(a) under 55 years: 3,107

(b) over 55 years: 569.

Flag Flying

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will ensure that the Union flag is flown from his Department's buildings on every day the offices are open. [77741]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department for Trade and Industry follows the rules and guidance on flag flying issued by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS). These rules are approved by the Queen on advice from DCMS. There are no plans at present to change the number of days flags can be flown from Government buildings.

Funding (London)

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which organisations in each London (a) borough and (b) constituency are receiving funding from (i) his Department and (ii) the London Development Agency in 2006-07; and what total amount of funding is being made available in each case. [77660]

Margaret Hodge: Figures are not yet available about the organisations which will receive funding from the Department of Trade and Industry in 2006-07, broken down by London borough or constituency. According to the latest figures available, DTI spent £559 million in London in 2004-05, mainly on enterprise, economic development, and science and technology. Further details can be found in "Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 2006" published by the Treasury in May 2006.

The London Development Agency, a functional body of the Mayor of London which receives a block grant from DTI, is responsible for promoting economic development in London. The following table provides a breakdown of the LDA's expected expenditure by London borough in 2006-07. Data on the organisations receiving this funding are not available.

Gas and Electricity

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the importance of ensuring there is sufficient peak gas capability in the UK. [78519]

Malcolm Wicks: The Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group (JESS) under joint-chairmanship of the DTI and Ofgem routinely assesses the security of energy supply in the UK. The sixth JESS report, published in April 2006, shows the assessment of winter supply capability against average and peak winter demand. This report can be found at http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file28800.pdf?pubpdfdload=06%2F331. It is clearly very important to national well-being that there is sufficient gas to meet daily demand.

Green Tariffs

Sir Peter Soulsby: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the take-up is of green tariffs to domestic electricity customers; and if he will make a statement. [79242]

Malcolm Wicks: Figures from the National Consumer Council suggest that of the order of 200,000 households are currently on green electricity tariffs.

Marketing

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has made an assessment of the effectiveness of industry marketing standards; and if he will make a statement. [78087]

Margaret Hodge: The DTI has made no such assessment.

Lembit Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will meet the Chartered Institute of Marketing to discuss forthcoming legislation which will affect the marketing sector; and if he will make a statement. [78086]

Margaret Hodge: If the Chartered Institute of Marketing writes to me setting out what issues in relation to what legislation they would like to discuss, I will consider the matter.

Post Office Closures

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post offices were closed in (a) Nottingham, South and (b) the East Midlands in 2005-06. [79223]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The question the hon. Member has asked relates to operational matters for which Post Office Ltd. is directly responsible.

There have been no closures of Post Office branches in 2005-06 in Nottingham, South. There has been a net reduction of 20 branches over the year 2005-06 in the region of the East Midlands.

Information relating to post office branches for each parliamentary constituency is placed in the Libraries of the House on an annual basis.

Promotion Boards

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what promotion boards have been held in his Department in each of the last five years. [72902]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Department of Trade and Industry no longer runs promotion boards for posts below the senior civil service. These posts are advertised on a job specific basis through our weekly vacancy bulletin.

The selection process for promotion to the senior civil service is normally run annually. Four have been held in the last five years.

Renewable Energy

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) solar hot water systems, (b) solar photovoltaics and (c) wind power systems were installed in the United Kingdom in 2005; and if he will make a statement. [78943]

Malcolm Wicks: Full details of renewable energy generation for 2005 will be published in the Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics (DUKES) 2006 on 27 July 2006. A copy of which will be available from the Libraries of the House.

We do not have definitive figures for solar water heating; however in the "Microgeneration Strategy and Low Carbon Buildings Programme" consultation document, issued by the Department in June 2005, we estimated that the total number of existing installed domestic systems in the UK at over 70,000 with about 5,000 new domestic systems installed each year.

The latest confirmed figures that we have from DUKES 2005 show installed capacity of 8.2 MW for solar photovoltaics and 933.2 MW for wind power: 123.8 MW offshore and 809.4 MW onshore.

According to the British Wind Energy Association the current installed capacity for wind is 1,694.56 MW: 1,480.76 MW onshore and 213.80 MW offshore.

Small Business Service

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the budget of the Government's Small Business Service was in each financial year since its establishment; how many staff it employs; how many offices it (a) owns and (b) rents; what the annual rent paid on rented properties was in each year; and to which Minister in the Department the Small Business Service reports. [78164]

Margaret Hodge: The chief executive of the Small Business Service reports, through the Minister of State for Industry and the Regions, to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

The information requested is detailed as follows:

	Budget (£ million)
	Programme	Administration	Staff numbers[1]	Offices owned and rented (on a notional basis)	Notional annual rent paid[3] (£ million)

Supply-Demand Balance

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has assessed the possibility of measuring supply-demand balance in millions of cubic metres per day. [78520]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department generally assesses supply and demand in terms of the energy content of gas (GWh), as this is what is important for ensuring that supply and demand are balanced. However, an analysis of the projected supplies and demand in million cubic metres per day for winters up to 2024-25 can be found in the sixth report of the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group (JESS) (http://www.dti.gov.uk/files/file28800.pdf?pubpdfdload=06%F331). For information concerning the forthcoming winter, an analysis of the supply-demand balance in millions of cubic metres can be found in National Grid's Winter Outlook consultation document, available at:

http://www.ofgem.gov.uk/temp/ofgem/cache/cmsattach/15058_8406b.pdf

In addition, daily assessments of supply and demand, displayed in millions of cubic metres per day, can be found on the National Grid website at:

http://www.nationalgrid.com/uk/Gas/Data/DSR

Sustainability and Carbon Impact Accreditation Scheme

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will support a sustainability and carbon impact accreditation scheme for all biomass consumed in the UK. [79540]

Malcolm Wicks: This is a complex area, given the vast array of potential biomass sources and the different end uses. The right balance has to be struck in terms of supporting environmentally beneficial energy generation while avoiding over-regulation in what is still a relatively embryonic industry.

The Government are interested in such accreditation schemes where they could be practical Currently we are looking at these as part of the co-firing review and the development of the Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation [RTFO]. The RTFO will place a mandatory reporting requirement on companies supplying biofuels from day one of the obligation to report in detail on the carbon savings of the biofuels supplied, as well as the impact on sustainability.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Pension Credit

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many residents in (a) Lewisham, Deptford constituency and (b) Lewisham borough receive pension credit. [79156]

James Purnell: As at February 2006, the number of pension credit individual beneficiaries for (a) Lewisham Deptford constituency was 3,900 and (b) Lewisham borough local authority area was 11,940.

Notes:

1. These figures are early estimates. The preferred data source for figures supplied by DWP is the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS). However, the figures provided are the latest available figures which are taken from the GMS scan at 17 February 2006. These are adjusted using the historical relationship between WPLS and GMS data to give an estimate of the final WPLS figure. Average amounts are displayed as at the scan reference data of 17 February 2006.

2. Numbers of individual beneficiaries are rounded to the nearest ten.

3. Parliamentary constituencies and local authorities are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant ONS postcode directory.

4. The number of individual beneficiaries includes both claimants and their partners and may include partners aged less than 60.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many residents in each electoral ward in Beverley and Holderness receive pension credit; and if he will make a statement. [78995]

James Purnell: The information is in the following table:

Pension credit individual beneficiaries for wards in Beverley and Holderness parliamentary constituency, November 2005

Ward name	Individual beneficiaries[1]
Beverley Rural	445
Cottingham North[2]	345
East Wolds and Coastal[2]	865

Compulsory Work-focused Interviews

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people starting on incapacity benefits in Liverpool and Wirral attended an initial work-focused interview since it became compulsory. [77087]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is not available.

The pathways to work regime only commenced on 24 April in the Liverpool and Wirral district. The first work-focused interviews do not take place until at least week eight, namely the end of June 2006. Early work-focused interviews data are only available three months after the first interviews. It will therefore be September/October before any are available for the Liverpool and Wirral district.

Employment (Rotherham)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action his Department is taking to increase the number of people in work aged 50 years and over in Rotherham. [76873]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Like all other customers, people aged 50 and over can benefit from the range of services provided by Jobcentre Plus, including access to jobs and help and support to find work.

Additional help is provided to older people who do not find work quickly. New deal 50-plus is a voluntary programme that provides people with advice and guidance from personal advisers, and access to in-work financial help through the 50-plus element of the working tax credit. Since April 2000, the programme has been successful in helping more than 150,000 older workers into employment, including 280 people in Rotherham. Once in work, new deal 50-plus customers can claim a training grant of up to £1,500 for training of which up to £300 can be used for life-long learning.

People aged 50 and over, including those in Rotherham, are also eligible for help from new deal 25-plus. People who have been claiming jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for 18 months and who have not previously participated on new deal 25-plus, are already required to attend the gateway stage of the new deal 25-plus programme. This is a period of up to four months of intensive job search and specialist help and support to improve job prospects. This is followed by the intensive activity period (IAP) which is currently voluntary for people aged 50 and over. The IAP provides further support and pre-work training to help people return to work.

Since April 2004, we have been piloting mandatory participation in the new deal 25-plus IAP for people aged 50-59 who have been claiming JSA for 18 months. The pilot has offered people in this age group more extensive help back to work. Rotherham was not part of the pilot, however. Interim pilot data have yielded positive results and, as announced in our Welfare Reform Green Paper, we will be commencing a phased national rollout.

Between 1979 and the mid 1990s, the number of people on incapacity benefits trebled. Growth in the caseload has since slowed significantly, and in November 2005, there were 2.71 million people claiming incapacity benefits, a fall of 61,000 over the year. Although 46 per cent. of those claiming incapacity benefits are aged between 50 and state pension age, between 2000 and 2005 the number of people in the 50-plus age group fell by 52,000. This has contributed to the overall reduction in the incapacity benefits caseload.

Like other age groups, people aged 50 and over will be able to benefit from the rollout of the successful pathways to work service across the whole country which will be completed by 2008. Pathways offers new IB customers early support from skilled personal advisers and direct access to a 'Choices Package' of employment programmes and clear financial incentives to make work pay. Any IB customer will be able to access the support and help available on a voluntary basis. Pathways has already begun helping people in the Rotherham area, having rolled out there in April.

Our age positive campaign works with employers and others to promote the business benefits of an age diverse workforce and best practice on age in recruitment, training and promotion. In May 2005 we launched the 'Be Ready' national information campaign to raise employer awareness of, and ability to adopt, flexible employment and retirement opportunities to support the recruitment and retention of older workers in advance of age legislation due in October 2006.

Health and Safety

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many health and safety at work stability duties are defined in legislation as (a) absolute and (b) qualified as duties reduced to what is (i) reasonably practicable, (ii) practicable, (iii) reasonable, (iv) appropriate, (v) suitable and (vi) adequate. [76598]

Mrs. McGuire: The key duties in the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974, to protect people from harm, are qualified by the term "reasonably practicable". However in Regulations made under the Act there are a number of specific duties that are absolute and others that are qualified by terms including "reasonable" and "practicable". Guidance is used to explain what is needed in practice. In terms of the specific number of times each term is used to qualify a duty in the various statutory provisions, this information is not held and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Human Resource Functions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the development of human resource functions within Departmental activities. [76521]

Mrs. McGuire: When the new Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) was formed in 2002, the Human Resources (HR) function inherited different sets of legacy HR policies and terms and conditions; paper driven systems: HR Service Centres dominated by low value added data input; Business HR teams preoccupied with detailed transactional based advice; and Corporate HR focussed on developing and maintaining detailed and over-prescriptive HR guidance.

Working with colleagues from the DWP Businesses, the HR Senior Management Team designed a new HR Operating Model based on best practice in both the private and public sectors. The HR function now has in place a set of HR job roles common across the Department, delivering a uniform HR service.

This new HR Operating Model places the emphasis on self service for employees and line managers, with on-line access to HR processes through the new Resource Management IT system which will be fully implemented in 2007. This is supported by a telephone based advice and guidance service provided by integrated HR and Finance shared service centres, and accessed through a single telephone number.

The new Operating Model for HR in DWP has already allowed for a reduction in HR staff numbers from 5,500 to 3,000, and by March 2008 that number will be reduced by a further 500. This has freed up resources for front line work with our clients.

Business HR teams focus on working strategically with operational managers on the HR issues affecting business performance. Corporate HR has been restructured to form four new Centres of Expertise which have improved and simplified the Department's HR policies, making them easier for line managers to interpret and use.

Jobseeker Assistance

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what arrangements are in place to manage the transition of individuals from jobseeker to student status. [76317]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There are no special arrangements in place to help a person make the transition from a jobseeker to student status.

Mesothelioma

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what funds are available to pay compensation to people who suffer from mesothelioma due to exposure to asbestos in the workplace when their employers or insurers cannot be traced; and if he will make a statement. [78573]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 19 June 2006]: People suffering from mesothelioma due to exposure in the workplace can make a claim for Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit (IIDB), Constant Attendance Allowance (CAA) and Exceptionally Severe Disablement Allowance (ESDA). From July 2002 people suffering from mesothelioma were exempted from the need to be medically examined by the Department if clear evidence is already available to confirm their condition. Alongside that change regulations were introduced to automatically award IIDB at the 100 per cent. rate. Currently this is £127.10. In addition CAA may also be payable dependant upon the level of the person's care needs. There are four rates of payment ranging from £25.45 to £101.80 a week. Where the two higher rates of CAA are in payment Exceptionally Severe Disablement Allowance (ESDA) may also be payable at the current weekly rate of £50.90. Where the relevant employer is no longer in business the person may also make a claim under the Pneumoconiosis etc. (Worker's Compensation) 1979 Act scheme where the current average payment is £13,000.

Pensions

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners receive their pension (a) every week in advance, (b) every four weeks in arrears and (c) every 13 weeks in arrears. [76632]

James Purnell: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the likely effect of implementation of the Pensions White Paper proposals on achieving the Government's target of raising from 40 to 60 per cent., by 2020, the proportion of a pensioner's income coming from investments rather than taxes. [79614]

James Purnell: The proposals in the White Paper, 'Security in Retirement—Towards a New Pensions System' (Cm 6841) provide the basis for an affordable and sustainable pensions system, which strikes a new balance of responsibility between employers, the State and individuals. As set out on p175 (para C.6) of the White Paper,

> "it is proposed to cease monitoring progress against this PSA target from the start of the 2007 CSR period, and to investigate a more appropriate target regime".

Staff Absenteeism

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many working days were lost to his Department and its executive agencies in each year since 1997 due to staff absenteeism, expressed as the average annual number of absent days per employee; and what the estimated total cost to the Department and its agencies of absenteeism was in each year. [76891]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The information is contained in the following tables. The source of the figures is the Cabinet Office's annual reports on sickness absence in the Civil Service. Information for 2005 is not yet available.

Absenteeism has been taken to mean absences due to sickness absence.

The Department for Work and Pensions was created in July 2001, but it was not until 2003 that the systems for recording the relevant data were combined. The figures prior to 2003 therefore reflect the position in the Employment Service and Department for Social Security (and its agencies). The tables do not contain information about the Disability and Carers Agency because it did not exist as an executive agency prior to 2005.

Bridget Prentice: 13 staff are employed in the DCA press office.

In accordance with civil service policy, information concerning the ethnic origin (or disability status) of individuals may not be disclosed where the number of staff in a particular category is less than five. This is to ensure that individuals cannot be identified.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was collected in fines in each magistrates court area in England and Wales in each year since 1997; how much and what percentage was not collected; and if she will make a statement. [78833]

Ms Harman: In response to how much was collected in fines in each magistrates court area in England and Wales, how much and what percentage was not collected, please see the following summary table. It is not possible to supply data before the financial year 1999-2000.

Courts Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the operation of the Courts Act 2003; and what recent representations she has received about the operation of this Act. [78831]

Ms Harman: The Courts Act 2003 (CA 2003) has implemented the courts-related recommendations contained in Sir Robin Auld's review of the Criminal Courts in England and Wales (published in 2001). I have not received any recent representations concerning the operation of the CA 2003, which I continue to keep under review.

Data Protection

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many organisations have (a) been found guilty of breaches of the Data Protection Act 1998 and (b) been taken to court since it came into force. [78972]

Vera Baird: Failure to comply with the provisions of the Data Protection Act is not in itself a criminal offence. Criminal offences can be committed under section 17 (processing personal data without notification) and section 55 (unlawful obtaining and selling of personal data).

Since the Act came into force the Information Commissioner, who is the independent supervisory authority, has successfully prosecuted individuals and organisations in the criminal courts on 46 different occasions for offences under sections 17 and 55 of the Act. These figures do not include all those who have breached the Act or been served with an enforcement notice for a breach which is not a criminal offence.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many staff in her Department have had (a) five or more, (b) four, (c) three and (d) two periods of sick leave of less than five days in each of the last three years. [73006]

Vera Baird: The number of sickness absence days is recorded by the Department; however while it is possible to extract information on absence spells from the data collection system currently in place, to do so would be a lengthy process, the cost of which would exceed the disproportionate cost threshold.

The Department is committed to managing sickness absence effectively and has actively adopted the recommendations of the recently published "Managing Sickness Absence in the Public Sector". A number of initiatives, including a new managing attendance policy and supporting systems, have been implemented over the last six months. These include awareness sessions and training for individuals and managers, stress and managing attendance toolkits, and targeted support from HR and welfare teams.

Departmental Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many websites there are within her responsibilities; and what the total cost of maintaining such websites was in the last year for which figures are available. [79071]

Bridget Prentice: The information requested is listed in the following table.

The table includes details and costs of websites.

Numbers [1] and [2] indicate the hosting contract to which the website belongs. The costs of the two contracts are listed in the notes.

Where a site has a declared cost but also comes under the auspices of a wider maintenance contract, the declared figure relates to costs incurred over and above the maintenance and hosting contract (such as domain name registration or software licence procurement).

Entries with declared cost only do not belong to either hosting contract.

Substantive answer from Ms Harman to David T.C. Davies:

Parliamentary Questions - Accredited list of paternity testers

You tabled a number of questions relating to the list maintained by the Department for Constitutional Affairs of bodies which may carry out court directed scientific tests for parentage (numbers 20036, 20110, 20111, 20120 to 20125, 20883, 21275, 21276, 21598 to 21601, 22730 22744, and 22745. The answers are contained in a paper that has been placed in the libraries of both Houses today. I enclose a copy.

Accreditation of Paternity Testing Bodies by the Department for Constitutional Affairs

Introduction

This paper covers the ground raised in Parliamentary Questions (numbers 20036, 20110, 20111, 20120 to 20125, 20883, 21275, 21276, 21598 to 21601, 22730, 22744, 22745 and 25226) tabled in the Commons toward the end of last year.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs maintains a list of bodies accredited by it to carry out scientific tests for parentage (nowadays usually DNA tests) under section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969. This list is for use by the civil courts in England and Wales where the court makes a direction under section 20 of the 1969 Act.

"Section 20 directions" are not given in every civil case where parentage is an issue. Where parties submit DNA evidence by agreement and without any section 20 direction being given, it is not essential for the testing body to be chosen from the accredited list. As with other evidence, it is for the court to consider questions of admissibility and weight of the evidence.

Background to the accredited list

The Family Law Reform Act 1969 made provision for court-directed blood testing to determine paternity. The provisions were amended in the Child Support Pensions and Social Security Act 2000, to refer to "scientific tests" (reflecting the development of DNA technology which could be applied to bodily samples other than blood). References to "paternity" were replaced with "parentage" so as to be gender-neutral.

Section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969 provides that in any civil proceedings a court may give a direction for the use of scientific tests to ascertain whether such tests show that a party to the proceedings is or is not the father or mother of a person whose parentage falls to be determined. By virtue of subsection (1A), tests may only be carried out by a body which has been accredited for the purposes of section 20 by the Lord Chancellor, or a body appointed by him for the purpose. Section 20(2) of the 1969 Act provides that the individual carrying out court-directed scientific tests must report to the court stating the results, whether a person is excluded from parentage and (if not) the value of the results in determining parentage. The report is to be received as evidence of the matters stated. It must be in a prescribed form (subsection (3)). Any party may seek a written explanation or amplification, which is deemed to be part of the report (subsection (4)). A party must serve notice of an intention to call the tester within 14 days of receiving the report. It is expresaly provided that where the tester is called as a witness the party is entitled to cross-examine him.(subsection (5)).

Section 22 provides that the Lord Chancellor may make regulations about "section 20 directions" and may prescribe conditions for eligibility for accreditation (subsection (1)(f)). The regulations are the Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971, as amended (including to reflect the 2000 Act).

The Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971, as amended

These Regulations set out the detailed changes that made it possible for bodily samples other than blood to be taken, and for scientific tests to be used to establish whether a person is a natural parent of the person whose parentage is to be determined. The Regulations also provided that the tests were to be carried out by an accredited body (rather than an individual, which was the case under the previous scheme).

Regulation 8A provides that a body shall not be eligible for accreditation for the purposes of section 20 of the 1969 Act unless it is accredited to ISO/IEC/17025 by an accreditation body which complies with the requirements of ISO Guide 58 (now replaced by ISO 17011).

The Regulations also deal with the procedures for taking bodily samples, despatch to a tester, testing and then reporting to the court. The Regulations require the completion of 2 statutory forms. Form 1 is called a "Direction Form" and is to be filled in by the court, the sampler and the tester. Form 2 is called "Report by Tester" and is to be filled in by the tester. All of this is designed to ensure that the right people actually provide samples, that the same samples reach the tester, and that the nominated tester does the testing and reports to the court.

Criteria for DCA accreditation prior to the recent review

The ISO accreditation is a statutory requirement for "section 20" accreditation by the Department, as set out above. Bodies wishing to be added to the Department's accredited list were expected to produce evidence (either an original or a certified copy) of a valid and current ISO/IEC/17025 accreditation certificate, given by an accreditation body that complies with ISO/IEC Guide 58 (now ISO 17011).

A further non-statutory requirement was added, as a matter of policy. This was a requirement to give an undertaking to comply with the Department of Health's Code of Practice and Guidance on Genetic Paternity Testing Services. This Code sets out best practice and clear standards for organisations delivering paternity testing services generally.

These criteria were put in place in 2001, when the Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001 No. 773) came into effect.

More recent practice has been to require that written applications be made to be added to the DCA accredited list.

The particular International Standards Organisation (ISO) standards were chosen because they were considered to be the most appropriate standards for this area of activity. ISO/IEC/ 17025 is an accreditation given to testing and calibration laboratories that meet certain competence requirements. There was no formal or public consultation on the criteria chosen for accreditation, but the 2001 Regulations, as a statutory instrument, had the approval of Parliament. The Department of Health's Code was put together by an ad-hoc advisory group on genetic paternity testing services, whose membership included service providers, clinicians, academics and scientists.

Ensuring compliance with ISO/IEC 17025 standards

The accreditation bodies ensure compliance with ISO/IEC 17025 by undertaking regular reviews and re-accreditations. Because accreditation bodies are the technical experts, it is not necessary or appropriate for representatives of the Department themselves to visit any of the DCA-accredited laboratories, and no-one from the Department has ever done so. For the purposes of DCA accreditation, if an up to date and valid ISO 17025 certificate is produced (an original or certified copy) and the accreditation body is ISO Guide 58 (now ISIO 17011) compliant, then this is proof enough of the laboratory's competence.

Bodies accredited by DCA are not permitted to contract out parentage tests directed by the court under s20 to any other organisation.

How the courts ensure accredited bodies carry out parentage tests where a section 20 direction is given

Where the court is considering an application for a paternity test in the course of civil proceedings, and the parties do not agree to the testing, then section 20 of the 1969 Act is available. The court may give a formal direction (on Form 1, a statutory form, part of the Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971 (as amended)) which will include the name and address of the body that is to carry out the test. The body will be chosen from the list of accredited bodies. The tester (a person employed to carry out scientific tests by an accredited laboratory) will complete and sign Form 2, (the Report by the Tester) to certify the result of the test. As explained above, the Regulations, which include the two statutory forms, are designed to ensure the authenticity and integrity of the samples, and that the nominated tester carries out and reports on the test.

The list the Department maintains relates only to bodies which may carry out court-directed scientific tests for parentage in accordance with a direction made by a court pursuant to section 20 of the Family Law Act 1969. Where the court has not directed the test, parties to a case may submit DNA evidence by agreement and in accordance with case management directions of the court. It is not essential for the testing body to be chosen from the accredited list. As with other evidence, it is for the court to consider questions of admissibility and weight.

The investigation

Starting in October last year, a number of Questions were tabled in Parliament and the Department received a number of press enquires about DNA Bioscience and the accredited list generally. This prompted an investigation as to the eligibility of each of the bodies on the accredited list, and the work also extended to a review of the processes and procedures associated with adding bodies to the list and the maintenance of it.

The review did not extend to any examination of the financial accounts of the bodies on the DCA accredited list. DCA has no responsibility in this area. The bodies on the accredited list do not provide services to the Department. The accredited list simply exists to provide the civil courts with the names of bodies that reach a certain standard for use when the court directs a test under section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969.

The courts dealing with civil proceedings (including family proceedings) were informed about the review, and of the details of the laboratories to which referrals for court-directed tests should be made until the accredited list was re-issued. The laboratories concerned had provided the Department with up to date evidence they had the requisite ISO/IEC 17025 accreditation and with up to date undertakings that they complied with the Department of Health's Code.

The Department undertook to remove ineligible bodies from the accredited list. There were six bodies that were found to be ineligible, including DNA Diagnostics Center and DNA Bioscience, three public sector laboratories (one of which no longer carries out paternity testing) and one body, not itself a testing body, which works in conjunction with another public sector laboratory. These bodies can no longer carry out section 20 tests and the civil courts have been informed. However, the Department has found no evidence that any individual or organisation has supplied misleading or incorrect information during the accreditation process and so further action taken against any individual or company would not be appropriate.

DNA Diagnostics Center and DNA Bioscience

DNA Bioscience was not, itself, accredited by the DCA to carry out court-directed tests under s20. It was not a testing facility, so had no ISO 17025 accreditation and therefore was not eligible. Following an application from DNA Bioscience, DCA agreed in October 2003 that DNA Diagnostics Center (the laboratory DNA Bioscience used to conduct DNA tests) could be added to the accredited list. DNA Diagnostics Center is a US laboratory with ISO/IEC/17025 accreditation, accredited by Forensic Quality Services - a US accreditation body. DNA Diagnostics Center was shown on the accredited list with a Chelmsford address then belonging to DNA Bioscience. The Department was aware that DNA Bioscience was acting as an intermediary for DNA Diagnostics Center.

The Department agreed orally in December 2004 that DNA Bioscience's details could be added to the accredited list, but DNA Bioscience did not make an application to be added to the accredited list on its own account. The intention was to add those details as a referral route to the accredited body (DNA Diagnostics Center).

The Department is not aware of anything to suggest that reliable evidence was not produced for the courts in relation to court-directed tests.

No DCA Minister, current or past, has had any communication, conversation, or correspondence with David Runkett about DNA Bioscience.

Applications turned down and laboratories closed down

From the Departmental records available, it appears that one application was received in 2003 from a laboratory that had no ISO 17025 accreditation. The laboratory in question indicated that they intended to apply for ISO 17025 accreditation, but nothing further was heard from them.

Nothing has been found in the Department's records that are now available to indicate that any laboratory accredited by DCA to carry our court-directed parentage tests has closed down in the past five years.

Bodies currently accredited

The following laboratories, all based in the UK, have submitted evidence of valid and up to date accreditation to the relevant ISO standard. They have recently given signed undertakings to comply with revised criteria (see "New criteria"). They were all bodies on the previous list.

Cellmark Diagnostics (now Orchid Cellmark),

Crucial Genetics,

LGC Diagnostics, and

The Forensic Science Service

No laboratories outside the UK are currently accredited, but there is no statutory bar on the accreditation of overseas laboratories. The Department will continue to consider application from laboratories, wherever situated (see "New criteria" below).

New criteria and policy

As a result of the review, the Department will now require applications to be made on a form prescribed by it, signed and submitted in hard copy.

As before, bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must have a current and valid ISO/IEC 17025 certificate that has been issued by an accreditation body which complies with ISO/IEC 17011 (formerly ISO Guide 58) An original certificate or a certified copy must be submitted with the application form. There is a new requirement that the accreditation body must also be a full member of the International Laboratory Accreditation Cooperation (ILAC). The Department considers that this is needed to demonstrate independent evidence of ISO/IES 17011 compliance. The United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS) is the UK body that complies with this new requirement.

Bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must undertake to comply with the Code of Practice and Guidance on Genetic Paternity Testing Services, published by the Department of Health, or any revised version thereof.

With regard to the Code, although the undertaking applies to parentage tests directed by the court pursuant to s20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969, the Government strongly encourages providers of genetic paternity testing services to adhere to the Code for all tests. Applicants will be made aware of that view and will be informed that when section 45 of the Human Tissue Act comes into force later this year, it will be a criminal offence to take DNA, with the intention of having it tested, without consent.

Bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must undertake to comply, or ensure compliance with, the procedures as set out in the Blood Test (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971 (SI 1971/1861) (as amended).

Bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must undertake to limit any statement regarding DCA accredited status on any promotional material, advertising, or web-site information to the following:

"[Name of Organisation] has been accredited by the Department for Constitutional Affairs as a body that may carry out parentage tests directed by the civil courts in England and Wales under section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969".

Applicants will be advised that the Department regards phrases such as 'Government approved', 'Lord Chancellor approved' or 'DCA approved' as misleading and therefore not acceptable.

All organisations on the DCA accredited list will be expected to be subject to an annual review to confirm eligibility, including compliance with the accreditation criteria to remain on the list. This will include giving renewed undertakings as set out above and ensuring compliance with any revised criteria.

In future, the Department will not accept applications from intermediaries. The Department will continue to consider applications from laboratories outside the UK, but if any should meet the (revised) criteria and are added to the list, they will be shown with their overseas addresses and other contact details. If an overseas laboratory makes an application proposing to use an intermediary in the UK, the laboratory will be asked to explain how its proposed use of an intermediary would conform with the relevant legislation (The Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971 (as amended)).

This information and guidance will be published on the Department's web-site.

Applications pending

The Department currently has seven applications or enquiries about how to apply which the Department will now pursue and consider against the revised list of criteria. A revised list will then be issued.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether DNA Bioscience is accredited for DNA-related work in the UK. [25226]

Substantive answer from Ms Harman to Mr. Laws:

Parliamentary Question - Accredited list of paternity testers

You tabled a question asking whether DNA Bioscience is accredited for DNA-related work in the UK (number 25226). The answer is contained in the paper, covering a number of issues on the accreditation of DNA paternity testers, which has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses today. I enclose a copy.

Accreditation of Paternity Testing Bodies by the Department for Constitutional Affairs

Introduction

This paper covers the ground raised in Parliamentary Questions (numbers 20036, 20110, 20111, 20120 to 20125, 20883, 21275, 21276, 21598 to 21601, 22730, 22744, 22745 and 25226) tabled in the Commons toward the end of last year.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs maintains a list of bodies accredited by it to carry out scientific tests for parentage (nowadays usually DNA tests) under section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969. This list is for use by the civil courts in England and Wales where the court makes a direction under section 20 of the 1969 Act.

"Section 20 directions" are not given in every civil case where parentage is an issue. Where parties submit DNA evidence by agreement and without any section 20 direction being given, it is not essential for the testing body to be chosen from the accredited list. As with other evidence, it is for the court to consider questions of admissibility and weight of the evidence.

Background to the accredited list

The Family Law Reform Act 1969 made provision for court-directed blood testing to determine paternity. The provisions were amended in the Child Support Pensions and Social Security Act 2000, to refer to "scientific tests" (reflecting the development of DNA technology which could be applied to bodily samples other than blood). References to "paternity" were replaced with "parentage" so as to be gender-neutral.

Section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969 provides that in any civil proceedings a court may give a direction for the use of scientific tests to ascertain whether such tests show that a party to the proceedings is or is not the father or mother of a person whose parentage falls to be determined. By virtue of subsection (1A), tests may only be carried out by a body which has been accredited for the purposes of section 20 by the Lord Chancellor, or a body appointed by him for the purpose. Section 20(2) of the 1969 Act provides that the individual carrying out court-directed scientific tests must report to the court stating the results, whether a person is excluded from parentage and (if not) the value of the results in determining parentage. The report is to be received as evidence of the matters stated. It must be in a prescribed form (subsection (3)). Any party may seek a written explanation or amplification, which is deemed to be part of the report (subsection (4)). A party must serve notice of an intention to call the tester within 14 days of receiving the report. It is expressly provided that where the tester is called as a witness the party is entitled to cross-examine him (subsection (5)).

Section 22 provides that the Lord Chancellor may make regulations about "section 20 directions" and may prescribe conditions for eligibility for accreditation (subsection (1)(f)). The regulations are the Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971, as amended (including to reflect the 2000 Act).

The Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971, as amended

These Regulations set out the detailed changes that made it possible for bodily samples other than blood to be taken, and for scientific tests to be used to establish whether a person is a natural parent of the person whose parentage is to be determined. The Regulations also provided that the tests were to be carried out by an accredited body (rather than an individual, which was the case under the previous scheme).

Regulation 8A provides that a body shall not be eligible for accreditation for the purposes of section 20 of the 1969 Act unless it is accredited to ISO/IEC/17025 by an accreditation body which complies with the requirements of ISO Guide 58 (now replaced by ISO 17011).

The Regulations also deal with the procedures for taking bodily samples, despatch to a tester, testing and then reporting to the court. The Regulations require the completion of 2 statutory forms. Form 1 is called a "Direction Form" and is to be filled in by the court, the sampler and the tester. Form 2 is called "Report by Tester" and is to be filled in by the tester. All of this is designed to ensure that the right people actually provide samples, that the same samples reach the tester, and that the nominated tester does the testing and reports to the court.

Criteria for DCA accreditation prior to the recent review

The ISO accreditation is a statutory requirement for "section 20" accreditation by the Department, as set out above. Bodies wishing to be added to the Department's accredited list were expected to produce evidence (either an original or a certified copy) of a valid and current ISO/IEC/17025 accreditation certificate, given by an accreditation body that complies with ISO/IEC Guide 58 (now ISO 17011).

A further non-statutory requirement was added, as a matter of policy. This was a requirement to give an undertaking to comply with the Department of Health's Code of Practice and Guidance on Genetic Paternity Testing Services. This Code sets out best practice and clear standards for organisations delivering paternity testing services generally.

These criteria were put in place in 2001, when the Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) (Amendment) Regulations 2001 (SI 2001 No. 773) came into effect.

More recent practice has been to require that written applications be made to be added to the DCA accredited list.

The particular International Standards Organisation (ISO) standards were chosen because they were considered to be the most appropriate standards for this area of activity. ISO/IEC/17025 is an accreditation given to testing and calibration laboratories that meet certain competence requirements. There was no formal or public consultation on the criteria chosen for accreditation, but the 2001 Regulations, as a statutory instrument, had the approval of Parliament. The Department of Health's Code was put together by an ad-hoc advisory group on genetic paternity testing services, whose membership included service providers, clinicians, academics and scientists.

Ensuring compliance with ISO/IEC 17025 standards

The accreditation bodies ensure compliance with ISO/IEC 17025 by undertaking regular reviews and re-accreditations. Because accreditation bodies are the technical experts, it is not necessary or appropriate for representatives of the Department themselves to visit any of the DCA-accredited laboratories, and no-one from the Department has ever done so. For the purposes of DCA accreditation, if an up to date and valid ISO 17025 certificate is produced (an original or certified copy) and the accreditation body is ISO Guide 58 (now ISIO 17011) compliant, then this is proof enough of the laboratory's competence.

Bodies accredited by DCA are not permitted to contract out parentage tests directed by the court under s20 to any other organisation.

How the courts ensure accredited bodies carry out parentage tests where a section 20 direction is given

Where the court is considering an application for a paternity test in the course of civil proceedings, and the parties do not agree to the testing, then section 20 of the 1969 Act is available. The court may give a formal direction (on Form 1, a statutory form, part of the Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971 (as amended)) which will include the name and address of the body that is to carry out the test. The body will be chosen from the list of accredited bodies. The tester (a person employed to carry out scientific tests by an accredited laboratory) will complete and sign Form 2, (the Report by the Tester) to certify the result of the test. As explained above, the Regulations, which include the two statutory forms, are designed to ensure the authenticity and integrity of the samples, and that the nominated tester carries out and reports on the test.

The list the Department maintains relates only to bodies which may carry out court-directed scientific tests for parentage in accordance with a direction made by a court pursuant to section 20 of the Family Law Act 1969. Where the court has not directed the test, parties to a case may submit DNA evidence by agreement and in accordance with case management directions of the court. It is not essential for the testing body to be chosen from the accredited list. As with other evidence, it is for the court to consider questions of admissibility and weight.

The investigation

Starting in October last year, a number of Questions were tabled in Parliament and the Department received a number of press enquires about DNA Bioscience and the accredited list generally. This prompted an investigation as to the eligibility of each of the bodies on the accredited list, and the work also extended to a review of the processes and procedures associated with adding bodies to the list and the maintenance of it.

The review did not extend to any examination of the financial accounts of the bodies on the DCA accredited list. DCA has no responsibility in this area. The bodies on the accredited list do not provide services to the Department. The accredited list simply exists to provide the civil courts with the names of bodies that reach a certain standard for use when the court directs a test under section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969.

The courts dealing with civil proceedings (including family proceedings) were informed about the review, and of the details of the laboratories to which referrals for court-directed tests should be made until the accredited list was re-issued. The laboratories concerned had provided the Department with up to date evidence they had the requisite ISO/IEC 17025 accreditation and with up to date undertakings that they complied with the Department of Health's Code.

The Department undertook to remove ineligible bodies from the accredited list. There were six bodies that were found to be ineligible, including DNA Diagnostics Center and DNA Bioscience, three public sector laboratories (one of which no longer carries out paternity testing) and one body, not itself a testing body, which works in conjunction with another public sector laboratory. These bodies can no longer carry out section 20 tests and the civil courts have been informed. However, the Department has found no evidence that any individual or organisation has supplied misleading or incorrect information during the accreditation process and so further action taken against any individual or company would not be appropriate.

DNA Diagnostics Center and DNA Bioscience

DNA Bioscience was not, itself, accredited by the DCA to carry out court-directed tests under s20. It was not a testing facility, so had no ISO 17025 accreditation and therefore was not eligible. Following an application from DNA Bioscience, DCA agreed in October 2003 that DNA Diagnostics Center (the laboratory DNA Bioscience used to conduct DNA tests) could be added to the accredited list. DNA Diagnostics Center is a US laboratory with ISO/IEC/17025 accreditation, accredited by Forensic Quality Services - a US accreditation body. DNA Diagnostics Center was shown on the accredited list with a Chelmsford address then belonging to DNA Bioscience. The Department was aware that DNA Bioscience was acting as an intermediary for DNA Diagnostics Center.

The Department agreed orally in December 2004 that DNA Bioscience's details could be added to the accredited list, but DNA Bioscience did not make an application to be added to the accredited list on its own account. The intention was to add those details as a referral route to the accredited body (DNA Diagnostics Center).

The Department is not aware of anything to suggest that reliable evidence was not produced for the courts in relation to court-directed tests.

No DCA Minister, current or past, has had any communication, conversation, or correspondence with David Blunkett about DNA Bioscience.

Applications turned down and laboratories closed down

From the Departmental records available, it appears that one application was received in 2003 from a laboratory that had no ISO 17025 accreditation. The laboratory in question indicated that they intended to apply for ISO 17025 accreditation, but nothing further was heard from them.

Nothing has been found in the Department's records that are now available to indicate that any laboratory accredited by DCA to carry our court-directed parentage tests has closed down in the past five years.

Bodies currently accredited

The following laboratories, all based in the UK, have submitted evidence of valid and up to date accreditation to the relevant ISO standard. They have recently given signed undertakings to comply with revised criteria (see "New criteria"). They were all bodies on the previous list.

Cellmark Diagnostics (now Orchid Cellmark),

Crucial Genetics,

LGC Diagnostics, and

The Forensic Science Service

No laboratories outside the UK are currently accredited, but there is no statutory bar on the accreditation of overseas laboratories. The Department will continue to consider application from laboratories, wherever situated (see "New criteria" below).

New criteria and policy

As a result of the review, the Department will now require applications to be made on a form prescribed by it, signed and submitted in hard copy.

As before, bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must have a current and valid ISO/IEC 17025 certificate that has been issued by an accreditation body which complies with ISO/IEC 17011 (formerly ISO Guide 58) An original certificate or a certified copy must be submitted with the application form. There is a new requirement that the accreditation body must also be a full member of the International Laboratory Accreditation Cooperation (ILAC). The Department considers that this is needed to demonstrate independent evidence of ISO/IES 17011 compliance. The United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS) is the UK body that complies with this new requirement.

Bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must undertake to comply with the Code of Practice and Guidance on Genetic Paternity Testing Services, published by the Department of Health, or any revised version thereof.

With regard to the Code, although the undertaking applies to parentage tests directed by the court pursuant to s20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969, the Government strongly encourages providers of genetic paternity testing services to adhere to the Code for all tests. Applicants will be made aware of that view and will be informed that when section 45 of the Human Tissue Act comes into force later this year, it will be a criminal offence to take DNA, with the intention of having it tested, without consent.

Bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must undertake to comply, or ensure compliance with, the procedures as set out in the Blood Test (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971 (SI 1971/1861) (as amended).

Bodies wishing to be added to the accredited list must undertake to limit any statement regarding DCA accredited status on any promotional material, advertising, or web-site information to the following:

"[Name of Organisation] has been accredited by the Department for Constitutional Affairs as a body that may carry out parentage tests directed by the civil courts in England and Wales under section 20 of the Family Law Reform Act 1969".

Applicants will be advised that the Department regards phrases such as 'Government approved', 'Lord Chancellor approved' or 'DCA approved' as misleading and therefore not acceptable.

All organisations on the DCA accredited list will be expected to be subject to an annual review to confirm eligibility, including compliance with the accreditation criteria to remain on the list. This will include giving renewed undertakings as set out above and ensuring compliance with any revised criteria.

In future, the Department will not accept applications from intermediaries. The Department will continue to consider applications from laboratories outside the UK, but if any should meet the (revised) criteria and are added to the list, they will be shown with their overseas addresses and other contact details. If an overseas laboratory makes an application proposing to use an intermediary in the UK, the laboratory will be asked to explain how its proposed use of an intermediary would conform with the relevant legislation (The Blood Tests (Evidence of Paternity) Regulations 1971 (as amended)).

This information and guidance will be published on the Department's web-site.

Applications pending

The Department currently has seven applications or enquiries about how to apply which the Department will now pursue and consider against the revised list of criteria. A revised list will then be issued.

Electoral Registration

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which local authorities use telephone registration to register electors. [79078]

Bridget Prentice: A number of local authorities use telephone registration to register electors. As electoral services are delivered at local level the information sought would be held by individual local authorities and is not collected by central Government.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what rules govern registration to vote by telephone; and whether she plans to change these rules. [79079]

Bridget Prentice: Section 10 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 requires electoral registration officers (EROs) to use a form when carrying out an annual canvass for the purpose of compiling the electoral register. When doing this there is no bar in current electoral legislation to EROs using telephone systems to enable households to report no change to the information given during the previous annual canvass. There are no plans to change these rules.

Repossessions

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many court orders have been issued for the repossession of homes in (a) Bury St. Edmunds constituency and (b) the Suffolk county council area in each year since 1997. [79389]

Ms Harman: The following table shows the number of mortgage possession orders made at each of the Suffolk county courts (Bury St. Edmonds, Ipswich and Lowestoft) since 1997.

The civil procedure rules provide that all claims for the repossession of land must be commenced in the district in which the land is situated. However, these county courts cover areas that are not necessarily consistent with other administrative boundaries, and therefore there may be possession actions entered in these courts that relate to homes located outside Suffolk.

These figures do not indicate how many houses have been repossessed through the courts, since not all the orders will have resulted in the issue and execution of warrants of possession.

Number of mortgage[1] possession orders made at Bury St. Edmunds county court and other Suffolk county courts, 1997 to 2005

	Possession orders made[2]
	Bury St. Edmunds	Ipswich	Lowestoft	Suffolk
1997	56	113	50	219
1998	68	117	58	243
1999	72	136	37	245
2000	37	66	75	178
2001	35	51	58	144
2002	18	60	54	132
2003	48	46	64	158
2004	47	79	82	208
2005	99	123	125	347

[1] Local Authority and Private.

[2] The court, following a judicial hearing, may grant an order for possession immediately. This entitles the claimant to apply for a warrant to have the defendant evicted. However, even where a warrant for possession is issued, the parties can still negotiate a compromise to prevent eviction.

HEALTH

Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department was consulted by the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists prior to the publication of its guidance The Care of Women Requesting Induced Abortion; and if she will make a statement. [77596]

Caroline Flint: The Department had the opportunity to comment on the draft of the evidence-based guideline prior to its publication in 2000 and its revision in 2004.

Adult Mental Health Services (Milton Keynes)

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action she is taking to ensure delivery of Milton Keynes Primary Care Trust's proposals to redesign adult mental health services; [79444]

(2) if she will take steps to ensure that reductions are not made in adult and older people's mental health services in Milton Keynes. [79445]

Caroline Flint: It is for primary care trusts in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

Alcohol Dependency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding is available in 2006-07 for the treatment of alcohol dependency when that dependency is not secondary to class A drug misuse. [77934]

Caroline Flint: National health service primary care trusts are responsible for commissioning alcohol misuse treatment according to local need. The estimated annual spend on specialist alcohol treatment is £217 million.

Autism

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in Stroud constituency are diagnosed with autism; and how many of these are children. [77808]

Caroline Flint: Information on the number of people including children in the Stroud constituency who are diagnosed with autism is not available.

Avastin

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what Government policy is on the availability of Avastin for the treatment of bowel cancer. [75848]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Bevacizumab (Avastin) in combination with irinotecan, is currently licensed for the first-line treatment of patients with metastatic bowel cancer. The National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently assessing the use of Avastin in the treatment of bowel cancer and final guidance from NICE is expected in November 2006.

In the interim period, the Department has made clear to the national health service, in guidance issued in 1999, that primary care trusts should not refuse to fund specific drugs or treatments simply because they have not yet been appraised by NICE. In these circumstances health bodies are expected to reach their own decisions on whether to use the drug based on their assessment of the available evidence.

Bebington and West Wirral Primary Care Trust

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has held with Bebington and West Wirral Primary Care Trust on (a) the siting of new practice clinics and (b) the provision of funding to patient groups lobbying for development in the green belt. [77258]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No discussions have been held with Bebington and West Wirral primary care trust regarding the siting of new practice clinics and the provision of funding to patient groups lobbying for development in the green belt. The provision of local healthcare facilities is the responsibility of primary care trusts with the support of their strategic health authorities.

Botox Syringes

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) her Department and (b) its agencies have assessed the merits of the over-the-counter sale of pre-filled Botox syringes. [79577]

Andy Burnham: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) is responsible for reviewing the reclassification of the legal status of a medicinal product from prescription only to over-the-counter supply. An assessment of the suitability of a medicinal product for pharmacy or general sale list sale or supply usually follows an application from a marketing authorisation holder. Any application to change the legal status of a particular medicine will be considered carefully against the criteria in European and United Kingdom legislation. Patient safety remains the prime consideration and any application would be required to demonstrate its safety in use and that relevant patient and professional education issues had been addressed adequately.

The MHRA has not considered the reclassification of products containing botulinum type A neurotoxin, such as Botox.

Cancer

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of patients referred by their general practitioner with suspected breast cancer were assessed by a specialist within two weeks in each of the last three years; [77237]

(2) what percentage of patients have been treated for breast cancer within six weeks of (a) diagnosis and (b) referral by general practitioner over the last 12 months. [77238]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In the last three years 99.3 per cent. of patients with breast cancer were seen by a specialist within two weeks of urgent referral by their general practitioner, in England.

Data on waiting times for cancer treatment is not recorded in the format requested. In England, the NHS Cancer Plan introduced cancer waiting times standards of a maximum one month wait from diagnosis with breast cancer to first treatment and a maximum two months from urgent general practitioner referral to first treatment for breast cancer to be achieved from December 2001 and December 2002 respectively. In the last twelve months 98.9 per cent. of patients received treatment for breast cancer within one month of diagnosis and 98.1 per cent. received treatment within two months of urgent referral by their general practitioner.

Data on national health service performance on all cancer waiting times targets is published quarterly on the Departments' website at:

www.performance.doh.gov.uk/cancerwaits/.

A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the press release issued by her Department on 2 June 2006, on fastest treatment ever for cancer patients, on what date the decision was taken that (a) 98 per cent. compliance would constitute success in meeting the 31-day waiting time target and (b) 95 per cent. compliance would constitute success in meeting the 62-day waiting time target. [77472]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Following discussions with the Healthcare Commission an agreement was reached on 24 June 2005 on the 5 per cent. and 2 per cent. tolerances for clinical exceptions for the 62 and 31-day cancer waiting times targets.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the accuracy and effectiveness of cervical cancer screening. [77235]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In May 2004, the international agency for research on cancer, part of the World Health Organisation, concluded that organised and quality controlled cervical screening can achieve an 80 per cent. reduction in the mortality of cervical cancer. Women aged 25 to 49 should be screened no more than every three years, and women aged 50 to 64 no more than every five years. This is in line with national policy on cervical screening in England.

In July 2004, Professor Julian Peto and colleagues published a paper in The Lancet, 'The cervical cancer epidemic that screening has prevented in the UK'. The paper concluded that cervical screening has prevented an epidemic that would have killed about one in 65 of all British women born since 1950 and culminated in about 6,000 deaths per year in this the United Kingdom. 80 per cent. or more of these deaths, up to 5,000 deaths per year, are likely to be prevented by screening, which means that about 100,000 women will have been saved from premature death by the cervical screening programme by 2030[1].

The advisory committee on cervical screening meets twice a year to advise the Government on the development of cervical screening and to monitor its effectiveness and efficiency.

In 2004-05 in England, 80.3 per cent. of eligible women had a test result in the last five years[2]. 3.6 million women were screened and laboratories reported four million tests.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how widespread is provision of human papilloma virus testing for screening against cervical cancer via the NHS. [77236]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Human papilloma virus (HPV) testing is currently only available in the national health service as part of research trials.

The Government are funding two such trials.

First is the trial of management of borderline and other low grade abnormal smears which is funded by the Medical Research Council. This study was set up to determine the most appropriate way to deal with HPV positive results and associated psychological issues. The study is due to report in 2007.

Second is a randomised trial of HPV testing in primary cervical screening, which is funded by the Department's health technology assessment programme (HTA). This trial is investigating the use of HPV testing as a primary screening tool. The study is due to report in mid-2008.

In addition, as part of the Government-funded pilot study of liquid based cytology, the Department also piloted the use of HPV testing as triage for women with mild or borderline test results. There is currently insufficient evidence to support the use of HPV testing as a primary screening tool. However, we do not underestimate the importance of HPV in the development of cervical cancer.

Following the receipt of the independent evaluation report of the HPV arm of the pilot, the advisory committee on cervical screening has now set up a dedicated working group to advise on how best to introduce HPV testing into the NHS Cervical Screening Programme.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Prostate Cancer Risk Management Programme; what funding has been allocated for the revision of the programme; and when this funding will be made available. [79497]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Prostate Cancer Risk Management Programme (PCRMP) is being reviewed based on the evidence of the evaluation of the programme, which has been carried out by the Cancer Research UK primary care education research group.

The evaluation was extensive. Two literature reviews have already appeared in academic journals:

Patient information, informed decision-making and the psycho-social impact of Prostate Specific Antigen (PSA) testing (Hewitson et al, British Journal of Urology International 2005;95(S3): 16-32)

Reduction in uptake of PSA tests following decision aids: systematic review of current aids and their evaluations (Evans et al, Patient Education and Counselling 2005;58:13-26)

The results of an on-line questionnaire survey with 400 general practitioners (GPs) examining current reported PSA testing practice in primary care as well as GP attitudes towards informed decision-making and PSA testing were published in the journal British Medical Council Family Practice (Brett et al, 2005;6:24).

The results of a randomised trial of men's knowledge, attitudes and intention to have a PSA test will be published in the journal Patient Education and Counselling later this year (Watson et al).

The results of an evaluation of the patient information sheet for men in the PCRMP information pack PSA testing for prostate cancer are due to be submitted to a journal shortly.

The report of a study to develop an understanding of what occurs in GP consultations which result in a request for a PSA test, from the perspective of the GP and the patient, is being written up prior to submitting for publication.

The PCRMP primary care packs will be rewritten based on the results of this extensive evaluation, and a consideration of any new evidence. This work will be overseen by the PCRMP scientific reference group, with close links to the prostate cancer advisory group and the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence prostate cancer guideline development group. The timing of the rewrite will depend on the extent of the changes to be made to the packs based on the evidence. A full consultation of the revised packs will take place. Funding will be made available to the national health service for this programme.

Care UK

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation process her Department undertook prior to awarding Care UK a contract for the running of a general practitioner practice and walk-in centre in Barking and Dagenham. [75315]

Caroline Flint: Strategic health authorities were asked by the Department to communicate with primary care trusts (PCTs) and gauge any interest in being involved in the innovation in primary care contracting programme, which was announced on 29 March 2005. Barking and Dagenham PCT expressed an interest in discussing the programme further and was identified as being suitable for the programme.

Responsibility for carrying out stakeholder involvement in relation to the services the PCTs wanted to procure lay with the PCTs and confirmation that this had taken place has been secured from the PCTs.

Health Care(Gloucestershire)

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) the Dilke memorial hospital and (b) the Lydney and district hospital are included on the choose and book system in Gloucestershire. [79622]

Caroline Flint: Both the Dilke memorial hospital and the Lydney and district hospital are listed on choose and book with services loaded.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) consultants' clinics have been held and (b) patients have attended such clinics in each month since January 2005 at (i) the Dilke memorial hospital and (ii) the Lydney and district hospital, broken down by consultant specialism. [79618]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not available.

Dentistry

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of dental practices in Norwich, North have decided to opt out of the NHS in the last 12 months; and how many dentists this figure represents. [65529]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 31 March 2006, there were 12 dental practices and 58 dentists within the Norwich, North parliamentary constituency working in the national health service general dental services (GDS) or personal dental services (PDS).

During the period 31 March 2005 to 31 March 2006, no dental practices left the GDS or PDS. During the same period, three dentists left the GDS or PDS, while 11 dentists joined the GDS or PDS, providing a net increase of eight dentists within the Norwich, North parliamentary constituency.

Norfolk's primary care trusts (PCTs) are reinvesting with local dental practices to enable them to treat more patients. They have also made other improvements to dental services with approximately 20 extra dentists being recruited to the county, in the last two years, using the Department's international recruitment scheme.

Information on the number of dentists who have signed the new contract by 1 April 2006 is not available centrally. We do however have some provisional information that covers contracts. A contract may be for more than one dentist so cannot be broken down further to individual dentist level. The following tables show the number of new dental services contracts that were signed and rejected at strategic health authority (SHA) level and by PCTs in the Norwich, North constituency area and the percentage of dental services these rejections represent.

SHA	Contracts signed	Contracts rejected	Units of dental activity (UDA) percentage (contracts rejected)
Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire	358	52	4

PCT	Contracts signed	Contracts rejected	UDA percentage (contracts rejected)
Norwich	30	7	6.4
Broadland	14	4	8.8
Southern Norfolk	33	5	5.8

Notes

1. Data have been provided by the Information Centre for health and social care and the data source is the Business Services Authority.
2. A dentist with a GDS or PDS contract may provide as little or as much NHS treatment as he or she chooses or has agreed with their PCT. Information concerning the amount of time dedicated to NHS work by individual GDS or PDS dentists is not centrally available.
3. Dentists consist of principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded.
4. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. Constituency areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics all fields postcode directory.
5. The data for dentists who have left the NHS include those who have retired.

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to monitor the impact of the new dental contract on access to dental care. [73300]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Under the new arrangements, the NHS Business Services Authority will monitor the numbers of patients who receive care or treatment from national health service primary care dentists on one or more occasions within a given period of time, as had previously been the system for most personal dental services pilots.

I have asked the implementation review group, which has been set up to review the impact of the NHS dental reforms and identify any issues that need to be addressed, for views on what time period should be used as the main basis for this monitoring.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has received representations from patients who have been removed from a general dental practitioner's list because of a failure to attend an appointment; what estimate she has made of the number of patients who have been removed from a general dental practitioner's list because of a failure to attend an appointment since the introduction of the new general dental services contract and personal dental services agreement; and whether the threat of removing a patient from a dentist's list if they fail to attend an appointment is a method (a) sanctioned, (b) approved and (c) recommended by her Department for the reduction of the number of failures to attend appointments. [76969]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are not aware of any representations from patients whose dentist has declined to provide further treatment because of failure to attend agreed appointments. No estimate has been made of the number of patients whose dentist has terminated treatment on these grounds.

Paragraph 5 of Schedule 3 to both the national health service (general dental services contracts) Regulations 2005 (S.I. No 2005/3361) and the national health service (personal dental services agreements) Regulations 2005 (S.I. No 2005/3373) provide that where, in the reasonable opinion of the contractor, there has been an irrevocable breakdown in the relationship between the patient and that contractor, and notice of such a breakdown has been given to the patient by the contractor, the contractor may notify the primary care trust (PCT) that it will no longer provide services to that patient under the contract.

Persistent failure by a patient to keep appointments without good cause constitutes an irrevocable breakdown in the relationship.

Terminating treatment is not a step that any dentist takes lightly. PCTs are encouraged to work with national health service contractors to help them to manage their appointment systems in ways that minimise missed appointments and therefore the need for this sanction. This is in the interest of patients and dentists.

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what safeguards are in place to prevent patients from mistakenly receiving private dental treatment in the belief that it is being provided on the NHS; and what recourse is available to patients who incur charges in this way; [77291]

(2) what consent is required from patients for private dental treatment by NHS dentists. [77292]

Ms Rosie Winterton: An Office of Fair Trading Report, 'The Private Dentistry Market in the United Kingdom', published in 2003, identified the need for improvements in the regulation of private dentistry. The Department has worked with the General Dental Council (GDC) to implement the report's recommendations. The GDC has revised its maintaining standards guidance to require dentists to provide the information that patients need to choose whether they wish to be treated under the national health service or privately. The guidance specifies,

"non-compliance with these standards will put a dentist's registration at risk".

Through amendments to the Dentists Act 1984, approved by Parliament last July, the GDC has introduced a service for the investigation and resolution of complaints about private dentistry. The service can be accessed through the website www.dentalcomplaints.org.uk or by telephone on 08456 120 540.

Diamorphine

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much diamorphine was used by the NHS in each of the last five years; and how much she expects to be used in 2006-07; [79462]

(2) what the sources are of the supply of diamorphine used by the NHS; [79463]

(3) what criteria her Department uses to decide how much diamorphine the health service requires; [79464]

(4) whether she has been informed of a shortage of supply of diamorphine in any NHS hospital; and if she will make a statement. [79466]

Andy Burnham: The usage of diamorphine in the national health service in the community in England for each of the last five years is shown in the following table.

	British national formulary chemical name	Number of prescription items (Thousand)	Net ingredient cost (£000)
2001	Diamorphine hydrochloride	95.9	3,287.1
2002	Diamorphine hydrochloride	96.0	3,312.0
2003	Diamorphine hydrochloride	98.6	3,686.4
2004	Diamorphine hydrochloride	102.9	3,974.2
2005	Diamorphine hydrochloride	60.8	1,802.9

This information is taken from the prescription cost analysis (PCA) system, supplied by the prescription pricing division of the Business Services Authority (formerly known as the Prescription Pricing Authority (PPA)), and is based on a full analysis of all prescriptions dispensed in the community in England.

A comparable volume figure on the use of diamorphine hydrochloride in hospitals is not available, however estimates of the cost of diamorphine issued in hospitals in England is in the following table.

Estimated list price cost of diamorphine hydrochloride issued in hospitals in England

	Estimated list price cost (£000)
2001	3,945.9
2002	3,898.4
2003	4,052.2
2004	3,808.8
2005	1,772.6

This information is taken from the hospital pharmacy audit database supplied to the Department by IMS health.

Overall costs of diamorphine hydrochloride dispensed in the community and in hospitals are at a similar level. The cost figures may have fallen in recent years due to a reduction in price as well as a decrease in use.

The Department is aware that there is an ongoing shortage of diamorphine injection. This began in December 2004, when Chiron (now Novartis), one of the two suppliers of this product to the NHS, experienced problems at its manufacturing plant. The other supplier, Wockhardt

UK, immediately increased its production but was unable to fill the gap. Chiron came back into production in July 2005, and both companies are now manufacturing to their full available capacity. However, supplies are limited and are likely to remain so for the coming months.

It is not possible to predict how much will be used in 2006-07, or how much diamorphine the NHS requires. There is a continuing shortfall of production against historic demand, and use will depend, to some extent, on availability of the product. It will also depend on whether doctors and other healthcare professionals maintain the prescribing and purchasing strategies established to cope with the shortage, following Departmental guidance issued in December 2004.

The Department is in close contact with both suppliers of diamorphine and is continuing to monitor the supply situation carefully.

Ear Piercing

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what legislation ear piercing is regulated in England and Wales; what plans she has to review this legislation; and if she will make a statement. [75531]

Caroline Flint: Ear piercing businesses are regulated in England and Wales under the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982. This provides local authorities with powers to regulate ear piercing by requiring businesses to register and observe byelaws relating to the cleanliness and hygiene of premises, practitioners and equipment. It is an offence for a business to trade without being registered or to breach byelaws and such offences may lead to the suspension or cancellation of registration.

This legislation is kept under ongoing review, and there are no current plans to amend the provisions relating to ear piercing.

Ear piercing businesses in London are regulated by local authorities under private legislation which requires licensing and observance of licence conditions. It is an offence for a business to trade without a licence or fail to observe licence conditions. Local authorities also have enforcement powers in relation to ear piercing businesses under Health and Safety at work legislation.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will bring forward legislation to require those who practise ear piercing on persons under 16 years of age to display in a prominent position a notice stating the requirements for parental consent; and if she will make a statement. [75532]

Caroline Flint: There is no statutory minimum age of consent for ear piercing. Minors, that is, those who are under the age of 18, are able to give valid consent if they are capable of understanding the nature of the act to be done. Furthermore, the courts have held that a parent's right to decide on behalf of his/her child yields to the child's competence to make a decision.

There are no current plans to introduce a statutory minimum age of consent for ear piercing nor to require parental consent for those under 16 years of age. We believe that introducing a minimum age of consent might result in children piercing themselves or each other in an unhygienic or unsafe manner or going to disreputable businesses. However, we keep the position under review.

The Health and Safety Executive has produced guidelines on the enforcement of skin piercing activities for local authorities including advising businesses on adopting a reasonable approach to age of consent issues. The guidelines are available at www.hse.gov.uk/lau/lacs/76.2.htm.

Food Broker Businesses

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made by the Food Standards Agency in establishing a timetable for the comprehensive inspection and licensing of food broker businesses. [79495]

Caroline Flint: Food brokers do not have to be licensed under the new European Union hygiene regulations, but they are required to register their establishments with the appropriate local authority. Local authorities' food hygiene inspection programmes are planned on a risk-based approach laid down in the statutory Food Law Code of Practice, to which enforcers must have regard. This code also covers circumstances at a food establishment that may warrant an inspection outside the planned inspection programme.

Health Service Circular 1999/176

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will review and re-issue Health Service Circular 1999/176 to clarify her instructions to trusts. [78312]

Andy Burnham: The Department is planning to update and issue guidance to the national health service on the managed introduction of new health technologies later this year.

Healthcare Commission

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to paragraph 25 of the Department's interim guidance of March 2006 (Gateway Ref 6212), on the role of the Healthcare Commission, under what statutory provision the Commission will be responsible for the regulation of controlled drugs. [79575]

Andy Burnham: Responsibility for the regulation of controlled drugs will be given to the Healthcare Commission by regulations stemming from the current Health Bill. Subject to Parliamentary procedure and approval, we expect the regulations to be laid in the autumn.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions representatives of the Healthcare Commission have (a) examined and (b) taken copies of patients' private and confidential notes held by (i) private clinics and (ii) general practitioners offering a private health service in each of the last five years. [79576]

Andy Burnham: I understand from the Chairman of the Healthcare Commission that the information is not available in the form requested. I also understand from the chairman that since March 2006 the Commission has been recording the details of occasions when confidential personal information has been obtained from independent healthcare providers without the data subject's consent: however, the data are not broken down by type of establishment.

Hepatitis C

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans her Department has to reassess its Hepatitis C action plan following the report of the all-party parliamentary hepatology group; and if she will make a statement. [78590]

Caroline Flint: The results of the all-party parliamentary hepatology group report indicate that progress is being made in implementing the Hepatitis C action plan for England. Around two thirds of the primary care trusts who responded are taking steps to implement the action plan and the majority of national health service hospital trusts did not report significant delays for patients awaiting treatment.

However, the results of the surveys may serve as a useful focus for discussion by local NHS organisations. They are responsible for implementation of the action plan at the local level and are best placed to assess what is needed in their areas, taking account of other priorities.

Hospital Procedures (Costs)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average cost was of (a) an elective in-patient hospital procedure, (b) a hospital day case procedure and (c) an NHS hospital procedure in 2005-06. [74704]

Andy Burnham: Cost data relating to the financial year 2005-06 are not yet available.

Influenza

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 4 April 2006, Official Report, column 123W, on influenza, what she expects the expanded production capacity will be in the UK. [67038]

Caroline Flint: The expansion of manufacturing capacity is an ongoing process. Much depends on research and development results. One promising approach is the incorporation of adjuvants (agents to enhance the immune response), thereby allowing smaller quantities of the vaccine itself to be used, expanding the numbers of available doses. The Department is in close touch with both industry development plans and the international initiatives to increase vaccine manufacturing capacity.

Insulin

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to improve education for diabetes patients on the self-administration of insulin. [75839]

Ms Rosie Winterton: From January 2006, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE), guidance on patient education required all primary care trusts to implement NICE recommendations by providing all people with diabetes with high quality, structured education which should include information on insulin.

Medical Treatment (Under-16s)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on whether health professionals request the involvement of parents or guardians of persons under 16 years of age before any medical treatment is given; and if she will make a statement. [75529]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department has not commissioned research into the involvement of parents or guardians in decisions about medical treatment for young people.

Mental Health

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to promote the safety of mental health staff providing care and support in services outside the statutory sector. [76225]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The independent Healthcare Commission registers and inspects the private and voluntary health sector. The Commission inspects the sector against a range of national minimum standards set by the Government particularly focused on mental health establishments, including requirements covering staff training, risk assessment and management, managing disturbed behaviour, managing serious/untoward incidents, and patient restraint and physical interventions. Further details are available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/07/83/67/04078367.pdf.

Best practice around the management of adults presenting disturbed/violent behaviour in in-patient psychiatric settings is set out in the clinical guidelines published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence in 2004.

The National Institute for Mental Health in England will publish revised guidance on positive practice to support the safe and therapeutic management of aggression and violence in mental health in-patient settings in 2006.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many foreign mentally-disordered individuals are held in special hospitals under mental health legislation. [77404]

Ms Rosie Winterton: None of the high security psychiatric, formerly special, hospitals collect specific information about the nationality of their patients. They all record place of birth as reported by the patient but this in itself is not an accurate method of determining nationality.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost was of drugs prescribed on the NHS for psychiatric and mental health purposes in the last year for which figures are available; and which five categories of psycho-active prescriptions (a) were prescribed in the greatest volume and (b) cost the most in that year. [75671]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the requested format. Prescription cost analysis (PCA) provides details of the number of items and the net ingredient cost of all prescriptions dispensed in the community in England according to British National Formulary (BNF) therapeutic classes. Drugs that appear in BNF chapter four (central nervous system) are usually, but not exclusively, prescribed for psychiatric and mental health purposes. The most recent PCA is at www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/prescostanalysis2005.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the mental health hospitals which operate mixed sex wards; [69386]

(2) how many mixed sex wards operate in acute mental hospitals; and if she will make a statement. [69438]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested.

The Department does not collect information on the number of single-sex or mixed-sex wards in use in national health service hospitals.

Between 1998 and 2005 the provision of single-sex accommodation was measured as compliance at NHS trust level with three objectives set by the Department.

The results of the most recent compliance survey (December 2004) show that:

99 per cent., of NHS trusts provided single-sex sleeping accommodation for planned admissions and had robust operational policies in place to protect patients' privacy and dignity;

99 per cent., of NHS trusts met the additional criteria set to ensure the safety of patients who are mentally ill; and

97 per cent., of NHS trusts provided properly segregated bathroom and toilet facilities for men and women.

The small number of hospitals who did not achieve these objectives are building new hospitals.

The 2004 position of each NHS trust was published on 26 May 2005 and is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk and in the Library.

These objectives have been superseded by the core national standards presented in standards for better health.

The core standards require that:

"Staff treat patients, their relatives and carers with dignity and respect" (C1S); and

"Health care services are provided in environments which promote effective care and optimize health outcomes by being ...Supportive of patient privacy and confidentiality" (C20b)

The Healthcare Commission will assess compliance with these standards.

Merton and Sutton Better Healthcare Closer to Home Programme

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the Answer of 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 1016W, on the Merton and Sutton Better Healthcare Closer to Home Programme, on what date she expects to publish her response to the local national health service. [78803]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 19 June 2006]: As stated previously, the Department has received the response from the local national health service and is currently considering the situation. This is a complex issue and it is therefore difficult to predict when the Department will be in a position to publish a response.

NHS Employment

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the evidence was for her statement in the foreword to her Department's 2006 Departmental Report, published on 11 May 2006, Official Report, column 6814, that the NHS is the third largest employer in the world. [74536]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There have been various estimates by a number of media and international organisations of the world's largest employers and there is some debate as to the exact ranking of the national health service. In 2004, the Department estimated that the NHS is the third largest public employer in the world, behind the Indian Railways and the United States Department of Defence. Although there may be some debate as to the exact ranking of the NHS in terms of its comparative size as an employer, what is not in any doubt is that the NHS is one of the largest employing organisations in the world today.

NHS IT Programme

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the recently expressed views of the Chief Executive of Guy's and St. Thomas' NHS Foundation Trust on the centralised and standardised approach of the NHS IT programme. [65985]

Caroline Flint: Sir Jonathan expressed views on a one size fits all, centralised information technology (IT) solution for the national health service. However, it has been demonstrated by independent analysis that the aggregated procurement has saved over £3.8 billion for the taxpayer over procurements by individual trusts. Moreover, the provision of a national information system architecture that makes patient information available at point of need will improve patient safety. In addition, it provides a common computer system interface which makes training easier and more economic across different trusts which should also improve accuracy and consistency in treatment. History suggests that the NHS does not have a good track record of procuring, developing or using IT at a local level. An accreditation programme has already enabled 46 local and previously incompatible systems to exchange data with and via national systems. A degree of local flexibility is important but good interoperability across the NHS is critical to patient care and this is what the national programme for IT will achieve.

NHS Trust Savings

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (a) efficiency savings and (b) savings resulting from technical adjustments were required by each NHS Trust in (i) 2004-05 and (ii) 2005-06; what these figures represent as a percentage of each budget; and what such savings will be required in 2006-07. [73299]

Andy Burnham: The annual uplift to the national tariff includes an offset for efficiency savings realisable from front line national health service services. An uplift is applied every year to incentivise a continuous improvement approach to efficiency. The respective efficiency savings equate to 1 per cent. in 2004-05, 1.7 per cent. in 2005-06 and 2.5 per cent. for 2006-07. The efficiency offset is applicable to all national health service trusts.

There is no recognised classification of savings resulting from technical adjustments and it is therefore not possible to provide any information on this request.

Nutrient Profiling

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has accepted the nutrient-profiling model recommended by the Food Standards Agency. [77574]

Caroline Flint: The Government's manifesto includes a commitment to help parents by restricting further the advertising and promotion to children of those foods and drinks that are high in fat, salt and sugar.

The Department believes that the nutrient profiling model, developed by the Food Standards Agency for use by Ofcom, provides a scientific and objective base for underpinning regulatory intervention in relation to television advertising to children.

Obesity

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of (a) children and (b) adults are (i) obese and (ii) overweight when measured by body mass index according to the Government's most recent health survey figures in (A) Peterborough constituency, (B) Peterborough city council area, (C) the east of England and (D) England. [77917]

Caroline Flint: The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity and overweight among children and adults is the Health Survey for England (HSE). Data is not available in the format requested. Table one to four sets out the most recent data on the prevalence of obesity and overweight in children and adults.

Table one presents the data on overweight and obesity among adults in Norfolk, Suffolk and Cambridgeshire (the strategic health authority (SHA) which contains Peterborough) as a three-year average over the period 2000 to 2002. The sample size of the HSE does not allow figures to be produced below SHA level, nor does it allow an SHA breakdown for children.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of the relationship between body mass index and malnutrition in children. [74152]

Caroline Flint: Malnutrition occurs when a deficiency, excess or imbalance of energy, protein, and other nutrients causes measurable adverse effects on tissue, function and clinical outcome.

The relationship between body mass index (BMI) and malnutrition in children is not straightforward as it is affected by age, gender, growth patterns and ethnicity. A BMI below the second centile of the UK 1990 BMI Percentile Charts for children, indicates that a child is at risk of malnutrition whilst a BMI above the 95th centile indicates that a child is at risk of being obese.

Palliative Care Beds (Worcestershire)

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the availability of palliative care beds in Worcestershire; and if she will make a statement. [79617]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Funds are allocated direct to primary care trusts (PCTs) who are responsible for commissioning appropriate services to meet the needs of their local communities. It is the responsibility of strategic health authorities (SHAs) to work with PCTs and national health service trusts to ensure that those services commissioned do meet the needs of local communities and reflect national priorities. In this instance, this is a matter for West Midlands SHA.

The Department collects data relating to individual ward types. The information relating to the number of adult terminally ill/palliative care beds within the South Worcestershire PCT area is shown in the table.

Palliative Care for the Terminally Ill

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to support the Palliative Care for the Terminally Ill Bill; and if she will make a statement. [73278]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Government are still considering the Bill, and will make their position known in due course.

Patient Advice and Liaison Service

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many cancer centres have (a) permanent Patient Advice and Liaison Service (PALS) offices located on the same site and (b) access to outreach PALS offices; [78418]

(2) how many cancer patients were assisted by the Patient Advice and Liaison Service in the last year for which figures are available. [78427]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Because of the local nature of the patient advice and liaison service (PALS), the Department does not keep central data relating to PALS operational activities.

Angela Watkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is available to patient advice and liaison service (PALS) workers to enable them to offer or refer clients to information and advice on welfare benefits; what proportion of PALS workers have (a) requested and (b) received such training. [78426]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is working with the Department for Work and Pensions to make available advice on benefits to all patients including those with a terminal illness.

"Our Health, Our Care, Our Say; a new direction for community services" proposes that an information prescription will be developed for people with long-term health and social care needs. The information prescription will signpost people, including patients with cancer, to further information and advice about services, including where to get advice and information on benefits. We expect to include any support, like training, that professionals might need to give information prescriptions to people, in pilots that will be taking place before the prescription is introduced in 2008.

Overview and Scrutiny Committees

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on which occasions in the last five years local authority scrutiny panels have referred complaints against NHS trusts to her Department; and which authorities made the referrals in each case; [75544]

(2) on how many occasions in the last five years local authority scrutiny panels, having considered complaints against NHS trusts, have referred matters to her Department. [75545]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Within the last five years, there have been 13 referrals from overview and scrutiny committees (OSCs) to the Secretary of State for Health. These are shown in the table.

OSC	Date of referral
South East Kent and Thanet Community Health Councils[1]	April 2002
Wiltshire OSC	October 2004
Hampshire OSC	January 2005
Merton OSC	March 2005
South Gloucestershire OSC	July 2005
Wirral OSC	July 2005
Lincolnshire OSC	July 2005
Surrey OSC	October 2005
Cambridgeshire OSC	February 2006
Suffolk OSC	March 2006
Gloucestershire OSC	March 2006
Calderdale and Kirklees Joint OSC	April 2006
Hertfordshire OSC	May 2006

[1] Referral originally made under Community Health Council Regulations 1996.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers overview and scrutiny committees have (a) to delay the introduction of health service changes, (b) to oppose such changes and (c) to present her with a clear proposal for further investigations. [78937]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The overview and scrutiny committee (OSC) has the power to refer decisions on substantial changes to the Secretary of State. This referral can be on the grounds of the following:

if consultation with the OSC has been inadequate; and if the OSC does not believe the proposals for change are in the interests of the health service or local community.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers overview and scrutiny committees have to co-opt outside expertise. [76036]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Overview and scrutiny committees (OSCs) have powers set out in the Local Government Act 2000 to co-opt non-voting members onto OSCs. These co-opted members can be a member of a committee of the county council or another local authority, for the purposes of relevant function of the committee in relation to the county council; or a member of a committee of the county council, for the purposes of relevant functions of the committee in relation to another local authority.

This power enables county councils to co-opt members of OSCs from district councils to participate as full members of the OSC considering health services.

In addition to formal co-option, OSCs can ask people, such as members of patient forums, to participate in other ways, for example, by providing information to the committee, attending as an expert witness, or acting as an adviser to the committee.

Unregistered Laser Machines

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has received from the Healthcare Commission on the number of unregistered laser machines in medical use in England; and what steps she has taken to reduce this number. [79578]

Andy Burnham: I have received no such information and understand from the Chairman of the Healthcare Commission that it is not available. The Chairman has said, however, that he would consider that there are very few unregistered laser machines being used for medical purposes, that is for laser eye surgery. The Commission has held discussions with the sector and its representatives about registration issues.

Intense pulsed light and laser machines are also used for beauty treatment purposes. Providers of this type of service are required to register with the Commission. The Commission is currently reviewing its policy for targeting unregistered providers and has been working to raise public awareness of the requirement on such providers to register with it.

Waiting Times

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment she has made of performance against the Government's commitment that no-one should wait more than six months for an NHS in-patient operation. [78517]

Andy Burnham: The number of patients waiting over six months at the end of April 2006 was 144 as published on 2 June 2006. The figures relating to the end of May will be published on 30 June. Breaches of waiting time standards are unacceptable and the Department will continue to work closely with the small number of national health service organisations with patients waiting over six months. Patients can continue to expect inpatient treatment within six months of a decision to treat in line with the standard established in December 2005.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Conference on Public Services

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the total cost was of the conference on public services held on 6 June 2006 by the National School of Government. [78269]

Mr. McFadden: The National School of Government's estimate for the total cost of the conference "21st Century Public Services—Putting People First" on public service reform held on 6 June 2006 at the Queen Elizabeth II conference centre is £281,000 (including VAT).

This figure includes all contract costs and expenses paid out for the event by the National School of Government, and by other delivery partners in Cabinet Office.

The figures given are taken from actual invoices and financial estimates maintained for the project. Most invoices have now been received and are in the process of payment. For any outstanding invoices, detailed estimates of costs have been obtained from suppliers. Figures given have been rounded.

External speakers, including the three international speakers, made their contributions on an expenses-only basis and no fees were paid for the preparation or delivery of any of the 11 speaker presentations at the conference.

Office Refurbishment

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what the cost was of refurbishing the offices at 26 Whitehall in each year since 1997. [78299]

Hilary Armstrong: The Cabinet Office acquired 26 Whitehall in December 1998. The cost of refurbishing 26 Whitehall from then until December 2002 cannot be separately identified as the refurbishment was undertaken as part of an integrated project which included the refurbishment of the inter-connected 22 Whitehall and Admiralty Arch.

Since the major refurbishment works were completed, there have been no refurbishments undertaken at 26 Whitehall.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Abdullah Baybasin

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will consider deportation proceedings against Abdullah Baybasin. [75841]

Mr. Byrne: The Department's long-standing policy is not to comment on individual cases.

Alcohol Budget

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will keep a separate record of the amount spent annually by his Department on alcohol for hospitality purposes. [77434]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office records expenditure on hospitality but has no plans to maintain separate records of expenditure on alcohol.

Antisocial Behaviour

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on action taken by groups of residents in response to antisocial behaviour in their locality; and if he will make a statement. [78165]

Mr. McNulty: The Respect programme places the emphasis on local agencies to use the tools and powers they have been given to swiftly and effectively tackle antisocial behaviour and its causes. The implementation of neighbourhood policing teams and the increase in the number of police community support officers means that there are more resources than ever before on the streets to respond appropriately to antisocial behaviour and there will be no excuse for inaction.

The current programme of Respect academies outlines how important communications, accountability and visibility are for public services tackling antisocial behaviour. To successfully tackle antisocial behaviour we need people to work in partnership with the police and local authorities. We want to encourage people to come forward, complain and take a stand, collect evidence and play an active part in residents' and community groups. The Respect "Taking A Stand" scheme continues to recognise members of the public for their courage in tackling disrespect and antisocial behaviour in their communities.

This Government are determined to empower the public to hold their leaders to account and have their say about the issues that matter most to them. We will ensure that senior representatives of all Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships hold regular 'face the people' sessions to promote greater accountability and visibility in local services. And we are committed to introducing a 'community call for action', a power that will give local communities a formal way to request and ensure that action is taken by the police, local authorities and others in response to persistent antisocial behaviour or community safety problems, where action is not already being taken.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place in his Department to ensure that local agency reports of antisocial behaviour are standardised; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of those measures. [78528]

Mr. McNulty: In 2004 the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate (RDS) published "Defining and Measuring Antisocial behaviour" which contained a typology of antisocial behaviour intended to provide a practical guide to the main categories of behaviour that are widely accepted to be antisocial by both practitioners and the public. This has been used to develop a standard focus for work aimed at tackling antisocial behaviour problems locally. The introduction of the antisocial behaviour hotline "It's your call" in 49 areas since January 2005 has encouraged the public to report incidents of antisocial behaviour and has helped to further standardise local agencies' reporting of antisocial behaviour. Building on "It's your call", the single non-emergency number, 101, is currently being rolled out by local authorities and police partnerships across England and Wales and will provide the public with easy access to community safety and antisocial behaviour services, advice and information. The recording and categorisation of incidents of antisocial behaviour reported to 101 will be standardised based on the Home Office RDS typology of antisocial behaviour as well as the Police National Standard for Incident Recording. This will facilitate the greater standardisation of reporting by local agencies as well as supporting a more effective operational approach to reducing incidents and patterns of antisocial behaviour and improving the quality of services to the public. The 101 service will be operational across England and Wales by 2008.

Anti-terrorism Funding

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to paragraph 6.68 of the 2006 Budget, what projects will be funded by the increased anti-terrorism funding. [63440]

Mr. McNulty: The Government have dedicated £63 million extra this year and £100 million extra the year after to expand the police specialist CT capacity outside London, as well as an extra £30 million this year and an extra £45 million next year for the metropolitan police. The £42.5 million referred to in paragraph 6.68 of the 2006 budget report is included in these figures.

For obvious reasons I do not want to identify particular projects, but this additional funding will strengthen the police service's intelligence and investigative capability both in the capital and across the rest of the service and will complement the additional funding provided for the Security and Intelligence Agencies already announced. In total, over the two years, the police service will receive £446 million specifically for countering the international terrorist threat and domestic extremism.

Asylum/Immigration

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been housed in (a) Greater London, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon and (c) Uxbridge constituency in each of the last seven years. [46604]

Mr. Byrne: The number of asylum seekers supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) is published on a quarterly and annual basis, broken down by Government office region and local authority; this is available from December 2002. The latest publication covering the first quarter of 2006 and historic publications are available on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. Data on asylum seekers supported by NASS broken down by parliamentary constituency are also available from the Library of the House.

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been given indefinite leave to remain having served a prison sentence for a non-political crime outside the UK in (a) the last 12 months and (b) each of the last five years. [75364]

Mr. Byrne: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate does not currently record the information requested.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers have been returned to Iran in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [75885]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the destination of asylum removals has only been recorded since the start of 2004. The latest published information on removal of asylum seekers covers the first quarter of 2006. The number of principal asylum applicants, excluding dependants, removed to Iran, was 220 in 2004, 350 in 2005, and 95 in the first quarter of 2006.

These figures include people departing voluntarily after enforcement action has been initiated against them and people leaving under Assisted Voluntary Returns programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration. Since 2005 removal figures will include those who it is established have left the UK without informing the immigration authorities. Figures have been rounded to the nearest five. Information on removals of asylum seekers for the second quarter of 2006 will be published later this year on the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers that have yet to be deported reside in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) Peterborough city council area. [77922]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not readily available and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers there are in (a) Peterborough constituency, (b) Peterborough city council area and (c) the East of England. [77926]

Mr. Byrne: Statistics on the location of asylum seekers in the UK are linked to the available information on the support that the asylum seeker receives. The number of asylum seekers supported by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) is published on a quarterly and annual basis, broken down by Government Office region and local authority. The most recent publication covering the first quarter of 2006, and further historical publications are available on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Data on asylum seekers supported by NASS broken down by parliamentary constituency are also available from the Library of the House.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time was after the 18th birthday of a person who arrived as an unaccompanied asylum seeking child for them to receive an interview for discretionary leave to remain in the last period for which figures are available. [78421]

Mr. Byrne: There are no published statistics for the length of time to interview unaccompanied asylum seeking children after their 18th birthday.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons granted bail by the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal have committed offences while on bail in each of the last five years. [76198]

Mr. Byrne: The information is not collected centrally and therefore would be available only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been granted indefinite leave to remain in each of the last 10 years. [76349]

Mr. Byrne: Statistics on persons granted settlement in the United Kingdom since 1994 were published in Table 5.3 of the annual Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 2004". Copies are available from the Library of the House and on the Home Office Research Development and Statistics Directorate website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

The 2005 edition is due to be published on 22 August 2006.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has received concerning the whereabouts of asylum detainees who escaped from the Yarl's Wood detention centre on 14 February 2002; and if he will make a statement. [73925]

Mr. Byrne: Many records were burnt or destroyed on the night of the fire and, to the best of our knowledge, the following figures are correct. Of the 23 escapees 16 have been relocated. Of these, nine have been removed, four re-detained (three of whom were subsequently released), one reported to Croydon Enforcement Unit voluntarily and was released and two were granted temporary release. The whereabouts of seven remain unknown. Decisions on the 16 were made in line with the casework criteria as it applies to their individual circumstances.

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many detainees who escaped from the Yarl's Wood detention centre on 14 February 2002 have been deported. [73927]

Mr. Byrne: Of the 23 detainees who escaped from Yarl's Wood on 14 February 2002, nine have been removed from the United Kingdom.

Correspondence

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter of 26 April from the hon. Member for West Worcestershire, Ref: M10324/6. [78042]

Mr. Byrne: The correspondence was received in the Home Office on 28 April, but was subsequently transferred to the Department for Trade and Industry on 3 May. The subject matter then became the responsibility of the Department for Communities and Local Government, who should be replying shortly.

Court Orders

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) exclusion orders, (b) curfews and (c) parenting orders have been issued by Luton police in the last 12 months. [78443]

Mr. McNulty: 75 curfew orders were issued in the Luton and South Bedfordshire petty sessional area during 2004 (including any heard at the Crown court, having been committed by the said petty sessional area), the latest period for which figures are available. Parenting orders are issued by courts. The Youth Justice Board collects the number of parenting orders related to youth offending or antisocial behaviour broken down by youth offending team area. It is currently reviewing these figures for the period 2004-05 and 2005-06.

I will write to the hon. Member when the reviewed figures are available Three notifications of exclusion orders made under section 40A of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act issued in the Luton and South Bedfordshire petty sessional area were received by the Home Office during 2004. There is no requirement to notify exclusion orders (made under the Licensed Premises (Exclusion of Certain Persons) Act 1980) to the Home Office.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) curfews, (b) exclusion orders and (c) parenting orders have been issued in the Essex police area in the last 12 months. [78185]

Mr. McNulty: 187 curfew orders were issued at all courts in the Essex police force area during 2004, the latest period for which figures are available. The Youth Justice Board collects the number of Parenting Orders related to youth offending or anti-social behaviour broken down by youth offending team area. It is currently reviewing these figures for the period 2004-05 and 2005-06. I will write to the hon. Member when the reviewed figures are available. No notifications of exclusion orders made under section 40A of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act issued in Essex were received by the Home Office during 2004. There is no requirement to notify exclusion orders made under the Licensed Premises (Exclusion of Certain Persons) Act 1980 to the Home Office.

Crime (Merseyside)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which areas in Merseyside are considered high crime areas; and if he will make a statement on measures taken to reduce crime in these places. [78524]

Mr. McNulty: There are five Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships in Merseyside, of which only Liverpool is defined as a high crime area for the purposes of the Home Office Public Service Agreement 1. A range of measures have been put in place to reduce crime in Liverpool. It participates in targeted initiatives such as the Drugs Intervention Programme, the Tackling Violent Crime Programme and the Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign, as well as the Prolific and Priority Offenders Strategy, which has been rolled out to all local areas to enable them to deal with their most problematic offenders. Merseyside is also a Specialist Domestic Violence Court Programme roll out area with specialist courts, supported through funding by the Home Office, developing across the Criminal Justice Area. Further measures tackle burglary, robbery, vehicle crime, antisocial behaviour and hate crime.

Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the powers of crime and disorder reduction partnerships. [78328]

Mr. McNulty: Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships have duties, rather than powers, under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The Home Office has recently conducted a review of the relevant provisions of this Act in order further to strengthen the visibility, responsiveness, membership and role of CDRPs. Our aim is to make-them the most effective possible vehicle for tackling crime and disorder, substance misuse, antisocial behaviour, and environmental crime at a local level. The review findings were published on 25 January 2006. A copy is available in the Library of the House. The legislative changes required to implement the recommendations of the review are included in the Police and Justice Bill, currently before Parliament..

Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority expects to publish an annual report for 2003-04. [79020]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The annual report and accounts of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority were laid before Parliament on 15 June 2006, Official Report, column 71WS, and will be published by 30 June 2006.

Departmental Contractors

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any contractors have been dismissed from contracts with his Department because of illegal working practices since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [73876]

Mr. Byrne: A 100 per cent. manual search through all contract records would incur disproportionate cost.

Departmental Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many websites there are within his responsibilities; and what the total cost of maintaining such websites was in the last year for which figures are available. [79058]

Mr. Byrne: As of 19 June 2006, the Home Office operates 41 websites. This does not include approximately 20 non-departmental public body (NDPB) sites, which are affiliated with, but independent of the Home Office. The core Home Office website also has a number of sub-domains, such as police.homeoffice.gov.uk, which act as portal sites for practitioners around policy issues. The Home Office does not keep a central record of costs for all departmental websites, and would not be able to collect this information without incurring disproportionate cost.

Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many domestic violence cases prosecuted in the last five years perpetrators were charged with other crimes. [76727]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to respond to this question.

The records held by the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) identify the number of defendants proceeded against for offences of domestic violence, but provide no information on other offences committed by the same defendants. This information could only be obtained by locating and examining every relevant file in each CPS office, which would involve disproportionate costs (Code of Practice on access to Government information, part 2, clause 9).

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for which other crimes domestic violence perpetrators have been (a) investigated, (b) charged and (c) sentenced in the last five years. [76732]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office does not routinely keep this type of data centrally. However, a study conducted in 2005-06, using data from by the Offender Management system (OASys), found that there was a correlation between offenders who were physically violent towards their partner and a wide range of other offences. The table lists the types of co-related offences that were identified by the study.

Drunk and Disorderly Fines

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department has spent on publicity to inform people that they can be fined £80 for being drunk and disorderly. [79169]

Mr. Byrne: Since 2005 the Home Office has spent £323,345 on outdoor posters explaining the consequences of being drunk and disorderly and the fixed penalty notice.

Fingerprints

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Government policy is on the collection of minors' fingerprints. [79567]

Joan Ryan: Under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, as amended, the police may take, without consent, fingerprints from all persons, including juveniles, who have been arrested for, informed they will be reported for or charged with a recordable offence and detained in a police station. The police may also take fingerprints from persons convicted of a recordable offence. Fingerprints which have been lawfully taken may be retained whether or not the person is charged with an offence or subsequently acquitted.

Foreign Prisoners

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether Tawanda Machingura, a Zimbabwean foreign national imprisoned for sexual assault of a vulnerable patient, has been deported; [69926]

(2) when he will reply to question 69926, on Tawanda Machingura, tabled by the hon. Member for Billericay on 8 May for named day answer on 11 May. [72163]

Mr. Byrne: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 19 June 2006, Official Report, column 1047.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters of complaint were received by his Department relating to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate where the individual writing normally resides in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) Peterborough city council area in each year since 1997. [77924]

Mr. Byrne: Details of complaints received from June 2005 to May 2006 where the complainant (either an organisation or individual) has given a Peterborough postcode in the reply address are presented in the table.

	Organisations	Individuals	Total
Postcode PE1 to PE7
Number received	24	22	46
Postcode PE9 to PE30
Number received	8	18	26

Note:
PE8 is not included as no complaints have been recorded from addresses with that postcode.

This information relates to all Peterborough postcodes as central data is not broken down by city council area or constituency.

Prior to June 2005 this information was not recorded centrally therefore to provide the information requested as specified would incur disproportionate costs.

IT Projects

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the IT projects costing over £1 million in use in his Department and introduced since 1997 have been scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee; and if he will list them. [26610]

Mr. Byrne: I am advised that the IT projects costing over £1 million in use in the Home Department that were introduced since 1997 and have been scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee are in the following table:

Date	PAC hearing title
5 January 2000	Improving the Delivery of Government IT Projects Includes: (i) The United Kingdom Passport Agency (now The Identity and Passport Service). The Case Information Database was successfully rolled out between January 2001 and March 2003. The Case Information Database Enhancement Programme (April 2002-July 2003) improved it

MI5 (Northern Ireland)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on the possibility of establishing MI5's handling of threat information on the Omagh bombing prior to 15 August 1998. [66529]

Mr. McNulty: There have been no discussions for the reasons set out by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Mr. Woodward) in his answer of 2 May 2006, Official Report, column 1490W, with reference to the chief constable's statement of 1 March 2006.

Operation Reproof

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what lessons have been learned by his Department from Operation Reproof in Devon and Cornwall; and if he will make a statement. [74677]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 5 June 2006]: The investigation into Operation Reproof was undertaken under the supervision of the former Police Complaints Authority and the recommendations were passed to the chief officer for consideration. The chief officer is responsible for the day to day management of the force and use of its resources. I will ensure that the chief constable receives a copy of the question and replies to the hon. Member directly. Copies of the letter containing the response from Devon and Cornwall police will be placed in the House Libraries.

Parliamentary Questions

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will provide a substantive reply to Question 69968, tabled by the hon. Member for Leominster for named day answer on 11 May; and what the reason was for the time taken to reply. [78395]

Mr. McNulty: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in answering his question, which was the result of the change in ministerial responsibilities at the Home Office at the beginning of May.

Police

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate he has made of the potential change in the number of civilian posts resulting from (a) a Hampshire, Dorset and Wiltshire combined police force, (b) a Hampshire and Thames Valley combined police force and (c) a Hampshire, Sussex and Surrey combined police force; [51553]

(2) what estimate he has made of the potential start-up costs of (a) a Hampshire, Dorset and Wiltshire combined police force, (b) a Hampshire and Thames Valley combined police force, (c) a Hampshire, Sussex and Surrey combined police force and (d) one stand-alone Hampshire force; [51568]

(3) what representations he has received from the Hampshire police force on the proposed merger of police forces in the area; [51623]

(4) whether additional funding will be available from his Department to the Hampshire constabulary in the event of its merger with other forces; [51643]

(5) what estimate his Department has made of the likely change in the Hampshire police precept to the council tax which would arise from a merger of the Hampshire constabulary; [51750]

(6) what assessment he has made of the likely impact of a merger of the Hampshire constabulary with other forces on (a) police officer and (b) civilian sta.T numbers; [51810]

(7) how many representations he has received to date supporting the abolition of the Hampshire police constabulary as a stand-alone force. [51840]

Mr. McNulty: The proposed merger of police forces into new strategic forces is intended to strengthen forces' ability to protect the public better from serious crimes and terrorism and to embed neighbourhood policing. For any merger, decisions about future posts will be for the new strategic forces' management teams to determine No proposal for a Hampshire, Dorset and Wiltshire combined police force, or a Hampshire and Thames Valley police force was submitted by forces and authorities in December 2005 and therefore no estimate has been made of any change in civilian posts under either of these options.

The estimate of the potential change in the number of civilian posts resulting from a Hampshire, Surrey and Sussex merger, based on assumptions submitted by Surrey, was a reduction of some 250 police staff posts under this merger, achieved through economies of scale and process re-engineering. The exact number of redundancies would be dependent on a variety of factors including natural wastage, effective use of workforce planning and utilising alternative employment.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate his Department has made of the likely costs of implementing new IT systems arising from the options under consideration for the merger of police forces in the South East. [51567]

Mr. McNulty: Police forces and authorities in the South East submitted a cost benefit analysis of the best options for police structures in that region, including estimated Information Communication and Technology (ICT) costs, to the then Home Secretary in December 2005. This analysis was reviewed by the Home Office and informed the then Home Secretary's statement of 20 March 2006 in which he stated that the merger of Surrey and Sussex police, along with the reconfiguration of Hampshire constabulary, Kent police and Thames Valley police as strategic forces, would be of the greatest benefit for the South East region. A joint Home Office, Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), Association of Police Authorities (APA) and Police Information and Technology Organisation (PITO) working group has been established to work in conjunction with police force project teams to ensure that all ICT requirements, and associated costs, are identified.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in each police force have been (a) disciplined and (b) dismissed for (i) racism, (ii) bullying and (iii) sexual harassment in each of the last five years. [77430]

Mr. McNulty: Police complaints and discipline statistics are not collected in the categories requested. The available information is drawn from the Home Office Police Complaints and Discipline Statistics produced for the years 1999 to 2003 and from the Police Complaints: Statistics for England and Wales 2004-05 produced by the IPCC.

Note:

The statistics collected by the Home Office, and from April 2004 the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC), record decisions on the misconduct charges faced by all police officers in England and Wales as well as substantiated complaints by reason of complaint.

The presentation of information by the IPCC varies slightly from that previously used by the Home Office. We have provided the statistics from the categories that most closely relate to the categories contained in the question.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 742W, on the police, what steps he plans to take to fulfil the strategic goals outlined by HM Inspectorate of Constabulary in relation to West Mercia police. [77648]

Mr. McNulty: As my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary indicated on 19 June and I re-iterated when I met the hon. Member, among others, the following day, we remain of the view that the creation of strategic police forces is the best way to improve protective services while safeguarding dedicated neighbourhood policing. However, we want to engage in a further round of dialogue and discussion with the policing community to discuss the best way to achieve that outcome.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 7 June 2006, Official Report, column 742W, on the police, on what evidence he based his statement that the present strategic structure of West Mercia police was not fit for purpose. [77649]

Mr. McNulty: As was made clear in the answer to which the hon. Gentleman refers, our assessment was based on the advice of Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) resignations and (b) retirements of police officers from Cumbria police force there have been in each year since 1995. [78940]

Nick Herbert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) internal and (b) external meetings he has held on police force restructuring in the last 12 months; and how much time has been spent in each category of meeting. [68710]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 4 May 2006]: The Home Secretary has had numerous meetings on this subject.

Police Complaints

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what criteria are used by police professional standards departments when conducting complaints into police conduct and behaviour; and if he will make a statement; [78279]

(2) what criteria are used by the Independent Police Complaints Commission when conducting complaints into police conduct and behaviour; and if he will make a statement. [78280]

Mr. McNulty: The Independent Police Complaints Commission is responsible for the management of the police complaints system. I will ensure that the Chairman receives a copy of the questions and replies to the hon. Member directly. Copies of the letters containing the IPCC's response will be placed in the House Library.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what measures the Government have put in place to ensure that investigations into complaints of police behaviour and misconduct by (a) police professional standards departments and (b) the Independent Police Complaints Commission (i) follow due process and (ii) are conducted to high professional standards; and if he will make a statement; [78282]

(2) what guidance is issued to serving police officers who are subject to investigations following a complaint as to their conduct during that investigation; what guidance is issued to local police force managers on these matters; and if he will make a statement. [78285]

Mr. McNulty: The Independent Police Complaints Commission is responsible for the management of the police complaints system. I will ensure that the chairman receives a copy of the question and replies to the hon. Member directly. Copies of the letter containing the IPCC's response will be placed in the House Libraries.

Portland PR

Angela Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings officials in his Department have had with representatives of the public relations company Portland PR; what contracts Portland PR has with his Department and agencies for which he has responsibility; and what the nature of the contract is in each case. [70136]

Mr. Byrne: The Department does not maintain a central list of such meetings.

Prisoner Deportation

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether foreign prisoners subject to a recommendation for deportation will be excluded from the provisions of the Human Rights Act 1998. [68887]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 May 2006]: The Government will shortly be setting out proposals on how the system for deporting foreign national prisoners can be improved. If we conclude that legislative changes are needed to secure those improvements we will consider them.

Proscribed Organisations

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the inclusion of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam on the list of Proscribed Organisations in Schedule 2 of the Terrorism Act 2000 in March 2001. [63113]

Mr. McNulty: The Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam was proscribed in March 2001 because the then Home Secretary, my right hon. Friend for Norwich, South (Mr. Clarke), decided that it met the criteria for proscription laid down in Section 3 of the Terrorism Act 2000 (TACT) This decision was endorsed by Parliament. The list of proscribed organisations is kept under constant review. It is established policy not to comment further on any information or intelligence we hold in relation to a specific group on the list of proscribed organisations. The LTTE, or anyone affected by the proscription, may apply at any time to the Home Office be removed from the proscribed list. If such an application is unsuccessful an appeal can then be taken to the independent Proscribed Organisation Appeal Commission.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what incentives are available to encourage members of his staff to use public transport for travelling to and from work. [75114]

Mr. Byrne: We encourage staff to use public transport for travelling to work by:

Providing no-interest loans for public transport season ticket and cycle purchases. Promoting national initiatives such as cycle to work days.

Ensuring that green transport plans already developed for most sites are kept up to date and are acted upon.

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what incentives his Department offers to encourage staff to share vehicles when travelling to work. [73021]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Department has no policy on this.

Safer Neighbourhood Programmes

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of (a) the potential of nationwide implementation of safer neighbourhood programmes such as that introduced by Birmingham council and (b) the effectiveness of the National Community Safety Plan; and if he will make a statement. [78525]

Mr. McNulty: There has been no formal national evaluation of safer neighbourhoods work. However, Local Strategic Partnerships are encouraged to evaluate such projects in their area to identify "what works", and to mainstream successful initiatives into their core programmes. National developments such as neighbourhood policing, Respect and the National Community Safety Plan all encourage neighbourhood level working to make communities safer places. It is too early to evaluate the impact of the National Community Safety Plan, given that it is a three year plan which has only been "live" for less than six months.

Small Firms

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what definition the Department uses of a small firm. [59272]

Mr. Byrne: The Home Office does not use one single definition of a small firm. Terms such as "small firm" and "SME" (small and medium sized enterprise) are used interchangeably. Two of the most common definitions are those provided by the European Union, and the Companies Act 1985.

The European Commission definition specifies a maximum headcount, turnover, balance sheet and independence criteria to qualify as a small firm. The Companies Act 1985 states that a company is "small" if it meets at least two of the following criteria: a turnover of not more than £5.6 million; a balance sheet total of not more than £2.8 million; and not more than 50 employees. These definitions can be found at: http://europa.eu.int/comm/enterprise/enterprise_policy/sme_definition/index_en.htm and http://www.dti.gov.uk/cld/audit.htm.

UN Convention on the Rights of the Child

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to achieve compliance with the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child Article 22 for the UK. [76825]

Mr. Byrne: The United Kingdom ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the child on 16 December 1991, subject to a number of reservations. Only two of these remain; one about children in adult offender institutions and one referring to Immigration and Nationality.

The latter reservation is as follows:

> "The United Kingdom reserves the right to apply 'such legislation, in so far as it relates to the entry into, stay in and departure from the United Kingdom of those who do not have the right under the law of the United Kingdom to enter and remain in the United Kingdom, and to the acquisition and possession of citizenship, as it may deem necessary from time to time."

We comply with the spirit of Article 22 of the Convention and believe that our reservation in respect of immigration and nationality matters does not lead to any neglect of children's care or welfare. The Government have no intention of withdrawing the reservation.

Visas

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people entered the UK with valid visas as visitors during the last 12 months; how many failed to return to their country of origin before the expiry of their permitted stay; and if he will make a statement. [78047]

Mr. Byrne: From the latest published Control of Immigration statistics for 2004, there were around 1.65 million visitors to the United Kingdom whose nationality requires them to obtain a visa before travelling the UK. This figure relates to passenger journeys; a person who makes more than one journey in a given year is counted on each occasion. Following the removal of embarkation controls in 1996, it is not possible to comment on the number of persons who return to their country of origin before their leave to enter or remain as a visitor in the UK expires.

Witness Protection

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers are available to minimise recrimination against victims of (a) criminal and (b) antisocial behaviour who give evidence to the police. [78332]

Mr. McNulty: Witness intimidation is an offence by virtue of S.51 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 (in relation to criminal proceedings) and S.39 of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 (in relation to civil proceedings). The provisions cover intimidation of anyone who > "is assisting in the investigation of an offence or is a witness or potential witness or juror or potential juror in proceedings for an offence".

The police and courts clearly take this issue seriously and we have seen convictions for witness intimidation increase by over 30 per cent. between 2000 and 2005.

The Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 provides a range of special measures for witnesses whose evidence is likely to be affected by fear or distress in connection with testifying in criminal proceedings. These measures include the use of screens and live links, and a greater degree of "privacy" in what remains a public hearing, to be applied in sexual cases, or where there is a fear that the witness may be intimidated. Intimidated witnesses may also be permitted to give their evidence in private.

The Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 introduced similar measures for witnesses in proceedings for antisocial behaviour orders. The use of hearsay evidence in civil proceedings involving antisocial behaviour allows witnesses to remain anonymous. In exceptional cases, in criminal proceedings, at the discretion of the court, witnesses in criminal cases, who are unwilling to give evidence through fear for their safety, may also be permitted anonymity.

The Court must consider the potential disadvantages to the defendant and ensure that it is necessary and that the witness is in genuine and justified fear of serious consequences if his true identity became known. It must also ensure that necessary and appropriate precautions are taken to ensure that the trial itself will be fair. When exercising this discretion the court should be mindful of four factors; there must be real grounds for being fearful of the consequences of revealing the identity of the witness, the evidence must be sufficiently important to make it unfair to the prosecution to compel them to proceed without it, the prosecution must satisfy the court as to the creditworthiness of the witness and finally the court must be satisfied that no undue prejudice is caused to the defendant. Provided that appropriate safeguards are applied, and the judge is satisfied that a fair trial can take place, it may permit anonymity. In criminal cases, law enforcement agencies are responsible for providing support for intimidated witnesses and we are doing everything we can to ensure that they are assisted in doing so. We are working with them and other criminal justice agencies to ensure that intimidated witnesses are identified at an early stage and properly supported throughout the criminal justice process.

We fund the National Witness Mobility Service which gives police forces access to support from housing experts to assist in the relocation of intimidated witnesses. The Service has assisted in some serious antisocial behaviour cases. We are planning to extend this support by facilitating access to a wider range of services through the establishment of a central services unit. We have also introduced new legislation which helps forces to secure the assistance they need from others to set up protection arrangements and provides additional safeguards for witnesses. In antisocial behaviour cases, agencies are also encouraged to give witnesses support after the court hearing—for example by keeping them informed about the outcome.

A range of detailed guidance is set out on the TOGETHER website at http://www.together.gov.uk/category.asp?c=339.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Constituency Visits

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the constituencies he visited between 5 May 2005 and 5 May 2006. [75695]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The information requested is not collected in this form.

Dorneywood

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1665W on Dorneywood, if he will make it his policy to collect information on the number of times hospitality is offered at Dorneywood to members of foreign and Commonwealth Governments. [74409]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My hon. Friend may be aware of my announcement on 31 May of my personal decision that I no longer wish be the official resident of Dorneywood.

Pension Policy

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his role is in developing pension policy; and if he will make a statement. [79483]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 13 June 2006, Official Report, column 1086W.

Private Office

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the role is in his private office of Sheree Dodd; what the cost to public funds has been to date for the employment of Ms Dodd; and if he will make a statement. [78227]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The person named does not have any role in my private office.

The Department for Communities and Local Government is continuing to provide my media support until the recent machinery of Government changes are complete. Specific staff issues are the responsibility of the civil service; I am not involved in any such appointments. Staff costs will be accounted for in the Department's annual report and accounts in the usual way.

Sovereign Strategy

Chris Huhne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 6 June 2006, Official Report, columns 833-34W, on Sovereign Strategy, if he will list the occasions in the last 12 months when his official diary shows that he had meetings with a representative of Sovereign Strategy. [79227]

The Deputy Prime Minister: No such occasions are listed; and I did not meet this company.

Timber

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his wooden office furniture is made from sustainable timber. [78223]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Yes. All office furniture procured by my office comes from sustainable sources. However, there are a small number of older pieces—predating the creation of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in May 2002—for which sources cannot be verified.

Websites

Charles Hendry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many websites there are within his responsibilities; and what the total cost of maintaining such websites was in 2005-06. [79146]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My new website is currently under development. Website information relating to my former departmental responsibilities has now transferred to the Department for Communities and Local Government, and I refer the hon. Member to that Department.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Printers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Leader of the House what assessment the Commission has made of the reliability of the new Dell printers issued to hon. Members. [78609]

Mr. Straw: As of 31 May 2006 1,069 Dell printers have been supplied to Members of the House. Between 1 June 2005 to 31 May 2006, 48 warranty calls have been made to Dell. This is equal to one call for every 22 printers.

By comparison during the period 1 August 2004 to 31 July 2005, 287 warranty calls were made relating to the 1,363 HP printers being used by Members. This is equal to one call for every 4.7 printers.

The majority of calls in both cases relate to the multifunction printers which are more complex and therefore more likely to develop a fault. Direct comparison of the warranty call ratios is not straightforward since the HP equipment in the sample is older than the Dell equipment and therefore would be expected to generate a higher number of warranty calls.

When equipment is first installed the overall number of calls received to the service desk does increase as issues with initial set-up and queries about the operation of the new equipment are handled. Accurate records as to the number of calls relating to this area are not available.

There is an issue associated with the new Dell printers relating to the operation of the second printer tray when working it in conjunction with certain applications. This is being investigated by both the supplier of the application and by Dell.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Better Regulation Task Force

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2403W, on the Better Regulation Task Force, what progress he has made in considering whether and to what extent the Task Force's other specific proposals can contribute to the key outcomes outlined in 'Every Child Matters'. [78570]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 19 June 2006]: The Task Force's recommendation, that guidance should be given to local authorities that Directors of Children's Services should have functions relating to child employment as part of their remit, is a helpful contribution to the 'Every Child Matters' agenda. I have not yet been persuaded that the Task Force's legislative recommendations would make a significant contribution towards the five key outcomes for all our children described in 'Every Child Matters'. The Government will continue to consider the recommendations, but will not take any measures that could compromise children's entitlement to education, sufficient rest, or appropriate leisure time.

Fostered Teenagers (Support)

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what support is provided for teenagers who leave long-term foster care placements; what extra support is provided for those with special needs; and if he will make a statement. [78965]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 20 June 2006]: Local authorities are placed under a duty, by section 22 of the Children Act 1989, to safeguard and promote the welfare of looked after children. The review of children's cases procedure, derived from section 26 of the 1989 Act, places a duty on local authorities to have in place a plan for the future care of looked after children and to appoint an Independent Reviewing Officer (IRO) to conduct the periodic statutory reviews of their cases.

The Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000 is based on this care planning framework. As looked after children approach their 16th birthday, when they will become entitled to services as 'care leavers', their needs are required to be reassessed in order to inform the construction of their 'pathway plan' (which should be based on their existing care plan). This plan sets out the services that are necessary to respond to the young person's needs, to prepare them for leaving care and then to support them after they have left care up until the age of 21, or longer, if they remain in an approved programme of education or training.

For young people with statements of special educational needs (SEN), including those who are looked after, there is a statutory transition planning process, which commences during Year 9 of their compulsory education. The purpose of this multi-professional process is to plan for young people's transition to adult life.

Where a child who is the subject of a SEN statement is also a looked after child, then their responsible local authority should co-ordinate the respective planning processes, in order to integrate their transition plan with their pathway plan, so that young people are provided with the necessary support in an integrated way before, during and after leaving care.

School Inspectors

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of school inspectors in the Office of Standards in Education (Ofsted) worked in a school prior to joining Ofsted. [78275]

Jim Knight: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Maurice Smith, has written to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Maurice Smith, dated 21 June 2006:

Your recent parliamentary question has been referred to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of schools, for reply.

You asked what proportion of school inspectors in the Office of Standards in Education (Ofsted) worked in a school prior to their joining Ofsted.

In response, the information requested is not held centrally. However, an analysis of the career history of the HMI appointed since September 2003 shows that 85 per cent had worked in a school prior to joining Ofsted.

Our analysis demonstrated that since September 2003:

113 HMI had worked in a school prior to joining Ofsted;

17 HMI had worked in a college; and

3 HMI had worked for local authorities and did not have teaching posts in schools/colleges listed in their CVs.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jim Knight and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Specialist Schools

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Sarah Teather) of 4 May 2006, Official Report, column 1764W, on specialist schools, how many specialist schools are in areas within the worst 20 per cent. of wards in England according to the index of deprivation; and what specialism has been chosen by each such school. [79493]

Jim Knight: The information requested has been placed in the House Library.

St. Mark's Pre-school (Salisbury)

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when Ofsted will publish the July 2005 inspection report on St. Mark's Pre-School in Salisbury (Ofsted reference 146011) on its website; and if he will make a statement. [78125]

Beverley Hughes: This is a matter for the Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted). Maurice Smith, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, has written to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Maurice Smith, dated 15 June 2006:

Your recent parliamentary question has been referred to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of schools, for reply.

You asked when Ofsted will publish the July 2005 inspection report on St. Mark's Pre-School in Salisbury (Ofsted reference 146011) on their website.

In response, the report will be published on Tuesday 20 June 2006. The delay in publication occurred due to administrative and computer system errors which resulted in the failure to publish the report on the website at the correct time. Despite this, a copy of the report was sent to the nursery.

Now that the matter has been brought to our attention, we are working to fix these system errors and will remedy the situation. Ofsted would like to apologise most profusely for the delay.

A copy of this reply has been sent to Jim Knight and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Statemented Children

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what powers (a) academies and (b) other schools have to limit admittance of children with statements. [78075]

Mr. Dhanda [holding answer 16 June 2006]: Neither academies nor maintained schools have direct powers to limit admittance of children with statements of SEN. Academies admit more pupils with SEN (both with and without statements) than other secondary schools in England. The large majority of academies must have regard to the Special Educational Needs Code of Practice (2001) and any guidance issued by the Secretary of State relating to sections 316 and 316A of the Education Act 1996. Academy procedures for admitting children with statements of SEN track those for maintained schools. For example the large majority of academies must consent to being named in a statement of SEN unless to do so would be "incompatible with the provision of efficient education for other children; and where no reasonable steps may be made to secure compatibility".

This position tracks the requirement on maintained schools set out in sections 316/316A of the 1996 Education Act.

Where parents of children with a statement express a preference for a particular maintained school the local authority must consult the school concerned, and in the case of a school maintained by another authority that local authority as well. As part of the consultation process the authority should write to the school and other authority to ask them whether, in their opinion:

the school is unsuitable to the child's age, ability or aptitude or to his special educational needs;

the child's attendance would be incompatible with the efficient education of the children with whom he would be educated, or the child's attendance would be incompatible with the efficient use of resources.

If the school or local authority opposes the naming of the parent's preferred school on any of the grounds specified above, the "home" authority should consider very carefully their reasons for doing so, before deciding whether or not to name the school. The decision rests with the local authority and once a local authority names a particular maintained school in a child's statement, that school must admit the child.

Sure Start

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many available places there are in Sure Start schemes in (a) Lewisham, Deptford constituency and (b) Lewisham borough; [79165]

(2) what percentage of children are on Sure Start schemes in (a) Lewisham, Deptford constituency and (b) Lewisham borough. [79166]

Beverley Hughes: Sure Start Local Programmes (SSLPs) were set up between 1999 and 2003 offering a range of services to children under four years of age and their families living in defined areas. All SSLPs are becoming Sure Start Children's Centres and will offer services to children under five years of age and their families. Information about the percentage of children reached by SSLP services is now collected once a year. Data on how many children have accessed services through children's centres are not available yet.

2,325 children under four live in areas covered by three SSLPs in the Lewisham Deptford constituency. In all 3,427 children under four live in areas covered by five SSLPs in the borough of Lewisham. The latest information available (at March 2005) shows on average 37 per cent.[1] of children in the Lewisham Deptford SSLPs and on average 36 per cent.[1] of children overall in SSLP areas in the borough of Lewisham had significant contact (that is, a home visit or attendance at a centre-based activity) with Sure Start.

There is one Sure Start Children's Centre up and running in the constituency of Lewisham Deptford, building on an existing SSLP and offering services to 1,545 children under five and their families, and three overall in the borough of Lewisham offering services to 4,650[2] children under five and their families.

[1] Source—Sure Start Local Programme data returns March 2005.

[2] 4,650 children includes 1,483 children previously served by the two SSLPs across Lewisham that have become children's centres.

Tuition Fees (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students from (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) Peterborough city council area are exempt from tuition fees. [77914]

Bill Rammell: The number of students from Peterborough local authority making no contribution to their tuition fees in 2003/04 was 790[1]. Data for 2004/05 onwards are not available as student applications from Peterborough were processed by another local authority (Cambridgeshire), and can not be disaggregated.

Students on full-time undergraduate courses and their families are expected to make a contribution towards the cost of their tuition based on household income. Students from lower income backgrounds are wholly or partially exempt from paying tuition fees.

From 2006/07 upfront fees are abolished and full-time students will be eligible for tuition fee loans of up to £3,000. In addition, we expect around 30 per cent. of students to receive the full maintenance grant of £2,700 and an HE institution bursary of at least £300. Overall, we expect around half of all eligible students to receive at least some maintenance grant.

[1] Rounded to the nearest 10 students.

Vocational Training

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans the Government have to improve vocational training for young people in Swindon. [79184]

Phil Hope: The new Specialised Diplomas will provide an exciting, aspirational and stretching programme of learning for young people of all abilities and backgrounds, including the most able, who enjoy learning in a practical environment. A new statutory entitlement will be in place for all 14 to 19-year-olds from September 2013. Apprenticeships are the main programme for young employed people seeking vocational qualifications at Level 2 and Level 3. Other opportunities are also being developed, including a pilot programme that started in April this year aimed at encouraging 16 to 18-year-olds in jobs without training to gain a Level 2 qualification, whether academic or vocational. For those over 19 and without either basic skills or a first Level 2 qualification we have put in place the Train to Gain service to deliver high quality flexible qualifications in the workplace.

The local Learning Skills Council can provide details of any local initiatives that are available in the Swindon area.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Pensions

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the pension liability of his Department over the next 30 years. [75233]

Paul Goggins: HM Treasury placed a technical note in the Library of the House on 2 March 2006, Official Report, columns 388-90, following an oral statement in Parliament by the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury.

Pension liabilities are not estimated for individual Departments, they are estimated for individual pension schemes, as shown in the breakdown of liabilities per pension scheme given in table 1 of the technical note.

Disability Leaflet

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many copies of the leaflet 'Has disability altered your home?' have been produced by the Rate Collection Agency in Northern Ireland. [79458]

Mr. Hanson: The Rate Collection Agency has produced 10,000 of these leaflets since 2003.

Driving Safety

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to inform motorists in Northern Ireland of the dangers of driving while using a mobile phone. [78878]

David Cairns: Prior to the introduction of the offence of using a hand held mobile phone while driving, the Department of the Environment (DOE) and the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) raised awareness through press releases and media interviews. A reminder exercise was carried out one year after its introduction.

The DOE produced a radio advertisement, 'Grave Mistake', which airs regularly and a leaflet providing advice on appropriate use and penalties for misuse of mobile phones. The DOE and PSNI include information on the use of mobile phones on their websites. Electronic message systems on motorways in Northern Ireland carry road safety messages including "Kill the call before it kills you" at intervals throughout the year.

Rule 127 in the Highway Code for Northern Ireland advises drivers never to use a hand held mobile phone when driving. A draft revised Highway Code, which will shortly go out for consultation, will reinforce the legal requirement on drivers.

New primary road traffic legislation, on which the DOE has consulted, will be introduced late 2006/early 2007 and will include penalty points and greater fines for using a hand held mobile phone while driving. The DOE will consider the most appropriate way of raising awareness in advance of the proposed changes.

Drugs

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaths from drug related poisoning involving illegal substances were recorded in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [78786]

Mr. Hanson: It is not possible to answer this question directly as a number of people who have died from a drug controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act may have obtained the drug legally for example methadone overdose.

However the following table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland for each year between 2001 and 2005 for which the underlying cause was drug poisoning[1] and where any drug controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act were mentioned on the death certificate.

[1] International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision codes:

F11-F16, F18-F19?Mental and behavioural disorders related to drug use.

X60-X64?Intentional self-poisoning by drugs.

X40-X44?Accidental poisoning by drugs.

X85?Assault by drugs.

Y10-Y14?Undetermined and other poisoning by drugs.

Number of deaths due to drug-related poisoning involving illegal substances

	Number
2001	23
2002	37
2003	36
2004	19
2005 (provisional)	47

Early Retirement (Medical Staff)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) general practitioners, (b) consultants and (c) nurses have retired early in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by health board area. [78774]

Paul Goggins: Details of numbers of early retirements by (a) general practitioners, (b) consultants and (c) nurses in each of the last five years broken down by health board are set out in the following table. These figures include early retirements on grounds of ill health, redundancy or in the interests of the efficiency of the service and voluntary early retirement.

The information has been extracted from Health and Personal Social Services (HPSS) Superannuation records of HPSS staff who have been awarded early retirement benefits under the provisions of the Health and Personal Social Services (Superannuation) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995.

Employment (East Londonderry)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change in (a) male and (b) female unemployment in East Londonderry constituency has been in each of the last five years. [51326]

Maria Eagle: Unemployment levels from the claimant count for males and females in the East Londonderry parliamentary constituency in January 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005 and 2006, together with their yearly change, are provided in the following table.

2004	1,522	-50	504	11
2005	1,474	-48	573	69
2006	1,245	-229	462	-111

Energy Policy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the use of nuclear power to generate electricity for Northern Ireland. [76500]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer dated 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 447W.

Job Centres

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs are presently advertised through job centres in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [52984]

Maria Eagle: As of 15 February 2006, there were 5,355 vacancies advertised in the Jobs and Benefits Offices and Jobcentres throughout Northern Ireland.

It is anticipated that approximately 40,000 vacancies will be notified during the 2005-06 financial year.

Legislation

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which private Members' Bills were drafted by his Department in each session since 1997; and which subsequently received Royal Assent. [78848]

Mr. Hain: My Department has not drafted any such Bills.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list those Government Bills sponsored by his Department that are still to be introduced during the 2005-06 session; [78849]

(2) if he will list the Government Bills sponsored by his Department that he has bid for in the next session of Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [78850]

Mr. Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House of Commons (Mr. Straw) on 16 June 2006, Official Report, column 1432W.

Ministerial Travel

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on police security provision for Ministers' car travel in each year since 1998, broken down by Northern Ireland Department. [74697]

Paul Goggins: The information requested is not available and to attempt to provide it would incur disproportionate cost.

Police Officers (Medical Retirement)

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many former police officers retired on medical grounds had their (a) degree of disability and (b) disability band reduced following reassessment in the last 12 months; and how many former police officers there are in each band of disability. [75471]

Paul Goggins: During the period 1 April 2005 to 31 March 2006 the Selected Medical Practitioner (SMP) completed 184 Injury on Duty percentage award reviews. Of the 184 reviews, 80 awards were reduced, 89 were increased and 15 remained unchanged. In respect of the 80 reduced awards, 24 resulted in the ex-officers Injury on Duty Disablement pension band being lowered. Information relating to the number of former police officers in each band of disability is not readily available and would require a manual trawl of records and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Security Forces (Republic of Ireland)

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1605W, on security forces (Republic of Ireland), if he has been informed of any occasions on which security forces from the Republic of Ireland have crossed into Northern Ireland without the consent of UK authorities in each of the last 10 years. [77210]

Paul Goggins: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer dated 23 May 2006, Official Report, column 1605W, and wish to advise him that the PSNI's position regarding this issue remains the same.

Terrorist Activity (Costs)

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the estimated total cost is to the Northern Ireland economy of terrorist activity in the last 30 years. [78970]

Mr. Hain: It is not possible to determine the direct total costs associated with terrorist activity in Northern Ireland but it is recognised that the impact is considerable in terms of business confidence and investment. Furthermore, the economy has significantly improved since the initial Provisional IRA ceasefire of 1994. Employment is currently close to its highest recorded level at 754,000 in 2006 (from 607,000 in 1994) and unemployment has fallen by 7 percentage points between 1994 and 2006 (from 11.9 per cent. in 1994 to 4.9 per cent. in 2006).

Vehicle Registration

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) motorcycles and (b) cars were newly registered in Northern Ireland in each year since 1998. [78879]

David Cairns: The number of motorcycles newly registered in Northern Ireland in each year since 1998 is as follows:

	Number
1998	4,423
1999	5,411
2000	6,099
2001	5,678
2002	5,699
2003	6,888
2004	4,706
2005	4,728

The number of cars newly registered in Northern Ireland in each year since 1998 is as follows:

	Number
1998	100,947
1999	99,490
2000	95,018
2001	98,789
2002	93,866
2003	97,374
2004	96,058
2005	98,471

Victims

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times in each of the last five years he has met (a) each victims group, (b) individual families of victims and (c) victims of major shooting and bombing incidents which led to large numbers of deaths; and if he will make a statement. [78557]

Mr. Hain: The information you seek is not held in the format in which it was requested and to attempt to gather such information could be done only at a disproportionate cost. I would however advise the hon. Member that since my appointment as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in May 2005 I have had several meetings with victims groups and their families. Indeed the hon. Member was present at a recent meeting I had with one such group.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many police officers have been trained in Afghanistan in each year since 2002; and if she will make a statement. [75066]

Margaret Beckett: The latest confirmed figure available for the total number of police trained in Afghanistan is 56,900, dated 31 December 2005. Since this time, however, the figures reported have been baselined to reflect the number of Afghan police both trained and equipped. On 24 April 2006 this figure stood at 30,263.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in setting up a Joint Co-ordination and Monitoring Board for the implementation of the political commitments in the Afghanistan Compact. [77171]

Margaret Beckett: The Joint Co-ordination and Monitoring Board (JCMB) sat for the first time, in Kabul, on 30 April 2006 and will reconvene on a quarterly basis until 2011. The board consists of 28 members.

Eight consultative groups and five cross-cutting thematic groups have also been established to help deliver recommendations on sectoral issues to the JCMB.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) Afghan national police and (b) Afghan border police officers have been trained in each year since 2003; and how many deserted after training in each year. [77180]

Margaret Beckett: The latest confirmed figures available for the number of Afghan police trained are dated 31 December 2005. At that time, the total number of trained officers stood at 56,900. Since then, however, the figures compiled have been re-baselined to reflect the number of Afghan police trained and equipped. On 24 April 2006, this figure stood at 30,263: 23,000 uniformed police (Afghan national police); 1,700 highway police; 5,200 border police; and 300 counter-narcotics police.

Figures showing the number of officers trained and deserted after training are not held centrally by either the German Police Programme Office or the Ministry of Interior, and are not therefore available.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK representatives sit on the Joint Coordination and Monitoring Board for the implementation of the political commitments made in the Afghanistan Compact. [77182]

Margaret Beckett: The Joint Co-ordination and Monitoring Board consists of a total of 28 members, seven representatives of the Afghan Government and 21 representatives of the international community. The UK occupies one of the 21 seats on the board allocated to the international community.

Amazon Deforestation

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much soya bean crop for export has been certified under the Amazon Deforestation Soya Certification Project in Santarem, within the Amazon state of Para. [78897]

Mr. McCartney: The independent Amazon soya certification scheme, being funded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Opportunities Fund, is currently under development. No soya bean crop has yet been exported under the certification scheme.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what services will be offered for travel directly between Ascension Island and St. Helena after the airport on St. Helena opens. [75460]

Mr. Hoon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my noble Friend the then Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister of State, Baroness Symons of Vernham Dean, on 17 November 2003, Official Report, column WA245. It will be for commercial operators to decide whether to take the opportunity to operate a service between the islands. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office keeps access needs in the South Atlantic under review.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have taken place between the Ascension Island Administrator and her Department regarding relations with the Ascension Island council. [75462]

Mr. Hoon: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) Overseas Territories Department is in regular communication with the Ascension Island Administrator. During the Administrator's recent leave in the UK, and in accordance with normal practice, he met FCO officials on 21 March. Relations with the Island council were among the wide range of issues discussed.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the reply of 5 June 2006, Official Report, column 308W, on Ascension Island, what notice the Crown would need to give (a) residents of domestic dwellings on Ascension Island if it wished to take possession of those dwellings as the freeholder and (b) the Users of Ascension Island if it wished to take possession of their sites as the freeholder. [77478]

Mr. Hoon: There is no statutory requirement for the Crown to provide any notice to take possession of a domestic dwelling or a User site. However, should the Crown need to take possession of land currently used for a domestic dwelling or a User site, it would aim to take individual circumstances into account and provide appropriate warning.

Belarus

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she has made to the Belarus Government following the statement of the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe that the presidential elections there were seriously flawed; what action the Government propose to take with EU partners on this matter; and if she will make a statement. [61239]

Margaret Beckett: My right hon. Friend the then Minister for Europe (Mr. Alexander) made a statement on 20 March following the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE)/Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights International Election Observation Mission preliminary conclusions on the Belarusian election. He expressed our deep regret that the Belarusian authorities chose to conduct the elections in this way and the clear breach of its OSCE commitments. This statement has been brought to the attention of the Belarusian authorities.

The Government supported EU declarations on 20 and 22 March agreeing with the OSCE's assessment of a fundamentally flawed election, deploring the arbitrary use of state power, the absence of a level playing field and the pattern of intimidation and harassment of the opposition. The EU urged the Belarusian authorities to allow the people of Belarus to exercise their right of assembly and freedom of expression in line with their OSCE commitments and called upon the Belarusian authorities to immediately release those currently detained for exercising their political rights. This declaration was brought to the attention of the Belarusian authorities during the OSCE Permanent Council meeting 23 March.

Under the UK presidency, the EU made it clear that it would be ready to take further restrictive measures against those responsible for the violations of international electoral standards. On 10 April, EU Foreign Ministers agreed a travel ban against 31 individuals deemed responsible for the fraudulent election and the subsequent crackdown on the opposition. On 18 May, EU Foreign Ministers agreed to impose further restrictive measures in the form of asset freezes on 36 individuals (including five people subject to earlier travel bans as a result of their involvement in the disappearances of opponents of the regime in 1999-2000 and the fraudulent parliamentary elections). Both the travel ban and asset freeze lists include Lukashenko.

Together with EU partners, we will continue to put pressure on the regime to improve its performance on democracy and human rights while maintaining contact with the Belarusian people by securing better-focussed EU assistance for civil society in Belarus.

Burma

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has held with the governments of (a) Russia, (b) China and (c) Japan on (i) the political situation in Burma and (ii) a binding resolution about Burma at the UN Security Council. [78101]

Mr. McCartney: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no discussions about Burma with these governments.

I discussed Burma separately with the vice Foreign Ministers of China and Japan on 20 June. I asked the Chinese Minister that China use its influence to encourage the Burmese Government to meet its human rights responsibilities, and that China supports a Security Council debate and resolution on Burma. I encouraged the Japanese Minister to use any influence that Japan may have to put pressure on the Burmese Government, and asked that Japan support a Security Council debate and Resolution on Burma.

Officials regularly discuss Burma with Russia, China and Japan both in capitals and in New York.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what steps her Department is taking to secure the release of Aung San Suu Kyi by the Burmese Government; and if she will make a statement; [78587]

(2) what steps her Department is taking to secure a binding resolution at the UN Security Council calling for (a) the restoration of democracy and (b) the release of all political prisoners by the Burmese Government; and if she will make a statement. [78588]

Mr. McCartney: We support all action by the UN which will help initiate a genuine process of democratic reform in Burma. We therefore support the current proposals by the United States for a substantive discussion of Burma at the UN Security Council which we hope will lead to a Resolution.

We condemn the Burmese regime's recent decision to extend Aung San Suu Kyi's house arrest for another year. We have repeatedly called for her release and that of all other prisoners of conscience, most recently when I met the Burmese ambassador on 15 June.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister issued a statement on 19 June expressing the Government's concern about the continued detention of Aung San Suu Kyi. It can be found on the following website:

http://www.number10.gov.uk/output/Page9691.asp.

Climate Change

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps she is taking to strengthen the Department's institutional capacity in the area of climate change policy; and if she will make a statement. [77164]

Margaret Beckett: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has for years been instrumental in driving forward international work on climate change. It has worked with Europe, the G8 and through the UN to raise the political profile of climate change issues, and to generate practical actions to counter it. To boost the FCO's input into the Government's climate change agenda, I announced on 8 June 2006 that will be an additional strategic priority for the Department. John Ashton started work for the FCO in the week of 19 June 2006. He will be supported in the first instance by a team of four people.

> "achieving climate security by promoting a faster transition to a sustainable, low carbon global economy"

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries she identified as priority countries in the context of the appointment of the special representative for climate change. [77165]

Margaret Beckett: John Ashton, the special representative for climate change, will support Ministers in delivering a step-change in the international response to climate change. His initial view is to engage with major developed and developing countries, including the G8 plus five: China, India, Brazil, Mexico and South Africa. He will also look to build close relationships with the rest of the 20 major energy consumers of the future which are involved in the Gleneagles dialogue on climate change, including Australia, Indonesia, Nigeria and South Korea. EU partners will continue to be very important.

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what practical steps will be taken by the special representative for climate change to achieve the aims of building a stronger political foundation for international action on climate change, and working to build consensus among key governmental and non-governmental actors in priority countries. [77166]

Margaret Beckett: The special representative will work closely with cross-Whitehall colleagues and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's overseas network. He will engage with major developed and developing countries, including China, India, Brazil, Mexico and South Africa, to help drive forward the Gleneagles dialogue on climate change, clean energy and sustainable development, agreed at last year's G8 summit. He will work closely with dialogue partners to encourage them to deploy clean technologies, create incentives for large scale private sector investment, explore a new model for co-operation between developed and developing countries and for action on adapting to the impacts of climate change. He will also engage with many international non-governmental actors, particularly the business community, to listen, probe and explore common ground to build the political foundation needed to support forums like the EU, United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, G8 and Gleneagles dialogue and our bilateral relationships.

Colombia

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether British officials monitored the recent elections in Colombia. [77931]

Mr. Hoon: Our embassy in Bogota consulted with a wide range of civil society and other groups, including EU partners, in observing the lead up to and the conduct of the Colombian presidential elections on 28 May. British officials were not involved in direct election monitoring, nor was there an official EU observation mission. The Organisation of American States followed the election process closely, as did the Centre for Electoral Advice and Promotion (CAPEL), a branch of the Inter-American Institute of Human Rights. The assessment of CAPEL was that the elections had been conducted in a fair manner. We fully support the EU declaration issued on 31 May 2006, which welcomed the holding of free elections and committed the EU to continue its full support for the democratic, economic and social development and the return to peace in Colombia. The full text of the 31 May EU declaration can be found on the following website: http://www.diplomacymonitor.com /stu/dm.nsf/dn/dn6F81A8FDE57805BB85257180003 EAA52.

Departmental Finance

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answers of 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 1000W, on departmental finance, what information she relied on for her statement that the account payable module closed promptly in April and May; why this information was not used to answer question 75958; and if she will make a statement. [78193]

Mr. Hoon: The information contained in the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Middle East (Dr. Howells) to my hon. Friend on 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 1000W, concerning the prompt closure of the accounts payable module, was provided by officials in the resource accounting department. They confirmed that the accounts payable module was closed promptly at the end of April and May and was available to users the day after the April closure, and on the same day following the May closure.

I also replied to my hon. Friend on 12 June 2006, Official Report, column 1000W, that information about delays in the input and processing or invoices, and late payment of invoices was not held for invoices processed at overseas missions. The information could only be obtained centrally by contacting each mission and this could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people over the age of 55 years have been recruited into her Department in each of the last three years. [77102]

Mr. Hoon: The number of staff aged 55 and over recruited into the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in each of the last three years is as follows:

Financial year	Number
2003-04	17
2004-05	13
2005-06	14

EU Entrant Countries

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her assessment is of the readiness of each potential new entrant into the EU; and what the expected timetable for entry is for each. [77787]

Mr. Hoon: Romania and Bulgaria are scheduled to join the EU on 1 January 2007 provided that they address the outstanding issues outlined in the European Commission's report of 16 May. The Commission will report on both countries' progress no later than early October. Accession can be postponed until 2008 on the basis of a decision by Council following a recommendation from the Commission.

Turkey and Croatia have opened membership negotiations with the EU. The European Commission is currently screening Turkey and Croatia's legislation to assess their alignment with the acquis communautaire. The Science and Research chapter for both countries was provisionally closed at the Accession Conference on 12 June. Before joining the EU, both countries must close the remaining 34 chapters of the acquis and meet the political and economic criteria for membership outlined in the conclusions of the Copenhagen European Council in 1993.

The Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia is a candidate country. However, it has not opened negotiations for membership. The European Commission will report on further progress this year. The EU has offered all the other countries of the Western Balkans, none of which is yet a candidate country, the perspective of ultimate EU membership through the Stabilisation and Association process.

Neither the EU nor the UK has set a timetable for any country's entry to the EU beyond Romania and Bulgaria. The progress of each candidate or potential candidate towards membership depends on their success in meeting EU standards.

EU Foreign Policy

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response her Department has made to the concept paper on EU foreign policy published by the President of the EU Commission. [77670]

Mr. Hoon: Although the Government do not agree with all of the proposals in the Commission communication ('Europe in the World—Some Practical Proposals for Greater Coherence, Effectiveness and Visibility'), it welcomes the paper as a helpful contribution to an important workstream. It is right that the EU should be considering ways of making its external policies more co-ordinated and effective, within the framework of existing treaties. And we agree that better strategic planning, and better co-operation between the EU institutions and the member states can help this.

We therefore look forward to further discussions on the Commission communication and the external coherence workstream more generally during the Finnish presidency.

Fissile Materials Cut-off Treaty

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of US proposals for a fissile materials cut-off treaty; and if she will make a statement. [77163]

Margaret Beckett: The UK welcomes the US initiative made in Geneva in May to table a draft treaty text and draft mandate for negotiations. We hope that all Conference on Disarmament (CD) member states are able to accept the very broad mandate proposed and agree to open negotiations towards a treaty without delay. UK officials and experts are assessing the implications for the UK of the draft US text for a fissile material cut-off treaty.

The UK's, and the wider EU's, support for such a Treaty is well known. In the Common Position negotiated in advance of last year's Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty Review Conference, the EU appealed to the CD for the immediate commencement and early conclusion of a non-discriminatory, universally applicable Treaty banning the production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices.

Human Trafficking

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions she has had with her EU counterparts on co-ordination and engagement with source and transit countries to investigate and dismantle human trafficking. [77177]

Margaret Beckett: My right hon. Friend the then Foreign Secretary (Mr. Straw) most recently discussed human trafficking at the European Council meeting in December 2005 at which the draft European Action Plan on Trafficking was approved. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Foreign and Commonwealth affairs, Dr. Howells, also visited Romania and Bulgaria (accession states) to discuss human trafficking.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many illegal immigrants have been discovered to be employed by her Department in each year since 2001; in what capacities they were employed; how many were discovered as part of a criminal investigation; and what the nature of the charges brought against them were. [73961]

Mr. Hoon: None.

International Atomic Energy Agency

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's financial contribution to the International Atomic Energy Agency will be in 2006-07; and if she will make a statement. [77162]

Margaret Beckett: The International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) financial year runs with the calendar year. Figures for 2006 for the UK's three main block payments to the IAEA are as follows:

Two payments were made to the Regular Budget. At IAEA's request these payments were made in different currencies. One of €13,095,000 (£8,974,000) and a second payment of US$3,483,000 (£2,020,000). Together these payments amount to £10,994,000.

The UK made a single payment of US$4,581,000 (£2,657,000) to the Technical Co-operation Fund.

The UK's Regular Budget and Technical Co-operation Fund payments are fixed by reference to slightly reduced standardised UN contribution rates. The slight reduction is because one member of the IAEA is not a member of the UN. The UK's IAEA base rate is 5.911 per cent. However, under a long standing agreement developing countries are currently shielded from paying the full costs of the safeguards component of the Regular Budget. The UK accordingly pays 6.137 per cent. of the total Regular Budget.

In addition in 2006, the UK made voluntary contributions to support the IAEA's Nuclear Security Fund (US$704,000 or £485,000), and to support IAEA work to improve internal management processes (€85,000 or £58,000).

Iran

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with her US counterparts about measures designed to limit the access of the Iranian Government to international financial markets; and if she will make a statement. [75074]

Margaret Beckett: Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials and I are in regular contact with our counterparts in the US and other countries about policy towards Iran. We have discussed possible benefits available to Iran in a long-term agreement on the nuclear issue if Iran complies with its obligations, and the likely costs to Iran of greater isolation if it chooses to pursue a course of confrontation.

Ministers and officials have discussed with their counterparts in general terms the measures that the international community might have available, including in the economic and financial sphere, in the event that Iranian behaviour makes sanctions necessary. But the international community is united in wanting Iran to take the steps required by the International Atomic Energy Agency Board and return to a diplomatic process on the basis of the ideas presently being proposed by the UK, France, Germany, Russia, China and the US. All our efforts are being directed to that end.

Latin America

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the activities of the US National Endowment for Democracy in Latin America. [78059]

Mr. Hoon: We have not made a specific assessment of the impact of the activities of the US National Endowment for Democracy. We work with a number of partners in the EU and across the region to promote democracy and good governance in Latin America.

Overseas Territories

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will list the British Overseas Territories which have governors; how long the period of office is of each; what powers each has; and to whom each is accountable. [77662]

Mr. Hoon: Governors are appointed to the Overseas Territories of Anguilla, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Falkland Islands, Gibraltar, Montserrat, Pitcairn, St. Helena and its dependencies and Turks and Caicos Islands. With the exception of our high commissioner in Wellington, the non-resident governor of Pitcairn, who serves a four year tour, all governors are appointed for a Foreign and Commonwealth Office standard tour of three years, which may in some cases be extended. The constitutional powers and responsibilities of the governor are set out in the constitution of each territory. The governor of each territory is appointed by Her Majesty the Queen. As Her Majesty's representative the governor is accountable to her through my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary.

Private Military Companies

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of British citizens employed by private military companies. [75397]

Margaret Beckett: We are unable to provide a figure for the number of British citizens employed by private military companies. We estimate that there are around 40 private military and security companies registered in or operating from the UK who are engaged in activities overseas. Many companies operate with a core staff and employ others to fulfil contracts as and when required. They do not necessarily employ only British citizens. These factors make it difficult to give an accurate estimate of the numbers employed.

Royal Visit (USA)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2006, Official Report, columns 2246-47W, on the royal visit (USA), what the total costs were of (a) gifts made by HRH the Prince of Wales and the Duchess of Cornwall and reimbursed to the royal household by her Department and (b) other reimbursements made by her Department to the Prince of Wales's household in connection with his visit to the United States in 2005. [76389]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 12 June 2006]: The total cost of gifts reimbursed to the Prince of Wales's household was £3,438.38. Other reimbursements to the household totalled £8,497.45.

Somalia

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of the progress of the Union of Islamic Courts in Somalia; and if she will make a statement on UK policy towards Somalia. [77943]

Mr. McCartney: The victory of the Islamic Courts Union over the warlords in Mogadishu and other towns in Central Somalia is an important development. The UK continues to support the Transitional Federal Institutions in pursuing dialogue, reconciliation and stable governance in Somalia in accordance with the Transitional Federal Charter. We will continue to provide assistance to Somalia within this framework. We urge all states in the region to respect the UN arms embargo on Somalia and refrain from supplying armaments, which exacerbate conflict there. We encourage the Transitional Federal government to engage with the Islamic Courts Union and welcome the fact that both sides have made conciliatory statements.

Sudan

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what her policy is on the United Nations' aim to deploy UN troops in the Sudan. [77905]

Mr. McCartney: I fully support the deployment of a UN force for Darfur. The UK has been taking a lead in seeking international support for one. A UN force for Darfur would be in addition to the UN force already deployed in southern Sudan.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions she has had with Dr. Ibrahim Mudawi of the Sudan Social Development Organisation on his appraisal of the situation in Darfur. [78137]

Mr. McCartney: Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials meet regularly with Dr. Mudawi in Sudan. Like us, he remains concerned about the ongoing security problems in Darfur. We also share his concern about the need for a greater understanding of the Darfur Peace Agreement in order to develop more support among Darfuris themselves. He is also keen to press on with arrangements for a Darfur-Darfur Dialogue and Consultation to act as a rallying point for the different interest groups in the region.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements she is negotiating with the (a) African Union and (b) United Nations to try to improve the security situation in Darfur. [78138]

Mr. McCartney: We welcome the African Union's (AU) decision on 15 May to proceed with the transition of the AU Mission in Sudan (AMIS) to the UN. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed this with the chairperson of the AU when they met in London last month. We continue to support AMIS through funding and technical assistance to enhance its effectiveness.

We also welcome the Government of Sudan's acceptance of the UN planning mission and are pressing for them to agree to the deployment of a UN force in Darfur. Joint planning for transition between the AU and the UN is already under way. We are providing military and police planning experts to the UN and pressing for the handover to take place as quickly as possible.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of whether the Government of National Unity in Sudan will accept the introduction of UN troops in Darfur. [78139]

Mr. McCartney: After extensive international lobbying, the Government of Sudan have agreed to allow a UN Technical Assistance Mission to visit Sudan to begin planning for the deployment of a UN force for Darfur. However, they have not yet endorsed the deployment of a UN force for Darfur. We and other international partners will continue to lobby them to do so.

Trinidad and Tobago

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if she will make representations to the relevant Trinidad and Tobago authorities on avoiding unnecessary delays to the appearance of witnesses travelling from the UK to appear in court cases in Trinidad and Tobago; and if she will make a statement. [78436]

Mr. Hoon: Foreign and Commonwealth officials in London and our High Commission in Port of Spain have made representations to the Government of Trinidad and Tobago about delays encountered by British nationals appearing in court cases in Trinidad and Tobago. To address this problem, the Tobagonian authorities are introducing a 24 hour court for crimes against tourists. Tele-conferencing is also to be introduced so that foreign victims of crime can give evidence from their home countries. We welcome the announcement of these positive measures, and will monitor their practical implementation carefully.

Uganda

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment she has made of recent discussions between representatives of the South Sudanese Government and representatives of the Lord's Resistance Army including Joseph Koug. [78931]

Mr. McCartney: The UK has long been committed to seeking a peaceful solution to the long running conflict in northern Uganda, which continues to undermine security in neighbouring southern Sudan and the Democratic Republic of Congo. Any discussions or mediation efforts need to be aimed at encouraging those Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) members not facing International Criminal Court (ICC) arrest warrants to stop fighting and seek amnesty and reintegration into their communities.

We continue to call on Sudan to meet its international obligations and ensure the five senior LRA commanders indicted by the ICC are brought to face justice in the Hague. Our Ambassador in Khartoum pressed Salva Kiir, President of the Government of Southern Sudan, on the Government's ICC obligations on 10 May. The UK-led UN Security Council delegation, which visited Juba on 8 June as part of a wider trip to Sudan, also raised the issue with President Kiir.
